FBIS FOREIGN BROADCAST INFORMATION SERVICE

NOTE

JPRS publications contain information primarily from foreign newspapers, periodicals and books, but also from news agency transmissions and broadcasts. Materials from foreign-language sources are translated; those from English-language sources are transcribed or reprinted, with the original phrasing and other characteristics retained.

Headlines, editorial reports, and material enclosed in brackets [] are supplied by JPRS. Processing indicators such as [Text] or [Excerpt] in the first line of each item, or following the last line of a brief, indicate how the original information was processed. Where no processing indicator is given, the information was summarized or extracted.

Unfamiliar names rendered phonetically or transliterated are enclosed in parentheses. Words or names preceded by a question mark and enclosed in parentheses were not clear in the original but have been supplied as appropriate in context. Other unattributed parenthetical notes within the body of an item originate with the source. Times within items are as given by source.

The contents of this publication in no way represent the policies, views or attitudes of the U.S. Government.

PROCUREMENT OF PUBLICATIONS

JPRS publications may be ordered from the National Technical Information Service, Springfield, Virginia 22161. In ordering, it is recommended that the JPRS number, title, date and author, if applicable, of publication be cited.

Current JPRS publications are announced in Government Reports Announcements issued semi-monthly by the National Technical Information Service, and are listed in the Monthly Catalog of U.S. Government Publications issued by the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402.

Indexes to this report (by keyword, author, personal names, title and series) are available from Bell & Howell, Old Mansfield Road, Wooster, Ohio 44691.

'MINJU CHOSON' SCORES RENAMING OF KCIA

SK251110 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1028 GMT 25 Dec 80

[Text] Pyongyang, 25 Dec (KCNA)—Commenting on the decision of the Chon Tu-hwan military fascist clique to change the name of the "Central Intelligence Agency" to "Agency for National Security Planning" as from January 1 next year, MINJU CHOSON today says:

Lurking behind it is a sinister intention to gratify their desire for long-term office with this repressive tool as a pillar for their military fascist rule.

The signed commentary says:

A wolf remains a wolf, even if it wears a silk kerchief. Even though the "CIA" is renamed and embellished, it cannot but be a fascist repressive tool. The "reorganisation" of this apparatus by the puppets is a heinous criminal act for increasing the repressive function of the "CIA." This is an intolerable challenge to the South Korean people who have strongly demanded the dissolution of the fascist repressive tool.

The change of the name of the "Central Intelligence Agency" to "Agency for Security Planning" by the military fascists is designed to deceive the people and strengthen its repressive function under the cloak of "coordination" and so on. Hidden behind it is a vicious scheme to realise their wild ambition for long-term office with the repressive tool as a pillar of the military fascist rule.

But, the Chon Tu-hwan groups manoeuvres to mislead popular sentiments only further reveal their ugly colour as fascist butchers.

With no artifice can the military fascists attain their dirty goal or deceive the people or divert elsewhere the attention of the people.

The "Agency for National Security Planning," a fascist murderous tool, must be promptly dissolved as demanded by the people.

'NODONG SINMUN' TERMS LIFE IN SOUTH 'LIVING HELL'

SK291140 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1015 GMT 29 Nov 80

[Text] Pyongyang, 29 Nov (KCNA)--NODONG SINMUN November 28 carried an article headlined "South Korea Is Most Miserable Living Hell Towards the End of the 20th Century."

The article says:

The Chon Tu-hwan group, a pack of truculent fascist tyrants and butchers of the nation, covered the whole land of South Korea with bayonets and is openly committing massacre and ruthlessly trampling underfoot the democratic rights and liberties of the people.

South Korea is a dark society where a handful of military gangsters have seized all powers and stifling everything in society with military tyranny.

By unheard-of draconic fascist laws and repressive tools, all the democratic rights and liberties of the people and their political activities are restricted and only acts obeying the fascist order are allowed in South Korea.

The working people, who account for the majority of the population, are forced at the point of the bayonet to reconcile themselves to fascist slavery and a handful of the "Yusin" remnants and military gangsters including traitor Chon Tu-hwan and political mountebanks are swaggering about. This clearly shows that South Korean society is a living hell.

Brutal massacre defying human imagination is also being committed there. The fascist clique permanently places South Korea under the "emergency martial law" and mobilizes the heavily armed puppet army and police to suppress anyone who demands the right to existence and democracy, opposes division, aspires after reunification and is obstructive to the maintenance of its power.

The brutality of the Chon Tu-hwan clique's massacre of fellow countrymen is to be seen clearly in its plot to murder democratic figures.

History knows no such human butchers as the Chon Tu-hwan fascist rulers who murdered at a time thousands of fellow countrymen who turned out to a peaceful demonstration in demand of democracy and ruthlessly penalized political adversaries, the articles notes, and continues:

South Korea has been turned into a graveyard of democracy and peoples rights where there can be seen not a shadow of democracy.

Today in South Korea there is neither "national assembly" nor political parties but is only the medieval absolute power which has sprung up like a poisonous mushroom.

The South Korean people are bound by the chains of fascism, totally deprived of all the democratic rights and freedom including freedom of speech, the press, assembly, demonstration and religion. Campus freedom is also ruthless trampled underfoot in South Korea.

The South Korean military fascist clique is not only trampling down all the social and political rights and liberties of the people but also totally depriving them even of their right to existence, the article notes, and says:

The South Korean working masses including workers and peasants are barely supporting themselves, having no right of labour or the elementary three rights of labour.

Indeed, South Korea is literally a "tundra of democracy" where the bayonets of the Chon Tu-hwan group are politics, the "martial law" is order, fascist outbursts are a law, murder is the way of rule and no one of people [as received] can speak about the present situation or engage in free activities, and a barren land where except a few rulers, all the working masses are groaning in hard work and hunger, given no guarantee for their future life.

It is surprising that there is such a living hell as South Korea in the world towards the end of the 20th century, an era of civilization.

The article says that all the national tragedies in South Korea can be terminated only by liquidating the military fascist rule there and achieving the reunification of the country with the united strength of the patriotic, democratic forces of the north and the south.

The article stresses that the road to end the misfortunes and hardships of the South Korean people under the military fascist rule and achieve the complete independence and the eternal prosperity of our nation lies in realising the new proposal for national reunification put forward by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song in his historic report at the Sixth Congress of the Workers' Party of Korea.

'NODONG SINMUN' ARTICLE CITES S. KOREAN ECONOMIC CRISIS

SK021620 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1518 GMT 2 Dec 80

[Text] Pyongyang, 2 Dec (KCNA)--NODONG SINMUN on 1 December carried an article headlined "Worsening Economic Crisis of South Korea Under Military Administration."

The signed article says:

The South Korean economy is undergoing a serious crisis due to the flunkeyist treachery of the puppet clique and under the impact of the economic crisis sweeping the capitalist world. It has deepened still further, going to a hopeless extent, while the Chon Tu-hwan military gangster clique is knee-deep in readjusting and reinforcing the dictatorial system, massacring fellow countrymen, after grabbing power at the point of the bayonet.

In South Korea production is on the downhill, recording a "minus growth" all the year round. The industrial production of South Korea dropped 8.3 per cent and the stockpile of goods increased by 36.7 per cent from January through to the end of September this year as against the same period of last year. Such thing had never been witnessed during the last 16 years.

Noting that production is dropping still more due to the wholesale bankruptcy of the enterprises resulting from financial difficulties in all parts of South Korea, the article writes: Entering this year, more than 30 big enterprises including the "Tongmyong Timber Company" and the "Koryo Timber Company" have proved insolvent or are on the verge of bankruptcy and in June alone more than 690 minor enterprises closed the door or suspended operation.

Saying that the South Korean economic crisis is assuming ever more serious dimensions owing to the sharp decrease of export and the increment of the trade deficit, the article points out:

The trade gap added up to 4,013 million dollars by the end of October and the deficit in the international payments will reportedly exceed 6,000 million dollars towards the end of the year.

The South Korean economy is saddled with foreign debts reaching somewhere about 27,000 million dollars.

Noting that the rice harvest dropped 30 per cent in South Korea, even 50 per cent in some areas, below the negligible figure of last year, the article says: the food shortage in South Korea aggravates the crisis of the South Korean economy as a whole.

The serious economic crisis sweeping South Korea today is driving the life of the South Korean people into the worst straits and their resistance against the fascist clique is growing day by day, says the article.

It emphasizes:

The economic crisis in South Korea today is an inevitable offspring of the fist-law fascist rule of the Chon Tu-hwan group.

Upset by this, the Chon Tu-hwan group is running amuck to cope with the situation with the advertisement of "economic stability" and "improvement of peoples living."

As for the Chon Tu-hwan group, it is a pack of gangsters who have neither the intention nor ability to stabilize the economy.

As long as the fascist rule of the Chon Tu-hwan group continues, the South Korean economy will never be stabilized.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song in his historic report to the Sixth Congress of the Workers' Party of Korea set forth the new proposal to bring the north and south into a confederal state and propounded a policy to enforce econonic collaboration and interchange between the north and the south and guarantee the independent development of the national economy.

Reunification is the only way to restore the devastated South Korean economy and save the South Korean people from the distress.

BULGARIANS URGE IMPLEMENTATION OF UN RESOLUTION

SK171520 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1501 GMT 17 Dec 80

[Text] Pyongyang, 17 Dec (KCNA)--Mass meetings were held recently in Silistra, Calmkerjn Popovo and other cities of Bulgarian to mark the lapse of five years since the adoption of the resolution on the Korean question at the 30th UN General Assembly, according to a report.

The meetings were attended by employees of many factories in these cities. The meetings adopted messages to the UN secretary general.

The messages sharply denounced the Chon Tu-hwan puppet cliques fascist suppression of Kim Tae-chung and other democrats and expressed positive support to the South Korean peoples struggle for freedom and democracy.

Noting that the resolution on the Korean question has not yet been implemented, though 5 years have passed since the resolution was adopted at the 30th UN General Assembly, owing to the obstructive manoeuvres of the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean reactionaries, they demanded the implementation of the resolution on the Korean question adopted at the 30th UN General Assembly.

They expressed full solidarity with the Korean people in their struggle to force all foreign troops out of South Korea and reunify the country peacefully.

RPR REPRESENTATIVE SPEAKS AT CONGRESS OF IADL

SK251540 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1500 GMT 25 Dec 80

[Text] Pyongyang, 25 Dec (KCNA)--Yi Chong-sang, head of the delegation of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification, made speeches at sub-committee meetings of the 11th Congress of the International Association of Democratic Lawyers recently held in Valletta, according to a report.

Speaking at the first sub-committee, he said that a genuine peace and security on the Korean peninsula can be ensured when the question of the reunification of the north and the south is solved smoothly on the principle of national self-determination, with outside interference ruled out.

To remove fascism from South Korea and realize the democratization of society is the first and foremost pre-condition for national reunification, he declared.

Pointing out that the South Korean fascists are totally stifling the peoples desire for reunification by invoking the most hideous laws such an "anti-communist law" and the "national security law," he noted:

South Korea has now turned into a lawless land of darkness where the outbursts of the dictator and the sword-brandishing under the "military martial law" replace all "laws" and "orders."

Such fascist arbitrariness of the Chon Tu-hwan group is the snag in the solution of the reunification question of our country.

Pointing out that the United States standing behind the Chon Tu-hwan fascist group is the main obstacle to the settlement of the national question of our country, he continued:

The one which has turned South Korea into a human hell without parallel towards the end of the 20th century and established the truculent military fascist dictatorship on the blood and corpses of the people is none other than the United States challenging national self-determination and the backstage wirepuller who instigates the fascist traitors to the permanent division of the nation and a war is again the United States which goes against peace and security.

We strongly demand that the United States withdraw from South Korea, taking along all its aggression forces including nuclear wespons, instead of instigating the Chon Tu-hwan military fascists to strengthen fascist dictatorship and seek a permanent division of the nation and a war.

We sternly denounce the criminal "two Koreas" plot of the splittists at home and abroad intended to perpetuate the division of the nation and resolutely oppose all forms of foreign interference.

Our party considers that the road of the solution of the national question in our country lies in establishing a confederal state, leaving the systems in the north and the south as they are, as clarified recently by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the great sun of the nation.

Our party and the popular masses of South Korea who ardently desire the reunification of the country will remove all obstacles in the way of reunification and establish by all means the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo, thereby solving the national question with success and contributing to the cause of world peace.

In this speech at the third sub-committee, he dealt with the question of human rights in South Korea.

He said:

The fascist suppression and violation of human rights in South Korea have reached the worst state ever known in history with the appearance of the Chon Tu-hwan military "regime" set up under the manipulation of the United States.

The trial of Kim Tae-chung in South Korea is one of the typical examples exposing the illegality and ferocity of fascist repression and violation of human rights.

The trial is regarded all the more grave and serious, because the military fascist group intends to totally emasculate the patriotic struggle of the South Korea people for democracy and civil rights and peaceful reunification by destroying Kim Tae-chung who was active in demand of freedom and democracy together with the entire popular masses.

The secret trials of patriotic resistants of Kwangju glaringly revealed the brutality and atrociousness of the violation of democracy and human rights by the Chon Tu-hwan group.

He expressed hope that the attendants of the meeting would fully support as ever the struggle of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification and the South Korean people for human rights and democracy and, especially, wage a broader movement for the release of Kim Tae-chung on a world-wide scale.

'MINJU CHOSON' COMMENTARY DENOUNCES CHON'S SEEKING WAR

[Text] Pyongyang, 20 Dec (KCNA)--Military fascist Chon Tu-hwan made his appearance at "frontline units" of the puppet army a few days ago and whipped up a war fever among the puppet army officers and men, clamouring about "coping with infiltration" and so on, and called on the commander of the U.S. forces in South Korea and begged for the U.S. imperialist aggression troops permanent occupation of South Korea. Lashing at this shameless behavior, MINJU CHOSON today in a signed commentary headlined "War Frenzy of Stooge" says:

It is part of preparations to ignite a fratricidal war against us that traitor Chon Tu-hwan went to "frontline units" and cried before the puppet army officers and men for further stepping up war preparations. It cannot be overlooked that synchronising with the war confabs U.S. Defence Secretary Brown had in South Korea, traitor Chon Tu-hwan kicked up a war racket.

Traitor Chon Tu-hwan, twaddling about "stabilisation" and so on, babbled that "duty" of the U.S. troops occupying South Korea "is important." This means that he would let them permanently stay on in South Korea and realise his wild ambition for long term office under their patronage. What the U.S. troops have brought about in South Korea is the intensified war manoeuvres, a bloodbath and the confusion of the South Korean situation as it is today, the commentary notes, and says:

Nevertheless, the Chon Tu-hwan group begged for the U.S. troops permanent occupation, ranting that they made a "contribution to stabilisation." This shows with increasing clarity that their group is the sworn enemy obstructing the reunification of the country and the dirty treacherous clique working only to gratify its lust for power by relying on outside forces. All the facts prove that the belligerent and treacherour manoeuvres of the puppets have reached a very reckless stage.

The Chon Tu-hwan military fascist clique must stop running riot in seeking war, fascism and division in reliance upon outside forces and step down from "power" before it is thrown overboard by the people.

BRIEFS

WEAPONS MISSING FROM KWANGJU RIOTS--One hundred and forty-three arms, including 10 pistols, which disappeared during the Kwangju incident last May, have not been recovered, it was disclosed by the National Police Headquarters (NPH) yesterday. Officers at the NPH advised residents to help them recover the missing arms, indicating that the arms might be used as weapons for crimes. The government has posted a cash award of 1 million won for those who report the hiding places or holders of those arms to the authorities concerned. MINISTER PREDICTS 5-6 PERCENT ECONOMIC GROWTH IN 1981

SK260148 Seoul HAPTONG in English 0131 GMT 26 Dec 80

[Excerpt] Seoul, 26 Dec (HAPTONG)--The Korean economy will attain an annual economic growth of 5.4 per cent next year in real terms, Deputy Premier-Economic Planning Minister Sin Pyong-hyon predicted today.

Although a minus growth of 5 per cent was marked in the Korean economy this year due to the prolonged recession and the poor harvests, the Korean economy will grow by 5 to 6 per cent next year largely because of the anticipated favorable economic conditions at home and abroad, the nation's top economic planner said.

Disclosing the government's economic management policy for next year, Minister Sin said that the national economy would be on the right track to record again a high economic growth beginning 1982.

The government will place its economic policy emphasis next year on the improvement of the nation's international balance-of-payments position, price stabilization, promotion of economic growth potential, effective implementation of social development projects and the improvement of economic efficiency, Minister Sin revealed.

The government will put 2,213.9 billion won (about 3,354 million dollars) in various public works next year, of which 59 per cent or 1,307.2 billion won(roughly 1,980 million dollars) will be released during the first quarter of next year, he said.

Major economic goals envisaged in the 1981 economic management plan were as follows:

--The nation's Gross National Product (GNP) will reach 45,131 billion won (some 68.2 billion dollars) next year at the current prices, up 5 to 6 per cent from this year.

--Per capita GNP will rise from 940 dollars or 1,533 won this year to 1,163 dollars or 1,723 won next year. [Won figure as received]

--The nation's population will grow from 38,195,000 persons this year to 38,806,000 persons next year.

CURRENT ACCOUNTS MARK SURPLUS--Seoul, 4 Dec (HAPTONG)--South Korea yielded a surplus of 47 million dollars in its current account last month, the Finance Ministry announced today. The nation's merchandise exports last month amounted to 1,477 million dollars on a negotiation basis, up 15.8 per cent from the like month a year before, while imports last month came to 1,444 million dollars, up only 2.4 per cent from the same month a year earlier, thus leaving 33 million dollars in visible trade surplus. Export letters of credit received last month reached 1,438 million dollars, showing a rise of 38.6 per cent over the figure reported during the comparable month of 1979, ministry sources revealed. The sources further disclosed that import licenses validated last month recorded a rise of 12.3 per cent over the sum registered during the corresponding month last year. During the cited month, the nation also netted a surplus of 14 million dollars in its invisible trade largely because of increased foreign exchange earnings from overseas construction services, the sources said. Meanwhile, the sources said, the nation's foreign exchange holdings stood at 6,604 million dollars as of the end of last month, an expansion of 198 million dollars from a month ago. [Text] [SK040121 Seoul HAPTONG in English 0114 GMT 4 Dec 80]

NOVEMBER'S NEW LOW TRADE DEFICIT--Seoul, 18 Dec (HAPTONG)--South Korea suffered a deficit of 170 million dollars in its visible trade last month, the lowest monthly level ever recorded this year, it was reported here today. In visible trade, South Korea's exports amounted to 1,510 million dollars last month against imports of 1,680 million dollars, thus leaving 170 million dollars in a deficit. During the month, South Korea sustained a deficit of 51 million dollars in its invisible trade as foreign exchange receipts from invisible trade reached 477 million dollars against payments of 528 million dollars. As a result, a slight improvement was noted in the nation's current account deficit which dipped to 204 million dollars last month. The November current account deficit was compared with the average monthly deficit level of 330 million dollars reported during the January-October period of this year. ROK-JAPAN UNDERWATER COMMUNICATIONS CABLE--Seoul, 28 Nov (HAPTONG)--A submarine cable system connecting Korea and Japan under the Straits of Korea was dedicated in a ceremony here today opening a new era of international communication between the two neighbouring countries. The 280 km-long submarine cable system with a capacity of 2,700 telephone circuits linking Pusan with Hamada, Japan, was completed after one and a half years of cable-laying work spanning the Korean Straits. Speaking at the dedication ceremony, Communication Minister Kim Ki-chol hailed the opening of the cable system as an epoch-making event giving added vitality to cooperation between Japan and Korea. 'GRAIN-SAVING CAMPAIGN' CALLED FOR--Prime Minister Nam Tok-u, saying that the nation's foodgrain production this year was below the annual average, yesterday instructed relevant government ministries to actively conduct "grain-savings campaign" in order to score satisfactory results in the shortest possible time. Noting that the poor grain harvest was caused by inclement weather, a phenomenon which he said was worldwide this year, the premier also instructed the government to conduct another campaign to diversity dietary patterns. The Ministry of Home Affairs, he said, should promote the campaign as part of the Saemaul (New Community) Movement, and help the people actively take part in it. He then instructed the Ministry of Education to make grain saving a part of daily life through education at schools, and the Ministry of Agriculture and Fisheries to work out a comprehensive foodgrain conservation plan. Premier Nam emphasized merchants who corner foodgrains should be dealt with appropriately. The Ministry of Health and Social Affairs was asked to increase the supply of processed foods involving barley and potatoes. [Text] [SK210258 Seoul THE KOREA HERALD in English 21 Dec 80 p 1]

ECONOMIC BODY APPROVES FOREIGN LOANS--Seoul, 30 Dec (HAPTONG)--The foreign capital inducement deliberation committee of the Economic Planning Board (EPB) Monday approved the introduction of foreign loans totaling 77,488,000 dollars. According to the EPB sources, the state-run Korea electric company will induce a 22.5 million dollar cash loan for various power projects. Included in the foreign loans approved by the committee were a 20 million dollar loan sought by Korea Development Lease Company from a syndicate of seven foreign banks for the import of equiopment for leasing business, a 13 million dollar loan by Kukje Shipping Company of Korea from Sanwa Bank of Japan for the introduction of a 274,000-ton used freighter, and a 4.5 million dollar loan by Korea Electronic Communication Company from Barclay Bank of Britain for the import of plant facilities needed for the manufacture of electronic switching systems, the sources added. FOREIGN CAPITAL INFLUX FIGURES--Seoul, 27 Nov (HAPTONG)--Foreign capital inflow into South Korea reached 4,148 million dollars in the first 10 months of this year on a commitment basis, according to the latest statistics of the Economic Planning Board (EPB) released today. The sum accounted for 66.8 per cent of this year's foreign capital attraction goal set at 6,020 million dollars. The 10-month total was made up of 2,311 million dollars in foreign public loans, 1,022 million dollars in foreign commercial loans, 717 million dollars in foreign bank loans and 98 million dollars in forign investments. This has brought the aggregate since 1959 to 28,066 million dollars also on a commitment basis. On an arrival basis, Korea's introduction of foreign capital during the first 10 motnhs of this year amounted to 2,816 million dollars--1,068 million dollars in foreign public loans, 1,171 million dollars in foreign commercial loans, 490 million dollars in foreign bank loans and 87 million dollars in foreign investments. The 10-month sum has also brought the total since 1959 to 21,695 million dollars, of which 6,917 million dollars was in foreign public loans, 10,539 million dollars in foreign commercial loans, 3,153 million dollars in foreign bank loans and 1,086 million dollars in foreign investments. COMBAT POLICE TO ASSUME TRAFFIC CONTROL DUTIES

SK180534 Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 18 Dec 80 p 8

[Text] The combat police personnel, whose main duties involve counter-infiltration and antiriot operations, will take the place of traffic police officers in major cities from next year, the Home Ministry announced yesterday.

The replacement was decided on to remove "irregularities" often committed by traffic police officers while effectively utilizing the manpower of the combat police outside their original duties, the ministry announcement said.

Service as combat police members susbstitutes for compulsory military service.

A total of 874 police officers on traffic control service on the streets across the country will be replaced by combat police members from next year on a gradual basis, according to the ministry.

Some 1,000 other traffic police officers who handle traffic affairs at police station offices, however, will not be affected by the policy, the ministry said.

With a view to changing all traffic police officers working in Seoul, 409 in total, next year, as many combat police members are now being trained, the ministry said.

The combat police members will be authorized to control traffic violators on the streets, but handling traffic accidents and legal procedures against traffic violators will still be managed by police officers working inside stations.

Street traffic control can be assumed by combat police members as it does not require highly professional knowledge, ministry officials said.

The ministry, which recruited an increased number of 3,925 combat police members this year, has decided to recruit another 10,000 young men for the combat police force next year.

The Legislative Assembly Ministry to revise the law on purpose last week. [Sentence as published].

UNIVERSITIES CHANGING TO 'HOME STUDY'--Some colleges and universities which should continue their classes until early next year to make up the 180 legal class days in this school year are going into virtual recess in the name of "home study" in the face of declining student attendance. These schools, which were embroiled in campus disturbances last spring and during the autumn semester, had earlier decided to continue their classes until early next year even on Sundays and other holidays to fill the legal class days. The schools suffering from shortages of legal class days include Seoul National University, Korea University, Kyong-hui University, Sejong College and Ewha Women's University. However, most of the schools are experiencing difficulties in continuing classes in the current cold weather and have decided to suspend their classes, replacing them with "homework." The school administrators said it would be more efficient to replace the class days with homework than to continue classes in this cold spell at the discretion of school authorities. In the meantime, the Education Ministry, which had been insisting that they fill the legal class days by any means, indicated that in the current situation it would recognize the "home study" period as proper class days. ROK SCIENCE, TECHNOLOGY POLICY GIVEN NEW DIRECTION

Tokyo THE TONG-IL ILBO in Japanese 12 Sep 80 p 2

[Article: "Science and Technology Policy Systematized; Research Institutions Merged or Abolished; Large Participation of Elite in Reform"]

[Text] Three Guiding Principles by the Science and Technology Agency

A great reform of the scientific and technological world seems to be on its way. Dr Yi Chong-o, who took office as the president of the Korean Science Academy and concurrently the director of the Korea Institute of Science and Technology (KIST) on 23 May and who had been promoting the joint management of both institutions, was appointed the director of the Science and Technology Agency in the cabinet reshuffling on 2 September. Thus he will be responsible for the entire science and technology administration. The Science and Technology Agency has recently put together three basic guiding principles to eliminate ailments of the science and technology sector which is rife with problems awaiting solution.

These three principles consist of the following: 1) Reexamination of the science and technology policy and strategy, already formed by having a great number of the young elite participate. 2) Merger and abolition of research institutes should be carried out after ample investigation; these institutions are being examined as part of the rationalization plan of research control and research institute management. 3) Emphasis will be placed on the training of highly qualified scientists and technical experts; and plans to fulfill this aim will be sought. To promote these principles, multiple studies and inquiries are now being made.

An important reason the scientific and technological sector is presently criticized by some in the economic and academic circles is the doubt about how much the scientific and technical sector has actually contributed to the Korean economic development.

Another negative factor is the fact that although 14 years have passed since the Science and Technology Agency was set up, to determine and coordinate science and technology policies, the Agency still has yet to formulated a clear policy on science and technology and strategic direction and vigorously promote them as national policy.

It has of course made efforts over the years to enhance science and technology, to train technical experts, to promote research institutes, to increase investment in research and development and to draw up plans for large-scale national policy research. These, however, still left room for discussion as to whether they were suited to the actual conditions of Korea.

Here, the point made by Dr Y. Jacob, presently active as an expert on science and technology in the World Bank (International Bank for Reconstruction and Development) and formerly a participant in science and technology policy making in Israel, is meaningful to the science and technology sector.

In 1975 Dr Jacob, based on his experience in Israel, has suggested to abolish research development competition among developing and developed countries. He maintains that each country should find its own field of expertise for which intensive effort should be made. He also analyzes that of the $60 billion of world research and development investment, $30 billion is invested in the United States, most of the rest by developed countries including Japan and the total research and development investment by the developing countries sums up to only 1 percent.

According to this explanation of Dr Jacob the research and development of Korea in its investment scale cannot possibly be compared with that of the developed countries, and a new scheme in policy- and strategy-making is due.

Rationalization Attempted

The technology level of Korea is said to be 1/166 of that of the United States and 1/68 of that of Japan [sic]; the level of technical developmental capacity is 1/500 of that of the United States and 1/150 of that of Japan.

According to the Investigation Report on Industrial Technology (1979) made by the Korean Chamber of Commerce and the KIST: 1) most of the manufactured goods in Korea rely on low level technology, and 2) 60 percent of them still do not reach the technology level of the advanced industrial nations.

It is rather difficult, however, for each enterprise to solve these problems only by setting up research institutes. Research institutes should on the one hand strengthen technological weakness apparent in industry, and on the other hand to concentrate on assimilating and improving the technology already introduced. The basic research should be emphasized in university education.

Technical development which directly contributes to the economic development is an urgent task, and rational policy development through a systematized science and technology policy is urged.

FIRST SPACE RADIO OBSERVATORY TO BE BUILT IN KYONGGI PROVINCE

Tokyo THE TONG-IL ILBO in Japanese 10 Sep 80 p 2

[Article: "First Space Radio Observatory To Be Built by National Astronomical Observatory in Yich'on County, Kyonggi Province"]

[Text] The first space radio observatory in the Republic of Korea has been scheduled for construction, and is expected to contribute to the study of astronomy and the development of the electronics industry.

According to the "Conatruction Project Plan for the Space Radio Observatory" prepared by the National Astronomical Observatory (Director: Dr Min Yong-ki), construction will take 3 years, from this month to 1982, on a budget of $872 million. A site (3,000 p'yong) in Yich'on County, Kyonggi Province, has been chosen as the first choice for construction.

The radio telescope to be set up in this observatory is a high-power, parabola telescope with a diameter of 25 m, the surface precision of 1 mm, and a directional accuracy within one thousandth of a degree, manufactured by E. Systems of the U.S.

The receiving apparatus and the recording apparatus of this telescope function as one set; however, the intensity of radio waves from space is extremely faint, being only a quadrillionth of a watt, so that the receiver must maintain extremely low temperatures, and the recorder uses a high performance computer of 500,000 bytes.

When the Space Radio Observatory is completed, Korea will join the more than 30 nations of the world with radio observatories to explore the origins of the universe. It will also receive and interpret information sent by satellites, thus opening up a new chapter in Korea's astronomy.

Radio astronomy is a relatively young field of astronomy, started in 1931 when a research scientist of U.S. Bell Laboratories, Karl Jansky, discovered that celestial bodies give off radio waves, and space observations were attempted later by using radio telescopes.

There are various types of waves which celestial bodies give off, ranging from meter wave length in radio, to centimeter wave length in wireless communication, millimeter wave length in infrared waves, X-rays, and gamma rays.

It is also possible to use radio telescope to catch the movements of satellites, to analyze and utilize information sent by them and to guide the study of the electronics industry.

The site suitable for radio observatory must be a basin area surrounded by low mountains which screen out interfering terrestrial radio-signals from other areas and away from such radio-wave originators as broadcasting and radar stations and free of passing airplanes. An official explains that the Yich'on region selected this time as the first choice for the observatory construction site meets the foregoing requirements better than any of the three other proposed sites, Ch'ongju, Okch'on and Chungwon, in North Ch'ung Ch'ong-Province.

However, the successful construction of the observatory does not necessarily guarantee absence of management difficulties.

It is problematic to recruit a sufficient number of staff members considered indispensable for the smooth management of a radio observatory. In addition to over 10 observation specialists, they include more than 10 staff members with doctorate degrees in electric and electronic engineering, who will be in charge of supervising and maintaining the observational instruments.

In order to solve such difficulty Dr Min proposes joint management with a national university. Dr Min emphasizes that "by incorporating staff members from both the observatory and members of astronomy, electrical and electronic engineering departments of university, a staff large enough to run the radio observatory could be assembled. University students may also have an opportunity to participate."

SILK EXPORTS TO JAPAN--Seoul, Nov. 18 (HAPTONG)--South Korea will export raw silk and silk fabrics to Japan at prices not adversely affecting the Japanese market. This was agreed upon at the two-day meeting of Korean and Japanese working-level officials which ended last Saturday in Seoul, it was belatedly learned here today. Once export prices of Korean raw silk and silk products are considered to be adversely affecting the Japanese market, both sides will convene a working-level meeting immediately to deal with the matter, informed sources here said. However, both sides failed to fix Japan's exact import quotas of Korean raw silk, thrown silk and silk fabrics for the one-year period covering April 1 this year through March 31 next year, due to wide differences of views. At the Seoul negotiation talks, the Japanese side repeatedly insisted on reducing drastically the quotas, while the Korean side demanded that Japan increase its import quotas above the preceding year's level, the sources revealed. At the close of the Seoul talks, both sides agreed to meet again to negotiate the quota issues, the sources said. The Seoul meeting was attended by a 13-man Korean delegation led by director general Kim Chong-hun of the International Commerce Bureau of the Foreign Ministry, and the same-number Japanese team headed by Kazutoshi Hasegawa, minister in charge of Asian affairs at the Japanese Foreign Ministry. 'NODONG SINMUN' MARKS ANNIVERSARY OF KIM IL-SONG WORK

[Text] Pyongyang, 23 Dec (KCNA)--NODONG SINMUN December 22 dedicated an article to the 30th anniversary of the publication of "The Present Situation and the Immediate Tasks" and "Concluding Speech at the Third Plenary Meeting of the Central Committee of the Workers' Party of Korea," historic works of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song. The article titled "Works Making Programmatic Guideline in Increasing Party's Military Power" says:

In these historic works, in order to resolutely smash the frantic new military adventures of the U.S. imperialists and lead the fatherland liberation war to victory, the great leader comprehensively analysed and summed up the military and political situation during six months after the outbreak of the war and indicated programmatic tasks to decisively strengthen our party, along with an outstanding strategic and tactical policy for victory in the war.

The article continues: In his works, the great leader clearly indicated immediate tasks for victory in the war including tasks to overcome dogmatism and establish chuche in the military field, readjust the party and power organs and working people's organisations and rehabilitate economy and stabilize the people's life. He notably put forward a programmatic task to achieve the unity of the whole party and establish a steel-like revolutionary discipline in the party in order to lead the fatherland liberation was to victory.

He clearly laid down concrete tasks for strengthening the party.

Saying that, for this purpose, the unity and cohesion of the party in thought and will must be further strengthened, a revolutionary organisational discipline of the party thoroughly implementing its lines and policies, decisions and instructions, be established and its guiding method and guiding style be improved, he indicated concrete ways for this.

The article notes that the works made it possible to organise and mobilise the entire people to victory in the war under the unitary leadership of the leader by increasing the party's military power in every way. Declaring that during the past 30 years since the publication of the historic works of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, our party has been strengthened and developed into a revolutionary party of invincible might in the course of leading the revolution and construction, the article goes on: Thanks to the energetic activities of the glorious party centre, the unity and cohesion of our party in thought and will has reached the highest stage and a steel-like discipline of acting as one has been thoroughly established in the whole party today.

A complete and unconditional unity and cohesion of the whole party in thought and will and in action around the great leader has been definitely achieved in our party. Our party, in which rock-firm unity and cohesion has been achieved under the wise guidance of the party centre, has confidently led the arduous and complicated Korean revolution to victory, decisively smashing all manner of counter-revolutionary manoeuvres of the enemies at home and abroad, and is energetically waging the struggle for accomplishing the revolutionary cause of chuche by dynamically organising and mobilising the entire party members and working people.

DPRK DAILY MARKS KIM IL-SONG WORK ANNIVERSARY

[Text] Pyongyang, 26 Dec (KCNA)--NODONG SINMUN December 25 carried an article on the 30th anniversary of the publication of "Our Art Should Contribute to the Acceleration of Victory in the War" (December 24, 1950), a classic work of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song.

The article titled "Historic Work Inspiring People With Conviction of Certain Victory" says: Stressing that in order to hasten the victory in the war the role of the writers, artists and scientists should be enhanced, the great leader clearly defines in the work their mission to the era and the revolution.

It further says: The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song gives detailed teachings as to what viewpoint and stand the writers, artists and scientists should take toward the war and what task and role they should fulfill and play in the sacred struggle for victory in the war.

The work teaches that the writers and artists should instill into the valiant soldiers of the people's army and the people in the rear the conviction of certain victory so that they may display unexampled courage and heroism to win the ultimate victory in the fatherland liberation war and scathingly exposes the craftiness and viciousness, ferocity and brutality, of the U.S. imperialist aggressors so that they may have burning hatred and animosity against the enemy.

Basing himself on a deep scientific analysis of the then political and military situation, he gives valuable teachings on making our literature and art a mighty ideological weapon powerfully inspiring the people to the struggle for victory in the war by sensibly reflecting the demand of the times.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song in his classic work also indicates concrete militant tasks facing the scientists and technicians during the fatherland liberation war. The article declares: The precious teachings given by the great leader on the basis of a scientific penetration into the role of literature and art in the struggle for victory in a war helped the writers and artists more faithfully carry out their noble historic duty.

INDUSTRY, ENERGY DEVELOPMENTS OUTLINED

Light Industry Committee Abolished

Tokyo KITA CHOSEN KENKYU in Japanese Vol 7 No 72, Jul-Aug 80 pp 32-33

[Text] Elimination of the Light Industry Committee is indicated by the following three articles reported in NODONG SINMUN between June and August: (a) an article of 13 June which first reported the existence of the "Ministry of Textile Industry"; (b) an article of 8 July which first reported the existence of the "Ministry of Local Industry"; and (c) an article of 2 August which first reported the existence of the "Ministry of Food and Daily Necessities Industry."

The Light Industry Committee was an administrative organ of the State Administration Council established by the first session of the Sixth Supreme People's Assembly which met in December 1977. It comprised two general bureaus (Textile Industry; Food and Daily Necessities Industry), four bureaus (Knitting Industry Administration; Local Industry Guidance; Purchasing; Commodity Exports) and one Office (Integration). The Ministry of Textile Industry mentioned in article (a) has the same name as the General Bureau of Textile Industry under the Light Industry Committee. It also revealed in article (a) that a Knitting Administration Bureau has been set up under the Ministry of Textile Industry, so the area of responsibility of the Ministry of Textile Industry is the same as that of the Light Industry Committee. Thus, because they have the same name and the same area of responsibility, and because under administrative theory two administrative organs do not have jurisdiction over a single area of responsibility, the Ministry of Textile Industry is an organization created through reorganization and renaming of the General Bureau of Textile of the Ministry of Light Industry. Similar thinking can be applied to the Ministry of Local Industry in article (b) and the Ministry of Food and Daily Necessities Industry is the General Bureau of Food and Daily Necessities Industry of the Light Industry Committee.

In addition to the existence of the Ministry of Local Industry, article (b) reported that the Integrated Planning Bureau was established under the Ministry of Local Industry, and that the Director of that Bureau is Ch'oe Kil-ch'on. This Ch'oe is the person listed as the head of the Integration Office of the Light Industry Committee, so it is safe to assume the Integration Office is the predecessor of the Integrated Planning bureau.

The points just stated are shown in the diagram below. Thus, of the two general bureaus, four bureaus and one office under the Light Industry committee, two general bureaus, two bureaus and the office have been reorganized and renamed as independent ministries under the State Administration Council--the Ministry of Spinning Industry, the Ministry of Local Industry, and the Ministry of Food and Daily Necessities Industry. That only two bureaus remain indicates that the Light Industry Committee itself has been abolished.

Electric Locomotives

Tokyo KITA CHOSEN KENKYU in Japanese Vol 7 No 72, Jul-Aug 80 pp 47-48

[Text] North Korea Produces Eight-Shaft Electric Locomotive Red Flag No 6

The NODONG SINMUN of 20 June reported that the Kim Chongt'ae Electric Locomotive Plant had produced the eight-axle electric locomotive "Red Flag No 6" for use on steep grades. According to the newspaper this engine has 1.5 times the tractive force of the "Red Flag" (six-axle) electric locomotives.

State of Electric Locomotives in North Korea

North Korea has had four types of electric locomotives (for railroads), of which two types are imported. The other two types are produced domestically in the plant mentioned above. Domestically produced electric locomotives are given the name "Red Flag." One type is the six-axle electric locomotive first produced in 1961, and the other is a four-axle locomotive first produced in 1969. (See KITA CHOSEN KENKYU No 57 p 40 for photographs and other detailed data.) The tractive power of the later is poor but, having four axles, it can be used in mountainous areas.

Significance of "Red Flag No 6"

Judging from photographs (see photo A), Red Flag No 6 does have eight axles, but it is a coupling of two units. That is, there is not one unit with eight axles, but rather two connected units of four axles each. A single unit of eight axles could not, of course, be used on the sharp curves of mountainous areas. The coupling of two four-axle units permits use on sharp curves. This photograph substantiates the newspaper's report that the Red Flag No 6 was developed for use on steep grades. It can therefore be said that the Red Flag No 6 was produced for the purpose of overcoming the problem of poor tractive power which was a weak point of the four-axle electric locomotive "Red Flag," which was also developed for steep grades.

Background for Development of the Red Flag No 6

Electrification of North Korea's railroads has moved from the level areas and is now concentrated in the mountainous areas. As electrification of the railroads has progressed it has naturally become all the more necessary to have electric locomotives for use in the mountains. As stated above, the domestically produced four-axle Red Flag electric locomotive used in mountainous areas has poor tractive power and cannot pull large amounts of freight at one time. Thus a scene of transport on the Paektu Ch'ongnyon Line (between Kilchu and Hyesan) opened in September 1978 (see photo B) shows two four-axle Red Flag electric locomotives running connected. However, following the completion of this electrification it was revealed (in the 29 Mar 79 NODONG SINMUN) that in March 1979 the Supreme People's Assembly planned to send one six-axle Red Flag electric locomotive remodeled for mountain use to the Paektu Ch'ongnyon Line and 10 others to other lines. (Note: Since MINJU CHOSON on 27 November 1979 made it clear that Red Flag 5158 was operating on the Paektu Ch'ongnyon Line, it is assumed to be the remodeled electric locomotive.) This indicates a shortage of electric locomotives for use in mountainous areas. Thus it can be said that necessity is the mother of Red Flag No 6. Red Flag No 6 is, however, similar to the two connected four-axle Red Flag electric locomotives seen in photo B. If that is the case, it should be enough to increase production of four-axle electric locomotives. However, this electric locomotive was developed through North Korea's own efforts and soon after development, production was suspended because of defective units. Thus production cannot be increased. A substitute for it was developed next. (HWABO, 29 May 1977) It is clear from research materials of that time that the unit was divided into two parts and that no power was applied to the foremost and rearmost wheels. Then in April 1979 the electric locomotive "Mangyongdae" was produced at the Kim Chongt'ae plant. (KITA CHOSEN NO KOGYO, Vol I, p 62 rev) No photographs or descriptions of the "Mangyongdae" were reported in North Korean media so the details are unknown, but in view of the aforementioned it is supposed the unit was divided into two parts. Since the present "Red Flag No 6" is a coupling of two electric locomotives, the idea is the same as that of a unit divided into two parts. Consequently production of the new electric locomotive is planned in line with the basic policy of a "unit divided into two parts." But because the Mangyongdae and the Red Flag No 6 have different names, it is thought that the Mangyangdae was defective and was not officially adopted, and that the Red Flag No 6 is an improvement based on the Mangyongdae. It can hardly be said, however, that adequate time or money has been used in developing the Red Flag No 6; ultimately it is mere pretense, and it is inconceivable that there will be further production.

The construction of this Red Flag No 6, simply stated, has each of the eight axle independent to facilitate turning curves; ea[illegible] turns freely on a pin at its center. Wear of rail and wheel is reduced by [illegible]s means. Because the play is too great in the locomotive 5158 mentioned in t[illegible] note, it tends to cause derailments. No derailments have been reported, but such incidents are conceivable, and that is seen as accelerating the development of the Red Flag No 6.

Mirim Lockgate Power Plant

Tokyo KITA CHOSEN KENKYU in Japanese Vol 7 No 72, Jul-Aug 80 pp 53-55

[Text] During the fourth session of the Sixth Supreme People's Assembly which met 3 March 1980 it was revealed that the Mirim Lockgate Power Plant was under construction and that the construction of the Namgang Power Plant is being planned.

Significance of the Mirim Lockgate Power Plant

Since the oil shock North Korea has increased efforts to construct small and medium-scale power plants, and has been particularly active in constructing energy-conserving power plants which make use of tidal energy and waterways. Thus the Taean Tidal Power Plant, a test plant, has been constructed in the Taean area of Namp'o-Taean. (See KITA CHOSEN KENKYU, No 63, p 21.) In addition, a tidal power plant (160 megawatt output) is planned for Unyul in South Hwanghae Province. All together some four special power plants using tidal energy or waterways are under construction or in planning. (See fig 2) Thus the Mirim Lockgate Power Plant was constructed as part of a series of energy conservation measures.

Mirim Lockgate Power Plant System

The Mirim Lockgate Power Plant is constructed across the Taedong River which flows through Mirim in the Sadong District of Pyongyang about north latitude 39° 2'. (see fig 1) As shown in the photograph, there are about 13 lockgates which create a drop of about 5 meters. The lockgate is topped by a two-lane road which enables automobile traffic between Mirim and the Taesong District on the opposite bank. The lockgates can be easily opened and closed for high tides, low tides and floods. On the Mirim side of the lockgate bridge is a water course for the waters of the Taedong River face a 5 meter drop at the lockgate; the plan is to use this water to generate electricity. The output of a power plant of this size is expected to be no more than 1 megawatt, the same as the Taean Tidal Power Plant.

Construction Organization for Mirim Lockgate Power Plant

According to the 3 July 1980 issue of NODONG SINMUN, this power plant was constructed by a People's Army unit. The paper revealed elsewhere that Sin Chung-gil, Kwak Song-tok and Yi Kwang-nok had responsibility for a "unit" which took part in the construction. We have not been able to ascertain what this "unit" is, but in any case it is thought that the construction was carried out by an engineering unit (battalion class) of the People's Army.

Namgang Power Plant

The name of the Namgang Power Plant indicates that it crosses the Namgang River which flows into the Taedong River from the left just upstream of Mirim. It is still on the drawing boards, and as of 10 August there had been no reports of this plant.

DPRK REPORTS ON POWERPLANT CONSTRUCTION

[Text] Pyongyang, 30 Dec (KCNA)--A gigantic thermal power plant is taking shape at fast pace in Chongjin, a northern port city on the east coast of the country.

This thermal power plant will supply sufficient electric power to the metallurgical establishments in the northern region such as the Kim Chaek iron and steel works and the Musan mine and to the chemical, machine-building and mining industrial establishments there and greatly contribute to introducing a central heating system for dwelling houses in Chongjin.

Meanwhile, the Pukchange thermal power plant with a capacity of 1.2 million kw is being expanded. In a little more than one month, the constructors carried out a vast-scale excavation for groundwork, concrete tamping and assembling of prefab parts and are creating a high speed in the construction project on the gound and assembling of steel structures.

Many power stations have cropped up in Korea over the last one year since the 19th plenary meeting of the Fifth Central Committee of the Workers' Party of Korea which set forth tasks for building dams across rivers and erecting many hydropower stations.

The large-scale Taedonggang power station No 1 which had been under construction was commissioned and many small- and medium-size hydropower stations have taken shape.

This year North Pyongan Province started the construction of power stations of 15 more than had been planned and has already put into operation more than 10 of them. In Chagang Province more than 20 small and medium power stations were put under construction, some of which have already been commissioned. In Paekam County, Yanggang Province, 7 of the 8 projects of small and medium power stations which started this year have been completed. The county plans to build 20 power stations of this category by 1982.

A number of small and medium power stations are under construction in other provinces including north and south Hwanghae provinces. Korea with its fairly abundant power resources plans to build hydraulic, thermal, atomic, tidal and sluice-gate power stations on a large scale to hit the target of 100,000 million kwh of electricity in the 1980's.

DPRK REPORTS SUCCESSES IN CAPITAL CONSTRUCTION

[Text] Pyongyang, 25 Dec (KCNA)--The Munsu Street Grand in scale is now under construction on the bank of the Taedong-gang River in Pyongyang.

Multi-storied apartment houses for more than a dozen thousand flats and a number of public buildings boasting of modern architectural beautywill make their appearance in the street. Its construction is now progressing at fast pace after it began on November 7.

In the past decade, more than 40 large-scale industrial buildings covering above one million square metres, 50 or more monumental public buildings, the grand and beautiful metro, more than 20 housing estates of tall flats, new roads and many historic sites and recreation centres came into being in Pyongyang.

The grand and modern Pyongyang maternity hospital and the Changgwang health complex, the Changgwang street with 20-30 storied apartment houses and many other buildings erected this year added new looks to the appearance of the capital.

Our country steadily increases the investment in capital construction. The state investment in capital construction in the industrial domain grew this year by 16.6 percent and that in housing construction by 30 percent as against last year.

With the thorough implementation of the policy of the Workers' Party of Korea on concentrating, specializing and industrializing construction, a vast capital construction is making headway successfully.

This year witnessed the completion of the Taean heavy machine combine, the second stage project of the Ponghwa chemical factory, the factory No 121, the Hoenyong kraft paper mill, refrigerating plants, building materials production bases, power stations and many other industrial establishments of different domains of the national economy and the appearance of many residential quarters.

In this course, the nation's economic potential has grown beyond comparison and our people are enjoying to their heart's content a plentiful and cultured life under better living conditions.

During the last ten years a large number of industrial establishments and monumental edifices were built in Korea.

In the six-year plan period, 1,055 modern factories and numerous workshops cropped up in the industrial domain. Sariwon, Chongjin, Sinuiju and other provincial seats changed their appearance as modern towns, and the county seats, workers settlements and villages were built more beautifully.

The first two years of the Second Seven-Year Plan (1978-1984) saw the completion of nearly 6,000 objects of industrial construction.

PROSPECTS FOR MINERAL RESOURCE EXPLORATION DISCUSSED

Pyongyang NODONG SINMUN in Korean 21 Sep 80 p 4

[Article by Kim Sok-t'ae: "New Exploration Prospects for Mineral Resources"]

[Text] Thanks to the wise guidance and great concern of the great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, geological exploration in our country has been extended not only to overground and underground but also to the seas. It is thus making great contributions to the self-sufficient national economic construction of the nation.

The great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, taught us as follows: "Our country is a maritime nation surrounded by seas on its three sides. It is a proud and rewarding duty of our people who live in a maritime nation, particularly of those who live near the sea coast, to conquer the vast seas and to develop the abundant resources of the seas."

It is an extremely rewarding task for our people who live in a maritime nation to conquer the seas and to actively develop and utilize inexhaustible mineral resources under the sea.

Today the development and utilization of mineral resources under the sea is posed as an important problem. It is related to the fact that the worldwide demands for raw materials and fuel resources are increasing every day due to the rapid development of the economy.

According to data available during the 1950-1975 period the worldwide demand for iron resources was increased by more than three times, for copper by more than five times, and for nickel by more than four times. The demands for other metals as well are being daily increased.

Now, underground mineral resources are distributed with a certain natural law. It is not that they are found everywhere in inexhaustible quantities.

In many countries once large-scale mines have been closed down or have been depleted. Moreover, also the grades of ores excavated at mines are not basically better than before. As an example, in the case of copper resources, only 50 years ago ores with a high grade of about 5 percent were excavated, but ores excavated now are of lower grades.

On the other hand, as resources in land have been developed for a long time, the possibility of discovering new resources of larger scales than today's has become relatively small.

Needless to say, given the condition that geology and exploration means have been highly modernized and developed, exploration is being carried out in deeper underground strata and in uninhabited places. But in terms of investment, time, and economic efficacy conditions for their utilization are calculated to be more difficult.

For this reason scientists are concentrating their research on developing and utilizing solar energy which can replace mineral resources, particularly fossil fuel resources.

Together with it, we have built up great expectations on many sea mineral resources in incalculable quantities in the vast space, although they have not been explored yet.

The seas cover 71 percent of the surface area of the earth.

Therefore, the mineral resources of the seas must be estimated to be several times more than those of land. If we add to these metals melted in sea water and salts, all these resources are estimated to be of vast quantities.

Today many scientists call sea water a "liquified mineral."

Sea water contains about 80 different chemical elements.

Scientists have calculated that 1,000 tons of sea water contains 23 tons of salt, 4 tons of sulfate soda, and other types of salt and elements.

There are many large-scale salt pans on our west coast. Many products, including salt and brine, are made there.

Today sea water is the source of salt, bittern, potassium, bromine, and iodine. As a practical example, the average quantity of bromine contained in sea water is 65 grams per ton of sea water. It is equivalent to more than 10 times the bromine found in the crust of the earth. Throughout the world 70 percent of the annual production of bromine is derived from sea water.

Undersea resources are classified into several categories according to the characteristics of their deposit and position. But for the sake of convenience they can be divided into coastal mineral resources, continental shelf mineral resources, and deep sea mineral resources.

Coastal mineral resources are produced through the process of rocks being crushed and transported by the constant movement of waves and currents, and then being piled up at certain places. Minerals are sorted in water according to specific gravity, size, and form. Magnetic iron ore, zircon ore, garnet, rutile ore, and tin ore are some of them. As these minerals are found in the still unsolidified sand of the sea, they are also called sea drift sand minerals. Sea drift sand minerals are related in many ways to the geology of land. For instance, where igneous rocks, metamorphic rocks, and others are transported and weathered are found magnetic iron ore and titanium ore. Also garnet, sillimanate, and staurolite, and other hardened minerals are accumulated, and in certain areas tin ore and diamonds are also found. Natural gold with a specific gravity of as much as 19 is transported in a small plate form along the river flow to the sea to form sand gold plates. Also veins of gold from beaches and islands are weathered and sunk to the bottom of nearby seas.

All these sea drift sand minerals are being excavated as precious resources to be used in modern industries and technical development.

In continental shelves are deposited many fossil fuel resources.

Generally, a sea bed lying along the periphery of land, less than 200 meters deep with a gentle slope, is called a continental shelf. The composition of the crust of the continental shelf is similar to that of land so that mineral resources buried in the continental shelf are the same as those in land.

The area of the continental shelves is as much as 5.5 percent of the entire area of the earth. This vast region has been formed by the accumulation of the alluvial strata over a long geological period. In it are found large quantities of crude oil and other natural gas and coal resources.

According to data available, during the 1 year period of 1977, 33 percent of the world's crude oil was extracted from the continental shelf. It is reported that in the year 2000, 50 percent of the petroleum production of the world will be crude oil from the continental shelf.

Even at the bottom of the sea, such as the Pacific, which is more than 3,000 meters deep, blocks of iron and manganese are found in unlimited quantities. These blocks contain high-grade manganese, nickel, cobalt and others.

Highly developed scientific technology not only makes it possible to investigate and secure sea minerals, but also prepares a technological basis for resolving many difficult problems posed in development.

In our seas are found many and diverse mineral resources in abundance, and the prospects for their development are extremely good.

The great leader has regarded the exploration of underground resources as the first process of industry, and has proposed a chuche policy for geological exploration. He has provided the geological exploration sector with numerous exploration facilities and physical exploration equipment, and exploration vessels. Thanks to his profound concern, our geological exploration workers are now able to explore and mobilize large quantities of resources in the air, in the sea, and under the ground.

On our east and west coasts are found many extremely large-scale drift sand resources.

In the Kumip'o, Monggump'o, Koamp'o, and Paekch'on areas on our west coast and in the Nahung area on our east coast is found good-quality silica sand in unlimited quantities. Silica sand from these areas is being extracted as a raw material for glass manufacturing. Because of the uniform granular size of the silica sand from these areas it is well known throughout the world. It is now being used in the manufacturing of optical lenses, eyeglasses, and high-quality glass.

A characteristic of drift sand mineral resources is that once they are excavated, similar quantities pile up again after a certain period of time.

Thus as a matter of fact, in mineral resources we have an advantage of continuous excavation.

If we are to use silica sand gained by excavating strongly hardened silica rocks and by crushing and processing them to use them as a raw material at a glass plant, labor and materials needed for it would be several times more compared to the use of silica sand from the beaches.

Besides this, coastal silica sand is preciously used not only as a construction material but also as sand for casting. Ballstone, a very useful decorative material for buildings from the Iwon area, is in a similar situation.

Also as sea drift sand material resources are mentioned garnet which is known as a good-quality grinding material, sand gold, sand iron, tin ore, and zircon ore.

In addition, we have achieved valuable successes in the task of producing various salts, including common salt, and extracting various elements, from sea water. We expect that in the future we will produce them on a larger scale.

Future prospects for the mineral resources of the continental shelf are more promising.

On our east, west, and south coasts are formed large continental shelves.

In them are deposited various mineral resources in inexhaustible quantities.

Truly, the problem of developing and utilizing sea mineral resources in our country surrounded by seas on its three sides is not only a responsible task of our era but also a heritage to be handed down to future new generations.

Scientists and technicians in various scientific fields must highly uphold the programmatic instructions of the great leader, emulate the models of the hidden heroes. Moreover, they must resolve scientific technological problems with the spirit of self-reliance and sturdy struggle. They must further strengthen cooperative research so as to satisfactorily resolve with foresight the problem of land mineral resources and sea minerals to meet the demand for transforming the people's economy in the chuche style.

DPRK INDUSTRY DEVELOPS RAPIDLY

SK231551 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1526 GMT 23 Dec 80

[Text] Pyongyang, 23 Dec (KCNA)--The industrial output in the Democratic People's Republic of Korea grew at the high annual rate of 15.9 per cent over the last 10 years, surpassing by far that in the 1960's.

This is a brilliant fruition which our people have made by developing the nation's economy fed with rich home raw materials and fuel on the stand of chuche.

In Korea, power industry and the production of chemical goods including chemical fertilizers and synthetic fibre have been developed in reliance upon home coal and raw material resources.

At the same time, an energetic struggle was waged to develop ferrous metallurgy on the basis of domestic fuel. Now the proportion of home supply of raw materials and fuel in our country is above 70 per cent.

The independence of power, metal, chemical, building materials and textile industries has been firmly guaranteed. And new industrial domains have come into being and many modern factories and enterprises have cropped up to further round off the departmental structure of the independent economy.

The industry of the country has formed a combined industrial system in which all realms of production from the extraction of raw materials to the production of finished goods are organically linked together.

The nation's chuche-based industry today supplies more satisfactorily all the heavy and light industrial goods needed for economic construction and the people's living.

The self-supply rate of machinery has reached 98 per cent and the stalls of the department stores and shops are stacked with home-made goods.

The potential of Korea's chuche-based industry is growing each day, with its production developing constantly at a high rate outside the world-wide economic fluctuation, knowing no "fuel crisis" or "power crisis."

The total industrial output value will jump 2.2 times in the period of the second seven-year plan.

When the long-range goals of socialist economic construction for the 1980's are attained, industrial output will be 3.1 times greater than the present figure, or 1,000 times as much as in 1946.

DPRK CHEMICAL INDUSTRY MAKES RAPID PROGRESS

SK231030 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1008 GMT 23 Dec 80

[Text] Pyongyang, 23 Dec (KCNA)—The chemical industry of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea is making a fast progress today.

The orlon, polyethylene and phosphatic fertilizer industries and many other new domains have been founded and the existing chemical industrial centres readjusted and reinforced to lift our chemical industry to a level where it can fully meet the increasing demands of the national economy for diverse chemical products.

The six-year plan period witnessed the cropping up of new chemical fertilizer factories including a modernly-equipped urea fertilizer factory large in scale. During the first two years of the six-year plan a production capacity of over one million tons of phosphatic fertilizer relying on home resources was created. As a result, the target of 3 million tons of chemical fertilizers was hit ahead of schedule in 1975 and its qualitative composition was markedly improved. In recent years following the start of the second seven-year plan, the annual output of chemical fertilizers and agricultural chemicals grew at a fast rate to bring the application of chemical fertilizers per hectare of paddy and non-paddy fields up to 1.5 tons and the paddy area of weeding by chemical means up to 97 percent of the total.

In the six-year plan period the chemical fibre and synthetic resin production bases were readjusted and reinforced and the production capacity of vinalon and vinyl chloride rose to 50,000 tons each. The output of staple fibre and rayon also rose noticeably.

Oil refineries were built on the eastern and western regions of the country and new large-scale petrochemical centres took shape.

The six-year plan period saw a 2.3-fold jump in the production of medicaments.

Today the nation's chemical industry turns out thousands of kinds of products including largely needed main chemical products, basic chemicals and catalyzers.

The support of chemical industry to light industry, agriculture, building materials industry and other branches and its links with them have been strengthened and a proper balance among them has been ensured.

Bright is the prospect of the development of the chemical industry.

When the second seven-year plan is carried out, our country will reach a new higher stage in the realization of overall chemicalization.

In this period the output of chemical fibre will jump 1.8 times and synthetic resin two times. The output of chemical fertilizers and agricultural chemicals will also grow by leaps and bounds.

In the 1980's our country will turn out 7 million tons of chemical fertilizers annually.

MACHINE-BUILDING INDUSTRY PROGRESSES AT FAST RATE

SK2211i8 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1010 GMT 22 Dec 80

[Text] Pyongyang, 22 Dec (KCNA)--The machine-building industry of Korea is progressing at a fast rate. In recent years the state has steadily increased investments in this domain, markedly raising its production capacity.

The ordered equipment production capacity at present is more than 3.5 times than in 1977.

This year the machine-building industry has turned out a great number of highly efficient modern machines such as powerful electric locomotive of new type, large-size salting base ship, large crane ship, heavy-duty lorry, oil pressure excavator, oil-pressure high-speed deep-boring machine, 5,000-ton plate press, large oxygen separator and automatic lathe.

This has helped energetically promote the modernization of the national economy and further increase the potential of the machine-building industry this year.

Now our country meets 98 percent of its demands for machinery with home products. The machine-building industry of Korea supplies such large machines and equipment as hydraulic and thermal power generating equipment, large-size rolling equipment, special large high-pressure chemical equipment and large-size machine tools and complete sets of plants for different domains of the national economy.

LIGHT INDUSTRY GROWS MORE POWERFUL

[Text] Pyongyang, 31 Dec (KCNA)--The light industry of Korea having all branches including the textile, daily necessities and food industries is fully meeting the demand of the working people for consumer goods with its own production.

With the successful implementation of the policy of the Workers' Party of Korea on developing the medium- and small-scale local industry side by side with the large-scale centrally controlled industry, there have been built an average of more than 20 local industrial factories relying on locally availabe raw materials in each city and country of the country along with a large number of modernly-equipped central light industrial factories.

The local industrial factories now account for more than half of the nation's total consumer goods production.

In recent years the material and technical foundations of light industry have been substantially consolidated.

The equipment of the existing textile mills have been further replenished to increase their production capacity and new large-scale textile industry bases and chemical fibre production bases have taken shape.

A large cornstarch factory has been built in each province and a comprehensively mechanised riced-corn mill in every city and country.

The television set factory, the wrist watch factory and modernly-equipped daily necessaries factories which have cropped up in recent years are producing a large quantity of high quality goods for cultural use and daily use to further improve our people's lives.

Over the last decade the country's production of consumer goods has increased 3.7 times.

Korea will raise the annual output of fabrics to 800 million metres, shoes to 100 million pairs and sugar produced by use of domestic raw materials to more than 300,000 tons by 1984, the target year of the present seven-year plan.

In the 1980's Korea will further consolidate the material and technical foundations of the light industry to bring about a new turn in the production of mass consumption goods.

In particular, the annual output of fabrics will reach 1,500 million metres.

LAND RECLAMATION PROJECT DESCRIBED

Pyongyang NODONG SINMUN in Korean 4 Nov 80 p 3

[Article by staff reporter Ho Kyong-ok: "More Reclaimed Land! In Sonch'on County"]

[Text] In his report to the 6th Party Congress, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song instructed as follows:

"In order to increase agricultural production, the tideland reclamation project and the new land reclamation movement must be vigorously launched so as to continuously increase the size of the reclaimed lands."

Having ardently accepted the great leader's programmatic instructions in their highly throbbing hearts, the party functionaries and the agricultural workers of Sonch'on County have launched a rewarding struggle to occupy the top level of 15 million tons of grains, united as one.

Declaring that one of the important measures to increase grain production is to reclaim tideland and speedily plant seeds there, the county party committee functionaries took the workers of the concerned fields with them and rushed to Sokhwa tideland where only a dike had been built.

Braving the incessantly blowing bitter cold western sea wind, the workers and the mechanized vanguards from the county's civil engineering construction office measured approximately 100 li of water, drafted a bold plan of constructing numerous standardized plots and began the construction works without delay.

Deeply studying the party congress reports and thus furthering their awareness of the importance of their missions, the mechanized vanguards from the county's civil engineering and construction office reaffirmed their determination to lead the other workers to tackle difficult tasks, bravely meet problems head on and complete these vast combat tasks before the soil freezes.

At the site, the functionaries from the county party committee, the county cooperative farms management committee and other county level organizations are vigorously launching a political indoctrination program to teach the masses the 10 brilliant major prospective goals for the construction of a socialist economy that were in the report to the party congress. Like a melting pot, the construction site is swirling and boiling with excitement.

Drawing in their minds the high rising grain stalks ladden with a bumper harvest each year, the bulldozer operators including Yi Ch'un-hyon, Kim Hyo-paek and Kim Ch'ang-hyon are working in detail on plots so as to get the most effective use out of them and so that seeds can be sown next spring.

The functionaries are boldly planning and vigorously supporting all construction work in step with the combatants, whose morale is sky-high.

"Almost every day ferocious sea winds rush on us and mud gets in our way. But, this is not much of a problem to us, for we are armed with the burning loyalty and revolutionary determination to implement the farsighted programs of the great leader of this land."

These are the words of Comrade Sung Ch'i-un who is in command of the construction work at the site.

Under the dauntless spirit of the mechanized vanguards who operate the steering columns following the examples set by the unsung heroes who had thoroughly displayed their revolutionary spirit of self-reliance and endurance of hardships, the land to bear the bumper harvest is expanding every day.

When the flames of water depth measuring and plot adjustment works were burning vigorously at the Sokhwa tideland reclamation project site, the county cooperative farm management committee functionaries went to Sinmi Island aboard a ship.

There they discovered more than 50 chongbo of tideland suitable for a reclamation project that could be carried out immediately by the county itself.

The ardent and overwhelming spirit of the functionaries and the agricultural worker who strive for the continuous increase of grain production by reclaiming more tideland are resulting in more renovations at every construction site.

Where there is cooperative farm land the mass movement to reclaim new land through various methods is being vigorously launched throughout the county.

Under the guidance of the party organizations and with the support from the three-revolutions team, the Sambong cooperative farm members who launched the new land reclamation movement have discovered 8 chongbo of new land within a few days.

The functionaries and the agricultural workers of Sonch'on County who were not satisfied with just the results of their efforts, are brilliantly bringing to fruition this year's bumper crop and at the same time continuing their vigorous struggle to increase reclaimed land even by an inch.

DEVELOPMENTS NOTED IN FISHING INDUSTRY

[Text] Pyongyang, 18 Dec (KCNA)--The Korean fishermen who have entered into the winter fishing operations are making a big haul these days, raising fish catch entering December over 1.3 times as against the same period last year. In particular, the Wonsan Fishery Station caught in the first half of this month four times as much fish as in the life period of last year.

The country's fishing industry has made a big stride over the past ten years. Many fishing ports on the East Coast have been reconstructed on an expansion basis and more than ten new fishing bases built near fishing grounds of the West Sea.

With rapid development of the shipbuilding industry fishing fleets have been firmly built up with large and modern fishing boats, such as over 10,000-ton processing mother-ships, 5,000-ton refrigerator-transport ships, 3,750-ton stern trawlers and 450-ton all-purpose trawlers. The number of fishing boats increased 1.7 times in the past decade. Medium and small fishing boats have been reconditioned into all-purpose fishing boats to catch more fish, not restricted by seasonal and fishing conditions.

The aquatic output of our country has grown year after year to hit its target envisaged in the six-year plan (1971-1976) 10 months ahead of schedule. Last year's aquatic output reached nearly 2 million tons to raise per capita daily supply to 300 grams. The fish processing industry has likewise made rapid advance.

Modern freezing plants, cold storages and processing plants have been built in the fish pools and consumer bases and refrigerator trains and refrigerator transport cars have been introduced to establish a weel-regulated supply system up to mountainous villages of the inland area.

In the 1980's Korea will raise the yearly aquatic output to 5 million tons. Then, the per capita daily supply of aquatic products will reach over 700 grams.

DPRK REAPS BUMPER HARVEST IN 1980

SK230522 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1526 GMT 22 Dec 80

[Text] Pyongyang, 22 Dec (KCNA)--Bumper crops were reaped this year, too, in the countryside of Korea which sees a bountiful harvest every year with the great chuche method of farming coming into full bloom.

A rich harvest of grain, fruits, vegetables and an abundant production of meat were reported from intermediary and mountain areas along with a plenteous harvest of rice in the plain areas.

Now the farmers are summing up the year's farming with joy over bumper crops.

An average of 10.6 tons of grain plus a large amount of money went to each household on the Naerim Cooperative Farm, Chaeryong County, South Hwanghae Province, an average of 9 tons 354 kilogrammes of grain plus a big amount of money on the Sangha Cooperative Farm, Songchon County, South Pyongan Province, and an average of 9 tons 307 kilogrammes of grain and a large amount of money on the Kwapyong Cooperative Farm, Yongbyon County, North Pyongan Province, which summed up the yearly farming recently.

The Okdo Cooperative Farm, Yonggang County, Nampo Municipality, shared out an average of 9 tons of grain and a large amount of money to each household, the Kumdae Cooperative Farm, Nangnang District, Pyongyang, an average of 8 tons 115 kilogrammes of grain and 1,600 won in cash and the Sancham Cooperative Farm, Ichon County, Kwangwon Province, an average of 7 tons of grain and 2,500 won in cash.

Having reaped bumper crops and received big income shares under the deep solicitude of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the glorious party centre, the farmers in all parts of the country are energetically accelerating preparations for next year's farming, setting themselves a high goal of grain output for next year to attain the grain target of 15 million tons put forward by the historic Sixth Congress of the Workers' Party of Korea.

KWP CC GREETS VINALON COMPLEX--Pyongyang, 31 Dec (KCNA)--The Central Committee of the Workers' Party of Korea sent a message of thanks to the workers, technicians and office employees of the February 8 Vinalon Complex and the three-revolution team members dispatched there. In the message the Central Committee of the party pointed out that they had registered a proud success in completing the project of making the electric carbide oven air-tight requiring a large labour force and fund in a little more than one year through a mass movement by displaying the revolutionary spirit of self-reliance and hard struggle and expressed satisfaction over and highly praised it. The Central Committee of the party said that the workers, technicians and office employees there and the three-revolution team members should firmly establish the monolithic ideological system of the party, unconditionally and thoroughly implement the party's lines and policies and make all efforts to build the complex into a model factory of chuche industry. A ceremony for conveying the message of thanks of the Central Committee of the party was held on December 29 on the spot. [Text] [SK310700 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0345 GMT 31 Dec 80]

YEAR-END DISTRIBUTION INCREASES--Pyongyang, 2 Dec (KCNA)--A bumper harvest visited the Chongsan-bol plain, a land of glory, this year, too, bringing rich income shares to the peasants. The agricultural working people there did all farming on a scientific and technical basis in accordance with the chuche method of farming and overcame the whimsical weather caused by the influence of the cold front this year to increase the per hectare yield by 213 kg in rice and 1.69 tons in maize above the peak year. The farm overfulfilled its state assignments on all indices of agricultural production such as grain, vegetables, fruits, meat and cocoons. On November 27, the farm summed up the rich farming, distributing an average of 10.6 tons of grain and a large amount of money to each household. The per household grain share on the Chongsan Cooperative Farm is on the yearly increase. [Text] [SK021135 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1004 GMT 2 Dec 80]

SEA FISHING RESULTS--Pyongyang, 15 Nov--The East Sea of Korea is now animated with winter fishing. The catch in recent ten odd days is double the amount in the like period of last year. The fisheries commission has nimbly concentrated the fishing boats on the fishing grounds and actively organised the fishing operations with the earlier advent of the winter fishing season than usual this year. The Kosong Fishery Station, Kangwon Province, hauled in the first 10 days 3.5 times as much fish as in the same period of last year. The Chongjin Fishery Station caught 70 tons at maximum per netting by waging the operation in a big way. All the fishery stations in south and north Hamgyong provinces, too, keep increasing their catch. [SK160242 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1040 GMT 15 Nov 80]

FARM YEARLY ACCOUNT SETTLEMENT--Pyongyang, 15 Nov--The Mangyongdae Cooperative Farm in Mangyongdae District, Pyongyang, which again reaped a bumper harvest this year summed up its yearly farming on November 11 and distributed an average of 7 tons 380 kg of grain plus 4,545 won in cash to each household. The cooperative farm recorded a peak harvest this year, successfully overcoming the influence of the cold front, by doing the farm work on a scientific and technical basis as required by the chuche method of farming. The per-hectare yield was 284 kg higher than last year in rice and 2 tons 670 kg higher in maize. A rich harvest was gathered not only in grain crops but also in vegetables, fruits and all other farm produce. The farm fulfilled this year's targets at 105.9 percent in grain crops, 121.8 percent in vegetables, 106.5 percent in meat and 101.2 percent in fruits. BUDDHISTS FEDERATION HOLDS CENTRAL MEETING

[Text] Pyongyang, 27 Dec (KCNA)--A central meeting for celebrating the 35th anniversary of the founding of the Korean Buddhists Federation was held on December 25 at the meeting hall of the federation.

The meeting was attended by Pak Tae-ho, chairman, and Hong Hwa-tu, vice-chairman, of the Central Committee of the Korean Buddhists Federation, central and local functionaries of the federation and Buddhists.

Chairman Pak Tae-ho made a report at the meeting. Over the past 35 years since the founding of the Korean Buddhists Federation the entire Buddhists in the northern half of the republic, under the wise guidance of the great leader President Kim Il-song, the sun of the nation, are leading a happy life to their heart's content, together with the entire people, with nothing to desire more, while enjoying a free religious life.

He went on: Today the Chon Tu-hwan military fascist clique harshly suppress the religious men, restricting the freedom of religious activities in South Korea.

The puppet clique brutally persecute Buddhism embracing 14 million believers in South Korea. They passed a heavy penalty of 20 years upon monk Ko Un-tae for the mere reason that he fought for democracy, human rights and national reunification and commit all manner of outrages, arresting and imprisoning a number of clergymen and priests who go against the grain with them, expelling them from religious bodies and confiscating properties of religious associations.

Without achieving the country's reunification, the reporter said, the misfortunes of our nation and the sufferings of all the fellow countrymen including the Buddhists of the south caused by division cannot be done away with.

All the Buddhists and people of all walks of life in the north and south and abroad should unite as one under the banner of national reunification, despite the difference in ideology, idea and religion, and turn out as one man in a sacred struggle for implementing the new national reunification proposal for the accomplishment of the cause of national reunification by means of founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo put forward by President Kim Il-song, he stressed.

For the accomplishment of the independent and peaceful reunification of the country, the U.S. imperialists occupation of South Korea and their "two Koreas" plot must be brought to an end and the Chon Tu-hwan military fascist clique, the butcher of the nation and truculent enemy of reunification, be overthrown, he declared.

He strongly demanded that the Chon Tu-hwan fascist clique unconditionally and immediately release Kim Tae-chung, Ko Un-tae and all other illegally imprisoned democratic figures and patriots and step down at once from "power" as demanded by the South Korean people.

He also called upon all the Buddhists in the north and the south and abroad to actively take part in the work for founding such joint consultative body of the nation as the preparatory committee for the founding of the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo to accelerate the cause of national reunification.

The South Korean Buddhists must further strengthen the struggle against the U.S. imperialists and their stooge the Chon Tu-hwan gang of murderers, if they are to realize "Palgoyorak," the idea of Buddha, that is, the desire to get rid of hardships and enjoy happiness, the reporter stressed, and declared: the entire Buddhists in the northern half of the republic will render active support and encouragement to the just struggle of the South Korean Buddhists and people of all strata in their valiant and just struggle for the democratization of society and the country's peaceful reunification.

FOUNDING OF PYONGYANG COLLEGE--Pyongyang, 30 Dec (KCNA)--The Pyongyang Fine Arts College marked the 30th anniversary of its founding. The college has been strengthened and developed into a reliable training centre of talented artists of chuche type firmly armed with the chuche idea and the literary and art policy of the Workers' Party of Korea. The college has reared a large number of artists who are playing an important role in building socialist national fine arts by thoroughly carrying into practice the party's chuche-based literary and art policy, upholding the wise leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song. The teachers and students of the college have made an active contribution to developing the chuche-based fine arts by participating in the construction of such edifices designed under a far-reaching plan as the grand Mansudae monument, the international friendship exhibition and the wall painting of the Pyongyang Metro and in the creation of art works. A meeting marking the 30th anniversary of the founding of the college was held on December 29. It was attended by Comrade Kwang Chang-yop, and Yi Chang-son and other personages concerned as well as teachers and students of the college. PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS FOR GENETIC ENGINEERING TO BE SOUGHT

Pyongyang NODONG SINMUN in Korean 26 Oct 80 p 5

[Article by Kang Won-ho: "Genetic Engineering and Its Prospects"]

[Text] Under today's conditions in which science and technology are advancing rapidly, the honorable task confronting our scientists is the task of bolstering the chucheization, modernization and scientification of the people's economy, on one hand by opening up new scientific fields, and on the other, by further intensifying research, in order that the latest science and technology be broadly applied.

The great Comrade Kim Il-song instructed in the report of the Sixth Party Congress as follows:

"In order to open up new scientific fields and to have the fruits of the newest science and technology broadly applied in the people's economy, we must perform research with a view to the future. We will have to put our strength into bringing about the advancement of cytologic engineering, genetic engineering, ultra-high pressure physics, and cryogenic physics; into the development of new energy forms such as nuclear energy and solar energy; into deep research into lasers and plasma; and into bringing about their wide utilization in the people's economy."

The great leader has, by his perceptive analysis of the present era's trends in scientific advancement, presented wise principles for the development of cytologic engineering and genetic engineering in the field of biology.

The policy of advancing genetic engineering which the great leader has presented is an exceedingly wise policy which can bring about a new revolutionary conversion in the various sectors which focus upon living things--agriculture and animal husbandry, medicine and microbial industries, etc., through the active development and application of new technologies and methods for controlling the heredity of organisms.

Genetic engineering may be defined as the technologies and methods for making organisms which possess new characteristics by removing the genetic material from within the cell, changing it in a test tube through physical and chemical methods, and then replacing it in the cell.

Genetic engineering is the pragmatic branch of molecular biology (that branch of biology which studies the actual state of life on the molecular level) which has arisen with a mandate to utilize all of the fruits of molecular biology, which has developed rapidly in recent years, in solving practical problems.

In recent years truly tremendous results have been achieved in the field of molecular biology.

In particular, molecular biology has made clear the genetic phenomenon's material character and its linking which transmits the form and qualities of preceding generations to future ones.

Consequently, at this point in time, the genetic material with an extremely high molecular weight, included within the nucleus of the cell, has been verified as deoxyribonucleic acid [DNA] and it has also been made clear that the essence of the genes is stored in code form within the DNA molecule and the links which these accomplish are also becoming known precisely.

Results like these give us the potential to control the genetic phenomenon precisely by physical and chemical methods in directions which we ourselves may wish.

That is, it [genetic engineering] enables us to remove the DNA from an organism, change the genes which it holds within its molecule in a test tube, and fix it up anew; then put the changed genetic material again in an organism, enabling it to manifest various new forms and characteristics.

Genetic engineering, just by going on further and developing the technologies and methods of all these processes, will meet the important goal of producing new organisms possessing characteristics even more useful than by these methods; the research in this field generally began in early 1970.

Of course, the hybridization method has been applied as a method of fixing up useful genes in new forms and producing new organisms since long ago.

However, one cannot focus on just the target genes by this method. The reason is that numerous genes are together in one bundle within the cell and behave accordingly. Consequently, in order to obtain new organisms by this hybridization method long hours and considerable effort must be expended.

But, following a fixed plan in genetic engineering, we will be able to remove the DNA which is the genetic material from an organism and, by a method which causes change in a test tube, remove some of the non-useful genes, or by a method of adding new, useful genes and then placing the changed genetic material in a cell, we will be able to control the genetic phenomenon completely in accordance with the will of man chemically and technologically.

The basic agents employed in genetic engineering are the enzymes (subtraction enzyme and ligase), which perform the functions of removing or attaching certain target genes in the DNA molecule, which is the genetic material, and gene-carriers which transport the appropriate genes within the cell.

The basic agents such as these which are employed in genetic engineering currently are largely derived from microbes.

The methods of removing the genetic material from organisms and adding various fragments to them are all basic biochemical methods.

Genetic engineering is not only broadening our knowledge concerning the structure and composition of genes and their functions and broadening our understanding of life, but also it is opening up new prospects in practical fields such as easily manufacturing various valuable materials economically, producing new organisms, and curing genetic diseases, etc.

Genetic engineering is giving us the potential to produce large quantities of various valuable materials, such as hormones, industrially.

The hormone insulin, which is widely used in the clinical sector, up until now is being obtained for use with difficulty by a method of extraction from the pancreases of domestic animals. However, coming to today, by transfering the insulin gene, which had been only in domestic animals, to a microbe by genetic engineering means, we have produced a new insulin-producing microbe. Consequently, the prospect for obtaining large quantities of insulin easily by means of culturing these microbes in a factory has been begun solidly.

In addition to this, genetic engineering is also succeeding in placing the genes which control the biosynthesis of various enzymes and amino acids, etc., in the cells of microbes.

Genetic engineering also is attracting a great deal of attention in the agricultural sector in connection with raising the productivity of agricultural products and it is being predicted that very interesting problems will be solved.

Of course, genetic engineering has been unable to touch higher level life forms so far, but in the not too distant future artificially producing new organisms such as plants which use the nitrogen which is in the air and grow even though nitrogen fertilizer is not given them is unfolding.

Moreover, in the public health sector, genetic engineering is providing the potential for completely curing genetic diseases which were incurable.

In truth, genetic engineering, which is opening up new fields of biology and taking an important position, is an extremely important field of science and technology which will be able to lay a firm material foundation for communism, which is mankind's highest ideal, and to contribute positively, raising living standards and promoting the public welfare.

Under the wise leadership of the respected and beloved leader and our glorious party scientific research into genetic engineering has already begun in our country, certain results are being achieved, and sufficient conditions and possibilities have been arranged to promote genetic engineering and are showing bright prospects.

All of our scientists must highly esteem the great leader's programmatic instructions and must faithfully recompense the party's enormous political confidence and consideration with new scientific research results by totally sacrificing all of their energy and intellect in opening up and developing new fields of science and technology such as genetic engineering.

DEVELOPMENT OF CELL ENGINEERING URGED

Pyongyang NODONG SINMUN in Korean 2 Nov 80 p 4

[Article by Om Yong-sop: "Cell Engineering: Today and Tomorrow"]

[Text] It is one of the most honorable and rewarding tasks placed before our scientists to open up new scientific fields and advance promising research with a view to the future, so as to utilize the newest sciencific techniques in the people's economy.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught us as follows: "We must make an effort to advance cell engineering, genetic engineering, ultra-high pressure physics and ultra-low temperature physics, develop new energy sources including atomic and solar energy, and deeply study lasers and plasma in order to apply them to the people's economy."

In his report to the sixth party congress, the great leader has given the programmatic task of advancing cell engineering.

The advancement of cell engineering, a revolutionary field in biology, is one of the important issues in successfully carrying out the basic task of the socialistic people's economy in the 1980's in order to further consolidate our nation's achievements, strongly provide material as well as technological basis suitable to completely victorious socialistic society and to raise the people's material and cultural living standard to an epoch-making high level.

As man's creative activities are being positively advanced to renovate and restructure nature and society, many results are achieved in the field of biology and a bright prospect is developing. Amazing advancement is being made especially in the field of plant and animal breeding, developing improved seeds with higher yield and superior characteristics and raising new breed of domesticated animals.

If we are to grow better types of living things to meet the people's requirements and wishes, then we must improve the structure of genetic materials, the genes which pass on hereditary traits from the first generation to the next.

The conventional method fo selective breeding being employed to this date always involved dealing with the whole living organism. Numerous measures were applied to alter the genes. Selection was then made to pick out those desirable units that were suitably altered in their genetic structure, and efforts were made to preserve the characteristics thus developed. Thus, this method requires numerous living units to be cultivated over many years, which forced the developmental work to be very extensive, with a great deal of time and efforts involved. This was considered unavoidable because breeding depended on natural reproductive process. The breeding method was used because the process of altering the genes and the passing of the altered genes could take place only when two reproductive cells were united. In other words, breeding is possible by the whole organism but the fundamental change in the gene could come about only through reproductive cells.

However, today the amazing progress of modern biology has revealed that the unique genetic materials are not just present in the reproductive cells but found in all the cells of the organism. Thus, it has been proven that improved strains may be obtained through proper artificial fusion of not only reproductive cells but also other body cells in general.

In other words, when body cells are separated and treated by various means to remove their cell walls and other obstacles, cells from different plants were combined as if they were reproductive cells, allowing genetic changes and entry of genes of a different cell into the treated cell.

At the same time, a technique has been developed to grow a single cell into a full grown body. For example a cell from a radish or other plants or their pollen has been successfully grown into full plant.

These acheivements marked an epoch-making turning point in biological research and seed growing techniques.

Thus, today the focal point of the research is directed to the cells from the body of living organisms and the stage of seed culture is set not only at the farmland and nurseries but also in the test tube in laboratories.

Enough cells are handled for the specific purpose of developing new strains of plants and animals and comparatively cheap methods and measures are being explored.

Since the techniques of cell engineering were applied to manipulate cells to produce a new living organism by changing genetic characteristics, cases of cross-breeding between different species and genuses are not few.

It has become possible to cultivate new plants, non-existant in nature, through cross-breeding of tomato and red radish, tomato and potato and cabbage and Chinese cabbage.

Also, using cell engineering techniques, research is being intensified to introduce nitrogen-fixing bacteria like root-nodule bacteria, into the cells of higher vegetables and the newly economical strain was successfully created by transplanting one kind of cell nucleus into another.

In some produce, the same method was applied to create a new strain that lost the function of producing pollen while retaining all the other normal functions.

Using cell engineering techniques, experiments are being conducted of transplanting the chromosome from a cell of a plant to another cell and removing a needed part of the chromosome from a cell to be transplanted. In this way, there are not a few cases of success in which a wild plant's strong resistance against disease was transferred to weaker cultivated plants: typical examples being the tobacco plant resistant to the mosaic virus and wheat resistant to a "dark-rust" disease.

The development of cell engineering based on the research of modern biology will bring about a truly amazing advancement in man's effort to tame and harness nature, more effectively improve species of agricultural crops and domestic animals and lead to useful utilization of newly developed living organisms. At the same time, the advancement of cell engineering will greatly affect the development of biology including genetics.

All our scientists must dedicate themselves to accepting in their hearts the great leader's programmatic instructions, firmly establish chuche in scientific research work, strongly intensify efforts for cell engineering research, and greatly contribute to achieve ahead of schedule the task shown by the brilliant ten great prospective targets of the 1980's.

INDIAN CONGRESS PARTY SUPPORTS REUNIFICATION PROPOSAL

[Text] Pyongyang, 15 Dec (KCNA)--The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, general secretary of the Central Committee of the Workers' Party of Korea, received a message from S.S. Mohapatra, general secretary of the Indian National Congress Party of Indira Gandhi, in support of the proposal for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo and the ten-point political programme of a unified state.

The message dated December 2 says: Your excellency respected general secretary, we are deeply concerned about the sufferings of the Korean people caused by the division.

As your excellency knows, the Indian National Congress Party of Indira Gandhi takes it as its basic policy to oppose foreign interference in and aggression on other countries and, accordingly, we actively hold that the imperialists should stop interference in others internal affairs and, furthermore, their aggressive manoeuvres should be terminated.

When there is outside interference, any internal dispute of a country cannot be solved fairly. Therefore, we have opposed foreign interference in the Korean question and hoped the reunification of Korea would be achieved in a peaceful way at an early date in accordance with the will and demand of the Korean people.

The new proposal for reunification put forward by your excellency at the Sixth Congress of the Workers' Party of Korea, we think, is a just policy correctly reflecting the will and demand of the Korean people who desire to achieve the reunification of Korea by a peaceful means, not by means of a war.

If the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo is founded by bringing together the north and south, regardless of the difference in ideology and social system, the people of the north and south will deepen mutual understanding and the differences of view, which are obstructive to the reunification of Korea, will gradually diminish in this course.

It gives us pleasure to support the proposal for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo and the ten-point political programme of a unified state.

We sincerely hope the north and south will found a confederal state as soon as possible to make a great advance in realising the reunification of Korea.

Availing ourselves of this opportunity, we hope the friendly relations between the peoples of the two countries will develop more favourably.

We wish your excellency good health and a long life and success in your excellency's responsible work for the prosperity and happiness of the Korean people.

The Indian National Congress Party of Indira Gandhi extends highest consideration and best wishes to your excellency.

DPRK MARKS PALESTINE WORLD SOLIDARITY DAY

SK021009 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0809 GMT 2 Dec 80

[Text] Pyongyang, 2 Dec (KCNA)--A meeting was sponsored by the Korea-Palestine Friendship and Solidarity Committee at the Chollima House of Culture on December 1 on the day of world solidarity with the Palestinian people.

The meeting was attended by Kim Pong-chu, Kim Sang-chun and other personages concenred and working people in the city.

Muhammad Haji Issa, second secretary of the Mission of the Palestine Liberation Organisation in Pyongyang, was present.

Addressing the meeting first, Kim Sang-chun expressed firm solidarity with the Palestine Liberation Organisation and the Palestinian people in their just struggle for retaking the lost Arab land and completely restoring their legitimate national rights.

Pointing to the great successes made by the Palestinian people under the leadership of the Palestine Liberation Organisation through their daring struggle of various forms to restore the occupied land, he said:

The Korean people, who always regard as their own cause the just cause of the Palestinian people, will in the future, too, actively support with might and main the sacred struggle of the Palestinian people against the aggression of the U.S.-led imperialists and Zionists.

Speaking next, Muhammad Haji Issa expressed deep respect and reverence for the great leader Marshal Kim Il-song and the glorious party centre, in the name of the Palestinian people, the Palestinian revolution and their wise directorate, and said: We feel it an honor to wholeheartedly wish good health and a long life to the marshal.

This meeting on the day of world solidarity with the Palestinian people, he said, clearly and truthfully shows the sympathy, steadfast stand and firm solidarity of the Korean people with the Palestinian people in their legitimate just struggle.

Noting that the report made by the great leader Marshal Kim Il-song at the Sixth Congress of the Workers' Party of Korea is a document of world-wide significance indicating ways to build a communist society, he stressed: The line of the three revolutions run through with the chuche idea, the spirit of Chollima and self-reliance is a very useful policy for all people fighting to achieve progress and upsurge in all fields and build the communist society.

The Palestine Liberation Organisation and the entire Palestinian people will support the struggle of the Korean people for the reunification of the country in the international arena, he declared.

The meeting adopted a solidarity message to the chairman of the Executive Committee of the Palestine Liberation Organisation in the name of the attendants.

DPRK DAILY ON SOLIDARITY WITH PALESTINIAN PEOPLE'S STRUGGLE

SK311529 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1509 GMT 31 Dec 80

[Text] Pyongyang, 31 Dec (KCNA)--NODONG SINMUN today dedicates a signed article headlined "Sacred Struggle To Restore Homeland" to the 16th anniversary of the start of the Palestine revolution.

Pointing out that on January 1, 1965, the Palestine patriots sounded the first gun report of the armed struggle against the Israeli aggressors in the Karili area occupied by them, the article says:

Over the past 16 years since the start of the revolution the Palestine people have tirelessly waged a sacred struggle against the Israeli aggressors, overcoming the manifold difficulties and ordeals under the slogan of national liberation.

They are dealing a heavy blow at the Israeli aggressors through their struggle of different forms including armed struggle.

The international position of the Palestine Liberation Organisation is rising high. The Palestine peoples struggle against the Israeli aggressors is a sacred one for restoring the lost homeland and national independence and dignity and a just one for peace and security in the Middle East, it says, and continues:

Regarding the struggle of the Palestine people for restoring the lost homeland and national rights as their own cause, our people have consistently supported it.

The Korean people who regard it as their lofty international duty to support the national liberation struggle of the people will always extend full support to the Palestine peoples struggle, standing firm on their side.

Our people wish the Palestine people greater victory in their struggle to win the right to return to the homeland, right to self-determination, right to build an independent state and other national rights.

PRESS MARKS ANNIVERSARY OF GUINEAN PEOPLE'S VICTORY

SK221550 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1516 GMT 22 Nov 80

[Text] Pyongyang, 22 Nov (KCNA)--Ten years ago today the Guinean people repulsed the brigandish armed invasion of the U.S.-led imperialists. In a signed article dedicated to this anniversary NODONG SINMUN says that after the independence the Guinean people built a new country, frustrating all manner of pressure by the imperialists, in the spirit with which they smashed the colonialists. It goes on:

As the Guinean Government advanced along the road of anti-imperialism and independence, the imperialists repeatedly engineered anti-government plots, instigating the Guinean reactionaries. But, each time the Guinean people decidedly smashed the manoeuvres of the imperialists. Under the correct leadership of President Ahmed Sekou Toure, the supreme chief of the Guinean revolution, the Guinean people have vigorously advanced toward socialism and registered a lot of successes in the struggle for building a new, independent life.

Pursuing foreign policy of non-alignment, the Guinean Government is struggling against imperialism, colonialism and racism and for the complete liberation of the African continent. The Guinean people actively support the struggle of the Arab people including the Palestinian people and the southern African peoples' struggle for freedom and liberation.

Korea and Guinea forged the bonds of friendship in the common struggle for sovereignty, independence and socialism. In particular, the visits of our country by Ahmed Sekou Toure, president of the Guinean Revolutionary People's Republic, last year and in October this year were an important event which greatly contributed to strengthening the friendship and solidarity between the two countries and to promoting the common cause of the peoples of the non-aligned countries and the anti-imperialist independent forces. The Korean people wish the Guinean people better success in their future struggle for building an independent and prospering, new society.

A signed article of MINJU CHOSON notes that the Korean people will continue to make every effort to develop the bonds of friendship with the Guinean people.

'KCNA' NOTES ARGENTINE SOLIDARITY MESSAGE TO KWP

SK131043 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1029 GMT 13 Dec 80

[Text] Pyongyang, 13 Dec (KCNA)--The Central Committee of the Workers' Party of Korea received from the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Argentina a solidarity message denouncing the Chon Tu-hwan military fascist clique's plot to murder Kim Tae-chung and penalize other democratic figures and demanding their immediate relase. The message dated November 25 says:

Respected comrades, the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Argentina sends this solidarity message of ours through you to the South Korean patriotic, democratic figures who are now under the rule of the U.S. imperialists and the Chon Tu-hwan military fascists.

The Central Committee of the Communist Party of Argentina, on behalf of all our party members and our people, extend our militant solidarity to all the South Korean patriotic, democratic forces heroically struggling against the U.S. imperialist aggressors and the Chon Tu-hwan military fascist clique for the reunification of the country and the freedom of the people.

And we denounce the dirty atrocities of the Chon Tu-hwan military fascist clique which passed a death sentence upon democratic figure Kim Tae-chung and inflicted prison terms upon other democratic figures and demand the revocation of the death sentence on Kim Tae-chung and the immediate release of him and other democratic figures.

U.S. imperialists aggressors, get out of South Korea! South Korean fascists, stop suppressing and obliterating the most elementary human rights of the South Korean people! Release Kim Tae-chung and other democrats who are struggling for the country's reunification and the peoples freedom and democracy!

FOOD CRISIS ANTICIPATED IN KOREA

Seoul WOLGAN CHOSON in Korean Nov 80 pp 252-259

[Article by Chu Yong-chae, Chief Research Officer, Korea Agricultural Research Institute: "Grain Production and Demand; Reality and Prospect"]

[Text] I. Preface

Because of population increase, the shortage and lopsided distribution of food resources, the food situation of the world is revealing a more serious aspect with the passing of time. Especially for this year, due to the unusual temperatures which swept through all parts of the world, considerably reduced food grain harvests are anticipated. Because of such fear, international food grain prices have recently indicated a rapid upward trend. Accordingly, in this article I will summarily survey the current supply and demand situation of food grains in Korea, and its future prospects, and major problems and countermeasures related to them.

II. Food Grain Consumption Trends

It is a general trend that with the rise in the income level the pattern of food consumption becomes quality-oriented or diversified. In other words, when the income level rises above a certain level, the consumption of food grains tends to gradually decline, while the consumption of meats with large carbohydrate values, fruits and vegetables tends to rise rapidly. Change in the pattern of food consumption in Korea during the 1965-1979 period reveals that the [per capita] consumption of food grains continued to rise from 188 kgs in 1965 to reach the highest level of 225 kgs in 1972. Thereafter, it gradually declined to 198 kgs in 1979.

On the other hand, during the 1965-1979 period meat consumption rose about 3.3 times, marine products consumption 2.5 times, fruits consumption 2.2 times and vegetable consumption 2.6 times respectively. The food consumption trend by kind shows that rice consumption registered a marked rise from 121 kgs in 1965 to reach the highest level of 136 kgs in 1970. Then, it maintained a comparatively low level of 120-130 kgs during the 1972-1979 period. Keeping rice consumption at a comparatively low level during this period was possible, mainly because measures for controlling rice consumption, including the encouragement of mixing barley with rice, the prohibition of brewing unstrained wine [makkolli] from rice, and the encouragement of 70 percent polishing of rice were actively executed. However, as an epoch-making increase in the production of rice was achieved in 1977, measures for controlling rice consumption were all lifted, including the permission for the brewing of unstrained wine from rice. As a result of this, rice consumption markedly increased from 126 kgs in 1977 to 135 kgs in 1979. Consequently, with the rise in the income level barley consumption, which was as much as 35 to 40 kgs during the 1965-1976 period, showed a rapid decrease, following the lifting of measures for controlling rice consumption, to 18.1 kgs in 1978, and to 14.1 kgs in 1979. While the consumption of corn and beans has shown an increasing trend, the consumption of miscellaneous grains has indicated a declining trend. (See Table 1)

As the income level rose, the per capita consumption of grains as food declined from 219 kgs in 1970 to 198 kgs in 1979, or at an annual rate of 1.1 percent. As the rate of decline was lower than the population increase rate of 1.7 percent, the total food grain consumption during this period rose by about 38 percent.

On the other hand, with the increased demand for livestock products, the per capita consumption of feed grains was increased from 12.7 kgs in 1965 to 77.7 kgs in 1979, or as much as 6.1 times. Thus, with the rapid increase in feed grain consumption, the per capita grain consumption rose from 201 kgs in 1965 to 276 kgs in 1979, an increase of 37.2 percent.

The total feed grain consumption was increased from 365,000 metric tons in 1965 to 2,923,000 metric tons in 1979, or about 8 times. During the past 2 years (1977-1979) it rose from 1,362,000 metric tons to 2,923,000 metric tons, or by about 2.1 times. Such rapid increase in the supply and demand of feed grains constitutes the main cause for the decline in the self-sufficiency of grains in the recent years. Effective measures for combating it are required.

III. Trends in the Food Grain Production

The per family area of cultivated land in Korea is only about one hectare. It is thus a well-known fact that the farming scale is small. Such limited areas of cultivation tend to be decreased further in the process of industrialization and urbanization. Even the utilization rate of cultivated land has markedly declined. This is creating a problem. During the 1965-1979 period the area of cultivated land decreased from 2,556,000 hectares to 2,227,000 hectares. And the utilization rate of cultivated land dropped from 147 percent to 130 percent. The decline in the utilization rate of cultivated land was caused by the fact that during the same period the total planted area for food decreased from 2,953,000 hectares to 2,143,000 hectares, or by as much as 27.4 percent. The trends in planted areas by kind show that while the planted area for rice increased by 0.4 percent during the 1965-1979 period, that for barley decreased by 42.8 percent, that for wheat by 85.9 percent, that for beans by 24.2 percent, that for potatoes by 55.4 percent and that for others by 77.1 percent respectively. Especially the decline in the planted areas for barley and wheat, which are winter crops, led to a decline in the utilization rate of cultivated land and a decrease in farm income due to thelack of replacement crops. This has become a problem. In recent years the planted area for barley has shown a marked decrease. This has come about because farmers have avoided barley cultivation due to the marked reduction in barley consumption, the drop in the profitability of barley and the competition in labor force between rice crop and barley crop during the planting and harvest periods. On the other hand, the reason why the cultivated land area showed a rapid decrease is that domestic varieties of wheat lag in the milling rate compared to imported wheat, and reaches maturity about 1 week after barley. Thus, the decline is due to several problems related to the varieties of wheat. But more importantly, it seems that the decline was caused by the adoption of a comparatively low purchase price level in relation to barley. And the quantity of purchase was severely limited.

As we have investigated above, the planted areas of food grains have registered a declining trend. But because of the increased per unit yield due to technological development the production of food grains has leveled off at the 1976 level. The total production of food grains during the past 4 years has remained about the same. Compared to this, due to the population increase the per capita grain production showed a decreasing trend from 228 kgs in 1976 to 215 kgs in 1979. The domestic grain productivity has relatively declined.

IV. Trends in the Food Grain Import and the Self-Sufficiency Rate

As we have examined above, the increase rate of grain consumption surpasses that of grain production, and because of this, considerably large quantities of grains have been imported. The recent trend points to a rapid increase in quantity. In 1965 the total of imported grains was 629,000 metric tons, and it was 5,457,000 metric tons in 1979, or about a 9-fold increase during the past 14 years. Trends in grain import by kind during this period indicate that the import of corn, a feed grain, increased an astounding 46 times, and that of wheat 3.3 times respectively. While there was no import of beans in 1965, in 1979 as much as 420,000 tons of beans were imported. And in 1979 even rice supply was short so that as much as 502,000 tons (3.5 million bags) of foreign rice were imported. As a result of this the self-sufficiency rate of the total grains was markedly reduced from 93.9 percent in 1965 to 59.9 percent in 1979. The self-sufficiency rate by kind in 1979 shows that that of wheat was only 2.4 percent, that of corn was 3.4 percent, and that of beans was 43.4 percent, all showing a very low level. The self-sufficiency rate of rice was 86 percent, registering a marked reduction. Thus, the self-sufficiency rate of grains such as corn, wheat and beans which have the tendency of increased demand in the future is extremely low. It is a real situation that Korea is dependent on foreign market even for rice, the main staple grain.

The grain import in 1979 reached 5,457,000 metric tons. Of this feed grains, that is, corn and beans covered 60.5 percent, wheat constituted 30.3 percent, and rice accounted for 9.2 percent. Accordingly, the main causes which became the obstacles to the self-sufficiency in food grains are the rapid increase in the demand for feed grains and the shortage of rice, the main staple grain.

As a result of the green revolution, Korea had been self-sufficient in rice since 1976. But due to a shortage in 1979, 502,000 metric rons of rice was imported in 1979 and a large quantity of rice is planned to be imported in 1980. Thus, even rice in which Korea was once self-sufficient, has become short in supply. The shortage was caused partially by the drastic decline in production due to the damages caused by blight and harmful insects for 2 years, 1978 and 1979, but more importantly by the rapid increase in rice consumption due to the drastic decline in barley consumption. On the other hand, because of the decline in consumption barley has been stockpiled. This has become a problem. Thus, while there is a surplus of barley, rice is short. Therefore, with large sums of foreign currency Korea has to buy rice. This is a problem which warrants a careful study.

V. Prospects Policy for the Supply and Demand for Food Grains

While the production of food grains has remained stagnant for the past 4 years, the total consumption of food grains, including feed grains, has shown a rapid increase.

If such a trend should continue, the quantity of food grains to be imported will rapidly increase in the future. In this case the self-sufficiency rate of food grains is expected to decline compared to the present.

According to the results of an analysis by the Agricultural Economy Research Institute, the per capita food grain consumption was estimated to decrease from 201 kgs in 1978 to 182-187 kgs in 1991 on the assumption that the increase rate of income would rise. The estimated per capita consumption of food grains by kind (See Table 9) shows that while the consumption of corn and beans will increase, that of rice, barley, potatoes and miscellaneous grains is expected to decrease. Thus, although the per capita consumption declines, the total food grain consumption in 1991 is estimated to be 8.2 to 8.4 million metric tons, due to the increase in population. The total grain consumption amounts to an increase of 10 to 13 percent over 1978. As to the supply and demand for feed grains the Livestock Production Bureau of the Ministry of Agriculture and Fishery estimates that it will be increased from 1,805,000 metric tons in 1978 to 7,456,000 metric tons in 1991, a 4.1-fold increase. On the other hand, the forecast of grain production is extremely difficult as it is greatly predicated on climatic conditions, technological innovation, including the improvement of grain varieties. But as we take into consideration the limits on the per unit production, the decreasing trend of cultivated land area, the competition with other crops, and the recent trends in grain production, it is reasoned that grain production will not surpass greatly the current level of production. According to an estimate made by the Agricultural Economy Research Institute, unless epoch-making measures are formulated for the increased production of food grains, the production of grains in 1991 will be about 8,652,000 metric tons, or about a 5 percent increase over 1978.

12. Source: Study on the Supply and Demand of Food Grains, by Korea Agricultural Economy Research Institute, Report No 9, March 1980

As we have investigated above, recently the self-sufficiency rate of food grains has markedly dropped to about 60 percent. Unless epoch-making measures for an increased production of food grains are pressed forward, a study and analysis shows that the self-sufficiency rate of food grains will further decline, to about 46 percent. The main reason for the decline in the self-sufficiency rate of food grains is that the demand for corn and beans, which are feed grains, has rapidly increased due to the increased demand for livestock and the demand for wheat has also increased. At the same time the import of these grains has shown a marked increase due to the stagnation or decline in the domestic production of such feed grains. Moreover, beginning in 1979 even rice has become short in supply. This has resulted in the import of considerable quantities of foreign rice.

When we take into consideration the unstable elements in the international grain market, in terms of food security it is not desirable to heavily depend on foreign countries for the basic staple grains of the nation. Therefore, effective long-term and medium-range measures for raising food self-sufficiency to an appropriate level must be formulated.

In recent years there was a shortage of rice. It was partially caused by the decrease in rice production, but more importantly, by the rapid increase of rice consumption, as the heavy dependence on rice was caused by the rapid decrease in barley consumption. If we can decrease rice consumption by consuming surplus barley as appropriate, we believe that we can prevent the import of foreign rice or considerably reduce it. In this case large sums of foreign currency needed for the import of foreign rice can be saved. Particularly given the current situation in which the international balance of payment has deteriorated due to the recession and the demand for foreign currency has rapidly increased due to the increased need for the import of crude oil caused by the rise in the crude oil prices, we should give a second thought to paying large sums of foreign currency for importing even rice, which can be adequately produced domestically. Measures for the self-sufficiency of the main staple grains are urgently required. For the self-sufficiency in rice, the development of good-quality, high-yield rice varieties, the increased investment in the production basis, as well as the guarantee of purchase prices, which can inspire the will of the farmers for increased production, are urgently required. Especially, given the present condition that the supply and demand of rice is not stable, we must strive to maintain a supply and demand balance of the main food grains by reducing rice consumption through the increased promotion of barley consumption.

Even if we can achieve the self-sufficiency in the main staple food grains, rice and barley, unless we can make a marked increase in the production of corn, beans and wheat which have covered more than 90 percent of the total grain import in recent years, we are afraid that the self-sufficiency in grains in 1991 will be less than 50 percent. Therefore, there should be measures formulated for a marked increase in the production of these crops. It does not seem to be desirable to neglect the domestic agricultural production basis by depending solely on import just because the domestic production costs of these crops are much higher than imported grain prices. We must strive to maintain an appropriate self-sufficiency level even of these crops within reasonable bounds.

In response to the increased demand for feed grains it is necessary to formulate comprehensive long-term livestock production plans, including the formation of pasture lands wherever possible in mountainous areas, and the expanded cultivation of rough feed grains through the use of rice fields for a second crop. Also by maintaining the demand for livestock products at a moderate level it is desirable in terms of an increased self-sufficiency in food to hold down the rapid increase in the demand for feed grains and to induce a food consumption pattern suitable to the conditions of domestic resources through a price policy or an education on nutrition.

Domestic wheat lags behind imported wheat in the unit yield. It requires a longer period before harvest, and its milling rate is lower. In spite of such disadvantages we must expand wheat production through its cultivation in dry fields. Even under the present circumstances of the per unit yield and of technological conditions, if we provide price support comparable to barley, it seems to be possible to induce an increased production of wheat.

In the foregoing I have referred to problems directly connected with increased production. By canceling the losses incurred in the distribution process we must also stress indirect increased production. That is, because considerable losses occur in the sources, from producer to consumer, of harvesting, thrashing, transporting, storing and processing, we must concentrate also on the indirect increased production of food by developing better technological processes after harvest. Also by reducing losses and waste that occur in the cooking process at restaurants or homes and thus economizing on food we must have the cooperation of the entire people in sagaciously overcoming the difficulties in the food situation as we witness this year.

FOODGRAIN POLICY, SHORTAGES OUTLINED

Seoul WOLGAN CHOSON in Korean Nov 80 pp 260-273

[Article by Kim Song-hun, doctor of economics, professor, Chungang University: "A 30-Year History of Korean Grain Administration"]

[Text] I. An Outline of the Foodgrain Policy

In our country, grain is the staple food, and its transactions had traditionally been based on a free market system. But in the last days of Japanese imperialist rule (1943) the Food Control Law was enforced on a wartime footing, putting all aspects of grain circulation under complete control. Upon liberation, free transactions in grain returned but only to be done away with in October 1945 on account of runaway inflation and chaotic conditions attending the free rice market, and a rice collection order was proclaimed in January 1946, once again enforcing a complete rationing system. This control over the grain market continued until February 1950 when the just-established government enacted the Foodgrain Management Law.

In this way, the grain circulation structure in our country has been consolidated to this day on a two-dimensional basis under said law, i.e., government management and free transactions. Let us examine separately the government management structure for grain circulation and the free market structure for grain circulation.

II. Changes in Grain Administration and Grain Circulation Structures

(1) The Grain Management System. Grain management by the government authorities is aimed at satisfactory supply and demand and at adjustment of price through operations of procurement, stockpile, ration or release. The kinds of grain that may be managed by the government under the Foodgrain Management Law are rice, barley, wheat, oats, buckwheat, beans and peas, millet, kaoliang, corn. As means of securing (purchasing) these kinds of grain, the government may make purchases in the general market, exchange fertilizer for grain, allow payment in kind of agricultural land tax, lend grain, or collect a substitute grain, and import foreign grain. Government management grain thus secured is used for adjustment of supply and demand via sale or ration by the government. The grain earmarked for adjustment of supply and demand performs, at the time of rising grain prices, the functions of price adjustment through its sales via the circulation structures of agricultural cooperatives and the government. The grain earmarked for adjustment of supply and demand, which used to be released to free markets, was rationed at one time through the administration's structure after the 16 May revolution; from 1964 onward, it was released through the joint sales stores of agricultural cooperatives; in the 1970's another channel was added for its retail sales at what is called direct sales stores of agricultural cooperatives, which have since been located evenly at major key points in cities throughout the country.

After the government directly stepped into the grain circulation market under such a grain management system, there were changes, a little at a time as time went by, in the operational pattern and grain administration goal but essentially it was after 1970 that the goal for "inducement for self-sufficiency in foodgrain and increase in the income of farm households" came within sight; and it might be said that from the 16 May [revolution] to 1970 was a period in which the two goals for "foodgrain production increase and grain price stabilization" and for "stabilization of consumer prices and protection of urban living cost" were blended while the 1950's had been a period in which the goal for so-called "restraining inflation and protecting government finances" had a graphic impact.

This distinction of periods in grain administration is based on the subjective view of the writer, a view that has been arrived at in the course of analyzing how the various mutually conflicting policy goals were reflected in the government's purchase prices, its release prices, and its decision on purchase quantities.

Let us examine them by the periods. As Table 1 below shows, during the Liberal Party administration from after the 25 June war up to the 16 May [revolution], the government which was weak in finances collected considerable quantities of grain from the farmers at low prices. using extra-economic means such as collection of agricultural land tax in kind, with a view to augmenting its revenues and stabilizing consumer prices and foreign exchange rates. In particular for the quantities of procurement in most cases except for the exceptional case of 1955, the government relied solely on the extra-economic mode other than the general purchase (procurement) mode, and the purchase prices set by the government were way below the prevailing market prices. On top of that, considerable quantities of foreign grain were imported, and the rural economy had to suffer a double whammy. In particular, the system for collection of agricultural land tax in kind continued in force from the enactment in September 1951 of the temporary land income tax law until the 19 April revolution when the system was supplanted by a system for collection in money. Until then the system for collection of agricultural land tax in kind has been used as a means of crucial importance for securing grain for government control purposes, including the adjustment of supply and demand but it had imposed excessive burdens on the farmers while it lasted.

As epochal price and circulation policies laid down by the government during this period, one might point out the "system for financing on rice as collateral" put into effect in 1957, and the "law for maintaining prices of agricultural products" whose draft was completed in 1959 [but not enacted until later].

The system for financing on rice as collateral was similar to the Japanese imperialist system "for loans on nonglutinous rice and unhulled rice" and this system was put into effect for the benefit of the farmers with a view to preventing price drops at harvesttime and stabilizing prices in preharvest months. In the background of the birth of this system was the necessity for the government to come up with some price support measures as the enormous importation of foreign grain since 1956 caused a drastic drop in grain prices, on the one hand, and the government stopped its general grain purchases to all intents and purposes in an attempt to avoid the negative balance of the special grain account set up under the ROK-U.S. agreement for importation of foreign grain. Such being the case, in the course of implementing the system for financing on rice as collateral there emerged no small amount of side effects such as the merchants getting into the act instead of the farmers, but overall, the system served in no small measure to stabilize the price. However, as the government procurement system was restored after the 16 May [revolution], the system for financing on rice as collateral was completely terminated in 1970 after completing its transitional mission. The law for maintaining prices of agricultural products had been held in abeyance before it was enacted after the 16 May revolution.

1 - Rice delivered includes general purchase and autumn crop deliveries such as deliveries for payment of agricultural land tax in kind, deliveries for redemption of agricultural land, substitute grain collected, grain exchanged for fertilizer, loan grain collected. Most of the deliveries are for payment of agricultural land tax in kind.

As to the government grain management policy in the 1960's, the will to make food-grain finances available and guarantee the income of farm households began to become stronger, compared to the 1950's. The general purchase system was restored for grain procurement, the system for payment of agricultural land tax in kind was supplanted by a system for payment in money, and 1965 onward, the system for exchanging fertilizer for grain was implemented, and so-called parity price was adopted as one of the criteria for government purchases of rice.

But the government grain management system, as seen in the enactment of the temporary law for adjusting consumer prices, intensified direct control measures over price and circulation with a view to holding down grain prices, relying in large measure on the importation of astronomical quantites of U.S. surplus agricultural products.

In a word, it is no exaggeration to say that policy objectives were leaning evermore toward price stabilization for export-oriented industrialization and toward procuring financial resources and raw materials for industrialization.

Thus the autumn rice procurement price rose merely by 10 percent more or less every year up to 1967. But for 1968 and 1969, as the rice crops became very poor on account of flood damage in the southern region, the procurement prices were raised by 16.9 percent and 22.6 percent respectively, over the previous year's price. And for the 1970 rice, the epochal step was taken to raise the price by 35.9 percent. With the implementation of the so-called high rice price policy, from 1969 onward a dual barley price system was adopted for procurement of barley. In particular, the law for grain management fund was enacted in 1970 with a view to securing a grain management fund and operating the special grain account with flexibility, and the system for financing on rice as collateral, which had been in effect since 1957, was abolished.

Thus in the latter half of the 1960's the government strengthened anew its grain administration objective to guarantee the income of farm households, on the one hand, and began positively stepping into grain circulation as well. With a view to insuring fairness in grain transactions and pricing, the government had grain merchants in the whole area of Seoul form a grain market association near the Yongsan Railroad Station in 1968, and issued in 1970 an administrative order to strengthen the sales system for government adjustment rice. Earlier in 1969, with a view to restraining rice consumption, the government ordered the system for eating mixed grain powder.

It might be said that it was in the 1970's that the government most strongly stressed its will, as its policy goal, to increase the production of rice and barley for self-sufficiency and the income of farm households.

This could be seen in the epochal increases (the 23 percent line of production) in the quantities of procurement, not to mention the continued increases in rice procurement prices. As a result, as Table 3 shows, thanks to the expanded dissemination of new strains of rice seeds, the long-cherished wish for self-sufficiency in rice was at last realized in 1977. But despite the epochal increases in the production of rice and barley, the quantities of imported beans and peas along with corn as animal feed suddenly increased with the result that overall, the quantities of imported grain were increasing every year.

But after our country's economy occupied the height of $10 billion export in the latter half of the 1970's, certain quarters of the economist circles and planning authorities began advocating a reduction in rice production and the abolition of barley production on a planned basis. In the background was the ground of so-called comparative priority claiming that now that there was a surplus of foreign currencies, there was no need any longer to support domestic production and barley whose prices were higher than the international prices. On the other hand, it was based on the logic that because of the implementation of the high rice price system and the dual price system for barley, the negative balance of the special grain account was increasing year after year, accelerating inflation.

But one might point out that what constitutes a point of great contradiction in the aforementioned contention is the notion that the negative balance of the special grain account came to emerge solely because of protection afforded production alone, and the simplistic wishful thinking that cheap grain abundantly available overseas could be imported as much as desired. This point I will discuss in detail in the next chapter.

In a nutshell, grain administration in the 1970's came to find itself in a period of economic turnaround in the course of making great efforts to attain the two major goals, i.e., the inducement for increased production on the one hand and the stabilization of living cost of the consumers on the other; and there is no doubt that it is the task of the foodgrain management system in the 1980's to search for a new direction of grain administration.

(2) The Grain Circulation System. In our country's rural economy, rice has traditionally been the staple food and at the same time, an important item next to currency, a means of exchange, because of which the ratio of rice as negotiable commodity has been hovering over a line of nearly 48 percent more or less. Generally, there has been little change in this ratio in the 30 years from the 1950's when the ratio of the entire grain crops as negotiable commodity was below 20 percent to the 1970's when this ratio was above 45 percent.

Consequently, the ratio of rice available for free circulation was equivalent to that amount of rice out of the more or less 48 percent line of rice as negotiable commodity after exclusion of rice delivered to the government. That is, in the 1950's and 1960's, 40 percent of the entire rice production after exclusion of some 8 percent, the ratio of government procurement, was available for free transactions; and in the 1970's, 28 percent or a lower ratio after exclusion of 20 percent was, it might be regarded, the so-called general rice.

Up to the time before agricultural cooperative organizations began positively stepping into the grain market, directly or indirectly, following the 16 May revolution, it was the traditional merchant firms that carried the day in the urban and local areas, but the merchant firms came to be gradually supplanted by the government and agricultural cooperative organizations.

To take a look at the rice circulation structure centered around local areas and Seoul, in the 1950's there were the producers, toejangi [person who measures grain at a rice-dealer's], collecting merchants or brokers in the collecting stage, which is the first circulation stage; in the intermediate stage there were local rice mills and major brokers; and in the distribution stage, there were major brokers, consignment sales merchants and wholesale and retail merchants. Such was the complex circulation structure before rice reached the consumer.

But in the post-subok period [subok means the recovery of lost land, that is, areas recovered after the 25 June war, north of the 38th parallel and south of the armistice line, such as the whole of Yangyang, Yanggu, Inje, Hwach'on, Kimhwa, and Ch'orwon, Kangwon Province; most of Yonch'on, Kyonggi Province; and partial areas of Kosong, Ch'ungsong, Kangwon Province, and of P'och'on, Kyonggi Province], as the amount of rice in circulation increased, so did the amount of funds needed by the merchants in various stages of circulation. But paucity of their operating capital caused changes in the operational structure of the market. That is, major brokers with ample capital exerted their influence on local rice mills, collecting merchants and even the producers; and for their sales outlets, they turned capital-short wholesale merchants into their consignment sales merchants, and loaned their commercial capital to local rice mills and collecting merchants to buy up rice at harvesttime. With the implementation of the system for financing on rice as collateral, there were many instances in which they penetrated even petty farmers at the base level.

On the other hand, the number of wholesale merchants and consignment sales merchants increased in the urban areas. According to a survey conducted by the research department of the Agricultural Bank, as of 1958 there were 150 grain wholesale merchants in Seoul located at various grain markets such as the central market of Sindang-tong, the central market of Hap-tong, the Yongdungp'o market, the Tongdaemun market, the Namdaemun market, the Ch'ongnyang-ri market, the Ahyon market, the Tongja-tong market and other markets; but in 1959, their number increased to some 250.

But 80 percent of them were consignment sales merchants and only 20 percent of them were running business with their own capital.

As of 1975, the percentages of various kinds of grain as negotiable commodity were as follows: rice 48.15 percent, barley 42.26 percent, soybean 76.05 percent, corn 64.10 percent.

On the other hand, the percentages were 64.9 percent for sweet potato and 46.02 percent for potato. Thus, as a whole, the percentages of all kinds of grain as negotiable commodity are showing the tendency to increase year after year.

There were three outlets for the grain produced by farmers: procurement by the government, base level agricultural cooperative, and general grain merchants.

* As given, s/b 100.1

According to a survey of the state of rice circulation made in 1976 by the National Agricultural Cooperative Federation on 200 farm households (Table 5), 71.9 percent or by far the largest percentage of the total amount of rice sold by the farmers surveyed was purchased by the government, 8.0 percent by agricultural cooperatives, 6.4 percent by rice mills, 5.5 percent by field collecting merchants, 4.9 percent by 5-day markets, 0.8 percent by wholesale [as given] and retail merchants, and 2.3 percent by other.

Recently, it is the general trend that the ratio of rice sales to the government is increasing, and the major factor accounting for this is that the government authorities are giving priority to the purchase of T'ongil rice as a means of inducement for increased production of T'ongil rice.

An examination of government dealings in grain circulation shows that the government has been increasing its purchase quantities of rice, barley and wheat every year with a view to securing government management grain and supporting prices for producer farmers. The quantity of rice purchased by the government in 1972 was 3,418,000 sok which increased to 5,483,000 sok in 1976, or an increase of 60.4 percent in 5 years. The ratio of purchase against amount of rice produced was 12.3 percent in 1972, which increased to 16.9 percent in 1976. In the case of barley, the quantity purchased by the government in 1972 was 1,066,000 sok which increased in 1976 to 3,766,000 sok or more than a threefold increase.

In particular, in releasing its rice holdings, the government had the Seoul Special City grain market association handle the business but the association failed to make any significant contribution to the stabilization of grain prices as intended by the government. Therefore, agricultural cooperatives came to take complete charge of the business attendant upon grain releases, and grain was released through cooperative direct sales stores and district cooperative chairmen.

To take a look at the agricultural cooperatives as the grain circulation channel, there are 1,810 ku sales stores of agricultural cooperatives on a myon unit basis in the production fields, 138 ku sales stores on a cooperative unit basis in the cities and counties; and in the consumption centers there are 18 joint sales stores under the direct management of the National Agricultural Cooperative Federation, in addition to 1,417 direct sales stores in all cities. (Figure 1)

As to the circulation channel through merchant organizations, which is the traditional circulation channel in our country, as of the end of 1976 there were 23,145 grain retailers, 507 grain wholesalers, 179 grain brokerage firms, or a total of 23,831 grain merchants, whose business is licensed by the government.

The grain circulation channel through merchant organizations went through 4-5 hands from producer to consumer, and because of such complex, circuitous circulation channel was costly, the actual amount of money the farmer got paid was less than in the case of the agricultural cooperative (Figure 2). Recently, with the opening of freeways, grain transportation conditions have improved, trucks taking over grain transportation from trains, and markets in the production field lost their importance as collecting points, as direct shipments of grain to the consumption centers markedly increased.

III. The Direction of Grain Administration in a Turnaround Period

(1) The Emergence of Advocacy for a Change in Grain Administration. As one of the economic measures in a turnaround period, the KDI [Korean Development Institute] and EPB [Economic Planning Board] have been contending since 1979 for a so-called turnaround in grain administration. This contention, which seemed to falter for a while on account of the 26 October [incident], is being pushed again by certain extreme economists in the form of advocacy for a change in grain administration as preparations got under way for the Fifth Five-Year Plan. Their contention is that now is the time to think about 70 percent [of the population], the consumers, rather than the 30 percent, the farmers. That is, according to their calculation, as of the end of 1979, the special grain account deficit was 910 billion won, and even if the fiscal 1978 surplus revenue of 268 billion won was used to pay off part of the loans from the Bank of Korea, if a new loan of 200 billion won was added, the deficit in the special grain account as of the end of 1980 would exceed 1 trillion won.

To summarize the advocacy for a change in grain administration: (a) the growing negative balance of the special grain account on account of protection of the farmers is becoming a factor in runaway inflation; (b) but the current grain system (the dual price system) is merely intensifying the distinctions of the rich and poor within the rural areas and as a result, neither the farmers themselves nor a majority of the consumers are happy with the system; (c) transactions in grain, too, like industrial crops, should be left to the self-governing functions of the market, and either the agricultural cooperatives or Grain Corporation (provisional name) should purchase grain at prices prevailing in autumn and sell it at prices prevailing in spring, except that as part of its social policy, the government should continue to purchase grain from petty farmers.

As seen above, what is significantly at the bottom of the advocacy for a change in grain administration is the notion to promote the well-being of the consumers in terms of living cost and at the same time, to protect the government finances without anymore financial hemorrhage by means of leaving them to market functions, now that self-sufficiency in grain has been achieved, with grain prices already considerably higher than international prices.

Moreover, according to various government statistical data, domestically the income of the farmer is running ahead of the income of the urban worker while internationally, there is the need to import still more foreign agricultural products for the sake of expanding exports. Thus, what the advocacy for a change in grain administration is aiming at becomes self-evident. In particular, up to the Third Five-Year Plan prior to the worldwide fluctuations in food supplies, it was possible to import cheap foreign agricultural products limitlessly which in turn made it possible to plan for price stabilization and adopt measures for industrialization mainly by exports. So, as far as the government officials of those days and the current leading researchers of the academic circles in economic development are concerned, it should be nothing strange if they had a feeling of nostalgia toward the past successful developmental strategy and economic measures when they took a look at the international agricultural products market which has eased somewhat, recently.

But the advocacy for a change in grain administration being advanced in certain quarters of the government has been conceived altogether on an erroneous basis, causing an uneasy feeling about the future of our country's agriculture.

(2) The Errors in the Advocacy for a Change in Grain Administration. The logic of the advocacy for a change in grain administration explained above seems persuasive on the face of it but hidden in it are grave theoretical and practical errors which are not easily detectable.

The first error is the shortsighted or deliberate view to attribute the negative balance of the special grain account under the current grain [administration] system solely to the protection of interests of the producer farmers alone.

As Table 6 shows, the grand total of the negative balance of the special grain account as of the end of 1979 was 730.2 billion won--the figures released by the planning authorities as quoted above, are loans from the Bank of Korea, not the actual deficit figures--and out of this figure, the flour price support subsidy to flour mills for protection of the consumers in terms of living cost was some 128 billion won or 17.5 percent of the total deficit figure. And the deficit figure under the dual price system for barley and other kinds of miscellaneous grain was 25.1 percent or 183.8 billion won, and for procurement and release of rice, 57.3 percent or 418.4 billion won.

Now, a breakdown of the deficit figures under the dual price system for rice, barley, etc, shows that never once since 1970 has the government released price of rice exceeded the purchase price paid to the farmers. Put another way, the deficit figure of the grain fund is not solely attributable to rice purchased at high prices for the sake of the producers alone but also in large measure to the release of government rice at prices way below prevailing prices at time of release or the autumn purchase prices, for the sake of the consumers and also for the sake of price stabilization. Accordingly, the price support subsidy for flour, which accounts for 17.5 percent of the deficit balance of the special grain account, is solely for the sake of the consumers and price stabilization, and so is one-half of the 82.4 percent of the remaining deficit figure for rice and barley, that is, 41.2 percent, for the sake of the consumers and price stabilization. Thus viewed, 58.7 percent of the total deficit figure of the special grain account is for the protection of the consumers.

So theoretically groundless is the contention that the deficit figure of the special grain account is solely attributable to protection of the consumers. What is more, it is hard to understand the stand of the EPB tending to view the loans from the Bank of Korea as actually synonymous with the deficit figure of the special grain account and thus lay the blame solely at the door of the agricultural branch.

For the past 5 years (1973-1977) the average government purchase price of rice from the farmers increased by 21.9 percent a year while on the one hand the production cost of the farmers rose by an average of 23.6 percent each year and on the other, the consumer price increased by 15.6 percent yearly; still, the annual increase in the price at which the government rice was released was only 14.5 percent. What does this mean? To speak in conclusion, the price at which the government rice was released was kept at the almost standardized low level for 1978, with the result that our per capita consumption of rice as of 1978, growing beyond the estimated proportionate increase consistent with the increase in income, approached 135 kg, the worldwide maximum annual percapita consumption, and in spite of the biggest harvest since Tangun [2333 B.C.], no less than 3.5 million som [a som equals 5.12 U.S. bushels] of foreign rice were imported. Some 4 million som of foreign rice are being imported for 1980 too.

(3) The Negative Balance of the Special Grain Account and Inflation. Second, there is also a flaw in the concept that the negative balance of the special grain account is intensifying inflation. The essential nature of the problem lies in that 80 percent of the special grain fund is financed by loans from the Bank of Korea, and the grain fund in itself is not a factor directly responsible for inducing inflation. Neighboring Japan has been managing food more thoroughly than under a dual price system, but our country has been unable to finance food (grain) management within the regular budget. That is where the cause for increased currencies in circulation is. If anything, it might be said that the grain fund in itself, depending on how it is utilized, has the potential of growing efficacy as a plus in nurturing general boom and promoting an increase in the income and production of the farmers.

Even though the national financial situation did not permit the financing of the grain fund within the general account of the budget, if, at a minimum, part of the sales proceeds were credited to the domestically financed grain fund even as the astronomical imports of foreign surplus agricultural products operated to sacrifice the economy of the farmers, we would not be witnessing today the equation of "grain fund = loans from the Bank of Korea = inflation." Therefore, it could not but be asserted that the theory on inflation caused by the negative balance of the special grain account, a theory advanced by the advocates for a change in grain administration, is a prescription, in fact, off the mark.

If, for the sake of argument, the negative balance of the special grain account was considered as a factor actually contributing to inflation, as Table 9 shows, the actual degree of its direct contribution to inflation was an average of 1.02 percent a year for 1972-1977 while that of the loans from the Bank of Korea was 2.23 percent. But from 1975 onward, the rate of inflation caused by the actual increase in the currencies in circulation continued to rise (from 3.8 percent to 6.1 percent), while the rate of inflation caused by the negative balance of the special grain account or the loans from Bank of Korea has been shrinking in absolute terms. This reflects the state of affairs during the period of rapidly intensifying inflation relatively caused by overseas and private sectors, and it might be said that this is hinting where the archvillain of inflation is.

(4) The Fore-and-Aft Chain Effects of the Grain Policy. Third, the error in the advocacy of the EPB or KDI for a change in grain administration is a much too simplistic an evaluation of the fore-and-aft chain of events mechanism of the grain policy up to now. When viewed in terms of the national economy, the operation of the special grain fund, as mentioned earlier, brought about minus effects, i.e., an actual deficit figure of 45.3 billion won on an annual average for 1970-1977, or a loan of 160 billion won on an annual average. But on the other hand, implementation of the dual price system played the decisive role to increase the production of grain, more than 7 percent on an annual average in the case of rice (the increased supply in response to the rice price was estimated at 0.2-0.3 percent and that of barley, at 0.4-0.6 percent). Moreover, the effects of contribution to the increase of the income of farm households are great, i.e., the effect in the case of rice (a minimum of 43.3 percent increase) and the effect of improvement on the conditions of trading with other industries (increase in the income of farm households, 0.8 percent). Also great is the effect of preventing drastic price drops that might have happened, had it not been for the government purchase at harvesttime. According to an analysis made by the Korean Institute of the Rural Economy, in the event that the rice price flexibility was conservatively set at 1 (actually much bigger than 1), it was estimated that the rice price at 1977 harvesttime would have fallen from 23,291 won per bag (actually prevailing December 1977-January 1978) by 48.4 percent (11,273 won). But the government, in purchasing some 19.5 million bags of rice, paid 26,206 won per bag. Thus it was possible for the rice year mentioned to prevent the price drop of 11,273 won per bag at a minimum for some 40 million bags of rice as negotiable commodity which in turn prevented the reduction of no less than 45 million won in the (?non-cash income) of the farmers.

When, based on such logic, the effect of the negative balance of the special grain account under the dual price system on the living cost of the consumers is viewed with the fact taken into consideration that the urban wholesale price prevailing during the 1977 rice year (November 1977-August 1978) was 23,969 won per bag, the consumers enjoyed the benefit of a minimum of 5,569 won price subsidy per bag as the release price of government rice was no more than 18,400 won per bag. This amounts to some 220 billion won in subsidy for 40 million bags of rice, the total quantity handled by the government for said rice year. Even after taking into consideration the quality of the rice released by the government, the subsidy to the consumers goes way over 21.9 billion won which is the figure in the red of the special grain account for said rice year. If, in addition, the earlier mentioned effects are taken into consideration, i.e., the effect on increase in production, the effect on increase in the income of farm households, and the effect on prevention of price drops at harvesttime, the efficacy of the operation of the special grain fund in terms of the national economy becomes graphically clear. Again, when the fact is taken into account that the special grain fund system has been used all along as a decisive economic tool for price stabilization, it will be impossible to simplistically stress its negative side alone.

(5) The Need To Appreciate Grain Administration Anew. Inasmuch as the negative balance of the special grain account thus created in the process of guaranteeing the cost of production and protecting the cost of living of the consumers at time of demand represents a crucial social importance, it will not do to write a superficial prescription haphazardly without taking the time out to precisely weigh the benefit to the producers and consumers alike against the deficit amount in the operation of the grain fund.

Another error committed by so-called advocates for a change in grain administration is their excessive believing in the functions of a self-governing market. As everyone knows, the harvesttime of agricultural crops is limited to a point in time, highly perishable, and vulnerable to storage and transportation while the demand for it remains even throughout the year. Therefore, the phenomenon of extaordinary price fluctuations commonly known as the Gregory King's Law comes to emerge markedly especially at harvesttime. On top of it, in our country, as a majority of produce farmers are in the habit of making cash settlement of various accounts at harvesttime, the phenomenon of so-called sales out of desperation comes to emerge.

But recently, the KDI has come out to advocate leaving grain prices to the self-governing market functions. Of course, there are a few provisos attached to such advocacy. For example, it is proposed that either the Agricultural Cooperative Federation or the Grain Corporation (provisional name) be made to buy up grain at harvesttime at prevailing prices but that where farm households with less than 0.5 chongbo of farmland are concerned, the government buy up their rice at high prices. To judge from experience in the drastically falling grain prices at harvesttime as against soaring prices during the period of peak demand before and after 1960 when no grain procurement policy like today's was in effect, it is as clear as the light even without the benefit of the Gregory King's Law what kind of a phenomenon the self-governing market functions will bring forth. And presupposing the functions of the present circulation organizations and merchants, it is quite easy to foresee the chaos in the grain market functions which it is hoped will be self-governing. Even as the government, and agricultural cooperative organizations as a quasi-government agency, exercising like today various kinds of control power, account for nearly 50 percent of the grain market, they are still unable to set straight the chaos in the circulation of general rice. Under the circumstances, it is apt to be erroneous to hold the notion to handle the grain circulation markets solely with lukewarm control functions intent on following the prevailing trends.

What is more, it must be pointed out that it is rather a product of mushy thinking devoid of a sense of direction to propose in the name of a social policy to buy up grain at high prices from petty farmers who are unable to produce enough grain even for the consumption of their own families for 1 year. If efforts are to be truly exerted on behalf of such petty farmers as a second dimensional benefit of a social policy, then an extra-economic method might be more appropriate than the method of buying up their grain.

It may be that at the bottom of such notion to make special purchases of grain from the petty farmers is what is tantamount to a failure to understand, except merely as a social policy toward the farmers in general, the grain purchase policy which the government has implemented all this time with multiple objectives such as increase in the income of farm households, inducement for increased production, protection of the living cost of consumers, and price stabilization. Therefore, it would seem that the EPB or KDI has diagnosed that the current grain procurement policy has served in the rural areas to make the rich farmers richer and the poor farmers poorer. Granting for the sake of argument that such micro-judgment has a considerable persuasive power, it is through and through no more than elucidation of the tip of an iceberg about the current grain policy, and does not encompass the entire forest, as explained above in detail. In the rush to cool inflation, it will not do to commit the compound error of repudiating or glossing over the whole with a partial cause and effect.

WOMEN CHANGING WAY OF THINKING

Seoul NEWS REVIEW in English 13 Dec 80 pp 22-23

[Text] Koreans' sense of values has undergone a relatively big change, during the past decade, according to a survey conducted by a behavioral science research center.

The survey, conducted by the government-supported Korean Institute for Research in the Behavioral Sciences, involved 1,193 married women in urban and rural districts, who are aged over 15. A similar survey was undertaken by the same behavioral research in 1971.

The latest survey revealed that 67.9 per cent of those polled replied, "I would go ahead," when asked as to how they would act when they face the situation in which their parents oppose their marriage to men of their liking. The figure stood at 57 per cent 10 years before.

The survey found that 82 per cent said they would show no discrimination against their daughters in the education of their offsprings in case they are bright, able and talented.

Those who asserted that parental property be inherited to daughters in addition to sons also increased from 69 per cent to 78.5 per cent, according to the survey.

A majority of 61 per cent replied that a family's oldest son can still be faithful to his parents, even though he is away from them. The figure for the past decade was 56 per cent. As a result, the increase rate was limited to a mere 5.3 per cent.

Those who said that high ability workers should be treated better than old-timers who lack workmanship numbered 73 per cent, compared to 61 per cent in 1971.

Respondents who said that "I am an able worker," accounted for 65 per cent, an increase of nine per cent.

The percentage of those who asserted that younger persons should learn more foreign customs and mores, dropped to 18.8 per cent from 46 per cent. In contrast, 81.2 per cent said that Koreans should be more familiar with their own customs.

As to public order, 78 per cent said that notables should be equal before the law, compared to 54 per cent. More than 53 per cent believed that one can become the President or a lawmaker on their own effort. And 66 per cent said that one should struggle to restore his or her right in case it was violated by the government. Some 83.8 per cent were in favor of farm mechanization, a drop of about 4 per cent.

As to the future of Korea's economy, 88 per cent predicted that it will prosper. About 10 years ago, those who expressed such optimism stood as high as 96 per cent.

YOUNG PEOPLE URGED TO FULFILL SOCIALIST LABOR LAW

Pyongyang NODONG CHONGNYON in Korean 27 Sep 80 p 2

[Article by Kim Kwang-mo: "The Programmatic Guideline We Must Grasp Firmly and Use in Thoroughly Implementing the Socialist Labor Law"]

[Text] Today is the first anniversary of the respected and beloved leader Marshall Kim Il-song's publication of his historic work "Let Us Thoroughly Fulfill the Socialist Labor Law."

As a programmatic document lighting the way to the final solution of the labor problem, this work of the leader is a guideline for fulfilling the socialist labor law and bringing about a transformation in labor administration work to push socialist economic construction vigorously.

The socialist labor law has legally solidified the successes achieved in the process of executing the labor laws and regulations promulgated in 1946 while further improving labor administration work and it clearly shows the requirements and principles we must uphold in socialist labor life.

Our country's socialist labor law embodies the immortal chuche ideology and is a chuche labor law which outlines the state's labor organization principles and the basic principles which the workers must keep in labor life.

Having thoroughly mastered the socialist labor law, the great leader published on 27 September 1979 his historic work "Let Us Thoroughly Fulfill the Socialist Labor Law," throwing light on the full range of tasks encountered in fulfilling the socialist labor law in order to demonstrate its superiority and vitality.

The respected and beloved leader Marshall Kim Il-song has taught as follows:

"With all of the workers thoroughly fulfilling the socialist labor law in labor life, we must actively further the three revolutions of ideology, technology, and culture, and make our country's socialist system more solid." ("Let Us Thoroughly Fulfill the Socialist Labor Law," special edition, pp 4-5).

In this work, the great leader shed light on the important problems encountered in fulfilling the socialist labor law such as the problem of doing work with people and political work, well, the problem of making the workers love labor and do their work according to the socialist labor life model, the problem of thoroughly instituting the socialist distribution principle and the socialist labor compensation sytem and the problem of fulfilling the broad mass line in labor administration work and he set forth programmatic tasks for improving labor life in accordance with the requirements of the new stage of revolution.

These guidelines set forth by the respected and beloved leader are original guidelines based on the chuche ideology and are programmatic indicators giving the most comprehensive answer for the resolution of all problems encountered in labor administration work.

The guideline for relying on the strength of the masses to carry out labor administration work successfully embodies the basic requirements and philosophical principles of the chuche ideology by strengthening the work with people, political work, in labor administration work to enhance the people's ideological consciousness to the utmost and thoroughly fulfill the broad mass line.

All the guidelines arising in the fulfilling of the socialist labor law, including the guideline for strengthening work with people, are consistent with the chuche ideology and constitute a new, original resolution of the problems encountered in labor administrative work. In particular, the guideline for correctly instituting the socialist labor conservation system by correctly establishing labor quotas and then simultaneously increasing labor conservation and labor quotas is a guiding indicator which has shed new light on the problems of principle arising in the realization of the principle of socialist distribution.

The respected and beloved leader gave us a firm guarantee enabling us to vigorously push the high political awareness and labor zeal of the workers and make production and construction grow ceaselessly at a high rate of speed by setting forth the new guideline based on his profound analysis of the historical experience of socialist construction and realistic requirements which says that we must increase the workers' living expenses, awards and bonuses at the same time we increase their labor quotas.

In the work, the great leader threw light on the full range from fundamental tasks to means of execution for resolving all the problems that arise in labor administration work.

The originality and correctness of the ideology and theory contained in this work by the great leader makes it a guide which we must firmly grasp in our country's socialist construction work as well as being a classic document further developing and enriching the revolutionary theory of the working class and the theory of socialist labor administration.

The correctness and vitality of all these guidelines revealed by the great leader in this work have been fully demonstrated through the practical struggle of socialist construction during the past year.

Labor administration work, as work with people, has been thoroughly transformed and fundamental change has occurred in our workers' ideological and mental aspect and in their viewpoint and attitude toward work. The urgent labor power problem has been solved, a rapid rate of socialist construction has been ensured, and all workers enjoy even more self-dependent and creative working lives under safe and sanitary working conditions.

It is a glorious duty of all League of Socialist Working Youth (LSWY) members and all young people to step forth to fulfill more thoroughly all the tasks revealed in this work by the great leader. It is here, in the stepping forth to the fulfillment of the party's labor policy by all youth deeply aware of the epochal duty which they bear, that the true path lies to thoroughly fulfilling the socialist labor law, to further strengthening the socialist system and to achieving prosperity for the Fatherland and a happier life for the people.

In this work, the great leader first of all teaches that in order to fulfill the socialist labor law, we must do political work and work with people well and he reveals its content and method.

The basis of all work is work with people. That is because people conquer nature, create material wealth, and remake and develop society. Inasmuch as labor administration work is an important part of work with people, political work as work with people must be emphasized.

Youth must always highly demonstrate a masterly attitude and initiative while working sincerely and must further fan the flames of collective innovation in socialist construction by first of all firmly arming themselves with the great leader's chuche ideology. When all youth work devotedly, whether anyone is watching or not, at the guardposts they have assumed for the party and the revolution, for the Fatherland and the people; when the flames of collective innovation burn fiercely everywhere, our country will grow rich and strong and our revolution will progress even more vigorously.

Youth must also thoroughly eradicate all kinds of old ideologies such as individualism and opportunism and must all value the benefit of society and collective, demonstrating highly the communist trait of working devotedly for the Fatherland and the people.

Any difficult and complex task that may be encountered in socialist construction can be carried out well if we follow and learn the work and life ethic of the anti-Japanese guerrillas. Youth must uphold the revolutionary slogan "Production, study, and life all in the anti-Japanese guerrilla style" and actively follow and learn the attitude of masters of revolution and the spirit of self-reliance carried by the anti-Japanese guerrillas to carry out responsibly and without the slightest hesitation any task that arises no matter how difficult and complex; youth must overflow with vigorous fighting spirit and zeal to work militantly and live in a revolutionary manner.

While emphasizing in this work that all workers also be made to love labor and work according to the socialist labor life model, the great leader taught that the important things are to indoctrinate the workers in the spirit of loving labor and to liberate them from strenuous work, to strengthen labor discipline and eliminate the phenomenon of labor waste, to enhance labor power and raise the workers' level of technical proficiency, and to cherish facilities and conserve materials.

Youth must first of all participate in labor sincerely with the spirit of loving labor and must step to the fore in carrying out the technological revolution to liberate workers from strenuous work. All must substantially carry out a movement of following the model of the hidden heroes to actively participate in the mass technological innovation movement and thoroughly overcome all kinds of old ideologies such as technical mysticism, conservatism or empiricism which block technological progress, and they must plant themselves firmly in the chuche viewpoint to display highly the revolutionary spirit of self-reliance.

Youth must also self-consciously adhere to labor discipline and wage a strong struggle against the phenomenon of labor power waste; they must join ranks to firmly defend the revolutionary guardposts while actively waging the struggle to enhance ceaselessly its level of technical proficiency. Facilities must operate regularly and materials and raw materials must be abundant to be able to work as desired and increase production.

All youths must love facilities as their own eyes and keep them well, and must step to the fore in operating facilities according to the standard operation method and in inspecting and maintaining facilities in a timely manner. They must clearly realize that their share too is in society's material wealth and that society's wealth must increase if they too are to live well. They must actively conserve and effectively use even one gram of iron, one watt of electric power, one length of thread, one grain of rice and one drop of fuel while striving to produce more.

In addition to this, in his work the great leader taught about thoroughly instituting the socialist distribution principle and the socialist labor compensation principle as well as thoroughly fulfilling the mass line in labor administration work.

Youth must display high responsibility in all work with deep concern for systematically increasing labor quotas, and must actively contribute to increasing ceaselessly the per person production amount.

Today when socialist construction is proceeding at an unprecedentedly high speed, the duties facing youth are truly heavy.

LSWY members and young people must uphold the great leader's teachings about thoroughly fulfilling the socialist labor law and bring about a great transformation in labor administration work.

HISTORIC CHIALUN CONFERENCE LIGHTING THE PATH OF THE KOREAN REVOLUTION

Pyongyang KULLOJA in Korean No 6, Jun 80 pp 2-8

[Text] A half century has passed since the historic Chialun Conference was held for 2 days, 30 June until 2 July 1930, under the direction of the great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song.

At the historic Chialun Conference, the great leader announced the programmatic documentary, "Path of the Korean Revolution" which was based on the immortal chuche ideology and which clarified the line and program of the Korean revolution anew.

The chuche oriented revolutionary line and program which the respected and beloved leader presented were the guidelines of the Korean revolution which delineated the path of practical struggle for the Korean communists and people at the time of national suffering when the whole race had been groaning under the sword of Japanese imperialism and a black cloud enshrouded the Fatherland.

The Chialun Conference was a historic conference which thoroughly established chuche in the Korean revolution and became a new milestone in vigorously advancing our revolution under the wise leadership of the great leader.

Our people's journey of glorious struggle over the past half century gives definite proof of the appropriateness and invincible vitality of the chuche oriented line and program which the great leader presented at the Chialun Conference.

Korean communists and people are reflecting with deep feeling on the journey of worthwhile struggle of a half century of fighting with the banner of the immortal chuche idea held high and they are even more firmly renewing their resolve to cherish deep in their hearts the infinite national pride and determination to hold the great leader in high esteem whom they welcomed for the first time in the thousands of years in the history of our people and to wage revolution and hand down to posterity the revolutionary cause which the leader is directing and to bring it to completion.

The Chialun Conference, which was held under the guidance of the great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, was a historic conference which unfolded the epoch of tremendous transformation in which our country's communist movement and movement of national liberation advanced victoriously to a new high stage in concert with the revolutionary line and program based on the immortal chuche idea.

The Chialun Conference was a singular milestone which blazed the trail of victory following the revolutionary line and program based on the chuche idea which put away once and for all the dire history of the previous era during which the Korean revolution had only suffered trials and tribulations and excruciating agony.

We recall that the internal and external state of our country at the time when the Chialun Conference was convened was very complex and tense.

The imperialists were dismayed that the forces of revolution grew and gained strength and the revolutionary struggle of the oppressed peoples was progressing day by day and so they were in a frenzy to crush it. Furthermore, an economic depression engulfed the world and the imperialists rushed even faster along the path of aggression and plunder of other countries.

Dreaming of world conquest, Japanese imperialists avidly sought for a way out from the economic depression in plunder of the continent and intensified political domination and economic exploitation to an unprecedented degree. The national and class contradiction between our country and Japanese imperialism was aggravated to the extreme. Risking death, the people rushed forth to a mass struggle against Japanese imperialism. The people's mass struggle gradually developed into a violent struggle. Indeed, the anti-Japanese national liberation struggle of our people was at the crossroads of either a new development through scientific struggle line, strategy and tactics and appropriate leadership or succumbing to the ever-worsening suppression of the Japanese imperialists.

The majority of factionalists and self-appointed "leaders" of the Korean revolution in that period gave up the revolutionary movement and succumbed to pursuit of bodily ease. Thus some factionalists started off with the objective of their own political ambition and self-seeking, drove the masses to excruciating violence and caused blood to flow needlessly. Numerous revolutionary organizations rose up with violence, were crushed and thereby caused the forces of revolution to suffer tremendous losses.

The history of the anti-Japanese national liberation struggle of our people drenched with blood urgently required the scientific revolutionary line, strategy and tactics to rescue the country and nation from the threat to life, death, existence or annihilation and to light the road of struggle.

It was precisely at such a time that the sun of the nation and genius of the revolution, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, unfolded the program of the Korean revolution which completely elucidated the line and program of chuche oriented revolution based on his in-depth mastery of the demands of the revolutionary situation which had arisen at the time of his historic instruction on our country's communist movement and the national liberation movement.

The chuche oriented line and programs concerning the Korean revolution which the great leader presented at the Chialun Conference were the beacon which distinctly lit up the path for the Korean communists and people and the great charter which gave firm assurance for the victory of the Korean revolution.

The historic Chialun Conference above all embodied the immortal chuche idea which the great leader originated and clarified the basic position and attitude which the Korean communists and people must firmly adhere to in the revolutionary struggle.

The great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, taught as follows:

"Experience demonstrates that in order to lead the revolution to victory one must go among the popular masses, organize and mobilize them and bear responsibility oneself and settle all problems independently in accord with one's situation instead of relying on other people to settle them.

"In light of this teaching, we recognize that it is most important to possess the steadfast position and attitude that the masters of the Korean revolution to a great extent are the Korean people themselves and that the Korean revolution must always be accomplished through the power of the Korean people themselves in concert with the situation in our country." ("Kim Il-song Selected Works," Vol I, p 6)

The masters of each and every country are to a great degree the people of that country and the decisive cause of victory for the revolution are the chuche oriented revolutionary forces of that country. One must possess the steadfast position and attitude that the revolution must be accomplished with reliance on the chuche oriented revolutionary forces in accordance with the situation in one's own country so as to be able to overcome all kinds of vacillation, establish a scientific line and program and vigorously lead the popular masses to bring the revolution to victory.

Whether or not chuche is established in revolutionary struggle is a basic question of whether the ominous consequences left behind by the flunkeys and factionalists are wiped out and the trail of the Korean revolution is properly cleared or not.

The great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, made clear the chuche oriented position that by and large the Korean people are the masters of the Korean revolution and that they must accomplish it through their own power in accordance with the situation of the country and he prepared the steadfast guideline which the Korean communists and people must strongly adhere to in all their activities.

In this conference, the great leader enabled the communists and people to definitively blaze the trail of victory with the correct line, strategy and tactics by ingeniously clarifying the line of the anti-imperialist, anti-feudal democratic revolution which incorporates the nature and responsibilities, motive force and objectives, present task and ultimate purpose of the Korean revolution based on his accurate analysis of the special nature and class relationships of our country's socio-economic relations.

A proper definition of the nature of revolution is the cardinal question which determines the success or failure of the revolution and the prerequisite condition for establishing the scientific strategy and tactics. The nature of revolution must be properly defined to be able to set straight the formation of revolutionary forces, precisely establish the main direction to strike out for, properly determine its purpose and definitively organize and mobilize the popular masses for revolutionary struggle.

The great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, clearly portrayed the way for accurately defining the nature of revolution for countries which were unable to pass through normal capitalist development but succumbed to the fate of being a colony of the imperialists by defining the nature of our country's revolution from the chuche oriented standpoint as an anti-imperialist, anti-feudal democratic revolution. This has become a superb compendium on socialist revolution in the development of the revolutionary theory of the working class.

By clearly defining the nature, objectives and dynamics of the Korean revolution, the great leader opened up the direct route to victory for the Korean revolution and dealt a decisive blow to the behavioral Marxists and vacillating opportunists who called the Korean revolution a "bourgeois revolution" or "socialist revolution" without any knowledge of the concrete socials class relationships of our country.

The great leader further developed and amplified the theory on the revolutionary government of the working class by presenting an entirely new ideology based on his innovative explanation of the nature of revolution that the revolutionary ruling power which is to fulfill the duties of the anti-imperialist, anti-feudal democratic revolution must become a new type of popular rule led by the working class and he clearly indicated the task which this power was to perform.

The line of the anti-Japanese armed struggle concerning transforming the violent uprising of the popular masses against Japanese imperialism into an organized armed struggle was an important strategic program proposed at the Chialun Conference.

By presenting the chuche oriented line on anti-Japanese armed struggle at the conference, the great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song developed the anti-Japanese national liberation movement of our people to a new nigh level and unfolded a new well-spring of struggle for national liberation in the struggle against imperialism based on armed struggle.

"Under the conditions in which the despotism of Japanese imperialism is intensifying to an unprecedented degree and the enemy we face is armed to the teeth, we must gradually develop the mass struggle which is taking a violent shape into an organized struggle." (Ibid., pp 8-9)

As the beloved and respected leader teaches, imperialism, by nature, is aggressive and rapacious and will under no circumstances leave its colonies voluntarily but will rely on barbaric oppression to maintain its colonial rule. Imperialism will not give up its own hegemony prior to its complete downfall at the hands of the decisive struggle of the people.

It is only when oppressed peoples take up arms and rise up in decisive struggle that they will be able to crush the imperialist aggressors and gain victory in the revolution of national liberation. Organized armed struggle is the most positive and decisive form of struggle which assures the ultimate victory of the national liberation revolution.

At the historic Chialun Conference, the great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, set forth the line on waging organized armed struggle under the banner of chuche and clarified the most precise path of victory for our people's anti-Japanese national liberation struggle and colonial national liberation struggle based on his all embracing, profound analysis of the position occupied and role played by revolutionary violence in a colonial national liberation struggle and the requirements of the revolutionary situation which had arisen in our country.

Through the presentation of the one on the anti-Japanese armed struggle at the historic Chialun Conference, our people's anti-Japanese national liberation struggle against Japanese imperialism overcame its serious weakness of the past, sunk its roots deep into the popular masses, was organized and proceeded along with their positive support.

Indeed, the Chialun Conference was a great event which transformed the violent uprising of the popular masses against the Japanese imperialist aggressors into an organized armed struggle and developed our people's anti-Japanese national liberation struggle at its highest stage.

The Chialun Conference built up strong chuche-oriented revolutionary forces and gave firm assurance of attaining victory in the national liberation revolution by binding the vast anti-Japanese patriotic forces into a unit under the anti-Japanese banner and actively waging the struggle.

Actually, revolution cannot be victorious as the work to liberate the popular masses without participation of the broad popular masses. Moreover, if the Japanese imperialist aggressors who are armed to the teeth are to be vanquished by the strength of our people themselves, all the patriotic forces who possess an anti-Japanese ideology must be firmly bound together under a single banner.

The great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, ingeniously unfolded the strategic and tactical principles of the movement of the anti-Japanese national reunification front at the conference, prepared strong chuche-oriented revolutionary forces on the level of the anti-imperialist anti-feudal democratic revolution and opened up the broad path for chiefly accomplishing the Korean revolution through the power of our people all by themselves.

The line on the anti-Japanese national liberation front presented at the Chialun Conference was a great strategic program for assuring the decisive superiority of revolutionary forces over anti-revolutionists and firmly guaranteeing the victory of the anti-Japanese national liberation struggle by mastering to the maximum all the anti-Japanese patriotic forces of all strata and levels against Japanese imperialism and binding them together into a single political force.

Along with this, the Chialun Conference lit up a new way of founding a revolutionary party of the working class from the chuche standpoint.

The factionalist revisionists and stooges of all shapes and hues who had crept into the communist movement at that time hung out the placard of "party rebuilding" and rushed in to consolidate the strength of their faction and seize power. Riding the crest of another's waves without the slightest stand for independence, these people idiotically claimed they were going to rebuild the party. The factionalist feverishly attempted to make a so-called "party center" and be recognized as an international party while being far removed from the popular masses and without the slightest base or preparation.

The great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, was profoundly cognizant of this state of disarray, presented the chuche-oriented line on founding the party at the historic Chialun Conference and prepared most precise guidelines for founding the revolutionary party of the working class.

The great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, taught that in order to substantially promote the founding of the party on a healthy foundation, it was necessary to learn a good lesson from the disbanding of the Korean Communist Party, form a ground floor organization of the party with ample preparation, immediately expand and strengthen it and intimately combine the preparatory work of founding the party together with the struggle against Japanese imperialism.

Through clarification of the chuche-oriented line on founding the party by the great leader, the communists in Korea were enabled to substantially perform the preparatory work of founding a party along a most precise path under the adverse conditions of Japanese imperialist colonial rule.

Consequent upon the chuche-oriented line on founding the party which the great leader ingeniously elucidated, the organizational superstructure for founding the party was strongly built, a cohesion of will and ideology was firmly realized in the communist ranks and a mass base was established firm as a rock.

Indeed, it is because the great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song wholly embodied the immortal chuche idea at the Chialun Conference and again clarified the chuche oriented line and program for the Korean revolution and the ways to realize it, the Korean communists and people were given a real program of struggle for the Korean revolution and our revolution began to develop along the path which the revolutionary line of chuche indicated.

The Chialun Conference which was held under the direction of the great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, demonstrates that when one accepts the leadership of an accomplished leader, one can successfully blaze the trail of revolutionary victory.

The leadership of an accomplished leader is a basic assurance of victory in revolutionary struggle.

The people who create and develop history are the popular masses. This does not mean, however, that the popular masses will be automatically drawn into revolutionary struggle. If the popular masses are to possess a class awareness and become prime movers of revolution and powerful forces of social development, they must accept the leadership of an accomplished leader.

The masses who do not accept the leadership of an accomplished leader will not be able to accomplish the cause of revolution victoriously with a high realization of being masters of revolution. It is only under the leadership of the leader that the popular masses can become real self-initiators of history and creators of a new history.

"It is only when the people accept the correct leadership of a leader that they will be able to bring about shining success in revolution and construction and trod the straight path to victory." ("Compendium on the Occasion of the Trip Abroad of the Great Leader Comrade Kim Il-song," p 67)

An accomplished leader is the focal point which binds the party, class and the masses into a single entity and the supreme head which guides that totality in a unified manner. The firm provision of the unified leadership of the leader is a decisive assurance for victory in revolutionary struggle.

The historical experience of the international communist movement is living proof that it is only when the popular masses have the leadership of an accomplished leader that they can gain a great victory in revolutionary struggle, and conversely, it is when they do not do so that they suffer severe reverses in revolution.

The fact that the leadership of the leader plays a decisive role in revolutionary struggle is well demonstrated by the history of the national liberation and communist movements in our country.

In the past, our people waged a series of various kinds of mass struggles against Japanese imperialism but they failed every time because they did not have the leadership of an accomplished leader.

At that time when the whole land was engulfed in a sea of blood and the people had been pining for the road of rebirth, the "campaigns" and "leaders" who claimed to be carrying on the Korean national liberation movement merely gave empty promises, trifled with the masses and only caused confusion in revolutionary struggle.

Due to the activities of the ruffians, power grabbers and factional flunkeys of all shapes and hues who babbled about "leading" the revolution, the people lost heart, and felt deep down that no good would come to them at all.

During these dark days of ordeal upon ordeal, the yearning of our people who were tired of seeing the people calling themselves "leaders" and "campaigners" was for a true leader of the people, an accomplished leader of the revolution who would extricate the nation from the brink of disaster and lead the revolution to victory.

Such a yearning of the people was brilliantly realized when the great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, appeared on the road of revolution carrying the fate of the fatherland, nation and revolution upon his shoulders.

Because the respected and beloved leader appeared on the road of revolution, opened up and guided the cause of chuche, our people were able to welcome in a new era of worthwhile revolution advancing along a straight path under the great leader whom they met for the first time in the thousands of years of their history.

It was by highly revering as their leader the respected and beloved leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, sun of the nation and genius of the revolution, that our country's national liberation and communist movements were able to overcome the basic weaknesses of the past and vigorously advance under the banner of chuche.

The wise leadership of the respected and beloved leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, was the fundamental wellspring of strength which gave the popular masses a revolutionary awareness, bound them together into a single unit and powerfully summoned them to the great struggle. It was a decisive pledge which overcame all sorts of hindrances and ordeals in the revolution and led our people along the highway of glorious victory.

The entire course of anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle along the highway of victory overcoming unprecedented stringent ordeals and obstacles was the history of praiseworthy struggle in which the Korean communists and people upheld the wise leadership of the respected and beloved leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, and gained victory, closely rallied around the leader.

The first moment the great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, set out on the road of revolution, he organized the Down With Imperialism League and opened up the path of new transformation in the development of our country's communist and national liberation movements.

The formation of the Down With Imperialism League which was the first communist revolutionary organization in our country was the historic pronouncement proclaiming a new departure for our revolution and a great event giving impetus to the Korean revolution to advance vigorously under the wise leadership of the respected and beloved leader.

It was due to the founding of the Down With Imperialism League that the revolutionary struggle of our people was waged based on the principle of independence which the great leader clarified and the struggle for national liberation and class liberation under the leadership of the leader was vigorously carried on.

The great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, formed various kinds of revolutionary organizations for the purpose of advancing the Korean revolution in leaps and bounds, such as the anti-imperialist youth league and Korean communist youth league and through them, he reared numerous young communists of the new era and made them into a strong nucleus for the Korean revolution. Accordingly, our revolution advanced in leaps and bounds under the wise leadership of the respected and beloved leader.

Our revolution progressed to a new high stage through the presentation of the chuche-oriented line and program on the Korean revolution by the great leader at the historic Chialun Conference.

The path of revolutionary victory can only be blazed through the creation of a guiding idea of revolution, presentation of the line and program of revolution based on this, formation of revolutionary organizations to make them come into being and unification of ideology and will of the rank and file of revolution.

An accomplished leader reflects the urgent requirements of the age and revolution, creates the guiding idea of revolution, gathers together revolutionary organizations, binds the broad masses together in them and leads the revolution on to victory.

Our people's anti-Japanese national liberation struggle was launched on the road of innovation under the wise leadership of the leader through the complete and thoroughgoing presentation of the line, strategic and tactical program of the Korean revolution based on the immortal chuche idea by the great leader at the Chialun Conference.

This presentation of the innovative line, strategy and tactics for revolution which are a pledge for victory in the revolution was one of the fundamental questions for clearing the way to revolutionary victory. It is only through the presentation of the correct guiding idea and establishment of the revolutionary line, strategy and tactics based on it by an accomplished leader that the communists and popular masses are able to vigorously blaze the trail of revolutionary victory under the leader's guidance.

In order to implement the chuche-oriented line and program presented at the historic Chialun Conference, the Korean revolutionary army which was organized and its activities were of major significance in more vigorously advancing our revolution under the wise leadership of the great leader.

The Korean revolutionary army personnel marched into the urban and rural areas, performed political and military activities among the workers, peasants and young students, prepared to form them into guerrilla units and through this process strong groundwork was laid for carrying on an armed struggle.

Through the historic Chialun Conference, the unit and cohesion of ideology and will power of our revolutionary rank and file were more firmly solidified and the vast anti-Japanese patriotic forces including workers, peasants and young students were bound together in the fold of the great leader and steadfastly set forth along the road of Korean revolution which the great leader pointed out to them.

The Korean revolution which had faced drastic pitfalls and undergone horrible suffering for a lengthy period was able to advance to victory following the most correct line on revolution and our people were able to plod ahead forcefully along the highway of repeated victory under the leader's wise direction thanks to the great leader's clarification of the chuche oriented line and program of the Korean revolution based on the immortal chuche idea.

The Korean communists and people were even more tightly bound together, steel-like, in the fold of the leader filled with sentiments of tremendous national pride and self-assurance for having highly welcomed the respected and beloved leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, as their leader who awakened them to the truths of revolution and lucidly clarified the road ahead for the Korean revolution and they struggled on under the direction of the leader sacrificing their youth and even their lives along the way.

Highly esteeming the great leader as the sun of the nation and fighting to the end along the road which the leader points out is the iron-clad conviction and steadfast revolutionary will of the communists and people of Korea.

Thus, the Korean communists who waged the holy war against Japan considered fighting and dying on Mt Paektu following the wise leadership of the great leader as their greatest glory and happiness.

Indeed, the wise leadership of the great leader was the fundamental cause for the Korean revolution to cross the great divide of ominous obstacles and ordeals and blaze the trail to victory. It also bestowed bravery and confidence in victory on the Korean communists and people and was the source of strength which aroused them to heroic struggle.

Under the wise leadership of the great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, a most excellent and advanced socialist system which the Korean communists and people had yearned so ardently for and shed their blood fighting for has been established in this land today and our fatherland has been transformed into a socialist power renowned for its autonomy, independence and self-sufficiency.

Our revolutionary cause which the great leader unfolded in the forests of Paektu is adding luster to the glorious revolutionary traditions which the leader achieved is rushing vigorously along the road to victory and is developing at a new high level due to the historic struggle to imbue the whole society with the chuche ideology under the refined direction of the party.

Indeed, the program of the Korean revolution which the great leader presented at the Chialun Conference was an immortal banner which led our revolution to victory and brought about revolutionary changes in this land. Today as well, the great revolutionary banner of the Chialun Conference is unfailingly lighting up the road ahead for our people and is bestowing tremendously encouraging strength to revolutionary peoples who are waging battle.

On this auspicious occasion of the 50th anniversary of the historic Chialun Conference today, all our party members and people highly esteem the great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, in the ranks of revolution, engrave deep in their hearts the infinite national pride and confidence of accomplishing the cause of chuche which the leader launched and firmly resolve to walk forcefully along the road of loyalty.

Our people have advanced far along the road of revolution. We have not yet, however, achieved reunification of the country and there are unavoidably difficult and complex tasks lying ahead for our revolution.

The great idea of the Chialun Conference on establishing a people's paradise in our country must be more brightly realized through our continued advances and continued innovations with a high zeal, vigor and revolutionary fighting spirit as communist revolutionaries.

We must possess a tremendous honor and pride in advancing behind the banner of the glorious party and more vigorously struggle to celebrate our party's historic Sixth Congress with lofty political zeal and shining labor successes.

THE CHUCHE IDEA ORIGINATED IN THE PROCESS OF ANTI-JAPANESE REVOLUTIONARY STRUGGLE AND IS THE GREAT GUIDING IDEA WHOSE PROPRIETY HAS BEEN PROVEN

[Article by Yim Ch'un-ch'u]

[Text] The communists and people of Korea are victoriously clearing the rugged party of revolution and vigorously moving ahead with the chuche idea which the great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, originated as their guideline.

The Chialun Conference occupies a shining place in our people's history of revolutionary struggle as a historic meeting which clarified the path of the Korean revolution.

The great leader clearly pointed out the path for our people to travel by presenting the chuche oriented revolutionary line, strategic and tactical program at the Chialun Conference based on the immortal chuche idea.

Having proclaimed a new departure through the founding of the Down With Imperialism League, the Korean revolution seized the occasion of the historic Chialun Conference, hoisted on high the banner of the chuche idea and vigorously advanced along the road to independence.

The half century which our people have travelled is the glorious history of struggle with the great chuche idea as the guiding idea and all the victories our people have gained in revolution and construction are the shining fruit of the chuche idea.

Achieving certain victory behind the banner of the great chuche idea is the firm resolve and conviction deeply embedded in the hearts of the Korean communists and people through our revolution's activities of over half a century. The Korean communists and people are firmly convinced that there is no other guiding idea which brings our revolution and construction to victory than the chuche idea and they are overflowing with steadfast resolve to bring the cause of socialism and communism to completion under the banner of the chuche idea.

The great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, created the immortal chuche idea as the guiding idea of our era and the Korean revolutions in the flames of the arduous anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle.

Possessing the correct guiding idea is one of the very important questions arising in revolutionary struggle and construction. One must possess a scientific guiding idea to be able to push ahead victoriously with revolutionary struggle and construction.

The whole history of the international labor movement and communist movement demonstrates that when the working class carry on struggle with an accurate guiding idea they will be able to successfully accomplish the difficult and complicated revolutionary struggle to revise nature and society and fulfill their mission in respect to the era and revolution.

If an ideology or theory is to become a real guideline for revolution and construction, it must reflect the urgent demands of the era and revolutionary action. It is only such an ideology and theory which can become a true guiding idea and guiding theory of revolution which will bring the revolutionary struggle and construction to steadfast victory.

The great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, bestowed the weapons for the Korean communists and people to vigorously carry on the revolutionary struggle with the most precise guiding idea through his institution of the immortal chuche idea which reflects the urgent demands of our era and the Korean revolution.

Back in the 1920's, the political and economic crisis in the capitalist world worsened daily and, as a consequence, the world situation changed abruptly. The national inconsistency between the imperialists and peoples in countries under colonial subjugation and the class inconsistency between foreign imperialists and domestic reactionary ruling class who relied on them and the exploited working masses were exacerbated to the extreme and the flames of struggle to gain independence burst out in many countries. Moreover, Asia, which had been a continent in the darkness of colonialism became the basic stage of revolutionary struggle by the people for independence and liberation. The revolutionary struggle of the people to shatter the chains of subjugation and oppression and achieve national and class liberation engulfed all the continents on the globe. The peoples of colonized and semi-colonized countries took the stage as masters of their own destiny and vigorously rushed into the struggle for autonomy and independence.

The new era which had embarked on the path of great revolutionary change required a scientific guiding idea which could successfully solve the numerous problems arising in revolutionary activity.

The question of possessing a new revolutionary idea and correct guiding idea has turned out to be a more urgent requirement in our country's revolution in this era.

At that time, Korea was the outpost of the international revolutionary frontier in which the forces of revolution and anti-revolutionary forces had very bitterly fought and an important stage for our people's revolutionary struggle for independence. From its very first step, the Korean revolution travelled an unfamiliar path where none had gone before and had to solve everything under its own power.

The matter of what line, strategy and tactics to possess and how to go on fighting has become a most important question for Korean revolutionaries and people.

Considering the reality of our country's national liberation struggle and the early communist movement which had undergone devastating ordeals due to the machinations of the nationalists and factional stooges particularly in the middle 1920's, this question became an urgent requirement which could no longer be put off. The situation which had arisen longed for a correct guiding idea which would clarify the road ahead for the Korean revolution.

The immortal chuche idea is a great guiding idea which reflects such demands of our era and the Korean revolution.

The guiding idea which is representative of the age by no means appears spontaneously merely because the historic era has changed or because revolutionary action demands it. It only originates from a great leader of the working class who victoriously blazes the trail for the era and the revolution.

A great leader of the working class is more deeply familiar with the legitimacy of historic development and the urgent demands of the era than anyone else, normalizes the practical experience of revolutionary struggle, creates the guiding idea for revolution and clarifies the path of struggle for the working popular masses including the working class.

The chuche idea reaching out to a new era of history, an era of sovereignty, was able to be created because the great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, embarked on the road of revolution perfectly endowed with incomparable foresight, superb leadership and noble communist virtues and blazed a new trail of revolutionary struggle through vigorous ideological and theoretical activities.

"In the process of clearing the rugged path of revolution based on an analysis and summarization of historic experience of the Korean revolution, we obtained the chuche idea which postulates that the masters of revolution and construction are the popular masses and that the motive power for revolution and construction belongs to the popular masses and we further developed and enriched it through revolutionary struggle and construction." ("Compendium of the Great Leader Comrade Kim Il-song's Visit Abroad," pp 58-59)

The respected and beloved leader was confronted with two very serious problems in the process of ideological and theoretical consideration and revolutionary activity while blazing the arduous and complex trail of the Korean revolution and devoted his whole strength to solving these problems.

One of these was the fact that the rationalists and early members of the communist movement, claiming to carry out the Korean national liberation movement, ignored the masses and gathered together with a few people from the upper class to argue semantics and argue with each other but without making any real effort to summon the masses to the revolutionary movement.

Far removed from the masses, they engaged in power struggles and squabbles over "theory" among themselves but their "theory" was mere sophistry without any connection with revolutionary struggle at all.

The self-styled "leaders" of the nationalist movement preached about "educational enlightenment," "self-improvement" instead of stressing ways of crushing Japanese imperialism and achieving liberation. The genteel marxists relied on individual themes rather than considering the actual social class relationships of our country and made vacuous and empty statements claiming that they had to wage the proletarian revolution or the bourgeois revolution.

From the first time he set out on his revolutionary activities, the great leader critiqued the fundamental deficiency evident in the Korean national liberation movement and the early communist movement and devoted his energy to explaining the basic question which could overcome this and gain victory for the revolution.

The great leader normalized the valuable experience he gained in his creative survey of the preliminary revolutionary theory and struggle experience of the working class and he gave an ingenious explanation of this basic question.

The respected and beloved leader presented a new definition of the place and position occupied by and the role played by the working popular masses in revolutionary struggle by pointing out the great truth that the masters of revolution are the popular masses and that the popular masses must rise up to be able to gain victory in the revolutionary struggle.

All revolutionary struggle is a great struggle for the popular masses to extricate themselves from all kinds of subjugation and lead an autonomous and creative life as true masters of nature and society. Consequently, the popular masses possess the necessary relational understanding of revolution and the destiny of the working popular masses is intimately allied with the fate of the revolution.

A revolution takes place and develops because of some internal cause of the country concerned and thus can neither be exported nor imported. Accordingly, there is nobody who can wage that country's revolution for it irrespective of that country's popular masses. Revolution in each and every country can be successfully accomplished only when the popular masses of that country discard all dependency on others and possess the viewpoint and position that they are masters of their own destiny.

In addition, revolutionary struggle is an undertaking which can only be successfully accomplished through the active participation of the popular masses.

As the great leader has taught, the popular masses are the creators of history and decisive forces of revolution and construction. It is by means of the creative labor and struggle of the working popular masses that all the material wealth of society is created and social reform and progress is achieved.

Whether or not revolution and construction are successful ultimately depends on how the creative power of the working popular masses is organized and mobilized. One must rely on the working popular masses, go among them and arouse them to action in order to break through all barriers and roadblocks and vigorously push ahead with construction work.

The concept that the masters of revolution are the popular masses and that the popular masses must rise up in order to achieve victory in revolutionary struggle is the guiding principle concerning trusting always in the power of the popular masses and relying on them to solve all the problems encountered in the revolution and which clearly points out the decisive assurance of victory in the revolution.

Another matter which the respected and beloved leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, severely criticized and summarized was the severe factional strife and flunkeyist tendance of the nationalists and early members of the communist movement.

The nationalists of that period split into several factions and insanely engaged in factional infighting everywhere they went and particularly opposed the communists to a great degree and did not stop even at terrorist activities. They borrowed the strength of another country and were unable to discard their position of depending on foreign force to realize the independence of Korea.

The gentleman marxists gave themselves merely to go about trying to win the approval of the international party while claiming that they alone represented the "orthodox faction." These people did not take even the slightest stand that they would do their own thinking and would rely on their own people or that they would organize and mobilize them for the Korean revolution or wage the revolution in a masterful manner.

The respected and beloved leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, closely analyzed and summarized the factional strife and flunkeyist tendencies of the Korean national liberation movement and early communist movement which he came up against at the very start of his revolutionary activities and he disclosed another great truth based on that.

The respected and beloved leader emphasized that the revolutionary movement was not something that one does with permission of anybody but is performed with conviction and that one must solve one's own problems and when one wages revolution well others naturally grant them recognition.

Revolution and construction are performed by each country separately and the environment and conditions which each country faces are not alike. Consequently, revolution and construction must be carried out creatively from a thoroughly independent position.

One must ponder about all problems with one's own ingenuity and solve them individually according to one's own convictions so as to fulfill one's role as master of revolution and go about properly accomplishing the revolutionary struggle under all difficult conditions whatsoever without wavering or flinching. Furthermore, it is only when one overcomes a subservient position and revisionist attitude toward established theory or one's own experience and then creatively applies them in conformity with the actual situation in one's own country that one can further develop and enrich revolutionary theory and revolutionary struggle experience and be able to actively contribute to the development of not only the revolution in one's own country but also the world revolution as well.

The concept of being responsible for and independently promoting the revolution in one's own country is the great ideology which clarified the basic position and methodology by which the masters of revolution, the popular masses, are able to fulfill their role and responsibilities.

The great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, combined these two kinds of serious problems he faced in the early period of revolutionary activity with the basic demands of the era and revolutionary development and deeply pondered them while at the same time derived the most basic theoretical and practical principles and created the immortal chuche idea with this point of departure.

"The chuche idea, in a nutshell, is the ideology that the masters of revolution and construction are the popular masses and that the popular masses possess the strength to expedite revolution and construction. In other words, one is master of one's own destiny and one possesses the strength of working out one's own destiny." ("Kim Il-song Selected Works," Vol 6, p 268)

The great chuche idea clarified for the Korean communists and people the true revolutionary world outlook and basic position and methodology which they must adhere to in revolutionary struggle.

The great chuche idea was conceived not in a cozy study or research lab but in the midst of arduous revolutionary struggle, in the bitterly contested ideological-theoretical struggle against all sorts of reactionary and counter-revolutionary ideology and "theory" such as bourgeois ideology, flunkeyism and revisionism.

The great leader taught the truth that in the practice of revolutionary struggle, if the simple and ordinary working masses would only be enlightened in a revolutionary manner they would be able to display really great strength and they would be able to wage revolution with their own strength even under the most unfavorable and difficult circumstances.

It is precisely by being based on the practical summary of previous history and revolutionary struggle and being created as the ideological weapon for revolutionary struggle in the actual act of developing the era and revolution that the immortal greatness and invincible vitality of the chuche idea is found.

The creation of the immortal chuche idea by the great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, was a historic event which wrought a fundamental transformation in our revolutionary development.

The chuche idea is the unitary guiding idea of the Korean revolution which reflects our revolutionary development and the aims and yearning of the Korean people and clarified the revolutionary theory, strategy and tactics and basic position and methodology which our people must consistently adhere to in revolutionary struggle. Through the creation of the chuche idea, the bright road for more precisely evaluating the concrete reality of our country and the demands of revolutionary development in each period opened up and it thereby formulated the revolutionary line, strategy and tactics appropriate for this.

Thanks to the creation of the chuche idea, the Korean communists and people were filled with awareness of being masters of revolution and certainty of their own power for the first time in their long history of thousands of years, were able to seize their destiny in their own hands and vigorously rushed into the revolutionary struggle.

The creation of the immortal chuche idea by the respected and beloved leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, was a solemn declaration of the birth of the original great idea in the ideological history of mankind.

It was due to the creation of the chuche idea that the great truth that man is the master of everything and decides everything was disclosed for the first time.

Through the creation of the chuche idea, a new philosophy appeared on the scene which considered all things centered around the popular masses, had them serve the popular masses and solved everything in conjunction with the demands of the popular masses and through their strength, an invincible and momentous guiding ideology which raised the history of the ideas of mankind to a new pinnacle.

A great revolutionary transformation took place in the history of man's struggle for liberation through the creation of the immortal chuche idea and the independent struggle being waged by the working class and working popular masses under the revolutionary banner of chuche.

Accordingly, a new era of revolution was unfolded in which the working popular masses became the true masters and motivating force of revolution and vigorously waged the struggle to defend their own autonomy. It was a new era of history in which the working popular masses engaged in the struggle of independently taking charge of their own destiny and brought about a most extreme reformation which put an end to all sorts of class and national subjugation.

Indeed, the creation of the chuche idea by the genius of revolution and great ideological theorist, the respected and beloved leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, in the process of the glorious anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle in which he ingeniously blazed the trail of the Korean revolution in its early stage was an immortal historic contribution which would add luster to our revolution, the world revolution and the history of man's ideas.

The immortal chuche idea is the most precise guiding idea of revolution whose veracity and magnitude has been powerfully proven in the lengthy yet arduous course of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle.

The great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, taught as follows:

"The chuche idea became the guideline for our revolution and the Korean communist movement through the independent struggle process of our country's working class and working popular masses and it is becoming the steadfast guiding idea of our party today." ("Kim Il-song Selection Works," Vol 7, p 260)

The anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle was not only a great revolutionary struggle which enabled the chuche idea to be created but also a glorious revolutionary struggle which gave strong proof of the suitability of the chuche idea and its invincible vitality.

The anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle which the leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, organized and directed was, above all, a great revolutionary struggle which gave positive proof of the veracity of the chuche idea on arousing the working popular masses to carry on the revolution.

The chuche idea is the revolutionary theory which placed the working popular masses, the prime movers of history, in the center and it is the strategy and tactics of revolution based on the role of the working popular masses.

The history of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle was a glorious and shining history in which the revolutionary theory, strategy and tactics of chuche were embodied in the activities of revolutionary struggle under the wise guidance of none other than the respected and beloved leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, and during which its great victory was achieved.

The armed struggle which was the main thrust of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle was by nature a people's war which presupposed the active participation of the people. It was a protracted and arduous revolutionary war which could not have advanced even a single step without relying on the strength of the vast populace.

The anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle which had mobilized all the forces of the nation centered around an armed struggle under the banner of the chuche idea not only completely overcame the inherent faults of the nationalist movement of the past and the early communist movement which had drifted away from the popular masses but it also thoroughly crushed the leftist opportunists and all kinds of exclusionist trends which had tied up the anti-Japanese struggle within the confines of narrow national and class boundaries.

From the time that the great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, took the lead in our revolution, organized the Down With Imperialism League and led it sagaciously, the Korean working class who were oppressed and discriminated against turned into the steadfast leadership class of our revolution and the peasants became the prime movers of our revolution as trustworthy league members for the first time in history. In our revolutionary struggle, not only workers and peasants but also broad anti-imperialist forces comprising young students, intellectuals, landholders, conscientious national capitalists and religious leaders participated and threw themselves into a far-reaching struggle against Japanese imperialism and its stooges.

A mass grounding for armed struggle was expanded and strengthened when the admirable sons and daughters of the working people including workers and peasants followed the broad path of struggle which the chuche idea opened up and rushed forward to join the armed ranks and when all classes and strata who were sympathizers with the revolution. Various kinds of mass organizations such as anti-Japanese groups, anti-imperialist leagues, etc., were formed wherever possible and the broad masses of every class and level were gathered into legal and illegal mass organizations even under the fascist oppression of the Japanese imperialists and carried out many facets of mass movements including the labor movement, peasant movement, young students movement, etc.

The Fatherland Liberation Association which the great leader founded was an anti-Japanese national unification front organization which organized and mobilized the broad masses for the revolutionary struggle on a nationwide scale. This rendered a positive contribution to consolidating the victory of the anti-Japanese armed struggle by closely allying the broad anti-Japanese forces in the fold of the great leader under the banner of the chuche idea and of national liberation and waging a multi-faceted struggle to assist the Korean Peoples Revolutionary Army, etc.

The anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle which the respected and beloved leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, organized and directed was a great revolutionary struggle which gave firm testimony through actual practice to the truth that the masters of one's revolution as oneself, and thus, all problems encountered in blazing the trail of one's own destiny must be solved by one's own strength with a high display of the spirit of self-reliance.

"The anti-Japanese armed struggle was a very arduous struggle to fight against the Japanese imperialist brigands who were armed to the teeth under conditions in which there were no state support services nor the assistance of conventional armed forces. At that time, the only ones we could trust were the working popular masses and we were forced to fight after obtaining everything we needed by ourselves such as weapons, munitions, food provisions, etc." (Ibid., p 259)

The Japanese imperialism which occupied our country was a military feudalistic imperialism which dreamed of conquering all Asia with a conventional aggressive force of millions armed to the teeth and it was the vicious Asian shock troops of international fascism. International fascism which was closely allied with Japanese imperialism schemed of swallowing the whole world in one gulp, violently trampled on the independent rights of the people and forced an excruciating life of slavery upon them wherever they could. There was no country which would "make a gift of" independence nor was there any external power which would "save" our people from the dire plight of colonialist slavery.

When the dark storm clouds of ruination engulfed the entire country, and the fate of the nation was thrown into a life-death crisis, the communists of Korea waged the anti-Japanese armed struggle with the steadfast conviction that they themselves must bear the responsibility for the Korean revolution while being beholden to none and bring it to full completion through their own strength.

The anti-Japanese armed struggle which was organized and proceeded under the banner of chuche idea was a very exhausting struggle fighting against the bandit Japanese imperialists under the difficult conditions without any state backing, no base of a national army nor with help from anyone.

Nevertheless, the members of the Korean Peoples Revolutionary Army who were strongly armed with the chuche idea of the great leader opened up a perilous route with the firm position and noble spirit that they must bring the Korean revolution to completion through their own power and they were faithful to the Korean revolution to the end with a conviction of certain victory and dauntless fighting spirit for the cause of chuche. In the most malicious trials and tribulations beyond imagination, the members of the Korean Peoples Revolutionary Army broke through the horrible brambles with a consciousness of being masters of the Korean revolution and bearing responsibility for it and displayed a high revolutionary spirit of self-reliance in providing everything with their own power such as weapons, ammunition, food and clothing.

The large scale domestic assault operations of the Korean Peoples Revolutionary Army became the powerful flames and torch of national rebirth which summoned the over-all Korean revolution to scale endless heights and implanted in the hearts of our people the conviction that the Korean nation was not dead but alive and that the fatherland must be liberated without fail.

The special quality of our people's anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle was that it relied heavily on the chuche forces to carry it out.

The victory of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle clearly proves the point that when the people, barehanded as they were, are bound together tightly in the fold of an accomplished leader, trust in their own strength and bravely rise up and fight, they will be able to repel every enemy and take their destiny into their own hands.

Our people's anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle was the very first colonialist national liberation war which was living proof of the truth that the strength for working out their own destiny ultimately lies in their own hands. Our people who were shackled with the chains of colonial slavery rose up in the sacred struggle to bring about the cause of national liberation through their own power considering that the enslaved state proletarian revolution was not victorious. They achieve a new breakthrough in the world international colonial system by taking up arms and struggling fiercely.

Accordingly, the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle opened up a new era of victory and advances of the colonial national liberation struggle under the banner of independence. It was strong proof of the truth that the masters of each country's revolution are always the people in that country themselves.

The anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle which the respected and beloved leader, Comrade Kim Il-song organized and directed was a great revolutionary struggle which gave positive proof that one must consider all problems with one s own mind and solve them in harmony with the interests of one's own people and the concrete situation in one's own country.

The great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, taught as follows:

"The anti-Japanese armed struggle was a struggle to drive out all foreign aggressors from the colonial semi-feudal society, achieve the sovereignty of the nation and independence of the country, oppose exploitation and oppression and realize the class liberation of the oppressed working masses. It was necessary in this struggle that the communists of Korea use their wits to derive the struggle line and method and even the strategy and tactics of the revolution." (Ibid., p 259)

The anti-Japanese armed struggle which was organized and developed under the banner of the chuche idea began with our people's urgent demand and determination to liberate our nation which was groaning under the wicked colonial rule of the Japanese imperialists and achieve the historic cause of father-liberation.

Active participation in the world revolution, also, by thoroughly protecting the class and national interests of our people and vigorously pushing ahead with the Korean revolution is the thoroughly consistent standpoint and doctrine of Korean communists on the national and international duty of revolution.

The steadfast position of Korean communists of creatively solving all matters in accordance with the international situation of one's own country is the inevitable demand of a struggle to thoroughly protect the interests of the revolution of one's own people and country.

Our revolution could not be tied to any already established format or theme in the awesome life and death struggle with the enemy through a bloody battle.

The great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, began with the concrete socio-economic relationship and class relationship of our country, then defined the nature of our relationship and presented the original line of the anti-imperialist anti-feudal democratic revolution.

The great leader settled all questions solely on the basis of the concrete reality of our country starting with the definition of the revolutionary line and struggle method and ultimately presenting the concrete tasks and means of struggle.

The great leader also ceaselessly deepened and developed the original line, strategy, tactics and method of struggle at every stage of revolutionary development in the protracted and arduous process of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle.

Our anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle was able to travel the path to glorious victory because the great leader developed the sporadic violent uprisings of our people into an organized armed struggle at the proper movement, caused the armed ranks which had depended on the guerrillas base for its activities to expand into a considerably wider region and advance inside the country and in the 1940's made the Korean Peoples Revolutionary Army units into prime opportunities for liberating the fatherland.

The anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle is strong proof through action that one can gain victory only when one uses one's wits to consider all questions arising in revolutionary struggle and solves them in accordance with the actual situation of one's country.

Indeed, the immortal chuche idea which the great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, originated is the momentous guiding idea of revolution which is definite proof of its veracity and appropriateness through the entire process of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle of over 20 years.

Our people were able to vanquish the malicious Japanese imperialists, achieve the historic cause of fatherland liberation and open up the wide road of building a new society in this land by fighting under the wise leadership of the great leader following the revolutionary banner of the chuche idea.

The chuche idea is shining forth today as the great banner of all our victories and honor.

Our people upheld the revolutionary banner of the chuche idea for the past half century and victoriously cleared away and vigorously advanced along the difficult and awesome road of revolution.

By waging the struggle behind the banner of the chuche idea under the wise leadership of the great leader, our people were able to recover the sovereignty of the nation which they had lost and achieve independence for the country and were able to smoothly accomplish such a difficult and complex two-stage social revolution in such a short period after the liberation. The transformation from a backward colonial semi-feudal state into a autonomous, self-sufficient and independent socialist power is a shining victory and the praiseworthy fruit of the chuche idea.

The whole course of the Korean revolution was an epic of most glorious struggle and advances, creations and changes which only those possessing the chuche idea could bring about. It was because there was such a great guiding idea of revolution, the chuche idea, which represented the present era and the whole historic era of a communist future that the socialist Korea of today, rich, strong and prosperous and endless happiness for our people came about and the bright future of our revolution is still unfolding.

Today, the chuche idea has sunk its roots deep into this land, into the hearts of our people and now comprises shining reality. When we go forth with the revolutionary banner of the great chuche idea held aloft, certain victory becomes the sum-total of the half century of Korean revolution and our people's iron-clad conviction which never wavers under any circumstances. Our people are brimming with the certainty that they will be able to blaze the trail of revolution no matter how rugged the path because the great leader has wisely directed our revolution and the chuche idea has clearly revealed the road ahead.

Our people who are tightly bound together in the fold of the great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, and the glorious party and who are bravely fighting under the banner of the chuche idea will be eternally victorious and will advance forcefully in the future as in the past.

THE LEADERSHIP OF THE GREAT LEADER IS A DECISIVE PLEDGE OF VICTORY IN THE REVOLUTION

Pyongyang KULOJA in Korean No 6, Jun 80 pp 17-23

[Article by O Paek-yong]

[Text] Today our people are celebrating the 50th anniversary of the historic Chialun Conference at which the great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, clarified the path of the Korean revolution.

On the occasion of this glorious day, our people recall with profound emotion the wisdom of the leadership of the respected and beloved leader, who early on created the immortal chuche idea, opened up the bright path of our revolution basking in its gleaming radiance and led the Korean revolution full of suffering along the highway to victory.

The Korean revolution at long last was able to set forth on the correct path and our people were able to advance vigorously along the path of chuche through the presentation of the precise revolutionary line based on the immortal chuche idea by the great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, at the historic Chialun Conference.

Because our people accompanied the great leader along the frontier of the revolution and accepted the leader's direction, they were able to conclude a lengthy history of suffering, welcome in the worthwhile new era of revolution and then travel along the path of sacred struggle and praiseworthy victory.

The glorious journey of struggle which our people travelled under the wise leadership of the respected and beloved leader clearly shows us that one must accept the leadership of the great leader for the revolution to advance formidably and achieve shining victory.

In the revolutionary struggle of the working class, the leader plays a decisive role and the wise leadership of the leader is a decisive pledge of revolutionary victory

The great leader, Comrade Kim Kil-song, taught as follows:

"Correct leadership of the leader is an important pledge of victory for the revolutionary struggle and construction work." ("Compendium of the Great Leader Comrade Kim Il-song's Visit Abroad," pp 66-67)

The fact that the leadership of an accomplished leader of the working class is a decisive pledge of victory for the revolutionary struggle and construction work is an immutable truth proven beyond shadow of a doubt through the international communist movement and the activities of our revolution.

The history of the international communist movement exceeding a half century clearly shows us that when the working class and popular masses set up an accomplished leader they achieve shining success in revolutionary struggle and construction work and travel the path straight to victory and, conversely, when they do not accept the leadership of a great leader, they face failure and tribulations in revolution and construction.

This is the sum total and main lesson from the historic experience of the international labor and communist movements and our country's communist movement and anti-Japanese national liberation struggle.

Because our people could not have the leadership of the great leader in the past, they had to undergo numerous troubles and tribulations in revolutionary struggle.

For quite some time, our people had been waging a just military struggle against the Japanese imperialist aggressors and had been carrying on an independent armed forces campaign and moved ahead with the patriotic cultural enlightenment movement and demonstrations of opposition.

Because our people's struggle was not carried on ceaselessly against the aggressors or they were unable to possess a precise struggle line or receive proper leadership, they were severely trampled and suffered dire failure at such times.

While the people were wandering around seeking a precise path of struggle, at that time, the nationalists and early communists who claimed to be carrying on the Korean national liberation movement were speaking nonsense without any firm or settled conviction and thereby only caused confusion in the revolutionary struggle.

Those people who claimed to be "leading," left the masses behind and gathered themselves together merely to sit down to study semantics and squabble and they devoted themselves solely to factional strife without any connection with the revolution. In the midst of such confusion, our people were further confused and the road to revolution was further distorted.

During those dark days of trials upon trials, our people longed for a great leader different from them and were waiting with bated breath for the appearance of an accomplished leader.

Having a great leader who would save the destiny of the nation which had succumbed to dire distress and who would lead the faltering revolution to victory was the ardent hope of the whole race and the urgent demand of our revolution.

This epochal yearning and desire of our people was brilliantly realized through the appearance of the respected and beloved leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, at the frontier of revolution.

From the time our people respectfully followed the great leader at the forefront of the Korean revolution, they were able to go forth vigorously along the highway of victory for the first time.

Indeed, the respected and beloved Comrade Kim Il-song is the great leader whom our people have welcomed and highly esteemed for the first time in their thousands of years of history.

Through a long period of revolutionary action and living experience stemming from the time they revered the great leader as the sun of the nation up till today, our people felt deep in their hearts that it is only when they received the leadership of an accomplished leader could they gain victory in revolutionary struggle. This has become the iron-clad conviction and unshakeable revolutionary will deeply rooted in each and every heart of our people.

For the leadership of an accomplished leader to become a decisive pledge of revolutionary victory it is important, above all, that the leader create an accurate guiding idea of revolution and clearly point out the path of struggle to the people.

The possession of a correct guiding idea is one of the cardinal questions for victory in revolution and construction.

Without a precise guiding idea which clarifies the path of revolution, one is like a ship sailing without a compass, unable to find the way to go, groping in the dark, ultimately unable to achieve victory in the revolutionary struggle.

The popular masses need a scientific idea and theory of revolution to be able to clearly see the day of historic progress, find the straight road of struggle and go on bravely fighting through all ordeals without wavering with steadfast confidence in revolutionary victory.

The historic undertaking of creating a guiding idea of revolution is accomplished through an accomplished leader of the working class.

A leader of the working class gives the most correct revolutionary world outlook and scientific strategy and tactics and methodology of revolution to the working class and working popular masses by accurately reflecting the demands of revolution and aspirations of the popular masses and creating a revolutionary idea representative of the era. Accordingly, the working class and working popular masses are able to be profoundly aware of their historic mission and vigorously wage their willful goal, the struggle for victory in the cause of revolution.

In the administrative process of directing the revolution and construction, the leader gives a scientific reply to the new theoretical and practical questions arising in revolution and construction by accurately reflecting the demands of revolutionary progress, normalizing the experience of revolutionary action and ceaselessly developing and enriching revolutionary ideology and theory.

The working class and working popular masses must wage a revolutionary struggle and perform construction work with the revolutionary ideology of the leader as their one and only guideline in order to be able to go about successfully building socialism and communism without the slightest deviation.

For the leadership of the great leader to become a decisive pledge of revolutionary victory it is necessary that the leader be conscious of and organize the masses, bind them strongly into a single political force and vigorously organize and mobilize them for revolution and construction.

Making one conscious of and organizing the masses is one important condition for revolutionary victory.

The ones who create history and develop society are the working popular masses. This by no means signifies, however, that the popular masses participate in the revolutionary struggle and are able to display great strength spontaneously.

When the popular masses are armed with a revolutionary consciousness and become an organized force they are able to become a veritable mainstay of revolution for reforming an antiquated society, becoming a motive force to develop society and becoming a valuable creator of a new history.

The higher the level of consciousness of the popular masses who are participating in any revolutionary movement whatsoever and the more they are bound together organizationally the more they are able to become a great revolutionary force.

The work of making the popular masses aware class-wise, and arming them with a revolutionary ideology, of uniting them organizationally and leading them to the revolutionary struggle is accomplished through an accomplished leader of the working class.

A leader of the working class enables them to fight adamantly till the end with a steadfast revolutionary conviction by imbuing the masses with a class consciousness and a consciousness of national autonomy and arming them with the principles and methodology of revolution.

A leader must raise a guiding nucleus of revolution in the midst of struggle, muster revolutionary organizations and bind the broad masses together through them and adamantly hang on to the political and ideological unity and cohesion of the revolutionary rank and file in the face of all sorts of divisive and destructive machinations of the class enemies and opportunists.

The strength of the masses lies in cohesion and cohesion becomes very firm and powerful when all the working popular masses are tightly bound together in the fold of the leader founded on a single ideology, the revolutionary ideology of the leader. The strength of the popular masses firmly centered around the leader cannot be shattered by anything at all.

That the leadership of an accomplished leader can become a decisive pledge of revolutionary victory is due to its directing the struggle of the popular masses along the highway of victory through the leader taking hold of and directing the entire process of revolution and construction in a unified manner.

"Revolution is complicated and requires the art of scientific leadership." (Kim Il-song Selected Works, Vol 4, Second Edition, p 331)

The revolutionary struggle of the working class is a very arduous and rugged, most complex and drastic struggle. Consequently, the revolutionary struggle of the working class requires a high level of scientific and matured strategic and tactical guidance and a capable and refined art of leadership.

Such an art of strategic and tactical guidance and leadership can be provided solely by an accomplished leader of the working class.

The leader of the working class presents a correct direction and method of struggle based on an accurate analysis and evaluation of the domestic and foreign situation and relationships of class forces and he takes strong control of all the fronts of revolution and construction and leads them in a unified manner to the realization of a single goal.

A leader leads the revolution and construction along a straight path by calculating ahead of time the pitfalls and ordeals he will meet up with in the advancement of the revolution and avoiding failure, trials and tribulations. Furthermore, he always presents an accurate struggle program in harmony with the concrete situation, organizes and mobilizes the masses with his skilled method of leadership and refined guidance skills and expands and develops the success of revolution and construction to the maximum.

It is only through the wise leadership of a leader that the working class and working popular masses can confidently move forward with a clear direction and goal, successfully overcome all kinds of pitfalls and trials and achieve victory for the revolution.

Indeed, the leader of the working class is the supreme head of the revolution, the center of unity and cohesion and the guide who leads the working popular masses to revolutionary victory.

It is only through a leader that the revolutionary cause of the working class can be initiated and set on the road to victory and it can be brought to completion solely under the leadership of the leader. Without the leadership of the leader, one could not even think of victory for the revolutionary struggle and construction.

Thus, the unitary leadership of the leader in revolution and construction is the basic condition and decisive pledge which governs the victorious advance of the revolutionary movement.

The glorious history of struggle of over half a century which our people travelled following the wise leadership of the respected and beloved leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, is clear proof that one must accept the leadership of a great leader to be capable of victory in the revolutionary struggle and construction.

The journey of struggle which our people have travelled under the direction of the great leader was, in fact, a praiseworthy course of vigorously advancing along the highway of victory and glory.

The respected and beloved leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, blazed the right path of our revolution and opened up the wide road along which the Korean revolution could vigorously advance by creating a most precise guiding idea for revolution and construction, the immortal chuche idea and clarifying the chuche oriented line on the Korean revolution based on it.

True communists of Korea who have recently grown up learned a potent lesson in the predecessor nationalist movement and the early communist movement and selected an entirely different path of revolution and possessing a new revolutionary world outlook, they choose an entirely different path of revolution from the members of the nationalist movement and the early communist movement." ("Kim Il-song Selected Works," Vol 7, p 258)

The respected and beloved leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, profoundly analyzed and summarized the serious weaknesses and limitations of our country's nationalist movement and early communist movement, accurately reflected the demands of the era and aspirations of the popular masses, created the immortal chuche idea and, based on it, presented the chuche oriented line on the Korean revolution at Chialun in June of 1930.

The path of the Korean revolution which the great leader pointed out completely departed from all sorts of entrenched theories and concepts and was an entirely new and different path of struggle from that of the members of the nationalist movement and early communist movement. It was the path of chuche which firmly believed in the power of the working popular masses and depended on them to bring about national and class liberation from a position of independence.

Due to the proclamation of the path of the Korean revolution based on the immortal chuche idea, our revolution which had suffered unspeakable agony for a long time was placed back on track with a precise guiding idea and guiding theory and the real path to national liberation opened up in front of our people who had passed through the thorns of agony. Accordingly, our people vigorously advanced along the road of independence which the great leader pointed out.

The great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, formed strong core forces of revolution and wisely brought our revolution to advance victoriously.

The great leader raised a new era of numerous true-blue communists in the flames of the portentous revolutionary struggle, organized the "Down With Imperialism League" which was the first truly communist revolutionary organization in our country, launched the Anti-Imperialist Youth League and the Korean Communist Youth League centered around the Down With Imperialism League members and organized the Korean Revolutionary Army as the first project to prepare for an armed struggle.

The revolutionary forces which the respected and beloved leader raised up himself were clean and pure revolutionary vanguards unstained by the various and sundry evils of nationalism and the filth of factionalist flunkeyism and the steadfast key forces of communism who would carry the Korean revolution on their shoulders. The communists of the new era were true communist revolutionaries of the chuche type who went forth sincerely holding the great leader in high esteem, cherishing the leadership of the leader in their hearts.

The great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, bound the broad workers, peasants and patriotic youth together with the newly matured young communists as the organizational framework, founded the anti-Japanese peoples guerrilla band and victoriously led the armed struggle organized against the Japanese imperialists.

As a struggle with the objective of driving out the foreign imperialist aggressors from the colonial semi-feudal society and achieving national and class liberation, the anti-Japanese armed struggle which developed our people's national liberation struggle and communist movement to a new high stage, was an unprecedentedly severe revolutionary war.

Forced to get all they needed by themselves, including weapons, ammunition, food, etc, without getting logistics support from the state nor the support of conventional armed forces, our people had to fight head on with a large Japanese imperialist army of one million armed to the teeth and they had to make their own line and method of struggle, strategy and tactics of revolution.

It was no mean feat to declare an armed struggle with the Japanese imperialist brigands who were in a frenzy to conquer the world and carry this struggle to victory in the dire straits of receiving no support except for the support of the working popular masses.

It was only the respected and beloved leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, who possesses great strategy and tactics, superb commanding skill, incomparable stamina and a will of steel who could declare such a difficult colonial national liberation war and lead it to shining victory.

The anti-Japanese armed struggle had to overcome numerous obstacles and hardships and had to undergo devastating ordeals from its inception.

The rugged and bumpy barriers and trials blocking the road to the arduous anti-Japanese armed struggle were victoriously overcome through the wise leadership of the great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, who was endowed with excellent leadership ability and our people's anti-Japanese war advanced in leaps and bounds.

It was because the great leader pushed aside all dangers, stood in the front ranks and wisely led them, that the struggle full of suffering which began in Ando and progressed to Rohak Mountain was able to gain victory, that life and death negotiations were successfully held between commander Wi and O Ui-song and that the crazy disturbance caused by the anti-"Democratic Life Association" struggle which the national exclusionists and factional flunkeyists carried on were nipped in the bud and the revolution was able to move forward without interruption.

The great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, wisely led the "march of suffering" which broke out of the deep forests with bayonets drawn and advanced into the fatherland, caused our revolution to be endlessly furthered, held aloft the red banner of revolution even in the midst of an astonishing world debacle in the first half of the 1940's, waged the war which gave the coup de grace to the brigand Japanese imperialists and finally brought the historic cause of national liberation to shining fruition.

The great victory in the heroic anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle was the precious fruit of the wise leadership of the respected and beloved leader, Comrade Kim Il-song. The wise leadership of the great leader was the source of strength which achieved victory in the strenuous anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle and the decisive cause which struck down the most vile, barbarous Japanese imperialist aggressors.

The respected and beloved leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, blazed the trail of victory for the Korean revolution in the process of managing the indefatiguable anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle to great victory and established glorious revolutionary traditions which were the deep-set and strong historic roots enabling our revolution to proceed without slackening for ever and ever.

The shining revolutionary traditions which the great leader brought about in the flames of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle became the precious bas-relief for making our revolution vigorously move ahead after the liberation and the Korean revolution ceaselessly advanced along the highway of victory and glory based on these deep roots.

"The Korean communists recovered the national autonomy which the Japanese imperialists had snatched away, achieved independence for the country and opened up the wide road to building a new society by leading the anti-Japanese revolution to victory." (Ibid., p 261)

It was as a result of the respected and beloved leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, leading the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle to shining victory and liberating the fatherland that our people who had been forced into colonial servitude in the morass of national calamity for a long period, were able to recover the autonomy of the nation, achieve independence for the country and the wide road leading to the construction of a prosperous new society on liberated Korean soil began to open up.

Indeed, the respected and beloved leader, Comrade Kim Il-song is the paramount patriot and constructive hero who blazed the clear road ahead for the Korean revolution, led the arduous anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle to great victory and achieved the historic cause of fatherland liberation.

The great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, who took up the cause of national liberation, wisely directed the difficult and complex construction of a new democratic Korea, socialism and communism and brought along epochal transformations and national prosperity to this land.

The revolutionary spirit of our people who welcomed liberation was as high as an erupting volcano but the traitors of the revolution and all sorts of rabble and ruffians crept in calling themselves "patriots" and "revolutionaries" babbling about the "line" of their own crowd thereby creating a very confused situation and our people were thus in a quandary as to how to act and what to do to build a powerful, autonomous and independent state.

The great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, did not ease the exhaustion he had accumulated over the long, drawn out and arduous days against Japan but clearly pointed out with his prodigious perspicacity the proper road for liberated Korea to follow, magnificently performed the vast project of founding the party immediately, setting up a people's government and building a regular revolutionary armed force and caused a democratic socio-economic reformation to be accomplished successfully within a very short period. Accordingly, in our country, an anti-imperialist, anti-feudal democratic revolution was brilliantly accomplished, an historic transformation moving toward socialism was brought about and the northern half of the republic was more strongly transformed into a powerful citadel of the Korean revolution.

The fatherland liberation war was a portentous revolutionary war against the combined forces of imperialism headed by the archfiend of world reaction, U.S. imperialism. It was a drastic ordeal determining the fate of life or death for our party and people.

The enemies prattled that "victory was just around the corner" and hundreds of millions of sympathetic persons worried about the fate of our people and the eyes of the world were fixed on our people engaged in battle.

Our people tweaked the proud noses of the U.S. imperialists and achieved a great victory in the fatherland liberation war by heroically fighting without the slightest hesitation in the face of the severe ordeal of war.

Our people, a people of a small country who had been liberated for barely five years, vanquished the U.S. imperialists, the most wicked in the world. The fact that this historic victory was gained was entirely the precious fruit of the wise leadership of the great military strategist and invincible paragon of steel, the respected and beloved leader, Comrade Kim Il-song.

By leading the most vicious fatherland liberation war to shining victory, the great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, firmly defended the freedom and independence of the fatherland, added luster to the nation's prestige throughout the whole world, opened up the advent of downfall for U.S. imperialism which had boasted as being the "strongest" in the world and unfolded a new apex of anti-imperialist, anti-U.S. struggle.

The great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, possessed the steadfast conviction and will of steel that even in the difficult post-war period when everything was destroyed by war, not even one brick was left intact and the domestic and foreign class enemies continued to cause disruption, nothing was impossible to do because the people, the land and the party still existed. He vigorously summoned forth the entire party and the whole populace and had them magnificently restore the devastated national economy and establish a firmer economic base for the country in a short period of time.

The great leader travelled along the rugged path which no one had walked before, wisely organized and mobilized the popular masses and brilliantly accomplished the mammoth task of reforming the means of production socialistically in a period of merely 4 to 5 years and he created the unprecedented miracle of accomplishing the undertaking of industrialization in a short period of 14 years which it took others centuries to accomplish.

The great leader unfolded the new road for colonial and semi-colonial countries to take toward socialism, reformed society, nature and man and thereby opened up a new age of enlightenment in all spheres such as politics, economics, ideology, morality, education and technology by innovatively accomplishing the difficult and complex socialist revolution and socialist construction.

Indeed, thanks to the accomplished and refined leadership of the great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, our country which had fallen far behind the rest of the world and had everything destroyed by war is showing forth its prestige as a socialist power today possessing a legitimate autonomy, a powerful self-sufficient national economy, shining national culture and independent national defense and our people who had been trampled down and reviled in the past became a powerful and majestic people.

All the victories which our people gained in the struggle for national liberation and building socialism and communism while clearing away the most rugged path in present-day history were entirely the shining fruit of the great leader's wise leadership.

In the entire process of bringing revolution to victory, the great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, always steadfastly adhered to the chuche oriented position, set up all the lines and policies in accordance with the actuality of our country and the interests of the people without being tied to any previously established experience or established practice, boldly presented them and forthrightly pushed them forward.

The great leader not only saw clearly into the present and near future but also far into the distant future with his extraordinary perspicacity and scientific prognosis, presented a precise revolutionary line and struggle methodology, definitive struggle objectives and slogans at every stage and every period of revolutionary development and vigorously motivated and aroused the popular masses to endless new victories.

The respected and beloved leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, brought our revolution along the highway of endless victories and glory by countering all the barriers he faced with his strong will and extraordinary revolutionary initiative which were unwavering when battered by thunder and lightning and which never succumbed in the midst of any adversity, thereby changing calamity to benefit, adversity to advantage.

The great leader always firmly trusted in the strength and wisdom of the popular masses, set them in motion to expedite the revolution and construction and accomplished all the difficult and mammoth tasks through the mass movement method.

Indeed, it was due to the accomplished and refined leadership of the great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, that our revolution was always able to advance and gain victory in such an arduous and complex struggle.

One could not even think of all our people's victories, prestige, happiness and pride without the wise leadership of the great leader.

Moreover, revolutionary peoples of the world are filled with admiration for the shining reality unfolding in our country under the wise leadership of the great leader, highly esteem the respected and beloved leader as the "great ideological theorist, consummate artist of leadership" and tender sentiments of heartfelt reverence and respect to the leader.

It is because we had the great leader with us that just as in the past and present of our revolution full of glory, our people have a brighter future and the ultimate victory of the Korean revolution lies ahead when we follow the path which the great leader indicates to us.

The might of our people who are upholding the wise leadership of the great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, and who are following the guidance of the party is infinite and we can expect only victory and glory in our road ahead.

THE LINE OF ANTI-IMPERIALIST ANTI-FEUDAL DEMOCRATIC REVOLUTION WHICH OPENED UP A NEW ROAD OF NATIONAL LIBERATION AND CLASS LIBERATION

[Article by Chon Mun-sop]

[Text] The great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, convened the historic Chialun Conference in June 1930, a dark period of Japanese imperialist colonialist rule and clearly pointed out the correct path of Korean revolution for the first time.

By brilliantly embodying the immortal chuche idea and presenting the line of the anti-imperialist, anti-feudal democratic revolution at the Chialun Conference, the great leader crushed the brigand Japanese imperialists and all kinds of reactionaries who clung to them and blazed the new path for achieving national and class liberation.

The presentation of the line of anti-imperialist, anti-feudal democratic revolution was a revolutionary event which clarified the correct way for raising up our people's anti-Japanese national liberation struggle to a new high level and successfully solving the national and class inconsistencies in our country simultaneously.

It was because the great leader presented the line on the anti-imperialist, anti-feudal democratic revolution and wisely organized and directed the struggle to implement it that our people were able to look forward to a new dawn of national liberation and fight bravely with a conviction of certain victory and with an indomitable fighting spirit, ultimately vanquish the Japanese imperialist brigands who had dreamed of world conquest and they were able to brilliantly realize the historic cause of national and class liberation.

The propriety and tremendous vitality of the line of anti-imperialist, anti-feudal democratic revolution which the great leader clarified was wholly proven through our people's revolutionary struggle for a protracted period.

All our party members and workers who are celebrating the 50th anniversary of the historic Chialun Conference today hold in high esteem the immortal revolutionary feats of the great leader which he performed before the eyes of the country, the people, history and mankind itself, through his superb ideological theory and revolutionary action and they are reflecting with heartfelt emotion on the praiseworthy journey of struggle for the national liberation against imperialism in which they had gained victory and moved forward under the revolutionary banner of the chuche idea.

The establishment of a correct revolutionary line, strategy and tactics based on a scientific guiding idea is the certain requirement of revolutionary struggle and the basic condition for providing victorious advancement. This becomes an even more important requirement the more the process of social change becomes more radical and the more the popular masses participate in revolutionary struggle.

If the party of the working class and the communists are to bring revolutionary struggle along the straight and narrow path they must, above all, define the nature of revolution properly.

They must accurately define the nature of revolution to be able to formulate scientific strategy and tactics and confidently organize and mobilize the popular masses for revolutionary struggle based on this.

In as much as the socio-historical conditions and circumstances are different in each nation where revolution is occurring, delineating the nature of revolution is a matter of principle in which the party of the working class and communists must make their determination based on the concrete reality of their own country.

The perfunctory Marxists and vacillating opportunists in the past, however, did not view the concrete reality of our country properly but called the Korean revolution a "bourgeois revolution" or "socialist revolution" and inflicted considerable harm on the revolution.

The very ponderous and major task of properly defining the nature of revolution and establishing a chuche oriented revolutionary line and scientific strategy and tactics based on this lies before the young communists of the new era who will bear the Korean revolution on their shoulders.

The great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, who took upon himself the destiny of the fatherland and people and set out on the path of revolution early on, brilliantly completed the task which revolutionary action presented by profoundly mastering the concrete reality of our country which had succumbed to the fate of a full-fledged colony of Japanese imperialism and was controlled by the medieval feudal agricultural relationships and by defining the nature of the Korean revolution as an anti-imperialist, anti-feudal democratic revolution.

"The accomplishment of the task of the anti-imperialist revolution against Japanese imperialism and the task of the anti-feudal revolution against the feudal landlords who depended on the Japanese imperialists is the urgent demand of our people and these two revolutionary tasks are closely connected to each other. Consequently, the basic duty of the Korean revolution consists in dealing with Japanese imperialism, disposing with all feudal relationships along with achieving independence for Korea and making democracy a reality.

"Having started with the basic duty of the Korean revolution, the nature of the Korean revolution at the present stage has become an anti-imperialist, anti-feudal democratic revolution." ("Kim Il-song Selected Works," Vol 1, pp 7-8)

As a result of the great leader's defining of the nature of the Korean revolution as an anti-imperialist, anti-feudal democratic revolution based on the basic duties of our revolution and the social and class relationships which had arisen, the nature of revolution which our people must accomplish was clearly delineated for the first time.

The line on the anti-imperialist, anti-feudal democratic revolution which the great leader presented is above all the revolutionary line which clarified the shape of a new social revolution which is capable of correctly realizing the historic cause of national and class liberation for our people who had suffered under the oppression of the Japanese imperialist aggressors.

In the past, our country had a whole series of fundamental peculiarities different from feudalist and capitalist societies in social structure due to the aggression and rapacity of the Japanese imperialists.

As a colony of Japanese imperialism, our country was a backward colonial and feudal society in which capitalist development was severely limited and feudalistic means of production were in control.

In our country which had deteriorated to a complete colony of the Japanese imperialists, the conflict was very acute between two camps comprising the Japanese imperialists and the landlords, capitalists, pro-Japanese and national traitors who depended on them on the one side and the workers, peasants, young students, intellectuals, small landowning class and well-meaning national capitalists on the other side.

The Japanese imperialists suppressed the normal development of our country's national industry in order to extract a monopolistic high rate of profit and, at the same time, protected and developed a subsidiary capitalism favorable to their colonial rule and built a socio-economic base of colonial rule by maintaining the status quo in the feudalistic system of exploitation in the countryside and protecting the interests of the landlord class.

The Japanese imperialists put a tournequet on the basic pulse of the economy and perpetrated unlimited colonial exploitation and used all sorts of ways and means to make our country into their colony and our people into their slaves for ever.

The Japanese colonial rule was indeed the root of all the suffering the Korean people were subjected to and the source of all social calamities in our country.

Our people just had to extricate themselves from their abject fate as dispossessed slaves.

Our people had to crush the Japanese imperialist aggressor forces which were the prime objective of the Korean revolution in order to extricate themselves from their abject fate as dispossessed slaves and establish a powerful, developed, independent and autonomous state.

Along with the Japanese imperialists, the pro-Japanese landlords, subjugated capitalists, national traitors, pro-Japanese bureaucrats who were cravely beholden to them and served them as faithful lackeys were also the objective of the Korean revolution. These people actively aided the colonial rule of the Japanese imperialists over Korea, joined forces with them, suppressed and exploited the popular masses and maliciously blocked the anti-Japanese struggle of the popular masses. They could not ignore these people if they were to carry out the anti-Japanese national liberation struggle successfully nor could they open up the path of democratic development of the country.

On the one hand, the workers and peasants were forced to undergo the fate of colonial enslavement due to the severe oppression and exploitation and bestial suppression of the Japanese imperialists and domestic reactionaries and the small landowner class and national capitalists were ruined more every day and the broad social strata suffered national ridicule and discrimination as well. The broad anti-imperialist forces composed of workers, peasants, young students, intellectuals, small landowning class, conscientious capitalists and religious personages took part in the struggle to deal with the Japanese imperialists and achieve national independence.

All of these anti-Japanese patriotic forces had to be mobilized to fight against the Japanese imperialists and their lackeys, the landlords, capitalists, pro-Japanese and national traitors to be able to achieve national independence and social liberation of the workers.

Consequently, the basic duty of the revolution which our country faced at the time was accomplishing the task of the anti-feudal democratic revolution for the purpose of disposing of feudal relationships and opening the path to the development of democracy in the country along with overthrowing the colonial rule of the Japanese imperialists and accomplishing the task of the anti-imperialist national liberation revolution.

This two-fold revolutionary duty could be accomplished simultaneously only when settled within a unified interrelationship. Without dealing with the Japanese imperialist aggressors, it would be impossible to liberate the nation from the abject plight of colonial enslavement or dispose of all the feudal relationships. Without eliminating all the feudal relationships it would be impossible to liberate the peasants from medieval colonial enslavement or successfully accomplish the task of the anti-imperialist national liberation.

This was a revolutionary task which had to be distinguished from the basic task of the erstwhile bourgeois revolution and the socialist revolution.

The revolution which was to be accomplished in our country had to become an anti-imperialist, anti-feudal democratic revolution which was neither a bourgeois revolution nor a socialist revolution whether considered from the viewpoint of the particular nature of the social class inter-relationships or from the viewpoint of the basic duty of revolution.

Other countries, the majority of which had been colonies or semi-colonies like our country in the past, had been unable to travel the road of normal capitalist development due to foreign imperialist aggression thereby turning into colonial semi-feudal societies which were neither feudal nor capitalist.

The tasks of national and class liberation had to be carried out together in those countries. This demonstrates that the anti-imperialist, anti-feudal democratic revolution is the form of revolution which must be carried out in order for the majority of those countries to pass over into socialism.

The anti-imperialist, anti-feudal democratic revolution is the most direct path for national and class liberation. It is only when they travel this path that our people would be able to form a vast anti-Japanese patriotic force, vanquish the Japanese imperialist aggressors and successfully achieve the independence and social liberation of the country.

The line on the anti-imperialist, anti-feudal democratic revolution and the programs to realize it which the great leader clearly presented indicate the route of struggle and the concrete method for independently and thoroughly achieving the tasks of national and class liberation.

"We cannot leap over a stage of revolutionary progress but must establish the correct strategy and tactics to accomplish the task we meet at the present state of revolution." (Ibid., p 335)

In as much as the anti-imperialist, anti-feudal democratic revolution is a new form of social revolution, strategic and tactical lines must be newly derived to accomplish it. Along with the nature of revolution, the proper strategy and tactics for successfully accomplishing the basic duty of revolution must be revealed if the struggle for national and class liberation is to be adamantly waged without the slightest deviation or difficulty.

The great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, clearly delineated the route of struggle and scientific means for successfully accomplishing the tasks of anti-imperialist class liberation and anti-feudal democratic revolution based on his scientific analysis of the socio-economic structure of the colonial semi-feudal society and of the class relationships, the attitude toward the particular situation of each class and on the revolution.

The great leader taught that in order to achieve national and class liberation one must, above all, crush the Japanese imperialists, and bring about liberation of the fatherland, establish popular rule and put an overall democratic reform into effect. If we are to accomplish this, we must vigorously wage an armed struggle and at the same time tightly form the vast anti-Japanese patriotic forces into a revolutionary band and strike down the Japanese imperialist aggressors and those who depend on them, the landlords, subservient capitalists, pro-Japanese and national traitors by means of a pan-national struggle.

All the lines and programs which the great leader proposed such as the line of armed struggle, the strategic program concerning formation of a revolutionary force, the line on the peoples revolutionary government, the democratic reform program, were the most scientific and revolutionary lines and programs capable of successfully solving the complicated national and class conflict which resulted from the socio-historic conditions of a colonial semi-feudal society. These lines and programs made it possible for the responsibility and role of the working popular masses who are those directly responsible for the revolutionary struggle to be ceaselessly heightened and the historic tasks of national and class liberation to be successfully accomplished through their power.

An important facet of the strategy and tactics which the great leader clarified for accomplishing the anti-imperialist, anti-feudal democratic revolution was the strategic program on the formation of revolutionary forces.

The anti-imperialist, anti-feudal democratic revolution was by nature a revolution in which the broad anti-imperialist and patriotic democratic forces participated under the leadership of the working class.

Along with tightly binding all the classes and strata which possess the capacity for benefit or harm for the revolution into a single entity, the revolutionary forces must be properly organized with the aim of isolating and weakening the enemy to the maximum extent in order to achieve a decisive victory in the revolutionary struggle.

The great leader simultaneously organized the basic constituents of society, the workers and peasants, formed a strike force of revolution and presented the strategic line on establishing and strongly binding the support forces of revolution together.

The great leader pointed out the path for assuring the decisive superiority of revolutionary forces over counter-revolutionary forces and independently carrying out the revolutionary struggle relying on the chuche oriented revolutionary forces particularly through his presentation of the innovative line on forming the workers and peasants into a strike force of revolution and organizing a widespread national unification front.

The strategic line to which the party of the working class must adhere in the formation of a revolutionary force is to establish and find together the workers and peasants under party leadership, form them into a strong strike force of revolution, consolidate the vast anti-imperialist patriotic forces and make all the revolutionary forces into a single political force.

Besides the participation of the oppressed and exploited broad popular masses in the revolutionary struggle under the leadership of the party, one of the key questions is the correct delineation of the form of the ruling power in conformity with the interests of revolution and the aspirations and demands of the masses.

The form of ruling power which was completely consonant with the requirement of the anti-imperialist, anti-feudal democratic revolution was a popular democratic power which was included in the concept of proletarian ruling power, a democratic political power directed by the working class.

This ruling power is a form of political power which can thoroughly accomplish the revolutionary task objectively and as predicted in accordance with the class requirements of the working class at the level of the anti-imperialist anti-feudal democratic revolution. This ruling power is a power which is able to protect the interests of the broad popular masses, establish and bind them together into a single revolutionary force and successfully assure the transition from a democratic revolution to a socialist revolution.

In as much as they are complete reflections of the legitimate demands of revolutionary struggle and social interrelationships of the colonial semi-feudal society, all the lines and programs for the accomplishment of the anti-imperialist, anti-feudal democratic revolution were the correct strategy and tactics of revolutionary struggle which are completely consonant with the aspirations and demands of the people and can easily assimilate them.

The key questions arising in the struggle for national and class liberation were scientifically explained through the elucidation of the revolutionary line, strategy and tactics of the line on the anti-imperialist, anti-feudal democratic revolution which clarified the road of struggle for the broad working masses including the working class.

The line on the anti-imperialist, anti-feudal democratic revolution is also the revolutionary line which established ample pre-conditions for the stage of democratic revolution and enabled it to pass from a colonial semi-feudal society directly over to socialism.

As the great leader has taught, the revolution does not cease when the task of the anti-imperialist, anti-feudal revolution is accomplished. When communists accomplish the anti-imperialist, anti-feudal democratic revolution, they must continue the revolution and build a socialist communist paradise without oppression or exploitation.

After the democratic revolution is accomplished, one must continue the revolution and proceed to the socialist revolution without delay in order to realize the historic cause of building socialism and communism. This must occur so as to be able to continue to summon a high degree of revolutionary zeal from the workers who are encouraged through the anti-imperialist, anti-feudal democratic revolution, consolidate and develop the successes already achieved and brilliantly proceed to accomplish the task of socialist revolution based on this.

To pass over to the socialist revolution without a hitch, it is important to accomplish the tasks of the anti-imperialist and anti-feudal revolution thoroughly in the stage of democratic revolution under the leadership of the working class.

The anti-imperialist, anti-feudal democratic revolution is the revolution of colonial national liberation led by the working class. It is only the working class alone which can thoroughly speak for the beneficial or harmful matters of the working popular masses from their own class vantage point and position, bind all classes and strata into a single unit and accomplish the task of the anti-imperialist, anti-feudal revolution to the end.

Favorable social conditions for the working class to go over into the socialist revolution must be established in the process of accomplishing the anti-imperialist, anti-feudal democratic revolution. The conditions for the peoples government directed by the working class to be established, for having its political foundation strengthened and developed into a government of the dictatorship of the proletariat are established over the demise of colonial rule.

In the economic construction sphere, the possibility for reforming the means of production socialistically and building an independent national economy arises through the establishment of a new popular democratic socio-economic system in place of the colonial semi-feudal socio-economic system.

When the anti-imperialist, anti-feudal democratic revolution is thoroughly accomplished, the politico-economic base of the Japanese imperialist aggressor forces and their lackeys is disposed of, the unity and cohesion of the broad revolutionary forces are attained based on the worker-peasant league led by the working class and the decisive superiority of revolutionary forces over the counter-revolutionary forces is assured.

Such social conditions which have been established through the anti-imperialist, anti-feudal democratic revolution comprise a firm foundation for consolidating and developing a popular democratic system and proceeding to accomplish the task of the socialist revolution.

The line on the anti-imperialist, anti-feudal democratic revolution which the great leader presented was a revolutionary line which made it possible to pass over to the socialist revolution smoothly in our country which had been unable to travel the path of normal capitalist development due to the policy of colonial subjugation by the Japanese imperialist and without undergoing the agony of capitalism.

Indeed, the line on the anti-imperialist, anti-feudal democratic revolution which brilliantly embodied the immortal chuche idea is the revolutionary line which blazed the straight and narrow trail by which our people, who had become mere pawns of history, outlawed from history itself, could become masters of their own destiny, realize national and class liberation through their own power and move toward socialism.

The line on the anti-imperialist, anti-feudal democratic revolution which the great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, presented possesses tremendous theoretical and practical significance as a powerful weapon of struggle which our people took up in their own hands when they had been groaning under the colonial burden of the Japanese imperialists.

This line became the revolutionary banner for bringing the historic cause of national and class revolution to victory by, above all, clearly elucidating the path of struggle for our people against the Japanese imperialists.

Being a line of revolutionary struggle which brilliantly embodied the immortal chuche idea, the line on the anti-imperialist, anti-feudal democratic revolution requires that all the working masses vigorously wage a revolutionary struggle from the chuche oriented position and attitude toward the Korean revolution.

The factionalist elements who claimed to be "leading" the democratic liberation movement in the past were infected with flunkeyism and thus were not only unable to solve a simple problem clearly but on the contrary created formidable obstacles in the way of revolutionary progress.

The drastic lesson of our country's erstwhile national liberation movement required above all that one possess the chuche oriented position and attitude.

As a result of the presentation of the line on the anti-imperialist, anti-feudal democratic revolution, all sorts of erroneous viewpoints and attitudes of the past concerning the Korean revolution were overcome and the chuche oriented position and viewpoint that our people themselves had to take on the responsibility for the Korean revolution to a large extent and accomplish it through their own power were firmly established.

It was through the clarification of the line on the anti-imperialist, anti-feudal democratic revolution that the Korean revolution was given an accurate revolutionary line, our people recognized the clear route of struggle and scientific struggle methodology for national and class liberation and were able to wage the struggle for national and social liberation more forcefully.

The line on the anti-imperialist, anti-feudal democratic revolution newly developed and further amplified the revolutionary theory of the working class concerning social revolution.

The great leader was the first to delineate the nature of our country's revolution as the anti-imperialist, anti-feudal democratic revolution, and he wholly clarified the responsibilities, tasks, objectives and motives and the method of accomplishment of this revolution and paved the way for a completely new concept for the development of the revolutionary theory of the working class.

The innovative idea and theory concerning the anti-imperiliast, anti-feudal democratic revolution which the great leader unfolded holds tremendous significance for the revolutionary struggle of countries which had been colonies or semi-colonies, systematized the revolutionary theory of the working class and was a precious ideological and theoretical treasure which rendered an immortal contribution in developing and amplifying it anew.

Indeed, the great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, presented a powerful theoretical and practical weapon to our people and colonial oppressed peoples for realizing national and class liberation with their own strength, developed the revolutionary theory of the working class and rendered immortal meritorious service to enriching its treasure through his ingenious presentation of the line on the anti-imperialist, anti-feudal democratic revolution at the Chialun Conference.

The great leader of our party and people, Comrade Kim Il-song, not only accurately reflected the demands of the era and of revolutionary progress, scientifically normalized the experience gained in revolutionary action and created the idea and theory on the anti-imperialist, anti-feudal democratic revolution but also brought the struggle of the popular masses for national and class liberation along the straight and narrow path of victory through his refined leadership at each period and every stage of revolutionary development.

The great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, first of all vigorously organized and expedited the anti-Japanese armed struggle in order to embody the line on the anti-imperialist, anti-feudal democratic revolution in our country.

The great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, taught as follows:

"The anti-Japanese armed struggle was a struggle to repulse foreign aggressors from the colonial semi-feudal society, attain autonomy for the nation and independence for the country, oppose exploitation and oppression and achieve class liberation for the oppressed working masses." ("Kim Il-song Selected Works," Vol 7, p 259)

Foreign aggressive forces and all sorts of reactionaries never leave the stage of history on their own but become desperately more abusive and more maliciously suppress the revolutionary movement of the working class and working masses which only hastens their moment of doom.

The popular masses including the working class had no other recourse but to meet the counter-revolutionary violence of the oppressed classes with revolutionary violence in order to achieve national and class liberation. The more the mass movement took on the shape of violence, the more it gradually had to develop into an organized armed struggle so as to be able to decisively strike down the colonial ruling structure and the counterrevolutionary violence of the imperialist aggressors.

The great leader changed the armed struggle from the historic experience of revolutionary struggle of the working class and the lesson of our people's bloody struggle into a most active and forceful form of struggle for national liberation and presented an excellent program for waging an organized armed struggle against the Japanese imperialists with a permanent revolutionary armed force.

The great leader all by himself brushed away from the flanks all kinds of barriers and adversities which had been present in the preparatory period for organizing and expediting the anti-Japanese armed struggle, organized and performed the preparatory work of the anti-Japanese armed struggle by himself including the organization of the Korean Revolutionary Army and based on this, he proclaimed to the whole world on 25 April 1932 the founding of the Korean Peoples Revolutionary Army, the first revolutionary armed force of the people in our country.

Our country's anti-Japanese national liberation movement was developed to a higher stage of armed struggle through the organization of the anti-Japanese armed ranks which were the constitutive force of the national liberation revolution.

Indeed, the anti-Japanese armed struggle which was organized and carried out under the revolutionary banner of the immortal chuche idea in the darkest period of national suffering under Japanese imperialist colonial rule was a sacred revolutionary struggle for national and class liberation.

As the anti-Japanese armed struggle grew more active, the great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, militarily repulsed the enemy along the Tuman River banks, created a guerrilla base in the form of a liberated district over a wide area, set up a peoples government there and created a shining model for solving the question of government, a basic question encountered in the anti-imperialist, anti-feudal democratic revolution.

Starting by presenting the line on the peoples revolutionary government and strongly arming the guerrilla people with a political ideology and proceeding to direct the over-all work of establishing a peoples revolutionary government in a unified manner, the great leader himself went out to various areas of the guerrilla district and brought this work straight ahead.

As a new form of government which protected the interests of the broad popular masses including the workers and peasants, the peoples revolutionary government which had been established in various areas of the guerrilla district under the wise guidance of the great leader was a most revolutionary and populist government capable of vigorously organizing and mobilizing the masses for the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle.

The peoples revolutionary government which had been established in the guerrilla district on the banks of the Tuman River was also a prototype of state government eventually to be established in the liberated fatherland.

After establishing the peoples revolutionary government, the great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, organized and directed the work of enforcing over-all democratic reform in the guerrilla districts.

Enacting democratic reform is the righteous requirement of an anti-imperialist, anti-feudal democratic revolution and the most urgent task which a peoples government has to accomplish.

Under the slogan, "land to the peasants who cultivate it," the great leader proposed the revolutionary principle of seizing the land of the Japanese imperialists and their sympathizing landlords without recompense and distributing it for free to the peasants who had little or no land and issued instructions concerning the concrete problems presented in the enactment of land reform.

It was through the successful realization of land reform that the epochal aspirations of the guerrilla district peasants who had been liberated from the exploitation of the Japanese imperialists and landlords were realized and they were able to carry out the anti-Japanese struggle more vigorously due to their heightened revolutionary zeal.

The great leader caused a whole series of democratic reforms to be enacted in the industrial sphere, as well, subsequent to his enactment of land reform.

Accordingly, the lumber mills and gold mines of the Japanese imperialists and their stooges which had been within the guerrilla district were seized and placed in the hands of the peoples revolutionary government, the workers reaped the benefits of an eight hour work system as a matter of government policy, the antiquated tax system was abolished and a populist tax system was enacted. Furthermore, male-female equal rights, a free compulsory education system and a system of free medical care were enacted.

Thanks to all the democratic reforms and policies which the great leader established, the people in the guerrilla district who had succumbed as they did to exploitation and oppression for such a long time became the masters of everything, worked and studied to their hearts content and enjoyed a new life in a new world devoid of the Japanese imperialist rascals, landlords or capitalists.

All the democratic reforms and policies which were enacted in the guerrilla district on the Tuman River banks under the wise leadership of the great leader were the model for most brilliantly settling the requirements of socio-economic reform encountered in the stage of the anti-imperialist, anti-feudal democratic revolution and the precious exemplar of democratic reform to be enacted in the liberated fatherland in the future.

The guerrilla base-liberated district was more strongly outfitted as a powerful bastion of our revolution through the establishment of the peoples revolutionary government, a truly populist government in the guerrilla district on the banks of the Tuman River.

The great leader presented the program for bringing the anti-Japanese national liberation struggle to new heights based on the valuable successes and experience already gained, expanded the anti-Japanese armed struggle and had the movement of the anti-Japanese national unification front carried on more vigorously.

Properly organizing the revolutionary forces is a strategic question which the party of the working class and the communists must firmly deal with thoroughout the whole period of the anti-imperialist, anti-feudal democratic revolution.

At the historic Namhodu Conference, the great leader presented the revolutionary program for developing the unification front movement to a new high stage based on the success and experience gained in the first half of the 1930's.

In the arduous days of the anti-Japanese bloody battle ensuing from Namhodu to Tonggang, the great leader formulated the program, bylaws and inaugural announcements of the anti-Japanese national unification front organization himself and as soon as all the preparatory work had been performed he proclaimed to the whole world the founding of the fatherland liberation conference as a permanent anti-Japanese national unification front organization on 5 May 1936.

As a result of the founding of the fatherland liberation conference, the broad patriotic forces including the working class were able to more firmly tie together in the fold of the sun of the nation, the great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, the main thrust of the revolution and support forces were properly formed and the anti-Japanese national liberation struggle was able to be more vigorously waged on a nationwide scale.

Our people were able to achieve the historic cause of fatherland liberation brilliantly as a result of the great leader's facing awesome trials and all sorts of obstacles head on, brushing them aside in the ranks of revolution and vigorously organizing and guiding the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle along the straight highway of victory.

It is because of the valuable revolutionary feats and ample struggle experience which the great leader of revolution, Comrade Kim Il-song, gained in the period of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle, that our people were able to brilliantly accomplish the task of the anti-imperialist, anti-feudal democratic revolution in the northern half of the republic in a very short period after the liberation in the midst of such difficulties and complications.

All the democratic reforms and the shining success they carried with them including land reform and industrial nationalization which were victoriously enacted in the northern half of the republic under the revolutionary banner of the chuche idea were the precious fruit brought forth by the wise guidance of the great leader and the creative ideology and theory which the respected and beloved leader presented on the anti-imperialist, anti-feudal democratic revolution.

As a result of thoroughly accomplishing the anti-imperialist, anti-feudal revolution, favorable conditions for the socialist revolution were prepared in the northern half of the republic and our people were able to vigorously carry on the struggle to establish a socialist power of independence, self-sufficiency and self-defense.

The revolutionary cause of chuche which was hewn in the forests of Paektu is vigorously advancing today to a new high stage in imbuing the whole society with the chuche idea under the wise guidance of the great leader and the party.

The iron-clad conviction and will embedded in the hearts of our people in the protracted and arduous exercise of struggle from the period of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle extending up to today is to be one hundred percent victorious when they fight bravely following the leadership of the great leader and glorious party.

All party members and workers must hasten the ultimate victory of the revolutionary cause of chuche by binding tightly together in the fold of the great leader and party and continue to achieve revolutionary upswings in socialist construction.

THE ARMED STRUGGLE LINE IS THE REVOLUTIONARY BANNER WHICH DEVELOPED THE ANTI-JAPANESE NATIONAL LIBERATION STRUGGLE TO A HIGH LEVEL

[Article by Ch'oe In-tok]

[Text] In the historic Chialun Conference, the great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, pointed out the route for the Korean revolution and presented the ingenious line on the anti-Japanese armed struggle based on the immortal chuche idea.

The line on the anti-Japanese armed struggle was the most correct revolutionary line for waging an organized armed struggle with one's own power, striking down the Japanese imperialist colonial rule and achieving the liberation of the fatherland.

The great leader's proposal of the revolutionary line of the anti-Japanese armed struggle was a proclamation of revolutionary war announcing the downfall of Japanese imperialism and a solemn announcement of the new revolutionary march of the anti-Japanese national liberation war.

It was through the brilliant embodiment of the line on the anti-Japanese armed struggle under the wise guidance of the respected and beloved leader that our people were able to take up arms under the revolutionary banner of the chuche idea for the first time in history and rush forth into the sacred struggle for the autonomy of the nation and the liberation of the fatherland and the anti-Japanese national liberation struggle was able to develop into its supreme form of an organized armed struggle.

The anti-Japanese armed struggle became the main thrust of our country's anti-Japanese national liberation movement and the chuche oriented line of the all encompassing Korean revolution including the lines on foundation of the party and the anti-Japanese national unification front was brilliantly implemented through this struggle.

The propriety and great vitality of the line on the anti-Japanese armed struggle are brilliantly demonstrated beyond all doubt in our people's national liberation struggle.

Indeed, the line on the anti-Japanese armed struggle was the revolutionary banner which caused our country's anti-Japanese national liberation struggle to develop to a high stage and it was the immortal militant program which illuminated the new path of fatherland liberation.

The proper definition of the form and means of the national liberation struggle is one of the most important questions arising in the revolutionary struggle of the peoples in colonial subjugated states.

For the colonial peoples to recover their lost country and achieve true freedom and independence, they must wage a positive struggle against imperialism with scientific and revolutionary strategy and tactics.

It is when the national liberation struggle is organized and expedited in the appropriate format and methodology of struggle that it can successfully vanquish the imperialist aggressors and become a revolutionary struggle. Consequently, properly delineating the format and methodology of struggle is the most important assurance for victory in the national liberation struggle.

The great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, blazed a new trail for our country's national liberation struggle by ingeniously clarifying the position and role which armed struggle plays in the national liberation struggle and presenting the line on the anti-Japanese armed struggle.

"To accomplish the Korean revolution successfully, it is, above all, necessary to organize and wage an armed struggle against the Japanese imperialists." ("Kim Il-song Selected Works," Vol 1, p 8)

The line on the anti-Japanese armed struggle was the revolutionary line which has brought about the national independence and class liberation of our people in the fastest time by defining the organized armed struggle by a permanent revolutionary armed force as the principal format of the anti-Japanese national liberation struggle and thereby correctly instituting the great leader's guidance of all other types of mass struggles.

In as much as this line is a revolutionary line which was presented based on a scientific scrutiny of the legitimate demands of the lessons from history and the struggle for colonial national liberation, it was the programmatic guideline which the Korean communists and people must always strongly adopt in the struggle to achieve their own national and class liberation.

At the time, our people's anti-Japanese national liberation struggle urgently required that it turn into an armed struggle.

When a class struggle develops in a hostile class society, it necessarily turns into a violent struggle. The more the struggle for class and social liberation of the working class and working popular masses develops and grows stronger, the more the aggressors savagely oppress the revolutionary advances of the colonial peoples. The colonial rule of Korea by the Japanese imperialists is living proof of this fact.

Incomparable in their despotism and savagery, the Japanese imperialist aggressors intensified their colonial despotic rule over the Korean people more than ever before from the end of the 1920's up through the early 1930's. The Japanese imperialists were in a frenzy of war preparations to conquer the continent, transformed our country into a prison without walls overridden with soldiers, military police, civilian police and secret police and they completely crushed all legitimate activities of the Korean people with all types of evil means and force of arms. Under such conditions, it was impossible to drive out the malicious Japanese imperialist aggressors with peaceful demonstrations and strikes.

Thrown into a dreadful plight due to the devastating colonial rule of the Japanese imperialists, the Korean people were forced to choose either lying down to die or rising up to fight. Our people protested the savage despotism of the aggressors, rose up and fought everywhere they were and answered the fascist oppression of the Japanese imperialists with violent attacks. Patriotic peoples including our working class, peasants, young students, etc., gained a more profound realization through their lives that unless they use revolutionary violence they would not avoid the fate of devastating slavery nor could they even possess the right to eke out a bare subsistence.

The anti-Japanese mass struggle of our people who protested the colonial oppression of the Japanese imperialists occurred in force everywhere throughout the country and that struggle gradually took on a violent shape. The state of affairs and our people's heightened revolutionary spirit demanded that the mass struggle which the Korean communists were waging in a violent form be turned into an organized armed struggle.

The great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, deeply mastered the urgent requirements of our country's anti-Japanese national liberation struggle and elucidated the path of organized armed struggle, the line on the anti-Japanese armed struggle.

The line on the anti-Japanese armed struggle which the great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, presented was a scientific revolutionary line which most precisely reflected the legitimate requirements of the development of the colonial national liberation movement.

It is an inevitable requirement for the development of the colonial national liberation movement that the mass movement turn into an organized armed struggle.

An armed struggle is the most activist form of struggle included in the national liberation struggle.

Colonial peoples wage an armed struggle because the imperialists rely wholly on counter-revolutionary violence and mercilessly suppress the revolutionary advances of the popular masses for national independence and autonomy. Imperialism by nature is aggressive and rapacious and it will by no means withdraw from a colony but rather will rely on savage violence to an unprecedented extent. History never heard of any imperialists who willingly gave up their own colonial domination nor of any instance when they did not try to block the revolutionary advances of oppressed nations with counterrevolutionary violence. Under the circumstances in which the imperialists savagely oppress and crush revolutionary movements with counterrevolutionary violence, colonial peoples certainly cannot sit by and be sacrificed.

As the great leader has taught, wherever there is oppression, there is always opposition.

As long as the imperialists forcibly plunder and oppress weak nations, it is their incontrovertible and legitimate right which no one can take away from them to take up arms and fight the aggressors face to face.

The violent struggle of colonial peoples must develop into an organized armed struggle to be able to fundamentally put an end to the colonial rule of imperialism.

As a decisive struggle to crush the imperialist aggressors, an organized armed struggle is the highest stage of the movement for colonial national liberation.

It is only an organized armed struggle which can destroy the aggressive armed force of the powerful imperialists, reliably defend the revolutionary forces, overthrow the colonial rule and achieve the ultimate victory of the national liberation struggle.

All forms of non-violent struggles of colonial peoples might be able to strike a blow at the imperialists and enable the revolutionary movement to grow and develop but they cannot eventually vanquish the imperialist colonial rule. It is only through a decisive struggle by their own revolutionary forces that colonial peoples will be able to crush the imperialist stronghold, recover their lost country and achieve freedom and independence for their nation. The line of anti-Japanese armed struggle became the most scientific revolutionary line since it correctly embodied the legitimate demands for the development of the national liberation movement to fight the imperialists face to face as an organized armed struggle with a permanent revolutionary armed force.

The line on the anti-Japanese armed struggle which the great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, is an anti-imperialist revolutionary line which illustrates the steadfast revolutionary position that one must fight with imperialism to the end until a just and decisive judgement is rendered.

The anti-imperialist revolutionary ideology of the great leader on completely destroying the imperialists and thoroughly accomplishing the national liberation revolution is brilliantly embodied in the line of anti-Japanese armed struggle. Accordingly, the line of anti-Japanese armed struggle illustrates the revolutionary principle and position that an armed enemy must be fought headlong with arms and that one must actively struggle without giving up an inch to the imperialist aggressors.

An oppressed nation must adhere thoroughly to revolutionary principle and position in the anti-imperialist struggle to be able to fight to the end against the aggressors under all conditions whatever without any delusions about imperialism.

Historical experience in the past era clearly demonstrates that oppressed peoples can absolutely never drive out the imperialist aggressors and achieve national independence through peaceful methods such as "petitions" and demonstrations. Imperialists never willingly present freedom or independence on a silver platter to people nor do they discard their basic nature of aggression and plunder.

It is only when oppressed peoples rise up bravely and wage an active and powerful struggle fearlessly that they can conquer imperialism and seize national independence and freedom.

The line of anti-Japanese armed struggle gives a powerful weapon to the people capable of thoroughly crushing the system of imperialist colonial rule by means of illuminating the path of indomitable anti-imperialist struggle to strike down the imperialist aggressors through organized armed struggle.

The line on the anti-Japanese armed struggle which the great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, presented was likewise an independent revolutionary line which clarified the point that the national liberation revolution must be accomplished through one's own strength.

The great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, taught as follows:

"We must deal with the Japanese imperialist aggressors with our own strength and achieve the liberation and independence of the fatherland." (Ibid., p 9)

A key question which determines victory in the colonial national liberation struggle is whose strength to rely on and what principles to adhere to in fighting face to face with the aggressors in the national liberation struggle of the exploited working popular masses against imperialism.

The anti-imperialist national liberation struggle is a struggle to defend and realize the autonomy of the oppressed working popular masses. Accordingly, they must organize and carry this out with their own strength to be successful. It is only the national liberation struggle which is organized and carried out with firm confidence in and strong reliance on the strength of their own people which is able to restore the autonomy of the nation and render a worthy contribution to the sacred cause of realizing the autonomy of the popular masses.

The great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, early on elaborated on the fact that the masters of revolution in each and every country are the country's communists and popular masses and the decisive cause of revolutionary victory lies in the strength of that country's popular masses themselves. He also presented the independent revolutionary concept on strongly outfitting the chuche oriented revolutionary forces and relying on them to wage a decisive struggle against the aggressors.

The line on the anti-Japanese armed struggle is based on the independent revolutionary concept of the great leader and the revolutionary nature and indomitable vitality of the armed struggle line can be found in brilliantly embodying the principle of autonomy. The line on the anti-Japanese armed struggle teaches a truth of valuable revolutionary struggle that if the communists of each country would muster their own powerful revolutionary armed forces and fight face to face with the imperialist aggressors in a populist armed struggle relying on the strength of the masses, they would be able to achieve the autonomy of the nation and independence of the country.

As the drastic lesson of our country's initial communist movement and nationalist movement demonstrates, it is impossible to achieve independence of the country and autonomous development of the nation through reliance on another. Reliance on stooges and external strength is the road to national ruin and a criminal stratagem of selling out the country and the nation to foreign aggressors once and for all.

Through the presentation of the line on the anti-Japanese armed struggle, all sorts of erroneous ideological currents which had hindered the autonomous development of the national liberation struggle and the armed struggle were able to be crushed and the armed struggle was able to be organized and carried out in harmony with the concrete situation of the country and the interests of the people. In as much as the line on the anti-Japanese armed struggle correctly embodied the principle of autonomy in armed struggle, it has become an independent revolutionary line which thoroughly rejects reliance on external forces and successfully accomplishes the national liberation revolution through their own power.

The most scientific and revolutionary line on the anti-Japanese armed struggle was an immortal revolutionary banner which enabled our people to firmly adhere to the class position and revolutionary principle and to wage the national liberation struggle in accord with the new requirements of revolutionary progress. It was the great programmatic guideline which enabled the cause of fatherland liberation to be successfully realized through the strength of the Korean people themselves.

Indeed, the presentation of the line on the anti-Japanese armed struggle by the great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, at the historic Chialun Conference which illuminated the proper path for the Korean revolution was a historic event which gave our people invincible weapons for achieving national independence and liberation and brightly illuminated the new revolutionary road capable of brilliantly accomplishing the historic cause of the anti-Japanese national liberation struggle.

The great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, presented the strategic and tactical ways and means for implementing the line on the anti-Japanese armed struggle and wisely organized and directed the work to prepare for armed struggle.

For armed struggle to be successfully organized and carried out, scientific strategic and tactical ways and means to realize it must be properly established together with a precise line of struggle. It doesn't matter that a correct struggle line is established if a concrete struggle method capable of accurately realizing it is not properly established; for without it the armed struggle could not be successfully organized and expedited.

The great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, imparted great significance to the work of preparing for an armed struggle above all else and presented a wise program for organizing the Korean Revolutionary Army.

The great leader's program on organizing the Korean Revolutionary Army was a revolutionary program which enabled the urgent questions which must be settled in the preparatory stage of the anti-Japanese armed struggle such as fostering a core element of armed struggle, preparing a mass base, gaining military experience, etc.

A core element of armed struggle, the ranks of young communists of the new era was more strongly outfitted and valuable struggle experience was gained through the organization of the Korean Revolutionary Army and the intensification of its political and military activities under the wise leadership of the great leader.

The great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song elucidated the strategic program which was able to wage an armed struggle as it should based on the valuable experience he had already gained.

The respected and beloved leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, taught as follows:

"An armed struggle must be organized and waged in the basic format of guerrilla warfare." (Ibid., p 31)

Waging an armed struggle in the form of guerrilla warfare is the basic strategic program for implementing the line on the anti-Japanese armed struggle.

Guerrilla warfare is a method of armed struggle which is capable of administering a hard political and military blow on the enemy despite their maintenance of their own armed forces and it can easily annihilate the imperialist aggressor armed forces which are superior numerically, militarily and technologically. Moreover, it is a form of powerful armed struggle which is able to carry on a lengthy armed struggle taking advantage of the positive support of the popular masses and favorable natural terrain under the difficult plight of having no stage logistics support or the support of a regular army, conquer the aggressor armed forces everywhere and achieve ultimate victory through their uncanny and ferocious battle style.

The great leader founded the anti-Japanese people's guerrilla band for the purpose of organizing and pursuing armed struggle in the form of guerrilla warfare, established a guerrilla enclave and vigorously organized and directed the project of providing a mass base for armed struggle.

A mass base for armed struggle was powerfully prepared through the founding of a permanent revolutionary armed force, the anti-Japanese peoples guerrilla band, under the leadership of the great leader, establishing a guerrilla base which was a strategic site for armed struggle in the treacherous terrain of the Tuman River banks and by binding the broad masses tightly in the ranks of revolution.

In its basic form of guerrilla warfare which the great leader presented, the anti-Japanese armed struggle consisting of waging an organized armed struggle and the valuable feats and struggle experience gained in its implementation gave perfect answers to all the theoretical and practical questions arising in successfully accomplishing the national liberation struggle and became the immortal militant banner which brought the liberation struggle of oppressed peoples to victory.

The great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, developed our country's anti-Japanese national liberation to a new high level by presenting the chuche line of armed struggle and brilliantly organizing and leading the glorious anti-Japanese armed struggle against the Japanese imperialists.

The respected and beloved leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, taught as follows:

"Our revolutionary workers and peasants organized and waged the anti-Japanese armed struggle under the guidance of the communists and developed the national liberation struggle of the Korean people to a new stage." ("Kim Il-song Selected Works," Vol 4, 2nd edition, p 283)

The initiation of an armed struggle by means of a permanent revolutionary armed force was a great historic event which wrought a new transformation in the development of our country's communist movement and national liberation movement.

A new era of our country's anti-Japanese national liberation struggle unfolded through the organization and pursuit of the anti-Japanese armed struggle by means of the immortal chuche idea.

The revolutionary idea which properly reflects the requirements of the era and the aspirations of the popular masses was the base of departure for accurately illuminating the path of struggle and establishing a scientific strategy and tactics. It is only when an armed struggle for the purpose of bringing about the national and class liberation of the popular masses is guided by a correct revolutionary idea that it can brilliantly fulfill its sublime mission.

The early communist movement and nationalist movement in our country were not led by a precise revolutionary ideology, thereby being strapped with severe weaknesses and limitations and consequently were unable to travel a smooth path of progress.

Early in our country, various forms of struggles were carried out against the foreigh aggressors such as the army of justice movement, independent army movement, etc., but they only resulted in repeated failure because they were not carried out with a strategy and tactics based on a correct guiding idea.

The anti-Japanese armed struggle which was led by the immortal chuche idea brought our people's national liberation struggle to a new victory by formulating a strategy and tactics centered on the working popular masses and soived all the problems arising in armed struggle based on their role.

An important requirement for successfully accomplishing the anti-Japanese armed struggle is settling everything in accordance with the concrete actuality of the country and the aspirations of the popular masses.

Not only was it necessary that the anti-Japanese armed struggle achieve the autonomy of the nation and the independence of the country but also that it simultaneously accomplish the unprecedentedly complex and difficult revolutionary task beginning with the basic duty of revolution to realize the class liberation of the oppressed working masses. Stemming from this, it was necessary that they ponder all questions with their own wits, make decisions based on their own convictions and institute the struggle line, strategy and tactics in accordance with the Korean revolution and the interests of the people.

The anti-Japanese armed struggle which was organized and expedited under the wise direction of the great leader settled all questions arising in the national liberation struggle based on the chuche idea independently and creatively and raised up the role and responsibility of the popular masses as masters of the revolution to the maximum extent. Accordingly, our people were able to stand pat on the position as masters of the Korean revolution and take charge of their own destiny independently and creatively. The anti-Japanese national liberation struggle was able to make a worthy contribution to the revolutionary cause of national independence and class liberation.

The anti-Japanese armed struggle inflicted a decisive blow on the Japanese imperialists with an organized struggle and opened up the path for firmly achieving the cause of fatherland liberation through solidly organizing all the forms of anti-Japanese struggles of our people into a single unit.

The solid combination of all the forms of mass struggle is an important requirement encountered in intensifying an organized armed struggle and one of the fundamental questions for the victory of the national liberation movement.

Organized armed struggle is the highest form of national liberation struggle and it is only when all the mass struggles of the oppressed popular masses are combined with armed struggle that they can crush the powerful imperialist aggressive might and gain a decisive victory.

Because the various form of anti-Japanese struggles which were waged prior to the anti-Japanese armed struggle were performed sporadically without proper leadership, they always suffered numerous defeats on all levels at the hands of the Japanese imperialists. Since the anti-Japanese armed struggle was a decisive struggle to vanquish the Japanese imperialist aggressors who were armed to the teeth and to liberate the fatherland, it mustered all the other forms of anti-Japanese struggles of the popular masses under the anti-Japanese flag, forcefully brought them to victory and became the main thrust of the communist and national liberation movements. The various forms of mass struggle were closely combined with the anti-Japanese armed struggle and vigorously carried out through the brilliant realization of the great leader's leadership of all facets of the Korean revolution by means of the anti-Japanese armed struggle.

The fact that the leadership of the great leader was firmly realized through armed struggle was an epochal event in the development of the anti-Japanese national liberation movement and a decisive pledge of victory for the liberation of the fatherland.

The wise leadership of the great leader enabled the divisiveness of the early communist movement and nationalist movement to be thoroughly overcome, all the anti-Japanese revolutionary forces to be firmly tied together under the anti-Japanese banner and the armed struggle to be positively expanded. Our country's national liberation struggle rapidly developed centered around the armed struggle and the people of every class and strata began to give themselves positively to armed struggle through various forms of legal and illegal struggles. Accordingly, the anti-Japanese national liberation struggle of the Korean people firmly mounted a new high stage for crushing the Japanese imperialist aggressors and bringing the historic cause of Korean liberation to shining fruition.

The anti-Japanese armed struggle strongly outfitted our chuche oriented revolutionary forces and brought the anti-Japanese national liberation struggle to new heights by closely joining the preparatory work of founding the communist party with the work of achieving the anti-Japanese national unification front and organizing and performing them vigorously.

To accomplish the anti-imperialist national liberation movement and the anti-feudal democratic revolution successfully, it is necessary that armed struggle be vigorously waged and in conjunction with this, the party which is the headquarters of revolution must be founded and the unification movement be achieved with the masses of every walk and level of life. This must be done so as to be able to bind the broad masses including the workers and peasants tightly together in the fold of the great leader and powerfully outfit the chuche oriented forces of our revolution.

Due to the machinations of the factionalist elements and vacillating opportunists in the past, tremendous barriers and confusion were inflicted on the work of founding the party and promoting the unification front and many obstacles were placed in the way of progress of the Korean communist movement.

The organizational and ideological preparations for the founding of the Korean Communist Party were strongly made in the excruciating flames of the anti-Japanese revolutionary war due to the close combination of the communist movement with the armed struggle under the leadership of the great leader. Accordingly, the fundamental flaws of the early communist movement which had been completely split from the mass struggle were thoroughly overcome, a new type of communist core rank and file which was infinitely loyal to the great leader were augmented in the devastating process of armed struggle and the unity and cohesion of the revolutionary ranks based on the chuche idea became a shining reality.

It was through the anti-Japanese armed struggle that the blood ties of the anti-Japanese peoples guerrilla band and the popular masses were able to be strengthened and the masses of all ranks and strata were strongly tied together in the revolutionary ranks. The Japanese imperialists and their stooges were thoroughly isolated and a decisive change was wrought in forming the revolutionary forces through the successful realization of the anti-Japanese national unification front.

Indeed, the glorious anti-Japanese armed struggle unfolded a new era of revolution which is advancing victoriously under the banner of chuche and opened up a bright path capable of brilliantly bringing the sacred cause of fatherland liberation to completion through the successful implementation of the chuche oriented revolutionary line on the Korean revolution presented at the historic Chialun Conference.

The great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, presented the original line of armed struggle, wisely led the heroic anti-Japanese armed struggle, crushed the brigand Japanese imperialist aggressors, rescued our nation from a life or death crisis and brought about the historic cause of fatherland liberation.

The fact that our people were able to recover their lost nation and greet the new dawn of fatherland liberation was because they had the great leader's superb revolutionary line, strategic and tactical methods and refined leadership.

When we reflect on the days of the arduous anti-Japanese armed struggle full of suffering, we recall with deep emotion the great skill of command and military capability and noble communist virtues of the respected and beloved leader and we are filled with heartfelt sentiments of pride and prestige as revolutionary warriors who fought under the guidance of the leader.

There are no people who are happy and prideful like our people, waging revolution full of reverence for their leader, the great Comrade Kim Il-song, peerless patriot, national hero, invincible iron-willed commander.

Today and tomorrow, as in yesteryear, we must repay with our loyalty the lofty political confidence and great expectations of the fatherly leader and the party down through posterity by sacrificing our minds and bodies to accomplish the cause of chuche following the wise leadership of the great leader under the banner of the glorious party.

THE POLICY OF THE ANTI-JAPANESE NATIONAL UNIFICATION FRONT THAT UNITED THE WHOLE NATION STRONGLY UNDER THE ANTI-JAPANESE BANNER

[Article by Kim Chung-nin]

[Text] Today our people are solemnly observing the 50th anniversary of the Chialun Conference at which the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the sun of our nation, set forth the grand plan of the Korean revolution with the scintillating rays of immortal chuche ideology.

At the historical Chialun Conference, the great leader enunciated the chuche-oriented policy of the Korean revolution, setting forth the policy of the Anti-Japanese National Unification Front [ANUF] as a major element of the policy of the Korean revolution.

The policy of the ANUF enunciated by the great leader at the Chialun Conference provided an epoch-making moment at which the foundation of the anti-imperialist national unification front was laid for our people's national liberation struggle. From this very moment on, the movement of the ANUF was forcefully launched to unite the whole nation strongly as a single political force under an anti-Japanese banner; and an extensive anti-Japanese patriotic force forcefully pushed the struggle for the fatherland rehabilitation and the national liberation.

The policy of the ANUF established on the basis of the great chuche ideology represents a policy which reflects most accurately the desire and demand of our people who want to be free from imperialist subordination and to live as an independent nation. It carries an important significance today in promoting the cause of thoroughly carrying out the policy of the national unification front on a nationwide scale and of accomplishing the historical cause of unification of the fatherland.

The policy of the ANUF set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song at the historical Chialun Conference was a strategic policy designed to unite the patriotic forces of the whole nation strongly under the anti-Japanese banner and to accomplish independently the cause of national liberation by smashing the colonial rule of Japanese imperialism.

"In order to carry out the Korean revolution successfully, we must awaken all the anti-Japanese patriotic forces, unite them, and arouse them to the sacred anti-Japanese struggle." ("The Collected Works of Kim Il-Song," vol 1 p 9)

The policy of the ANUF is a policy which successfully embodied the great idea of accomplishing the rehabilitation of the fatherland by a general mobilization of the whole nation, and which the great leader entertained in his mind from the very beginning of his revolutionary activity. It was mapped on the basis of a deep analysis of the socio-economic conditions and the class relations in our country which was occupied by Japanese imperialism, and on the basis of a scientific analysis of the anti-imperialist, anti-feudalist, and democratic character of the Korean revolution. Its fundamental element was the anti-Japanese national liberation struggle.

The anti-Japanese national liberation struggle was the most important task with which the Korean revolution was confronted. Without overthrowing Japanese imperialism, was it impossible to liberate our nation from the shackles of colonial slaves or to eliminate the feudal bondage.

Therefore it was a life-and-death demand of our people, who were robbed by the Japanese imperialists of all possessions, whose sovereignty was trampled upon tragically, and who were forcibly degraded into a miserable status of a slavish nation without a country, that the Japanese imperialists, the bandits, be crushed, and that the fatherland be rehabilitated.

The national demand was never to be fulfilled by the resources of the communists alone or to be met by the resources of a single class or stratum alone. It was to be met only by the unified strength of the patriotic forces of the whole nation struggling against Japanese imperialism.

The policy of the ANUF is a strategic policy designed to unite all the anti-Japanese patriotic forces of the whole nation. It opened up a broad path along which the anti-Japanese mass groups of all classes and strata could act as real masters of their destiny, and along which they could play the role of the masters of their revolution for national liberation.

The policy of the ANUF set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song was a real chuche-oriented policy designed to resolve the problem of the destiny of the nation by means of the power of our people on the basis of the independent demand and the creative capacity of our people.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught us as follows:

"...Since we want to defeat Japanese imperialism and thereby liberate the whole nation by means of the power of the Koreans themselves, we must firmly unite in one all the forces opposing Japanese imperialism." (Ibid., pp 9-10)

The policy of the ANUF which embodies the great chuche ideology was a policy that reflected the will and the desire of the Korean people for independence most accurately.

Our people entertain the earnest will and demand that they be liberated from imperialist subordination and live as an independent nation.

When their national dignity and human independence were trampled upon randomly by the colonial rule of Japanese imperialism, our people did not want to live in such conditions at all. Even youths and students, intelligentsia, small capitalist class people, men of religion, and conscientious national capitalists, not to mention workers and farmers, sought the nation's independence and liberation, harboring anti-Japanese sentiments.

The unisonous aspiration and desire of our people that they want to be liberated from imperialist subordination and to become an independent nation with a sovereign regime and the masters of their destiny enabled the whole nation to be united as one and achieve grand national unity.

Our people are a sagacious people who not only have such independence-oriented aspiration and desire but have the creative capacity to realize them.

Our people have been a valorous and wise people who sustained their national dignity in their struggle against foreign aggressors' invasions throughout their long history, and who created such an excellent national culture widely known to the world. Whenever they awoke as a nation and kept their eyes open class-consciously, they were always capable of repulsing foreign aggressors and securing their national sovereignty.

Thus the policy of the ANUF set forth on the basis of a scientific calculation of our nation's desire for independence and its creative capability awoke all the anti-Japanese patriotic forces and united them into a single power. It established a way of resolving the problems of the nation's destiny through the resources of the Korean people themselves.

The policy of the ANUF set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song was an unprecedented, most widely applicable policy of the unification front. It united all the people who were opposing Japanese imperialism, including the people of all classes, all political beliefs, and all religious faiths, into a solid political force, and mobilized them to the frontline of rehabilitation of the fatherland.

"...We must see to it that all the forces supporting the anti-Japanese ideology, even the men of religion and conscientious national capitalists, not to mention workers and farmers, are united strongly under the anti-Japanese banner." (Ibid., p 10)

In our country, because of the barbarous colonial rule of Japanese imperialism, the social-class-oriented foundation of the ANUF was laid very widely; and it was expanded with each passing day as Japanese imperialism's fascist oppression and colonial plundering were stepped up. It was not only workers and farmers but also youths, students, intelligentsia, and many people of the small capitalist class that participated in the struggle against Japanese imperialism; men of religion, and even some national capitalists who hated and opposed Japanese imperialism. This represented a realistic condition under which the widest range of various classes and strata, except a small number of the Japanese imperialists' stooges including pro-Japanese landowners, subservient capitalists, and national traitors, could be united as one under the anti-Japanese banner.

The policy of the ANUF, set forth by the great leader on the basis of the scientific calculation of the conditions of realities, opened up a wide avenue of struggle in which all the anti-Japanese-minded people, regardless of their class origins, political views, or religious faiths, could participate.

Such a policy as this of uniting all the anti-Japanese patriotic forces of all classes and strata as one was designed in such a way as to enable all the people to render their services in the sacred war of rehabilitating the fatherland. Those who had physical strength rendered their strength; those who had knowledge rendered their knowledge; and those who had money rendered their money.

Such a broadly-conceived policy of the unification front was the wisest policy, which enabled all the anti-Japanese patriotic forces of all classes and strata to be united as one around the core of the workers' league led by the working class, and which enabled the balance of strength between the enemy and the friendly forces to be tipped decisively in the favor of the revolutionary camp.

Furthermore, the policy of the ANUF set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, was a policy loaded with original ideas, which enabled the movement of the unification front to be launched in the field set up so closely to those of the anti-Japanese armed struggle and the preparatory activities for the founding of a revolutionary party, and which enabled the masses' foundation of revolution to be further strengthened and expanded in a correct way.

The policy of the anti-Japanese armed struggle, the policy of the ANUF, the plans for the founding of a revolutionary party--all these, set forth at the historical Chialun Conference, was a series of chuche-oriented policies of the Korean revolution, which were to be carried out in a closely-related context as well as in a unified process.

To launch the movement of the ANUF in a context closely related with the preparatory activities for the founding of the party was an accurate method of making it possible that both the plans for the founding of the party and the policy of the unification front be carried out through to the end successfully. This was because only when the movement of the ANUF and the preparatory activities for the founding of the party were carried out in a closely-related context, could the movement be developed as a real anti-imperialist revolutionary movement and as a real national independence movement, could the anti-Japanese masses of all classes and strata be united, and could the mass-oriented foundation for the founding of the party be laid solidly.

On the other hand, to launch the movement of the ANUF in a context closely related with the anti-Japanese armed struggle was a proper method of making it possible to accelerate the overall development of the anti-Japanese national liberation struggle.

This was because only when this method was employed thoroughly, could tremendous military blows be dealt to Japanese imperialism, the anti-Japanese masses provided with the self-confidence in victory, the movement of the unification front be protected by armaments and further expanded and pushed on a solid basis, the blood relationship between the anti-Japanese guerrillas and the people strengthened, and the broad mass-oriented foundation of the anti-Japanese armed struggle expanded unceasingly.

Thus the policy of launching the movement of the ANUF in a context closely related with the preparatory activities for the founding of the party and the anti-Japanese armed struggle provided a secure guarantee for mobilizing all the anti-Japanese patriotic forces of all classes and strata, united as one on the basis of a solid foundation of the main army of revolution, for the frontline of rehabilitating the fatherland, and thereby for accomplishing the national liberation.

The policy of the ANUF, which successfully embodied the great chuche ideology, was a strategic policy that had provided an original way of resolving the problems of organizing the revolutionary force in carrying out the national liberation revolution in the colonies. It became an immortal banner under which the liberation struggle of the oppressed people, who held fast to their own destiny, was encouraged tremendously.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the founder of the immortal chuche ideology and a great strategist, not only set forth the revolutionary and original policy of the ANUF, but also judiciously guided the struggle for carrying it out.

Thanks to the excellent ideology of the unification front of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, his lofty authority, and his power of embracing a great number of people in his bosom, the policy of the ANUF was successfully carried out with the firm support from the broad anti-Japanese masses, showing a great vitality.

One of the immortal historical events which took place in the course of the struggle for carrying out the policy of the ANUF was the founding of the glorious Fatherland Rehabilitation Association.

On the basis of the culminant demand for the establishment of a permanent organization of the unification front in the process of developing the anti-Japanese national liberation struggle and the movement of the unification front, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song founded, on 5 May 1936, the Fatherland Rehabilitation Association, the first organization of the anti-Japanese national unification front in our country.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, a peerless patriot and the legendary anti-Japanese hero, was elected president of the Fatherland Rehabilitation Association by the unisonous will and desire of the whole nation.

When the Fatherland Rehabilitation Association, a permanent organization of the nationwide anti-Japanese national unification front, was founded, the earnest desire of the Korean people for uniting as one all the national patriotic forces with the leader Comrade Kim Il-song at the center was successfully fulfilled.

The founding of the Fatherland Rehabilitation Association came as a precious fruition of the policy of the ANUF set forth earlier at the Chialun Conference and of the bloody struggle for carrying out the policy. It was an epoch-making event of further expanding and developing onto a higher stage the movement of the ANUF and of forcefully pushing the overall anti-Japanese national liberation struggle.

Thanks to the founding of the Fatherland Rehabilitation Association, the movement of the ANUF was closely connected with the anti-Japanese armed struggle and developed more rapidly on an organizational, systematic, and nationwide scale; and all the anti-Japanese patriotic forces came to be unified under the single banner of the fatherland rehabilitation.

Under the judicious leadership of the great leader, the Fatherland Rehabilitation Association managed to unite, braving Japanese imperialism's fascist oppression, several hundred thousand anti-Japanese people of all classes and strata, including workers, farmers, youths, students, intelligentsia, urban common citizens, medium and small merchants and industrialists, and men of religion in a several month period; it managed to rapidly expand its subordinate organizations everywhere. Thus the association developed into a strong mass revolutionary organization with a well-organized system.

Thus the movement of the ANUF was expanded and developed onto a new stage through the activities of the Fatherland Rehabilitation Association which embraced the anti-Japanese patriotic forces of the whole nation.

The historical cause of the fatherland rehabilitation was accomplished successfully just because the movement of the ANUF developed forcefully in our country and the anti-Japanese masses of all classes and strata, as the masters of their own destiny, launched the anti-Japanese national liberation struggle energetically.

The chuche-oriented ideology of the unification front was set forth for the first time by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song in the days of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle, and the successful implementation of it opened up the best way of forming an anti-imperialist national unification front in the national liberation struggle in the colonies of our time and of hewing the nation's destiny with the nation's own strength. It represents an exceptional contribution to the development of the theory of revolution of the working-class regarding the unification front.

The policy of the ANUF set forth by the great leader and his immortal accomplishment made by himself in the struggle for implementing it and his rich experience are scintillating as a precious property of our revolution.

The policy of the ANUF set forth at the Chialun Conference by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the sun of the nation, and the excellent accomplishments made and the rich experience gained in the struggle to implement it provide excellent ideological and theoretical weapons for the process of accomplishing the cause of the fatherland unification in order to consummate the tasks of the anti-imperialist national liberation today.

The great leader interpreted and developed in concrete terms the theory of the anti-imperialist national unification front in conformity with the fresh historical conditions in which the country is divided into two, the north and the south. He set forth a plan for the nationwide national unification front for the unification of the fatherland. The plan for the nationwide national unification front is an original strategic plan for accomplishing a national unity of all the patriotic forces in both the north and the south under the banner of fatherland unification and for resolving the nation's problems by its own.

"Just as the people of all classes and strata including the communists established in the early days a broad anti-Japanese national unification front under the banner of fatherland liberation to fight together in the anti-Japanese struggle, so the people in the northern half of the republic and the people of all classes and strata in South Korea, including workers, farmers, youths, students, men of the press, men of religion, and men of politics, must form a nationwide national unification front under the banner of fatherland unification. They must launch unisonously the sacred struggle to attain the independent peaceful unification of the fatherland." ("Selected Works of Kim Il-song," vol 7 p 281)

As the ANUF was a unification front put up against Japanese imperialism under the banner of fatherland rehabilitation, so tht nationwide national unification front is a unification front put up against the foreign imperialist aggressor forces under the banner of fatherland unification.

The issue of the unification of our country is an issue of establishing a nationwide national sovereignty by recovering the lost territory and the people. Therefore, all those who love their country and treasure the interests of the nation seek the unification of their fatherland unisonously and set it as an absolute national task.

Therefore, the banner of fatherland unification is the very banner reflecting the urgent life-and-death issue of the whole nation. It is the very national banner that can represent the widest range of the people of all classes and strata.

The nationwide national unification front put up under the banner of fatherland unification is a unification front that should be formed through the federation of all the patriotic forces in the north and the south. The formation of the front would be governed by the principle of the grand unity of the nation in line with the unity of the whole nation that should be attained through a solid formation of the chuche-oriented forces--uniting the people in the northern half of the republic and all the patriotic forces in South Korea, including workers, farmers, youths, students, men of the press, men of religion, and men of politics.

The problem of unification of the fatherland can never be resolved through the intervention of foreign forces, because the problem was created by the division of the country caused by the foreign forces. The problem can be resolved only by our nation's own resources.

Therefore, the formation of the nationwide national unification front by uniting as one of the patriotic forces of the whole nation in the north and the south of our country would provide a realistic guarantee for the overwhelming superiority of the unification forces over the divided forces and for independently attaining the unification of the fatherland.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the designer of the unification of the fatherland, has always attached great significance to the formation of the nationwide national unification front in launching the struggle for the fatherland unification from the first day of the division of the nation till today. He did his utmost to attain a nationwide national unity which would include in it the people of all classes and strata of North and South Korea and all the patriotic political parties, social organizations, and individuals.

An historical event that took place in the course of carrying out the policy of the nationwide national unification front for the fatherland unification was the conference of the representatives of political parties and social organizations of North and South Korea held in April 1948--which was convened by the great leader himself.

In order to cope with the grave crisis in which our nation was to face a division into two--the north and the south--due to the U.S. imperialists' criminal "unilateral election" scheme, the great leader mapped a plan for convening a North-South Conference, at which all the patriotic forces of the north and the south would discuss a national salvation plan in seeking the unification of the fatherland. Thus he clearly showed us a way of overcoming the national crisis through a grand unity of the nation.

Greatly surprised at the great leader's appeal, the representatives of the patriotic political parties and organizations, all classes and strata, conscientious nationalists, commercial entrepreneurs, men of religion, and even those conservative nationalist leaders in South Korea who had devoted their whole life to "anti-communist" activities crossed the 38th parallel and ran over to Pyongyang where the great leader was, renouncing the oppression and harrassing moves by the U.S. imperialists and their stooges.

All the delegates who took part in the conference enthusiastically supported the great leader's national salvation plan of crushing U.S. imperialism's "unilateral election" scheme and of establishing a unified central democratic government. They firmly resolved to launch a struggle unisonously to implement the plan.

The April North-South Conference thoroughly proved that even the two groups of people whose ideologies and creeds were different from each other would be able to eliminate any walls of confrontation between them and to attain a grand [national] unity, if they tried to overcome national difficulties by earnestly exchanging views with each other from the patriotic point of view giving priorities to national interests.

Truly the North-South Conference was a nationwide political conference at which the patriotic forces of the north and the south were united for the first time after the liberation under the banner of the fatherland unification under the leadership of the great leader, displaying the wisdom of the nation. It represented a great victory of our party's anti-imperialist national unification front. It was an excellent fruition of the faith in the national grand unity.

Thanks to the North-South Conference, the patriotic forces of the north and the south could be unified and, thereby, the historical work of founding the DPRK, the unified central government representing the will of the whole Korean people, could be achieved. Further, the work of forming the Fatherland Unification Democratic Front, which embraced over 70 political parties and social organizations of the north and the south, could be carried out successfully.

A door to dialogue between the north and the south, which had been separated and had failed to communicate with each other for a long time, was thus opened under the judicious leadership of the great leader, who had always provided fresh moments for the unification of the fatherland, on the basis of the three major principles of the fatherland unification, that is, independence, peaceful unification, and grand national unity.

Judging from the historical experience gained in the struggle for unification of the fatherland, the most essential issue in forming the nationwide national unification front is to accomplish a grand unity of all the patriotic forces of the north and the south on the basis of the principle of the grand national unity disregarding the differences in ideologies, creeds, and systems.

"To form an extensive national unification front on a nationwide basis on the principle of the grand national unity is an important guarantee for accomplishing the independent peaceful unification of the fatherland.

"Those who love their country and the nation and wish to have a unified fatherland must be united under the banner of the fatherland unification disregarding the differences in ideologies, creeds, systems, and religious faiths." (Ibid., p 280)

In principle, the fundamental prerequisite for the political forces to form a unification front is to disregard ideologies and creeds for the purpose of resolving the common life-and-death problems.

In order to form a nationwide national unification front for the unification of the fatherland, it is imperative for the communists in the north and the nationalists and democratic personage in the south to be united under the banner of the fatherland unification regardless of the ideologies and creeds which represent their class demands.

The differences in ideologies, creeds, systems, or religious faiths cannot cause a condition in which the unity cannot be achieved in the struggle for the fatherland unification. The struggle for the unification of the fatherland is a struggle between patriots and traitors. It is a struggle between the self-sustaining national forces and the imperialist aggressive forces. Therefore, in resolving the unification problem, there cannot be any conflicting elements between our communists and the nationalists and democratic personage of South Korea.

The nationalists and democratic personage of South Korea may see some conflicting elements in their relationship with the comprador forces, fascist forces, and foreign imperialist aggressor forces who oppress and trample upon them; but they cannot have any reason whatsoever why they must have confrontation with the communists in the north in dealing with the unification problem. When the unification is attained, the nationalists and democratic personage of South Korea will be the very people who will join hands with us communists.

"Anti-communism" is an old-fashioned way of thinking; it is an anachronistic illusion.

If there is any kind of nationalism which opposes the communists in the north and which works only for South Korea alone, in the light of today's situation of our divided nation, it would not be a nationalism for the whole nation but a crippled nationalism. It would not be a nationalism for the unification of the country, but a nationalism for the division of the country.

If the democracy which South Korea seeks today puts itself in a position of antagonizing the communists, it would be a titular democracy which would oppress the freedom and rights of the people and seek fascism under the pretext of "anti-communism." It would eventually become a "democracy" which opposes the communists of the north and which seeks the division of the nation.

If the nationalists and democratic personage of South Korea really love the nation, seek democracy, and are concerned with the future destiny of the country and the nation, they must not elect "anti-communism" but a course of working together with the communists. Only by so doing will they be able to exchange views frankly with the communists of the north concerning the nation's destiny and to join hands with the communists to hew out the way of unification.

Even those who committed crimes against the fatherland and the people in the past will not be accused of their crimes. They will be asked to unite and to work together all the way, if they repent their past wrong doings and embark on the road to the independent peaceful unification of the country.

As for the South Korean authorities, if they have any wish for a national unity and unification at all, they must not follow the steps of the late dictator. They must replace the anti-communist policies with the working-with-the-communists policies. They must not seek confrontation, competition, and division, but unity, cooperation, and unification. They must assume a sincere attitude toward the North-South dialogue.

Today the patriotic people in the north and the south, who are craving for the unification of the country, are enthusiastically longing for the realization as soon as possible of the policy of the nationwide national unification front of our party; and the voices crying for the accomplishment of the grand national unity are coming also from among the overseas compatriots in faraway places.

As the anti-Japanese national unification front movement, which strongly united the whole nation under the anti-Japanese banner, scored a brilliant victory in the past, so we the people will staunchly unite all the patriotic forces of the north and the south under the banner of fatherland unification and form a nationwide national unification front. They will attain without fail a complete unification of the country with the nation's own resources.

The invincible vitality of the ideology of the anti-imperialist national unification front set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song at the historical Chialun Conference was verified by the half-century long anti-Japanese, anti-U.S. patriotic struggle of our people; and the immortal ideology is forcefully encouraging today the struggle of the people of the north and the south to accomplish a federation of the whole nation.

We cannot let the miserable state of national division continue forever. We cannot afford to record in history the indelible national shame of handing the divided fatherland over to our next generation.

The entire people of South Korea are full of firm conviction that they will accomplish a grand national unity under the banner of fatherland unification, will crush the "two Koreas" scheme of the divisionists at home, and will achieve the great task of unifying the fatherland during the period of our generation.

THE PROGRAMMATIC PLAN FOR FOUNDING THE CHUCHE-ORIENTED REVOLUTIONARY PARTY

[Article by An Tong-yun]

[Text] The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, a great ideological theorist and a genius of revolution, enunciated a path for the Korean revolution at the Chialun Conference, where he set forth an original plan for founding a new revolutionary party.

The plan for founding the party set forth by the great leader at the Chialun Conference was a programmatic plan which opened up a new path leading to the founding of the revolutionary party of the working class led by the immortal chuche ideology for the first time in the Korean communist movement.

Thanks to the plan for founding the chuche-oriented revolutionary party thus set forth, a broad path was opened for the Korean communists to found a real revolutionary party and to carry out the cause of our revolution successfully under the guidance of the party.

The correctness and vitality of the plan for founding the chuche-oriented party set forth by the great leader were verified by means of the protracted and hard struggle of the Korean communists.

Thanks to the plan for founding the chuche-oriented party, a solid organizational and ideological foundation of the party to be founded amid the flames of the hardship-laden anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle was laid. On the basis of the plan, the party was founded at a right time after the liberation and managed to be strengthened and developed into such a strong party as it is today.

Studying more deeply the correctness and vitality of the original plan for founding the party which was set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song at the Chialun Conference and understanding them thoroughly are of great significance in strengthening and developing our party.

The founding of a revolutionary party of the working class provides a fundamental guarantee for the victory in revolution.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught us as follows:

"In order to lead the Korean revolution to victory, there must be a Marxist-Leninist party, the staff headquarters of the revolution. Only when there is a revolutionary party can the correct policies and strategies and tactics be mapped to organize and mobilize the broad masses of the people for the struggle against Japanese imperialism and the socialist and communist society built up." ("Collected Works of Kim Il-song," vol 1 p 10)

In order to score victory in the revolutionary struggle of the working-class, we must be equipped with the scientific strategies and tactics and be capable of organizing and mobilizing the masses of the people.

If a struggle is not guided by the scientific strategies and tactics and if a struggle is launched while the masses are not organized or awakened to consciousness, such a struggle will be reduced to one such as generated spontaneously and organized sparsely. Such a struggle will eventually be faced with failure and vicissitudes.

The work of mapping out the scientific strategies and tactics and of organizing and mobilizing the masses can be carried out successfully only by an excellent leader of the working class. The leader's guidance in the revolution and construction is conducted by means of a revolutionary party of the working class.

The party of the working class is a political weapon designed to implement the revolutionary ideology of the leader. It is the headquarters of revolution which organizes and mobilizes the broad masses for the struggle to carry out the revolutionary policies and plans set forth by the leader.

Therefore, in order for the working class to awaken the broad masses of the people to the revolution, to unite them organizationally, and to arouse them for the revolutionary struggle and construction work, it is imperative that the working class have a party led by an excellent leader.

Furthermore, only when the working class has a party led by an excellent leader, can it crush the class enemies and all the opportunism, including sectarianism, in time, and can it hold fast to the revolutionary policies of their leader and carry them out thoroughly.

The revolutionary struggle of the working class is to be accompanied invariably by the struggle against the class enemies and all the opportunities who have slipped into the rank and file of the revolution. This is shown clearly by the historical experience gained in the labor movement, communist movement, and international communist movement in our country during the period under review.

Without crushing the counterrevolutionary schemes of the class enemies and the dividing and subversive schemes of the opportunists, the revolutionary policies of the leader can not be guarded, nor can the revolutionary forces be developed strongly. In order for the working class to score victory in its revolutionary struggle, it is imperative that the schemes of the class enemies and all the opportunities who are slipping into the rank and file of the revolution be crushed in time. This can be done successfully only by means of the stubborn struggle of the working class party led by an excellent leader.

Thus the working class must found its party, a weapon designed to implement the leader's revolutionary ideology. Only by doing so can the working class score victory in the revolutionary struggle, and can it build up socialism and communism successfully.

The founding of a new type revolutionary party emerges as an essential demand, as shown in the historical lessons taken from the communist movement launched earlier in our country.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught us as follows:

"We must learn a solemn lesson from the disbandment of the Korean Communist Party. We must launch a struggle to found a party on a sound basis." (Ibid., p 10)

The communist movement in our country began to be developed as the working class grew up to emerge gradually on the stage of struggle. The communist party was founded in 1925, while the anti-Japanese movement of the masses of the people, including the working-class, was launched extensively.

The working masses of our country who had undergone agonies under Japanese imperialism's colonial rule and feudalist oppression for a long time, hailed the founding of the Korean Communist Party with hope and expectation. However, the Korean Communist Party which was founded in 1925 could not accomplish its historical mission because of its fundamental weaknesses and limitations.

The Korean Communist Party which was founded in 1925 could not take its roots deeply among the broad masses, including the working class. It was made up mainly of those whose class viewpoints were not thoroughgoing, including the bourgeois, petty bourgeois intelligentsia, and show-off Marxists. The party could not enjoy the unity of its rank and file because of the sectarian conflicts caused by the strife for "hegemony" among the sectarianists who had slipped into the upper level of the party. It was divided into many factions. The Korean Communist Party failed to overcome Japanese imperialism's oppression and the subversive schemes of the sectarianists. It was forced to be disbanded eventually only 3 years after its founding.

The communist movement at the early stage was conducted mainly by a few people of the high ranking section of the party.

Thus those real communists of Korea who grew up under such circumstances as these came to face an urgent task of taking serious lessons from the early communist movement and of founding a revolutionary party of the working class which would be fundamentally different from the earlier one.

The Korean communist movement ushered in a new historical era when the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song took the van of the Korean revolution. The urgent problem it faced was to found a revolutionary party of the working-class, a party of a new type led by the immortal chuche ideology, the revolutionary banner of our age.

The historical cause of founding the real revolutionary party of the working-class was successfully fulfilled at the very time when the giant leader Comrade Kim Il-song instituted the immortal chuche ideology and hewed a real path leading to the founding of a new revolutionary party of the working-class on the basis of the ideology.

At the Chialun Conference, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song set forth a sagacious plan for founding a new revolutionary party of the working class--a plan which he started to map out at the earliest stage of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle--on the basis of his scientific analysis of the legitimate demand for founding the revolutionary party of the working class, the historical lessons taken from the earlier communist movement, and the revolutionary situation of that time.

The plan for founding the party set forth by the great leader at the Chialun Conference was designed to found the party on the basis of the thoroughly chuche-oriented point of view and to carry out the work of preparation for the party founding effectively.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught us as follows:

"We must, without fail, found a new revolutionary party on our own. In order to do so, we must carry out the preparatory work for the founding of the party effectively." (Ibid., p 10)

To found the party on the basis of the chuche-oriented point of view is a legitimate demand for the founding of the revolutionary party of the working class.

The masters of a country's revolution are the people of the country; and the power to push the revolution and construction must come also from the country's people themselves. Therefore, the work of founding a party of the working class in a country must be carried out under the leadership of the working class and the communists of that country. No one else can carry out the work for them.

Since the communists founded the revolutionary party for the purpose of carrying out the revolution efficiently, the party must be founded in conformity with the actual conditions of the revolution and the communist movement in that country. Only by so doing can the revolution of that country be carried out successfully.

To carry out the work of founding the party on the basis of the chuche-oriented viewpoint was an important issue; and it was more so because the situation at that time of the communist movement was such that the schemes of the flunkeyist sectarians who entertained flunkeyism and dogmatism were rampant in the arena of the communist movement.

Instead of founding the party on the basis of their original creeds and by means of their people's own resources, the flunkeyist sectarians claimed that only their sect was an "orthodox" one, a real "Marxist sect." They visited international parties with a signboard "Let Us Rebuild the Party!" to get their recognition of their sect. Furthermore, the flunkeyist sectarians, ballyhooing "the international line," etc., unconditionally supported anything done by other countries, disregarding whether or not that thing was in conformity with the actual conditions of our country.

Under such conditions as these, the revolutionary party of a new type could not be founded without holding fast to the chuche-oriented viewpoint. Therefore, the communists thoroughly warned against flunkeyism and dogmatism and disregarded the existing traditional norms and practices. They had to hold fast to the firmly chuche-oriented views and attitudes with which the problems of founding the party would be resolved independently and creatively in conformity with their own conditions while they were taking responsibility on themselves.

The plan for founding the party set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song at the Chialun Conference was the most righteous one thoroughly oriented by the chuche ideology.

The making of the organizational and ideological preparation efficiently for founding the party was one of the fundamental issues arising in the course of the founding, strengthening, and developing of the revolutionary party.

The great leader set forth at the Chialun Conference a plan of efficiently making the organizational and ideological preparations for founding the party, thereby enunciating the way of securing the genuineness of the party's rank and file and the method of successfully playing the militant roles of the party.

As verified by the historical experience gained in the communist movement, the party founded on the solid organizational and ideological basis would be able to secure the unity and genuineness of the party's rank and file and to carry out the roles of the revolutionary headquarters successfully, even if the situation within the party was complicated and the struggle was loaded with hardships. However, the party founded on no such solid basis not only would be unable to carry out its mission, but also would fail to even keep up its own existence.

One of the major weaknesses of the Korean Communist Party which was founded in 1925 was that it was made up mainly of the petty bourgeois intelligentsia, and that the organizational spine of the party was not built. The Korean Communist Party which was founded with no organizational and ideological preparations or the mass foundation support was nothing but a castle in the air. It failed to carry out its mission because of such fundamental weaknesses and limitations. Thus it was finally disbanded when it failed to deal with the fascist oppression of the Japanese imperialists and the dividing subversive schemes of the sectarian elements.

The great leader's plan for efficiently making the organizational and ideological preparations prior to the founding of the party made it possible that the weaknesses and limitations of the earlier communist movement be eliminated thoroughly, and thereby that the revolutionary party of a new type qualitatively different from earlier ones be founded.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song not only clearly set forth the plan for founding the revolutionary party of a new type, but also clearly enunciated a method of implementing the plan in a concrete way.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught us as follows:

"In order to push the work of founding the party, we must first institute the basic level party organization. The institution of the basic level party organization not only will make it possible that the overall preparation work for founding the party be carried out efficiently, but also will have great significance from the very first day of the party thus founded in taking its roots deeply among the broad masses." (Ibid., pp 10-11)

The use of what kind of method to found the revolutionary party of the working class has great significance in constantly guaranteeing the solidness of the party and the unceasing strength and development of the party?

The great leader's plan for founding the party by first instituting the basic level party organization and then expanding and strengthening it is fundamentally different from the traditional method in which a small number of people got together, instituted "the party center" first, and then proclaimed the founding of the party.

The institution of the basic level party organization in making the preparation for founding the party would make it possible that the rank and file of the party be organized qualitatively and be continuously expanded, and thereby that the task of founding the party be carried out on a more sound basis.

Whether or not the party is solid depends to a large degree on the degree of integrity of those revolutionaries comprising the masses of the party members. Only when the party is made up of the advanced level fighters who are armed with the leader's revolutionary ideology, who hold fast to the working class-oriented view, and who are trained and prepared in the struggle, can the party grow up and become strong as an invincible revolutionary party.

This was all the more so in the situation in which sectarianism was not eliminated thoroughly in our country's communist movement and in which Japanese imperialism's fascist oppression was being stepped up with each passing day. In such a situation, the expansion of the rank and file of communism by taking in those advanced elements who are equipped with the political ideology and who are trained in the struggle, carried a fundamental importance in pushing the preparation for founding the party efficiently.

The institution of the basic level party organization prior to the founding of the party would make it possible that the rank and file of the party be organized stanchly by those advanced elements of the workers and farmers who are trained and certified amid the flames of the complicated revolutionary struggle. Furthermore, it would make it possible that the organizational core for the founding of the party be educated and brought up systematically, and that the work of unceasingly expanding and strengthening the party organization be pushed simultaneously and successfully.

The great leader's instruction regarding the institution of the basic level party organization prior to the founding of the party enunciated an accurate way of providing the masses foundation very reliably for founding the party.

Uniting the broad masses of the people and thereby organizing the mass foundation for founding the party solidly are an important prerequisite that should be grasped in making preparations for founding the party. Only when the broad masses are armed with the revolutionary ideology of the working class to lay a reliable mass foundation, can the communist core, which is a core for founding the party, be brought up more efficiently, and can the party be expanded and developed rapidly as a party of the masses.

The historical experience gained in the early communist movement in our country verified that if the party fails to take root deeply among the broad masses including the working class, the revolutionary movement can not be carried out correctly and the work of organizing the organizational core for founding the party can not be pushed successfully.

The work of organizing the mass foundation for founding the party can be carried out successfully only when the party's basic organizations are set up in all the units and regions and they take root deeply among the masses.

Thus the great leader's instruction regarding the institution of the basic level party organization prior to the founding of the party enunciated a clear-cut way of making it possible that the rank and file of the party be expanded unceasingly by the genius elements of the revolution, that the mass foundation for founding the party be laid solidly, and thereby that the revolutionary party of the working class of a new type be founded on a solid foundation.

Furthermore, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song set forth a way of carrying out the work of preparation for the founding of the party in very close association with the fulfillment of the revolution.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught us as follows:

"We must proceed with the preparation work for the founding of the party in close connection with the struggle against Japanese imperialism. Only when the preparation for the founding of the party is pursued in line with the fulfillment of the revolution can the superior communists be nurtured through the training and certification conducted by means of the struggle, and the Korean revolution carried out successfully." (Ibid., p 11)

The implementation of the work of preparation for the founding of the party in very close association with the launching of the revolutionary struggle against Japanese imperialism was an important demand set forth on the basis of the historical lessons taken from the early communist movement and the characteristics of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle in which sundry tasks had to be carried out simultaneously.

The show-off Marxists and the flunkeyist sectarians slipped into the rank and file of the earlier communist movement and did tremendous damage to the labor movement and the communist movement in our country--this fact was closely related to the situation in which the work of organizing the rank and file of communism was implemented far apart from the fulfillment of the revolution. Those who took up high ranking positions in the period of the earlier communist movement stayed out of the actual struggle against Japanese imperialism; or they were the happened-to-be-there elements who slipped into the rank and file of the labor movement. Therefore, they could not play the role of the upright revolutionary vanguard fighters or those of the communist revolutionaries.

The real communist revolutionaries are brought up in the severe actual struggle for the revolution. The qualitative organization and the genuineness of the rank and file of communism are to be instituted through such a struggle as this.

The work of preparation for founding the revolutionary party of the working class also had to be carried out in very close association with the overall revolutionary struggle, including the anti-Japanese armed struggle, a most active struggle. By so doing, the opportunists of all hues and those who had taken part in the revolution just on a temporary basis could be distinguished from others; their slipping into the rank and file of the revolution could be prevented; and the rank and file of communism could be organized stanchly with those advanced elements of workers and farmers who were trained and prepared in the struggle.

In order to cope with the situation in which the harsh oppression was being stepped up by Japanese imperialism with each passing day, the work of preparation for the founding of the party had to be carried out in very close association with the actual struggle for the revolution. Only by so doing, could both the work of founding the party and the revolutionary struggle be pushed forcefully and simultaneously.

The armed struggles and the mass struggles of various sorts could be carried out more rapidly as the work of preparation for the founding of the party was pushed. And, when the work of preparation for the founding of the party and the armed struggles and the mass struggles were carried out very closely, the fruition of the work and the struggles could be protected securely from the savage oppression of Japanese imperialism. Furthermore, only by carrying out the work of preparation for the founding of the party in line with the anti-Japanese struggle of various types, could the communists, whose activities were launched sparsely, be unified organizationally, their activities launched more positively, the mass foundation for the founding of the party be organized more widely and deeply, and the unified leadership over the overall Korean revolutionary movement, including the anti-Japanese armed struggle, be secured.

Thus the plan set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song for making the organizational and ideological preparations efficiently for founding the revolutionary party on the basis of the chuche-oriented view enunciated an accurate way of founding the party on the most solid foundation. It became an immortal revolutionary banner for founding the party of a new type, the chuche type revolutionary party, in our country.

The original plan for founding the party set forth at the historical Chialun Conference by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song enunciated anew a theory governing the founding of the chuche-oriented party, that is, the founding of the real revolutionary party of the working class of our time. It was a judicious plan whose correctness was fully verified in the communist movement and in the founding of the revolutionary party in our country.

By clearly enunciating at the historical Chialun Conference the chuche-oriented plan and method of founding a new type revolutionary party of the working class, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song provided a series of across-the-board answers to the principle-related problems arising in founding the revolutionary party of the working class.

When the great leader set forth the plan for founding the chuche-oriented party, a most accurate way of founding the new type revolutionary of the working class was enunciated.

The communists of our country who had been groping in the dark to seek a clear-cut direction and method of founding the real revolutionary party of the working class since the disbandment of the Korean Communist Party which was founded in 1925, were provided with a programmatic policy of founding the new type revolutionary party when the plan for founding the chuche-oriented party was set forth at the historical Chialun Conference.

The correctness and vitality of the plan for founding the party set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song were thoroughly verified in the protracted and hardship-laden struggle of the Korean communists for founding the chuche type revolutionary party.

In order for any theories or policies to become an accurate guiding principle for the revolution and construction, their correctness and vitality must be verified in the actual struggle.

Even in the hardship-laden difficult situation in which an armed struggle had to be launched against Japanese imperialism, a most vicious bandit, the great leader energetically pushed the work of preparation for founding our party and thereby laid the organizational and ideological foundation for founding the party.

"During the hardship-laden struggle in which we had to repulse the conspiracies and schemes of all hues of the enemies at home and abroad amid the flames of the anti-Japanese armed struggle, we overcame the fundamental weaknesses which prevailed in the earlier period of the Korean Communist movement and solidly laid the organizational and ideological foundations for founding the party." (Ibid., pp 251-252)

During the entire period of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle, the great leader settled all the problems arising in the course of founding the revolutionary party always from the chuche-oriented point of view and independently and creatively in conformity with the actual situation of our country. He thereby laid the organizational and ideological foundations solidly for founding the party.

The great leader paid keen attention to the work of bringing up the organizational core for the founding of the party. He enlisted the new generation of the workers and farmers into the revolutionary organizations and the rank and file of the anti-Japanese armed units on the basis of his firm working class-oriented view. He brought them up as real communist-type revolutionaries through the organizational life and the fulfillment of revolution. The ardent revolutionaries and the cores of communism who were certified and trained in the flames of the severe anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle became the solid resources and the organizational cores for founding the new type revolutionary party.

Furthermore, the great leader forcefully organized and guided the ideological indoctrination designed to arm the members of the Korean Revolutionary Army thoroughly with the chuche-oriented revolutionary policies and the struggle against the opportunists of all hues. Thus he established the system of chuche ideology firmly within the rank and file of communism. He then instituted the genuineness and the ideological and intentional unity of the rank and file successfully.

Under the judicious leadership of the great leader, the real communists, braving the fearful watch and the barbarous oppression of Japanese imperialism, continuously launched political works among the broad working masses, including workers and farmers, armed them with the revolutionary ideology of the working class and trained them in the actual mass struggle against Japanese imperialism. Thus they built the mass foundation for founding the party also. This provided a firm guarantee for our party, the real protector and representative of the interests of our people, to be able to take root deeply among the working masses and to develop on the sound basis of its blood relationship with the masses of the people.

The organizational and ideological foundations for founding the party which was laid by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song in the flames of the hardship-laden anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle became a strong root and precious resources, which enabled our party to be founded, strengthened and developed on the basis of such a foundation as a bedrock that cannot be shaken by any storms or trials.

"Thanks to the epoch-making development of the Korean communist movement which was achieved through the anti-Japanese armed struggle, our party could be founded on a solid foundation even in the intricate post liberation environment. Our party thus could lead the revolutionary struggle of the Korean people correctly from the very first day of the party founding." ("Selected Works of Kim Il-song," vol 4, 2d ed., p 285)

Thanks to the solid organizational and ideological foundation for founding the party which was laid by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the historical work of founding the chuche-type revolutionary party was carried out successfully and in time even in such a complicated and difficult post liberation environment.

Thus the struggle to found the chuche-type revolutionary party, organized and launched for a long period of time since the time of inauguration of the Down-With-Imperialism Movement, the first real communist revolutionary organization, was brought to precious fruition. The working class and the masses of the working people of our country were provided with a vanguard unit of the revolution, the headquarters of the revolution, designed to materialize the revolutionary ideology, the chuche ideology, of the great leader.

The founding of the glorious Korean Worker's Party--this indeed represented a scintillating victory of the great leader's plan for founding the chuche-type party. It was a sublime declaration which announced the birth of the new-type revolutionary party, whose guiding ideology was the immortal chuche ideology, for the first time in the history of the Korean communist movement. It was a historical event which brought about a new turning point in our people's struggle to implement the revolutionary cause of chuche. Thanks to the founding of the Korean Worker's Party, our people became a dignified happy people who could place their destiny entirely in the party and who could march ahead toward the scintillating future of communism with a firm conviction.

Our party, which was founded on the basis of the strong root established in the flames of the hardship-laden anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle, energetically marched along the road of victory through the severe storms of revolution under the judicious leadership of the great leader.

Today our party is an invincible, strong party, tried and tempered, and capable of victoriously marching forward through storms and trials. It does not know of any senility or stagnation; it stays always vivid. It has been strengthened and developed into a most authoritative, dignified, and militant party which is launching struggle full of revolutionary mettle.

Forcefully pushing the cause of turning the whole society toward being chuche-oriented, with the glorious Sixth Congress of our party nearing, we are faced with a glorious task of further strengthening our party organizationally and ideologically. The further strengthening of our party's foundation--as strong as a bedrock--is a decisive guarantee for increasing the combat capability of the party and consummating through to the end the revolutionary cause of chuche set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song.

In order to successfully achieve this valuable work, it is imperative that the great leader's ideology of founding the party be materialized successfully, and that the turning the whole society toward being chuche-oriented be pushed energetically.

As long as there is the judicious leadership of our party and as long as there are a faithful people and faithful party members who place their entire destiny in the party and who share their fate with their party under any adverse circumstances, our revolutionary cause will be ever-victorious.

THE KOREAN COMMUNISTS' FIRST REVOLUTIONARY ARMED ORGANIZATION--KOREAN REVOLUTIONARY ARMY

[Article by Chi Ch'ang-ik]

[Text] Today our people, significantly observing the 50th anniversary of the historical Chialun Conference, are recollecting with deep sentiments the achievements made by the Korean Revolutionary Army [KRA] which was organized on the basis of the plan mapped out at the conference.

The KRA, the first revolutionary armed organization of the Korean communists, which was organized by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, made a scintillating decoration on the history of our people's revolutionary struggle with its immortal achievements.

The KRA brought the beginning of the anti-Japanese armed struggle in the period of trials in which the national tribulations reached their peak and our revolution went through severe labor pains and other vicissitudes. The KRA thus carried out its sublime mission in the Korean revolution excellently.

When the KRA was organized, the communists of our country came to have their own revolutionary armed organization, while our people began to fulfill their earnest desire to have their real revolutionary armed forces and to launch vigorously into the anti-Japanese war against vicious Japanese imperialism with full preparations. The forming of the KRA was tantamount to a declaration which announced the very beginning of the glorious anti-Japanese armed struggle.

To crush the anti-revolutionary forces with the revolutionary armed forces is a legitimate demand of the development of the national liberation movement in the colonies.

Because of its aggressive and robber-like nature, imperialism does not voluntarily withdraw from its colonially subjugated countries, clinging to vicious means of violence to keep up its colonial rule. The imperialists come to resort to violent means at the risk of their lives, when the people's revolutionary activities are stepped up and the ruin of the imperialists nears. The struggle of the oppressed people in the colonies will score victory, only when such anti-revolutionary violence of imperialism is met by revolutionary violence, and when the anti-revolutionary forces are crushed by the revolutionary armed forces.

Japanese imperialism against which our people fought was the most vicious imperialist aggressor force, which had several million men armed to the teeth and was proud of its "invincibility." Our people did not have their own revolutionary armed forces capable of defending their fatherland and the nation and, because of that, their country was subjugated by Japanese imperialism. They were forced to lead the colonial slavish life.

Japanese imperialism managed to maintain its colonial rule over Korea with the help of the anti-revolutionary forces. It resorted to all available means and methods to eliminate all the patriotic and progressive elements of the Korean people.

Our people launched all kinds of struggles against Japanese imperialism's occupation of Korea and colonial rule. However, the Korean people's anti-Japanese struggle was suppressed by the armed forces of Japanese imperialism whenever it was launched. Some patriotic people, lamenting over the ruin of the country, enthusiastically appealed for the independence of the country, while the so-called nationalists foolishly tried to achieve independence by means of the "petitions." However, the Japanese imperialists dealt with these movements by employing bloody oppressions. The righteous army struggle or the independence army movement and other similar armed struggles were launched sparsely without any battle slogans or strategies and, as a result, only miserable frustrations and bloody lessons were brought about.

Historical experience thoroughly showed that it was impossible to crush the imperialist aggressors armed forces or to achieve the independence of the country and the liberation of the nation without one's own strong revolutionary armed forces equipped with the scientific strategies and tactics which were mapped out on the basis of the correct leading ideology.

Standing at the crossroads, our nation had to choose between either becoming the colonial slaves of Japanese imperialism forever or seeking a way to live by rising up and fighting. What all our people enthusiastically longed for was to have a real revolutionary armed force led by a leader and to achieve the independence of the country by driving out the Japanese imperialists, the bandits who had crept into our fatherland.

In order to cope with the situation in which Japanese imperialism's colonial fascist rule was enforced in our country, the anti-Japanese revolutionary war had to be launched on our own to crush the Japanese imperialist aggressors; and, in order to do so, a set of preparations had to be formulated and the chuche-oriented resources had to be brought out. In the early 1930's, when the bandit Japanese imperialists stepped up oppression unprecedentedly and, accordingly, our people's mass struggle had to take the form of violence, it was an urgent demand that preparations be made as soon as possible for launching an organized armed struggle.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song had a thorough understanding of the prevailing situation and the development of the anti-Japanese national liberation movement in our country; and, on the basis of the understanding, he set forth the policy of the anti-Japanese armed struggle at the historic Chialun Conference as well as the judicious plan for organizing the KRA in preparation for organizing and launching the armed struggle.

In compliance with the decisions of the Chialun Conference, the great leader proclaimed, on 6 July 1930 at Koyusu, the founding of the KRA which was organized around the core comprised of the Communist Youth League and the Anti-Imperialist Youth League.

"As a first step in preparation for armed struggle, we organized the KRA in July 1930. The KRA was the first Marxist-Leninist armed organization in our country." ("Collected Works of Kim Il-song," vol 1, p 51)

The founding of the KRA was a scintillating fruition of the energetic activities of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, who had launched struggle to plant seeds of revolutionary fire in the bosom of the youths and students during the period of 4 to 5 years from the day of inauguration of the Down-with-Imperialism League. It was a first step toward preparation for the anti-Japanese armed struggle.

The great leader founded the KRA, clearly set forth the nature, mission, and duties of the KRA, and enunciated the activity guideline of the KRA in a concrete form.

Correctly defining the nature and mission of the revolutionary armed forces is a key issue in and the prerequisite for the strengthening and developing the revolutionary armed forces.

The KRA founded by the great leader was the first revolutionary armed organization of the Korean communists who were struggling for the independence of Korea and the freedom and liberation of the people under the revolutionary banner of the chuche ideology. It was a political and semi-military organization which would become the foundation for the revolutionary armed forces that were expected to be founded later.

The fundamental mission of the KRA included infiltration into an extensive urban and rural region, indoctrinating the people and unifying them under the anti-Japanese banner, gaining military experience, and making preparations for forming the rank and file of an armed unit.

The most important mission of the KRA founded by the great leader was to make on its own preparations for the revolutionary war in which the Japanese imperialist aggressors would be defeated, in view of the actual situation in Korea in which Japanese imperialism was enforcing an unprecedented colonial fascist rule.

In view of the conditions of our country in which it had no national sovereignty or any foundation for a national army, the KRA played a great role in seeing to it that strong, invincible, revolutionary armed might would be founded in our country, and that that revolutionary might would be able to carry out the mission of a revolutionary army and a people's army from its inception.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song did everything he could to bring up the men of the KRA as competent political and military activists.

The great leader personally organized and guided a short term training course of military government and military training for the men of the KRA, bringing them up as the strong core for the formation of the rank and file of an armed unit.

Under the judicious leadership and warm-hearted solicitude of the great leader, the men of the KRA enthusiastically studied, while taking the military government course, the leader's grand plan of the Korean revolution and the method of the political work for the masses. They also learned how to use weapons and the military strategy while taking the military training course. Thus they were fully equipped with the competence of the political and military cadres.

The great leader brought up the men of the KRA as the core of the revolutionary armed might that was expected to be founded later. He organized them into many subunits, dispatched them to the northern part of Korea, the central Manchurian region, the eastern Manchurian region, and the southern and northern Manchurian regions, and saw to it that they launched political and military activities forcefully.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught us as follows:

"The men of the KRA infiltrated into extensive urban and rural regions, energetically launched political and military activities among the workers, farmers, and youths and students. They thereby made preparations for organizing their guerrilla units." (Ibid., p 51)

Under the judicious leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the KRA, the first revolutionary armed organization of the Korean communists, forcefully pushed the preparations for launching the anti-Japanese armed struggle by means of the full-fledged political and military activities.

The KRA above all placed great emphasis on bringing up the nucleus-like core unit for the purpose of later forming the anti-Japanese guerrilla unit in the course of conducting political and military activities.

The formation of the core rank and file provided a great guarantee for successfully carrying out the difficult work of founding the revolutionary armed might on its own under the hardship-laden circumstances in which the fighting had to be launched against the Japanese imperialists who were armed to the teeth. Without the core, it would have been impossible for the work of expanding the revolutionary rank and file to be carried out efficiently by indoctrinating and reshaping the broad masses, or for the hardship-laden revolutionary struggle to be carried out successfully.

Under the judicious leadership of the great leader, the men of the KRA energetically launched the political work of expanding the core rank and file among the broad masses of the people and awakening the masses to revolution. They then forcefully pushed the work of uniting the masses to form anti-Japanese mass organizations.

The armed subunits of the KRA which were dispatched to various local regions brought up a great number of trained and tried revolutionaries in the course of expanding the revolutionary organizations, including the Communist Youth League and the Anti-Imperialist Youth League, and of organizing and implementing the mass struggle in various forms. At the same time, the men of the KRA brought up the promising rank and file of the revolutionary reserve corps mainly at those schools and night classes which were operated under the careful guidance and solicitude of the great leader.

Those youths who were awakened to class-consciousness and who found their path of struggle came forward, trying to be the first, to make the decision to take up arms, and to take a firm oath to become the communist revolutionaries faithful forever to the leader in the same revolutionary rank and file led by the great leader.

Thus the rank and file of the KRA was expanded rapidly and, consequently, the KRA was able to form the organizational core of the revolutionary armed might with those communists of a new generation not tainted with any sectarian foul elements or old fashioned nationalist ideology.

Furthermore, the KRA continuously gained military experience by means of the extensive political and military activities so that it might go on launching the full-fledged anti-Japanese armed struggle.

Acquiring armaments and gaining military experience along with the work of bringing up the core of the revolutionary might is an important demand that should be fulfilled to make the overall military preparations in the armed struggle. In addition to the personnel which is an important element of armed might, acquiring armaments and gaining experience is one of the guarantees for successfully launching an armed struggle.

Upholding the great leader's instruction regarding the method of acquiring armaments while considering the actual situation of the time, and purchasing weapons, or capturing weapons of the enemies, the armed subunits of the KRA waged an intense struggle.

The Korean communists insisted in their commentaries and propaganda while infiltrating deeply among the masses that in order to crush the enemies and rehabilitate the fatherland, the sparsely-launched struggle by a few selected people who rose up with rifles would not be effective enough, and that an organized armed struggle must be launched. They also appealed to the people to take part in the struggle to acquire weapons enthusiastically. Thus realizing the urgent demand for weapons, the people obtained weapons by sundry means and sent them to the revolutionary organizations.

In particular, the armed subunits of the KRA, even in the grave situation in which they had to launch a life-and-death struggle, boldly attacked the Japanese imperialist aggressor forces, the nationalist reactionary police units, the enemy spies and lowest administrative organizations, and those vicious landlords who owned mounted troops, capturing weapons from them. Thus the KRA played a great role in providing armaments for the anti-Japanese armed struggle.

One of the important military activities launched by the KRA was that of exposing and liquidating the enemy's spies and stooges in the revolutionized rural areas, of infiltrating into a large area and dealing blows to the enemies, and of continuously gaining the experience in military activities.

The enemies openly mobilized their armed police units to strangulate revolutionary forces to death and unceasingly infiltrated the revolutionized areas by secretly sending spies and agencies into the areas; and, in such a situation as this, protecting the revolutionary forces by organizing and mobilizing the broad masses' resources was one of the important duties of the armed subunits of the KRA at that time.

The armed subunits of the KRA extensively mobilized the revolutionary organizations, including the Anti-Imperialist Youth League, Farmers League, Women's Association, and Boys Exploration Units and thereby established a watertight system of warning and alarming. Launching the entire mass movement, they thus exposed and liquidated in time the enemies' spies and secret agencies who were creeping in.

The armed subunit which was under the command of Comrade Kim Kyong-kwon, an indomitable communist revolutionary fighter, brought successes by infiltrating into the homeland; and these successes were an excellent model for the political and military activities of the KRA.

The armed subunit which launched its political and military activities in the Changbaek region in the summer of 1930 infiltrated into the homeland and explained and propagated the chuche-oriented policies and plans of the Korean revolution among the people in the large region of the northern part of Korea, including P'ungsan, Ich'on, Pukch'ong, and Hongwon. It also energetically launched its military and political activities in many other places.

The armed subunit under the command of Comrade Kim Hyong-kwon, an indomitable revolutionary fighter, launched dauntless battles of armed attacks everywhere, including the battles of attacking the Japanese imperialist police substation in Pibal-ri, the battle at Mt Taedok in Pukch'ong County, the battle at Cholbuam, Hongwon County, and the battle at Chonjin-dong. The subunit thus put enemies to death gaining experience in military activity.

The activities of the men of the KRA, including the battle at Kumganggwan in Changchun, and the Harbin Tori Incident, fully displayed the indomitable revolutionary mettle of the Korean communists who were brought up by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song. Their activities thus encouraged and urged the broad masses of people to launch the anti-Japanese struggle.

In this way, the armed subunits of the KRA, upholding the policies and plans set forth by the great leader, launched extensive military activities in large regions. They played major roles in continuously gaining precious experience in the military activities and making military preparations for the anti-Japanese armed struggle.

The laying of the mass foundation solidly for the preparation for the anti-Japanese armed struggle was a scintillating event in the political and military activities of the KRA.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught us as follows during the period of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle:

To crush Japanese imperialism, we must have a foundation among the broad masses of people.

Therefore you comrades must recognize the importance of your work. You must first of all staunchly arm yourselves with advanced ideology and then must exert major efforts to launch the indoctrination of the masses.

The great leader's instruction regarding the need to lay the foundation among the masses solidly embodied the fundamental principle of the chuche ideology that the masters of the revolution and construction are the masses of the people, and that the resources supporting the revolution and construction come also from the masses of the people. It was a programmatic instruction which made it possible that the anti-Japanese armed struggle be organized and launched forcefully with the positive help of the masses of the people from its inception, and that the firm guarantee for the final victory of the struggle be provided.

The subunits of the KRA dispatched to various districts united the core masses solidly, indoctrinated and remolded the broad masses of all classes and strata, and launched an extensive struggle to revolutionize the rural villages in particular.

Following the excellent practical example of revolutionizing the masses which was shown by the great leader at Chialung, Wuchiatzu and Koyusu [phonetic], the men of the KRA forcefully launched the political indoctrination of all forms and methods among the masses of all classes and strata.

Mobilizing all propaganda and agitation means and methods, including verbal propaganda, propaganda through various meetings, propaganda by means of revolutionary publications, and propaganda by means of revolutionary art activities, the men of the KRA indoctrinated men of maturity, youths, and women in the rural villages, educated the masses of all classes and strata, including the local "leaders," and awakened and aroused them forcefully to the anti-Japanese struggle.

It is the real way of doing the work of the communists that they train the people in actually practicing the revolution and lead them to struggle.

The men of the KRA, attaching great significance to the training of the masses of people in a militant way, indoctrinated and trained the masses by means of the mass struggle against the bandit Japanese imperialists and of the work of supporting the activities of the KRA.

The people gradually came to realize the power of organization and the strength of unity in their hearts while launching their righteous struggle. They came to have deep in their hearts the firm conviction that the struggle launched in a strong unisonous unity could beat all sorts of enemies and lead to victory. And, in the course of doing so, our people came to be united even more solidly around the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song; and thus the mass foundation for an armed struggle was solidly laid.

Indeed, under the judicious leadership of the great leader, the KRA forcefully launched their political and military activities in wide regions, brought up the core of the anti-Japanese guerrilla unit, gained experience in military activities, and built the mass foundation for the revolution. The KRA thus successfully implemented the strategic tasks at the preparatory stage of the anti-Japanese armed struggle. In this way, the KRA made the immortal achievements in the history of the national liberation of our people.

The founding of the KRA and its successful political and military activities were the historical events of great significance in the development of the anti-Japanese national liberation movement of our country.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught us as follows:

"The activities of the KRA provided a starting moment to the anti-Japanese armed struggle." ("Collected Works of Kim Il-song," vol 7 p 168)

The founding of the KRA and its activities made it possible that the preparations for transforming our people's anti-Japanese national liberation movement into the anti-Japanese armed struggle be made effectively.

In the course of founding the KRA and its activities, the rank and file of the armed organization was expanded and strengthened; a great number of political and military cadres who were expected to become the nucleus-like core of the revolutionary armed might were brought up; the [problem] of armaments for founding the revolutionary armed might and the anti-Japanese armed struggle was solved; and experience in military activities was gained. At the same time, the broad masses of the anti-Japanese people were revolutionized; the precious experience in building the mass foundation for revolution was gained; and the anti-Japanese armed struggle could be launched while enjoying the tremendous support of the masses of people.

The KRA carried out its mission and roles correctly and, by so doing, made it possible for the strategic tasks in the preparatory period of the armed struggle to be carried out successfully. Thus the real revolutionary army was founded with our people's own resources; and the thorough preparations for forcefully launching the anti-Japanese armed struggle against Japanese imperialism were made. The activities of the KRA were in fact the beginning of the anti-Japanese armed struggle.

The activities of the KRA gave courage and faith in the victory to our people who were groaning under the colonial yoke of Japanese imperialism, and at the same time creating tremendous uneasiness and fear on the part of the Japanese imperialist aggressors.

After Korea came under the occupation of Japanese imperialism, our people launched the anti-Japanese movement in various forms. However, due to the criminal schemes of the stubborn nationalists and the flunkey sectarians and due to the lack of real revolutionary armed organization, the anti-Japanese movement failed despite much bloodshed.

However, thanks to the political and military activities of the KRA which was founded by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song himself, our people came to believe in the future of our armed might that would be strengthened further and to have a firm conviction of the rehabilitation of Korea and the victory of the Korean revolution.

Meanwhile, the KRA dealt serious blows to the Japanese imperialist aggressors by launching dauntless military activities.

The founding of the KRA and its political and military activities provided an important guarantee which made it possible for the grand plan of the Korean revolution set forth at the historic Chialun Conference to be implemented successfully.

Under the actual circumstances of our country in which the vicious colonial rule of Japanese imperialism not only disallowed even minor lawful activities but also made the underground struggle hardship-laden, no tasks could be carried out successfully without the communists' revolutionary armaments that protected the revolutionary forces.

When the political and military activities of the KRA were launched positively under the judicious leadership of the great leader, the Korean communists carried out the policy of the armed struggle even under the conditions in which Japanese imperialism stepped up its anti-revolutionary schemes. They managed to carry out the overall works of the Korean revolution successfully, including the organizational and ideological preparations for the founding of the party and the movement of the anti-Japanese national unification front.

Indeed the founding of the KRA and its positive political and military activities were tantamount to the sublime roar of a cannon which announced the very beginning of the glorious anti-Japanese armed struggle and an energetic march in the Korean communist movement and the anti-Japanese national liberation movement.

Thanks to the founding of the KRA and its activities, the historical Chialun Conference plan for making preparations for the anti-Japanese armed struggle was successfully implemented and a guarantee was provided so that the anti-Japanese guerrilla unit might be founded and the anti-Japanese armed struggle might be launched forcefully.

The founding of the KRA and its immortal achievements made our people's revolutionary history and the history of our people's national liberation struggle more scintillating, strongly encouraging and urging our people in their struggle for achieving independence.

This is a great national pride, glory, and happiness of our people who live and carry out revolution looking up to the paternal leader.

No force would block the solemn march of our people who, looking up to the great leader, are marching forward under the tested leadership of our party. We will be ever victorious and glorious.

All the party members and the workers, with revolutionary self-confidence and national pride of looking up to the great leader who is taking the lead, must launch struggle more and more forcefully in order to consummate our revolutionary cause which was hewed in the forests of Mt Paektu.

THE COMMUNISTS OF THE NEW GENERATION ARE THE REAL REVOLUTIONARY VANGUARDS STAUNCHLY ARMED WITH THE CHUCHE-ORIENTED REVOLUTIONARY WORLD OUTLOOK

[Article by Yu Hwa-kyong]

[Text] The Chialun Conference which had become a new milestone of the Korean revolution was a significant conference of the young communists of a new generation brought up in the bosom of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song.

At the Chialun Conference which was held in the presence of the great leader, the communists of the new generation who were the real vanguard fighters of the Korean revolution were provided with the chuche-oriented policies and strategies and tactics which would lead them to the righteous path of scoring victory. They made resolutions of loyalty to launch a tenacious struggle to implement the policies and strategies and tactics. On the occasion of the historical Chialun Conference, the communists of the new generation realized their lofty mission more deeply in their hearts, and forcefully launched into the march which was designed to attain ahead of schedule the rehabilitation of the fatherland and the victory in the cause of chuche. Thus our people's anti-Japanese national liberation struggle and the Korean communist movement came to embark on a new higher stage.

The grand transformation that had taken place around the time of the Chialun Conference clearly showed the judiciousness of the leadership of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, who set forth earlier the original plan of bringing up the communists of the new generation, and who organized the rank and file of the vanguards of our revolution. Further, the transformation forcefully verified that the very communists of the new generation brought up in the bosom of the great leader were the clean-handed and vividly new revolutionaries armed with the chuche-oriented revolutionary world outlook, and that they were the real revolutionary vanguards who played the core-like role in carrying out the Korean revolution.

The revolutionary vanguards, the first glorious rank and file of the Korean communist movement, who were marching forward under the revolutionary banner of chuche, were the vividly new communists of the new generation who grew up under the care of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, who were equipped with the revolutionary world outlook of chuche, and who devoted everything they had for the leader's revolutionary cause.

Already in those early days in which he embarked on the road of revolution, the great leader recognized that bringing up the communists of the new generation and solidly organizing the rank and file of the revolutionary vanguards were the first prerequisite for the rehabilitation of the fatherland and victory in the revolution; he did everything he could to fulfill the prerequisite.

Bringing up the revolutionary vanguards is an important problem that should be solved in the period in which the road of revolution is to be hewed.

Revolution is a difficult and complicated struggle. It can be carried out successfully only by means of the positive struggle launched by those vanguard fighters who are trained politically and equipped with organizing capability. The revolutionary vanguards are those fighters in the van who arm the broad masses with the leader's revolutionary ideology and who arouse them to revolution. They are the core men who march forward with the revolutionary banner lifted high under any circumstances. The strong chuche-oriented forces who provide the guarantee for the revolutionary victory will be organized with the revolutionary vanguards as their core; and the revolutionary forces will be brought up and strengthened by means of the energetic struggle of the revolutionary vanguards. Therefore, without nurturing the revolutionary vanguard fighters, no revolutionary struggle can be organized and launched and no revolutionary forward march can be successful.

To bring up the revolutionary vanguards posed in particular as an important issue in the implementation of our revolution. This had something to do with the nationalist movement and the fundamental weaknesses of the early communist movement in our country.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught us as follows:

"The early communist movement of our country failed to take root deeply among the masses and was conducted mainly among the few people of the upper strata. Instead of learning lessons from the failure of the nationalist movement launched earlier, those who conducted the early communist movement indulged in those sectarian maneuvers which, alienated from the masses, had nothing to do with the revolution." ("Selected Works of Kim Il-song," vol 7 p 258)

Around the time of the Japanese imperialist occupation, the nationalist movement was launched widely in our country. The righteous soldiers and the independence army men fought against Japanese imperialism shedding blood under the leadership of the nationalists. The patriotic cultural education movement was launched, while the mass struggle like the March First Movement was launched.

Meanwhile, following the March First Movement, the working class emerged on the stage of struggle and the communist movement began to be launched in our country.

However, the nationalist movement and the early communist movement in our country experienced nothing but miserable failures and vicissitudes due to the fundamental weaknesses they had.

The nationalists and the show-off Marxists who posed themselves as the "leaders" of the Korean independence movement and the communist movement, instead of launching the anti-Japanese revolutionary movement together with the masses, alienated themselves from the masses and indulged in nothing but "speech" studies and sectarian strifes. Tainted deeply with flunkeyism, they did not even think of carrying out the revolution on their own; they just watched one another, attempting desperately to seize so-called "leadership."

Without overcoming these fundamental weaknesses of the earlier nationalist movement and the earlier communist movement, our revolution could not have been pushed even a step forward. The historical lessons of the anti-Japanese national liberation movement in our country taught us that we had to select a new path of revolution; they clearly taught us that we had to bring up vividly new communists of a new generation who were fundamentally different from those engaged in the nationalist movement and those engaged in the early communist movement, and thereby had to organize the rank and file of the revolutionary vanguards. Only when the new path of revolution was selected and the task of bringing up the vividly new communists of a new generation was carried out, could those fundamental weaknesses of the early nationalist movement and the early communist movement be overcome, could all the forthcoming deadlocks and difficulties be overcome, and could our revolution be carried out successfully. Indeed bringing up the communists of a new generation and thereby organizing the rank and file of the revolutionary vanguards posed as a first priority task to attain the rehabilitation of the fatherland and victory in the revolution; they were urgent demands whose fulfillment could not be put off any longer.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, who, entrusted with the destiny of the fatherland and the nation, embarked on the path of revolution in such a situation as this, established a firm chuche-oriented viewpoint that only when the resources of the broad masses of people, including workers and farmers, were trusted and activated, could the victory be scored in the revolution. He then promoted the revolutionary policies and strategies and tactics to bring about the national liberation as well as the class liberation. He brought up by himself the young communists of a new generation and thereby managed to carry out the urgent tasks of the revolution of that time.

In order to organize the rank and file of the revolutionary vanguards for the purpose of nurturing a new generation of communists, the great leader first of all energetically launched organizational and political works among the youths and students.

Given the conditions of our country at that time, the revolutionary vanguard fighters could not be brought up without carrying out the work of awakening consciously and organizing the youths and students, nor could the snags be eliminated in the national liberation movement and the communist movement. This was an important factor that had something to do with the roles of the youths in the revolution and, in particular, with the characteristics of the youths and students of our country, a semi-feudal colonial society, at that time.

The youths and the students not only have a strong sense of righteousness in principle and are very sensitive to the advanced ideologies and the situation of the times, but also have a strong revolutionary impulse for eliminating the shackles in society and building up a new society. Furthermore, the youths and students of our country under the colonial rule of Japanese imperialism, suffering from the tremendous national oppression and discrimination, highly entertained the anti-Japanese ideology and the national awareness. Therefore, the youths and students were regarded as important revolutionary resources. Correctly educated and organizationally trained, they could have been brought up to be the core of communism; and they could have played a grand role in awakening the masses, including the workers and farmers, and arousing them to revolution.

However, awakening the youths and students to consciousness and organizing them were not easy tasks under the conditions of that time in which the nationalists and sectarian elements were launching cunning schemes, everywhere the Koreans lived, to deceive the masses with tricks and gimmicks and honeyed works and, in particular, to win the youths and students over to their side. Due to the influence of the nationalists and sectarian elements who were running wild in waging their sectarian strifes, the ideological trend of the youths and students was varied greatly. And, what was worse was that some youths and students blindly followed the nationalists and sectarian elements.

Under such circumstances as these, the work of awakening the youths and students and of training them organizationally to bring them up as revolutionary vanguard fighters can be successfully carried out only by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song who possessed unusual wisdom and excellent leadership.

From the early days when he organized revolutionary organs, including the Down-with-Imperialism League which was the first real communist revolutionary organization in our country, the great leader energetically launched the struggle to arm the youths and students with advanced ideologies. The great leader personally explained to the youths and students the revolutionary principles of chuche, secretly organized the "reading teams" widely in schools and the rural villages around the schools, and organized discussion meetings, lecture meetings, speech contests, and public art performances in conformity with the characteristics of the youths and students. Thus a great number of youths and students came to be staunchly armed with anti-Japanese sentiments and independent consciousness; and they were provided with the ideological and spiritual mettle of the communists of a new generation.

Furthermore, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song united the youths and students to form revolutionary organizations, energetically launching the struggle to train them organizationally.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught us as follows:

"In the past, we nurtured a new generation of communists through the organs of the Korean Communist Youth League and the Anti-Imperialist Youth League and thereby established the core around which a revolutionary armed might could be organized." ("Collected Works of Kim Il-song," vol 1, p 32)

A communist is a real revolutionary equipped with many ideological resources as well as strong revolutionary organizational resources which are constantly buttressed by the communist revolutionary spirit. No man lacking strong revolutionary organizational resources can be called a communist.

The revolutionary organizational resources of a communist are to be produced and strengthened further in the course of taking part in a revolutionary organization and of leading an organizational life. Therefore, in order to bring up communist revolutionaries equipped with strong revolutionary organizational resources, it is imperative that a revolutionary organization be founded and its organizational life be intensified.

The great leader organized various lawful organizations, including the Korean Chilin Boys Association, in order to unite the youths, boys, and students and train them organizationally. He reorganized and replaced the Down-with-Imperialism League with the Anti-Imperialist Youth League. He organized the Korean Communist Youth League. Furthermore, he closely integrated the activities of the lawful organizations with those of the unlawful organizations. He saw to it that those trained in the lawful organizations would be accepted by the unlawful revolutionary organizations and then he brought up as a revolutionary core.

The great leader wisely saw to it that the revolutionary organizations stepped up their organizational life and actively launched the indoctrination work of enlightening and awakening the masses. Thus night classes were organized in many places. The masses political work was actively launched in various forms and methods. Thus those youths and students organized to form the revolutionary organizations in these processes were rapidly brought up as revolutionary vanguard fighters equipped with skills and capabilities and the competency of organizers and the communists of a new generation capable of launching our country's anti-Japanese liberation struggle and the Communist movement.

While stepping up his organizational political work among the young communists, patriotic youths, and broad working masses, the great leader trained them further by means of actual struggle.

The actual implementation of the revolution is a forceful means of training men and bringing them up as revolutionaries. The revolutionary cores are to be brought up in the difficult and complicated struggle designed to change the old society fundamentally. And, during the struggle, the revolutionary forces are to be trained militantly.

Explaining the role of the actual implementation of the revolution to be played in bringing up the people as the communist revolutionaries, the great leader unceasingly awakened the youths, students, and the masses in training them first in the low-level struggles and the small-scale struggles and then in the high-level struggles and the large-scale struggles. The great leader first aroused the youths and students to the struggle against those reactionary military clique authorities and reactionary teachers who were collaborating with Japanese imperialism. In October-November 1928, he organized and mobilized the youths and students and the broad masses for a large-scale struggle launched against the laying of the aggressive Chilin-Hoeryong Railroad by Japanese imperialism and for boycotting the Japanese merchandise. Thus he saw to it that the anti-Japanese ideology of the youths, students, and the masses was enhanced to a higher level, and that they had faith in the power of the mass struggle.

An important factor in the great leader's struggle for bringing up the communists of a new generation was the struggle against the sectarian elements and the stubborn nationalists.

Exposing and criticizing the opportunism of the sectarian elements who were running wild in their sectarian strife, the great leader exhorted the youths and students that they should thoroughly understand the fundamental characteristics and the harmfulness of sectarianism. Thus the youths and students came to understand that the sectarian elements of our country were, without exception, those who were tainted with flunkeyism and dogmatism, the show-offs, or the political imposters; and they came to entertain the revolutionary viewpoint categorically opposing sectarianism.

Furthermore, exposing and criticizing the wrongdoings of those nationalists who indulged in the scramble for positions in the name of "the unification of the three departments," the great leader severely criticized those nationalist leaders who had dared to resort to terrorist acts in order to block the growing communist forces. He also launched an intense struggle against the theory of the nationalist revisionism of the nationalists.

In this way, thanks to the great leader's energetic activities and judicious leadership, the youths and students further awakened in terms of both national and class consciousness. From among them, a great number of chuche-type communist revolutionary fighters were brought up through practical implementation.

The young communists of a new generation who grew up in the bosom of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song made a forceful march along the unique road of chuche braving the difficulties and trials of all hues. They thus set a lofty example of the real revolutionary vanguards by means of their heroic and sacrificial struggle. In particular, they carried out the chuche-oriented revolutionary policies and strategic and tactical plans set forth by the great leader at the Chialun Conference and, by so doing, played a core-like role in enhancing our people's anti-Japanese national liberation struggle to a new higher stage, making precious achievements which would shine vividly in the history of the Korean communist movement.

The young communists of a new generation joined the KRA which was founded immediately after the historical Chialun Conference and energetically launched their political and military activities.

The KRA was a revolutionary armed organization which was founded around the cores of the Communist Youth League and the Anti-Imperialist Youth League. The Young Communists of the new generation brought up by the great leader joined in the armed subunits of the KRA and launched political activities energetically among the workers, farmers, youths and students in the urban and rural areas. They thus strongly united the masses around the leader and gained military experience in their positive military activities. They thus made great contributions to the work of providing armaments.

In particular, the armed subunit of the KRA commanded by Comrade Kim Hyong-kwon, an indomitable communist revolutionary fighter, was dispatched by the great leader to Korea. It crushed the enemy everywhere they went, including P'ung-san County, P'abal-ri, Iwon, Pukch'ong, and Hongwon. It launched political activities among the people, making the Japanese imperialists shiver. It planted seeds of revolutionary fire in the hearts of the people.

The intense political activities of the KRA subunits fully displayed the revolutionary mettle and the indomitable fighting spirit of the young communists of the new generation brought up by the great leader. They made positive contributions to making the historical day of the founding of the anti-Japanese people's guerrilla unit arrive ahead of schedule.

The communists of the new generation brought up in the bosom of the great leader played a great role in the core of the anti-Japanese guerrilla unit even in those days in which the armed struggle was launched. The rank and file of these communists grew up and became stronger unceasingly as our revolution progressed.

Indeed the vividly new Communists of the new generation excellently carried out their grave and glorious mission as revolutionary vanguard fighters who were brought up and educated by the great leader. They made immortal achievements which would go down in history for a long time as a scintillating event.

The communists of the new generation thus could make great contributions to our revolutionary developments, just because they were fully equipped with the ideological and spiritual mettle of the chuche-type communist revolutionaries, and because they meditated and acted from the thoroughly chuche-oriented viewpoint.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught us as follows:

"The newly grown real communists of Korea learned solemn lessons from the early nationalist movement and the early communist movement. Equipped with a new revolutionary world outlook, they have chosen a path of revolution entirely different from the path taken by those engaged in the nationalist movement or by those engaged in the early communist movement." ("Selected Works of Kim Il-song," vol 7, p 258)

The young communists of the new generation brought up by the great leader were the vividly new revolutionaries who were fundamentally different from those engaged in the early nationalist movement and those engaged in the early communist movement. They were the vividly new revolutionaries staunchly armed with the revolutionary world outlook of chuche. They did not belong to any faction; they were the genuine communists who grew up in the struggle against factions.

The core of the revolutionary world outlook of chuche entertained by the communists of the new generation was the untainted, clear, and pure loyalty to the great leader. Thanks to this very core, they could courageously overcome the unceasing difficulties and trials and could make real contributions to the implementation of our revolution.

The inexhaustible loyalty of the communists of the new generation to the great leader was based on the greatness of the great leader recognized by these communists in their own hearts by means of practical implementation. They were the hot-blooded youths in those early days who, painfully lamenting over the tribulations and agonies from which the country and the nation were suffering, did not know what to do after having failed to find the correct way of launching struggle. They were awakened to the revolutionary truth for the first time when they were placed in the great leader's bosom and became capable of taking part in the valuable struggle for the national liberation and the class liberation launched to save the oppressed brethren. That was the reason that they looked highly upon the great leader, that they felt greatest glory and happiness when they carried out the revolution in the bosom of the leader, that they entrusted their destiny and future entirely to the leader, and that they did everything they could in their struggle to materialize the leader's ideology and leadership.

The warm-hearted loyalty of the communists of the new generation to the great leader was expressed also in their efforts to make his name a more scintillating one. Filled with passion in their hearts in respecting and admiring the great leader, they wished that the leader would become "the star" to lead the Korean revolution; and, therefore, they called him Comrade Kim Il-song--using the Chinese character "il" that meant "one" and the Chinese character "song" which meant "star"--or Comrade Han Pyol [literally "one star"]. Then, later, they thought that such a great leader would not just be called "one star," wishing now that he would become the sun of Korea. Thus they corrected his name into a new "Comrade Kim Il-song"--using the Chinese character "il" which meant "sun" and the Chinese character "song" that meant "achieve."

"The Star of Korea," an immortal revolutionary hymn, is one of the actual examples that show how enthusiastically the young communists of the new generation admired and how highly they looked upon the great leader. In an earnest desire to respectfully admire the great leader as the revolutionary leader and the center of unification and unity of the revolutionary rank and file, the communists of the new generation widely publicized among the masses the immortal hymn "The Star of Korea" written by a revolutionary poet Comrade Kim Hyok. Singing the hymn loudly, they looked highly upon and admired the leader as the sun of the nation.

Indeed the young communists of the new generation were the excellent examples of the chuche-type communist revolutionaries who clearly showed by means of practical implementation the mode and attitude of admiring the great leader.

Thinking and acting only in accordance with the demands of the great leader's chuche ideology were important ideological and spiritual characteristics of the young communists of the new generation who grew up nurished by the chuche ideology.

They categorically rejected the flunkeyism and dogmatism of those who were engaged in the nationalist movement and those who were engaged in the communist movement in the early days. They had a deep feeling of self-consciousness of the masters of the Korean revolution. They consistently held fast to their independent viewpoint under all circumstances. They deeply infiltrated into the masses of the working people, traversing along the road of the immortal chuche ideology. They stepped up the political works, highly displayed the revolutionary spirit of self-reliance, and overcame the difficulties and stumbling blocks which were forthcoming.

In this way, the communists of the new generation, entertaining the great leader's chuche ideology as their firm world outlook and the firm conviction, conducted all their work independently and creatively. They thereby could excellently carry out the mission and roles of the revolutionary vanguard fighters; and they could make active contributions to the implementation of the revolutionary cause of chuche.

Furthermore, the young communists of the new generation were the prototypes of the real chuche-type communist revolutionaries equipped with the indomitable fighting spirit.

They never hesitated or became unsettled in the face of difficulties. They forcefully marched forward to score victory in our revolution no matter how adverse the circumstances were. They gave up their youth and even lives, if necessary, in implementing the great leader's chuche-oriented revolutionary policies and the strategic and tactical plans. They risked their lives to guard the secret information about the revolutionary organizations. Such an indomitable revolutionary spirit and the inexhaustible sacrifice-readiness of the young communists of the new generation strongly encouraged the revolutionary comrades and the people; and the lofty mettle of the anti-Japanese revolutionary rank and file was caused by them.

Indeed the young communists of the new generation who grew up in the great leader's bosom were the vividly new and strong communists armed with the revolutionary world outlook of chuche. They were the real chuche-type revolutionaries who were trained and tested and who set excellent examples of the revolutionary vanguard fighters.

Today on the occasion of the 50th anniversary of the Chialun Conference, our party members and the workers, recollecting the lofty revolutionary spirit and the excellent meritorious services of the young communists of the new generation who grew up in the great leader's bosom in our early revolutionary days and who displayed loyalty to the leader looking highly up to him in the struggle, have the unisonous burning wish to display their full loyalty to the great leader and the cause of chuche, just as the young communists did.

Following the examples of the lofty revolutionary spirit displayed by our revolutionary forerunners, we will be loyal to the great leader and the glorious party through to the end and thereby will speed up the march of the cause of chuche.

Pyongyang KULLOJA in Korean No 7, Jul 80 pp 2-7

[Text] Our people will be greeting the Sixth Congress of the glorious Korean Workers Party before too long.

As they are about to greet the Sixth Party Congress which will be a new milestone in the development of our party and our revolution, the entire party members and people come to look back with moving emotions on the road resplendent with victory and glory our party has walked under the sagacious leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song.

The 35 years our party has walked is a brilliant history in which it has led the Korean revolution to victory and glory, overcoming multilayer barriers and trials under the banner of chuche, a prideful history in which it has achieved the steely unity and solidarity of the party ranks based one one thought, the great leader's chuche ideology.

Today within our party the chuche ideology system has been firmly established, and the entire party and the whole society are overflowing with fervor of spotlessly clear and clean loyalty to the respected and beloved leader.

Our party has become monoaxial combat ranks breathing and moving as one organic body based on the great leader's chuche ideology.

The brilliant realization of the unity and solidarity in ideological will of the party ranks based on the chuche ideology--this is the most precious of the gains of revolution won by our party, a great pride of our party and people.

Because of the presence of this invincible unity and solidarity, our party has been able to lead always to brilliant victory the Korean revolution filled with hardships, to compile imperishable great achievements that will shine for centuries to come.

To guard like the apple of the eye the airtight unity and solidarity of our party and even more solidly consolidate it constitutes an important guarantee for ceaselessly strengthening and developing the party, for realizing the independent reunification of the fatherland and winning the ultimate victory of our revolutionary cause.

By even more solidly strengthening the invincible unity and solidarity of the party ranks we must strengthen the might of the party in every possible way and bring about a new upsurge in socialist construction.

The politicoideological unity and revolutionary solidarity of the entire party based on the leader's revolutionary thought is a source of invincible strength and the decisive guarantee for all victories of the party of the working class.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"The unity of the party in ideological will is our life, the decisive guarantee for all victories." ("On Building the Korean Workers Party," Vol 2, p 660)

To firmly insure the bedrock-like unity and solidarity of the party ranks based on the leader's revolutionary thought and centered around the leader is the basic principle for the construction of the revolutionary party of the working class and a crucial question influencing victory or defeat in revolution and construction.

The unity and solidarity of the party ranks is a principled question that decides the fate of the party.

The socialist, communist cause which the party of the working class carries out is a difficult and complex task which is conducted over a long period of time.

If the party of the working class, General Staff and vanguard of the revolution, is to acquit itself fully of its lofty mission, it must achieve airtight unity and solidarity based on the leader's thought and centered around the leader.

Historical experience of the communist movement shows that when the party of the working class has failed to achieve firm unity and solidarity as one based on the leader's revolutionary thought, factions always emerge within the party and that such party can neither correctly lead revolution and construction nor maintain its own existence as an organized force.

The more the party of the working class faces weighty and enormous tasks and the more the revolution deepens and develops, the more solidly it must consolidate its ranks organizationally and ideologically. Even as the revolution moves forward a great distance and generations change hands, the unity and solidarity of the party, unshaken in the slightest, must be firmly protected and defended and solidified to the end. Such unity and solidarity alone that is continued from generation to generation can become genuine unity and solidarity. Such unity and solidarity can be brilliantly realized when it is solidly turned into one political force, based on the revolutionary thought of the leader who first charted the road to revolution, and centered around the leader.

Only if the party of the working class firmly insures the steely unity and solidarity of the party ranks based on only one thought and centered around the leader, can it become a monoaxial militant organization where the entire party moves as one organic body and victoriously leads revolution and construction, crushing all enemy machinations.

The history of our party is a history of struggle from the beginning aimed at realizing the unity and solidarity of the party ranks based on the great leader's chuche ideology, and all the victories won by our party are the luscious fruits brought by the invincible unity and solidarity of our party provided by the respected and beloved leader.

Indeed incalculably many barriers and trials lay on the road ahead for our party and people who, with the revolutionary banner of the chuche ideology held high, were charting a new path to revolution, crushing all enemy machinations.

The imperialists headed by U.S. imperialism went berserk in their attempt to strangle our revolution, and the antiparty factional elements, who had crawled into the party, came out to viciously perpetrate their machinations of division and sabotage against the party every time our party and people went through difficult trials.

One account of the harmful acts of the flunkeys and dogmatists, it was not once or twice that our party had to turn corners of formidable trial.

Only because of the presence of the sagacious leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song possessed of uncommon wisdom and scientific insights, revolutionary spirit of principle and extraordinary launching power and outstanding leadership art have we been able to even more solidly guard the unity and solidarity of the party, overcoming all the multilayer barriers and trials of every description.

The great leader, laying it down as the basic question of party construction to establish the unitary ideology system of the party, has always directed his deep concern to this task and as the situation became more complex and the struggle more arduous, cleared the existing difficult situation with the united might of the entire party, holding aloft the banner of unity and solidarity, and strengthened and developed ours into an invincible revolutionary party.

Truly, the brilliant realization of unity and solidarity of the party ranks based on the chuche ideology system represents the priceless fruition of the sagacious leadership of the respected and beloved leader and a great victory won in our party construction.

The invincible unity and solidarity of our party is reaching a new higher level today and has become a solid one that nothing can break.

Amid the majestic struggle to convert the entire party and the whole society to the chuche ideology the politicoideological unity and revolutionary solidarity of the entire people is being extraordinarily strengthened and the entire party is being solidly organized into pure combat ranks where nothing but the clear chuche-type blood flows.

Today ours has become a highly prideful party which has realized unity and solidarity unprecedented in the history of the communist movement, unity and solidarity on the purest and highest level based on the unitary ideology system.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"There is no such great party, no such great people in the world as in our country where all people, thoroughly armed with the unitary ideology of the party, are solidly united around the party and move as one person at the command of the party." ("Kim Il-song Selected Works," Vol 7, p 459)

The unity and solidarity of our party, which has been achieved by the sagacious leadership of the respected and beloved leader and the party, is reaching the lofitest level and is a great one that is most solid with invincible vitality.

The invincibility of the unity and solidarity of our party lies above all in that it is pure unity and solidarity based on boundless faithfulness to the great leader.

The unity and solidarity of the party becomes a most solid one possessed of vitality when based on the intense consciousness and awareness of the mass of party members springing from their high respect and trust and boundless loyalty to the leader who has founded the party and is still leading it.

For the mass of party members to trust and respect their leader is not under any coercion but is a lofty ideological feeling that is achieved based on their deep recognition of the sagacity of the leader's leadership through actual struggle for revolution and construction. Therefore, there is absolutely nothing that can tear down the trust and respect of the masses for the leader.

The unsurpassed trust and respect of our party members and people for the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has been an absolute one from the first day they began attending the leader and a maniestation of spotlessly pure awareness that has struck deep roots in their hearts and grown amid the practice of the formidable revolutionary struggle.

The great leader who early on embarked on the road to revolution, by charting a bright path for the Korean revolution and sagaciously leading our revolution, ushered in a new era of rewarding revolution, putting an end to the long history of national suffering, and has since dynamically led our people along the one road of glorious struggle and prideful victory.

By moving forward following the sagacious leadership of the great leader, our people were able to build a growing and prosperous new fatherland, brilliantly attaining the sacred cause of fatherland restoration, and every one of them has come to enjoy an independent and creative life to his heart's content, erecting in this land a socialist power proud of its self-dependence, self-support, and self-defense.

Because of the presence of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, our people have become a most prideful people, a most dignified and happy people in the world. Away from the great leader, all the glory and happiness, pride and prestige being enjoyed by our people are absolutely unthinkable.

So it is that, firmly believing that it is on the road of loyally attending the great leader that there are the victory of the revolution, the bright future of the nation, and their own happiness, our party members and people have always believed and followed none but the leader and resolutely protected and defended the high authority of the leader. That it has been possible to steadfastly continue the lifeblood of our revolution, overcoming all trials, however formidable, and that our people, majestically rising from the ashes like the phoenix, have been able to work heroic exploits and astounding miracles, is entirely due to the presence of the sagacious leadership of the great leader and to the fact that the masses of people, with boundless loyalty to the leader, have stouly fought on, following the banner of the party.

The unity and solidarity of our party, because it is based on such warm loyalty of our party members and people to the great leader, their firm faith to believe and follow none but the leader like the sunflower following the sun and uphold the teachings of the leader, has become a most solid and invincible one.

The invincible might of the unity and solidarity of our party also lies in that it is unity and solidarity wherein the entire party breathes and moves as one organic body based on one thought, the immortal chcuhe ideology.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"It may be said that only today has the unity and solidarity of the party we the communists wanted so much to see been completely realized on the basis of the unitary chuche ideology system." ("Kim Il-song Selected Works," Vol 5, 2d impression, p 504)

If the unity and solidarity of the party of the working class is to become a truly solid one with vitality, it is imperative that the entire party must be firmly united in ideological will based on one thought, the leader's revolutionary thought.

The leader's revolutionary thought is the unitary guiding thought of the party and the ideological cornerstone of unity and solidarity for uniting the entire party in one ideological will. The genuine unity and solidarity of the party of the working class lies in the united force of the entire party in ideological will based on the leader's revolutionary thought and centered around the leader. Only if the unity and solidarity of the party represents not some united force in terms of business performance but united forces in ideological will based on one thought, the revolutionary thought of the leader who has founded the party, can it become a truly solid one.

United force achieved in terms of business performance, not firmly united in ideological will on the basis of the leader's revolutionary thought, cannot prevent the infiltration of all kinds of subversive ideas and the perpetration of factional acts; consequently, such united force cannot be solid nor can it last long. Only such unity and solidarity, i.e., the entire party firmly united in ideological will with only one thought, the leader's revolutionary thought, as the ideological cornerstone, represents a most solid, invincible unity and solidarity with vitality, unwavering in any storm or trial.

The revolutionary thought of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the chuche ideology, is the immutal guiding thought of our party and represents the unitary ideological cornerstone of unity and solidarity.

The invincible might of our party's unity and solidarity lies in that the entire party is firmly united in ideological will on the basis of the immortal chuche ideology, the genuine revolutionary world outlook of the working class and the most precise guiding thought for the revolution and construction of our time.

Today our party members, holding the great chuche ideology as the unitary faith, are thinking and acting only in accordance with the demands of the chuche ideology anytime anywhere, and are struggling for the ultimate victory of the chuche ideology. The entire party and the whole society are brimming with the revolutionary attitude whereby the teachings of the great leader and the guidelines of the party are being unconditionally and thoroughly carried through and party members and working people, solidly united around the leader and the party, are thinking and acting as one person.

Our party has firmly achieved a most pure unity in ideological will where literally only the chuche ideology pulsates. Precisely herein lies the might of the invincibility of our party's unity and solidarity.

The unity and solidarity achieved by our party is the genuine unity and solidarity wherein the entire party thinks and acts only in accordance with the demands of the great leader's revolutionary thought, the chuche ideology, and with such unity and solidarity firmly established, ours has become a revolutionary party possessed of invincible might and combat strength.

The invincibility of our party's unity and solidarity also lies in that it is the unity and solidarity firmly united in genuine love among the revolutionary comrades sharing life and death, joys and sorrows alike on the one road of revolution indicated by the great leader.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"Genuine unity and solidarity among the people participating in revolutionary tasks is achieved on the basis of revolutionary camaraderie." ("Kim Il-song Selected Works," Vol 6, pp 504-505)

Revolutionary camaraderie is genuine love among the comrades sharing life and death on the one road of struggle to realize the leader's revolutionary thought. Revolutionary camaraderie is the most valued love among revolutionary comrades which enables them to attain to the end the revolutionary cause charted by the leader, solidly united as they help each other and lead each other on so as to keep shining eternally the political life bestowed on them by the leader.

Love among the revolutionary comrades solidly unites them in pure revolutionary integrity to fight on to the end to realize the one thought, the leader's revolutionary thought, holding it as the unitary faith, anytime in any environment, and in lofty revolutionary ethics to share life and death on the road of revolution.

Because love among the revolutionary comrades consolidates their thought, encourages and urges each other on, and makes them struggle all together so as to achieve revolutionary unity, it is the most valued love which makes it possible to attain to the end the revolutionary cause charted by the leader. There is no force that can smash the revolutionary ranks firmly united in genuine love among the revolutionary comrades.

Today our party is firmly united in genuine love among the revolutionary comrades based on boundless faithfulness to the great leader.

Our party ranks, fervently espousing the great leader's revolutionary thought, the chuche ideology, are firmly united in genuine love among the revolutionary comrades who have fought on faithfully for scores of years as one day for the ultimate victory of the chuche cause.

Firmly united in camaraderie based on boundless faithfulness to the great leader is where the invincible might of our party's unity and solidarity is, where a reliable guarantee for all of our victories is.

The invincibility of our party's unity and solidarity also lies in that it is unity and solidarity solidly consolidated amid formidable trials of the revolutionary struggle.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"In the course of carrying out difficult and complex revolutionary tasks, in the course of fierce struggle against internal and external enemies, our party has been further tested and tempered, and strengthened and developed into an invincible revolutionary party." ("Kim Il-song Selected Works," Vol 5, 2d impression, p 502)

Only amid arduous and formidable storms of the revolution can the might of unity and solidarity of the party be strengthened and consolidated into an invincible one that nothing can break. Precisely such unity and solidarity alone can become the real unity and solidarity capable of overcoming any trial or tempest.

Ours is an invincible revolutionary party which, continuing the brilliant tradition of unity and solidarity achieved amid the flames of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle, was further tested and tempered in the difficult and complex struggle for carrying out the fierce Fatherland Liberation War to crush the armed invasion of the allied imperialist forces headed by U.S. imperialism as well as the social revolution in two stages.

Our revolution has by no means been plain sailing. Our party has won great victory, brilliantly carrying out with its own strength revolutionary tasks in many stages amid complex struggle accompanied by multilayer trials of all kinds.

In the course of leading the fierce revolutionary war against U.S. imperialism, the mastermind of world reaction, and its lackeys, and the complex revolutionary struggle to victory, our party completely swept away betrayers of the revolution and the rabble, solidly organized the party ranks with pure, core elements of the revolution, and strengthened and developed itself into mighty, militant General Staff, into a mellow, tested revolutionary party leading the Korean revolution to brilliant victory, unwavering in any tempest or trial.

Our party members have further tempered themselves politicoideologically amid the arduous struggle of the past 35 years since the founding of the party, guarding like the apple of the eye the unity and solidarity of the party based on the great leader's revolutionary thought.

With their deep conviction that victory is inevitable as long as there is the sagacious leadership of the great leader and they are firmly united around the party, all of our party members and people have believed and followed none but the respected and beloved leader and our party, and have been united around the leader and the party as one person even as barriers and trials blocked their road ahead.

Every time a difficult environment appeared, the great leader, believing in our party members and people, relied on them, and our party members and people, believing and following none but the leader and our party, have won victory, overcoming all barriers and trials.

No enemy machinations of division and sabotage, no barriers and trials standing in our way have been able to break the airtight unity and solidarity of our party based on the great leader's chuche ideology, nor have they been able to shake in the slightest the unanimous loyalty to the respected and beloved leader of our party members and people which has taken its place deep in their minds.

There is no force in this world that can shatter the invincible unity and solidarity of our party which has been achieved amid formidable storms of the revolution, and consolidated solid as steel in every tempest and trial.

Because of the presence of this great unity and solidarity, our party has been strengthened and developed into an ever victorious revolutionary party leading the hardship-filled Korean revolution along the one road of victory; generating a great revolutionary wind of upswing even in the difficult postwar period when internal and external enemies were wriggling and everything was in short supply, was able to write a new chapter in history with Chollima March; and successfully carrying out the difficult task of industrialization within a short span of time, was able to transform the centuries-backward country of ours into a socialist power of self-dependence, self-support, and self-defense.

Truly, the unity and solidarity of our party is unity and solidarity wherein the entire party breathes and moves as one organic body based on the immortal chuche ideology, the purest and loftiest unity and solidarity based on boundless faithfulness to the respected and beloved leader, genuine unity and solidarity united in true love among the revolutionary comrades sharing life and death on the one road of revolution toward attainment of the chuche cause, great unity and solidarity possessed of invincible might and vitality which has overcome every tempest and trial.

The airtight unity and solidarity based on the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's chuche ideology--this is the most valued of the gains of the revolution won by our party, that cannot be traded for anything.

This invincible unity and solidarity is a firm guarantee for turning our party into a forever chuche-oriented revolutionary party for today and the future, into the glorious Comrade Kim Il-song's party, and is a source of strength determining all of our victories and achievements.

In order to attain to the end the chuche cause charted in the Paektu forests, we must thoroughly prepare ourselves politicoideologically and keep on further consolidating like bedrock the unity and solidarity of our party.

Firmly protecting and defending and solidly consolidating the invincible unity and solidarity of our party based on the immortal chuche ideology is where a firm guarantee for further strengthening the might of our party in the future the same as in the past and leading the revolution to a ceaseless upsurge is.

Today our party and our revolution are facing a great historic period of turnaround in their development. At this time when a majestic struggle is under way to greet the Sixth Party Congress with high political fervor and brilliant labor achievements and a brighter vista is being unfolded before us, all party, all people, and all army, solidly united in one mind, in one will around the great leader and the glorious party, must brilliantly realize the militant slogan laid down by the party.

By continuing to deepen and develop the task of establishing the unitary ideology system partywide in order to ceaselessly strengthen the unity and solidarity of the party, we must firmly insure the politico-ideological unity of the party and its purity and strengthen in every possible way the combat strength and leadership power of party organizations.

Like members of the Anti-Japanese Guerrillas in bygone days who resolutely defended the command of the revolution to the death, offering their youth and lives, we must protect and defend the great leader and the glorious Party Center politicoideologically and with our lives, and continue to stoutly fight for the victory of the chuche cause.

By keeping on consolidating into an even more invincible one the unity and solidarity of the party based on the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song's chuche ideology, we shall energetically advance the cause for converting the whole society to the chuche ideology and pridefully display before the whole world the Sixth Party Congress of the glorious Korean Workers Party as a congress of great unity and solidarity, as a congress of the victor.

THE CHUCHE IDEOLOGY AND THE MASS LINE

[Article by Yi Song-chun]

[Text] To have a scientific and revolutionary guiding thought and in addition, a correct mass guidance principle capable of successfully embodying the guiding thought is one of the basic questions arising before the party of the working class to victoriously lead revolution and construction.

Only if the party of the working class puts forward a revolutionary mass guidance principle based on a correct revolutionary thought, can it win victory in revolution and construction, energetically organizing and mobilizing the masses of working people, the subject of history and the driving force for social development. However correct a guiding thought may be laid down, if it is not underlined with a mass guidance principle and leadership art aimed at precisely embodying it, then the revolutionary struggle and construction tasks cannot be successfully conducted.

Therefore, to have a correct mass guidance principle along with a scientific and revolutionary guiding thought arises as an important requirement for the party of the working class to properly lead the revolutionary struggle and construction tasks.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, by founding the thought regarding the mass line based on the immortal chuche ideology, has provided a firm guarantee for thoroughly protecting the interests of the masses of working people, the master of revolution and construction, and energetically organizing and mobilizing them.

The immortal chuche ideology founded by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is a most scientific revolutionary world outlook and a correct guiding thought for the revolution and construction of our time. The chuche ideology is the unitarily correct guiding compass for successfully solving all theoretical and practical questions arising in the revolution and construction of our time and the ideotheoretical, methodological cornerstone of all principles of party activity, and party lines and policies.

The mass line, which is the basic principle of our party activity, is based on the chuche ideology.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"The mass line is the basic principle of our party activity based on the chuche ideology that the working masses are the master of everything and resolve everything." ("Kim Il-song Selected Works," Vol 7, p 84)

To say that the chuche ideology is the cornerstone of the mass line means that the mass line, flowing from the doctrine of the chuche ideology, is a mass leadership principle which embodies the demands of the chuche ideology.

The chuche ideology above all constitutes the theoretical cornerstone of the mass line.

The chuche ideology is based on the philosophical doctrine that man is the master of everything and resolves everything. Why man is the master of the world, the decisive factor in changing and developing nature and society is because man is the most developed, energetic social being possessed of independent and creative stand and attitude. Because man possesses independent and creative stand and attitude, man goes on to remake the world to suit his will and demand through his purposeful, active activity. It is man who remakes nature and society and so is man who develops science and technology. Therefore, man becomes the master ruling the world and the decisive factor in resolving everything.

The chuche ideology, embodying in social history the philosophical doctrine that man is the master of everything and resolves everything, elucidates the great truth that the master of revolution and construction is man and that the propelling force for revolution and construction also resides in the masses of people.

Revolution and construction is a task for the sake of the masses of people. To put it another way, it is a struggle to enable the masses of people to cast off all manner of enslavement, to provide them with an independent and creative life.

Revolution and construction also is a task of the masses of people themselves. No one can substitute for the masses of people in the task of the masses of people to cast off all manner of enslavement. Only by their own struggle can the masses of people liquidate exploitation and oppression of every description, become the genuine master of the state and society, and enjoy an independent and creative life. And the masses of people possess an inexhaustible strength capable of carrying out revolution and construction on their own and building an independent and creative life. Thus revolution and construction is a task for the sake of the masses of people, and because the masses of people possess the strength capable of carrying out revolution and construction with their own hands, they become the master of revolution and construction and the decisive force propelling revolution and construction.

The basic demands of the mass line flow from the doctrine of the chuche ideology that the master of revolution and construction is the masses of people and that the propelling force for revolution and construction also resides in the masses of people.

Inasmuch as the master of revolution and construction is the masses of people, the party of the working class and the communists must necessarily hold it as their supreme duty to protect the interests of the masses of people, to serve the masses of people.

Again, inasmuch as the decisive propelling force for revolution and construction resides in the masses of people, the party must thoroughly rely on the strength of the masses of people in order to victoriously lead revolution and construction. To this end, they must be solidly united around the party and their creative strength maximally set in motion. The strength which the masses of people display in revolution and construction is highly exerted when they are organized, united in terms of class and armed with the revolutionary thought. Therefore, the party of the working class, firmly uniting the masses of working people around itself and giving priority to work with people, political work, must maximally promote their revolutionary fervor and creative positivity.

Thus from the doctrine of the chuche ideology flow the fundamental demands of the mass line which the party of the working class must carry through in mass leadership.

The chuche ideology is not only the theoretical cornerstone of the mass line but makes it possible to properly carry through the mass line by establishing a correct ideological viewpoint toward the masses of people.

What principle to carry through in mass leadership depends on the viewpoint toward the masses. The chuche ideology, above all providing the viewpoint that regards the masses of people as the master of revolution and construction--confidence in the strength of the masses of people--makes it possible for the party of the working class to always faithfully serve for the sake of the masses of people in leading revolution and construction and to thoroughly carry through the revolutionary mass line that firmly relies on their strength.

The chuche ideology, also by providing the viewpoint that places their country's revolution at the center, and the stand and attitude for assuming full responsibility for their country's revolution, makes it possible for the party of the working class and the communists to correctly embody the demands of the mass line.

To say to place its own country's revolution at the center of thinking and to hold an attitude befitting the master toward its country's revolution means that, starting from the interests of its own people and the interests of its revolution, the party of the working class holds fast to the independent stand that it thinks out all questions with its own head and solves them with its own strength, displaying the revolutionary spirit of self-reliance, and to the creative stand that, setting in motion the revolutionary fervor and creative positivity of the masses of people, the party makes them solve all questions on their own to suit the specific conditions of their country. Therefore, only if the party of the working class tightly maintains the independent stand and the creative stand in leading revolution and construction, can it thoroughly protect the interests of the masses of people, thoroughly rely on the strength of the broad masses,and firmly turn around revolution and construction as the task of the masses themselves, maximally promoting their revolutionary fervor and creative positivity. Because in this manner the chuche ideology correctly elucidates the basic stand and basic method to which the party of the working class must adhere in revolution and construction, it makes it possible to most thoroughly embody the demands of the mass line.

Thus the immortal chuche ideology is a great thought elucidating the ideotheoretical cornerstone of the mass line.

If the chuche ideology constitutes the ideotheoretical cornerstone of the mass line, the mass line constitutes a basic guarantee for thoroughly embodying the chuche ideology in all areas of revolution and construction.

This is so above all because only if the mass line is carried through, is it possible to realize the chuche ideology calling for liberating the masses of working people from all manner of enslavement and turning them into the genuine masterof nature and society.

The chuche ideology is a most people-minded thought aimed at liberating the masses of working people from social enslavement and the constraints of nature and at completely realizing their independent stand and attitude, and is a revolutionary thought illuminating the correct road to it. If the chuche ideology is to be realized, a though that holds the lofty mission which is people-minded from start to finish to protect the independent stand and attitude of the masses of working people, a thought that holds the revolutionary spirit to uncompromisingly struggle against every constraint holding down the independent stand and attitude of the masses of working people, the party must positively rely on the strength of the masses, holding it as its supreme principle to thoroughly protect the interests of the masses of working people and faithfully serve them.

"Our party's mass line is to positively protect the interests of the masses of working people, to indoctrinate and remold the masses and unite them around the party, and to carry out revolution and construction, believing in the strength of the masses and setting the masses in motion." (Ibid., p 263)

The mass line is a principle which holds it as the first and foremost duty of those fighting revolution to protect the interests and rights of the people, to solidly organize the revolutionary forces, going in among the people and indoctrinating and remolding them and uniting them around the party, and to carry out the revolutionary tasks, gaining strength and wisdom from the masses and highly promoting their revolutionary fervor and creative positivity. The mass line is permeated with infinite love for the masses of people, boundless faithfulness to devote all for the sake of the people, and firm faith in the strength of the people. Therefore, only if the mass line is thoroughly carried through, is it possible to successfully carry out the revolutionary struggle for the realization of independent stand and attitude, the revolutionary cause aimed at embodying the chuche ideology.

What makes the realization of the mass line a basic guarantee for thoroughly embodying the chuche ideology is also the fact that it makes the masses of working people guard their position as the master in revolution and construction and acquit themselves fully of their role as the master.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"Most important in establishing the chuche ideology is commendably conducting work with people. The reason is because it is man who resolves all questions." ("Answers to Questions Posed by Foreign Journalists," p 347)

The chuche ideology is a thought that calls upon the masses of working people to protect their interests and fully discharge their responsibility as the master and enhance their role as the master, in revolution and construction. Now, this is not to say that the masses of working people spontaneously occupy the position as the master anytime anywhere and acquit themselves fully of their role as the master. Only under the correct leadership of the revolutionary party of the working class can the masses of working people occupy the position as the master of revolution and acquit themselves fully of their responsibility and role as the master.

The mass line is precisely the mass guidance principle that enables the party to make the masses of people hold a heightened awareness as the master of revolution and to lead them to acquit themselves fully of their responsibility and role as the master. Therefore, only if the mass line is carried through, is it possible for the masses of people to brilliantly embody the chuche ideology in all areas of revolution and construction, with a high sense of responsibility and awareness as the master toward the revolution.

Why the mass line makes it possible to enable the masses of working people to acquit themselves fully of their responsibility and role as the master in revolution and construction is especially because it makes it possible for the party of the working class to possess a powerful leadership art.

The question relating to leadership art is a question relating to the method, ingenuity, and ability of the party of the working class in organizing and mobilizing the masses in revolution and construction. Only if the party of the working class possesses a correct leadership art, can it ably organize and mobilize the masses of working people in the revolutionary struggle and construction tasks and make them acquit themselves fully of their responsibility and role as the master in revolution and construction.

Because the mass line above all provides a powerful mass guidance method inspiring a mass movement, it enables the masses of working people to acquit themselves fully of their responsibility and role as the master in revolution and construction.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"We also have successfully carried out numerous enormous and difficult construction tasks by means of launching a mass movement."
("Kim Il-song Selected Works," Vol 4, 2d impression, p 225)

The mass movement is one great revolutionary movement in which the broad masses of working people, accepting as their own the revolutionary tasks laid down, and rising up and helping each other and leading each other on, successfully carry them out; a powerful forward movement in which all party, all country, and all people, setting themselves in motion, dynamically push ahead with revolution and construction, bringing about ceaseless innovations in all areas of the economy and culture, thought and morality. In particular, the communistic mass movement is a movement that has organically combined the ideological remolding task to turn all working people into genuine communist revolutionaries, with the task to achieve collective innovations in economic and cultural construction. This is a mass forward movement to bring up all working people as genuine revolutionaries, indoctrinating and remolding their ideological consciousness the communist way, to solidly unite them around the leader and the party, and to build socialism, communism, even better and still faster, highly promoting their revolutionary fervor and creativity.

This being so, the mass movement is a method which has embodied in mass leadership the mass line for thoroughly relying on the strength of the masses of working people, for setting the masses in motion and carrying out the revolutionary tasks, and as such, is a most revolutionary and positive mass guidance method, an outstanding leadership art for mobilizing all potentials and possibilities to the hilt in revolution and construction and maximally hastening the victory of the revolutionary cause.

Thoroughly carrying through the mass line not only inspires a mass movement but constitutes an indispensable condition for ceaselessly deepening and developing it in keeping with the developing revolution.

If the mass movement is to deepen and develop, it is imperative to continue to highly promote without letup the political fervor and revolutionary spirit of the masses, and to this end, to correctly set forth the goal and task, the form and developmental stages of the mass movement to suit the politicoideological preparedness level, aim and demand of the masses, and the demands of the developing revolution, and to energetically launch work with people, political work. All these questions arising in deepening and developing the mass movement can be successfully solved only if the party, thoroughly realizing the mass lines, goes in deep among the masses, lends a willing ear to the voice of the masses, solidly unites them around the party and the leader, and ceaselessly enhances their revolutionary fervor and creative positivity.

The Chollima Work Team movement initiated by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, which was a powerful driving force for socialist, communist construction, and the ensuing campaign for capturing the red flag of the three revolutions, into which the movement was further deepened and developed, are precisely a brilliant embodiment, prideful fruition of the revolutionary mass line of our party.

The mass line, by providing not only the organizational and guidance method of the mass movement but also the revolutionary work method for the functionaries, makes the masses of working people acquit themselves fully of their responsibility and role as the master in revolution and construction.

The revolutionary work method is a question relating to the mode of activity of the functionaries in ably organizing and mobilizing the masses of working people in carrying out the revolutionary tasks. Only if this question is correctly solved, is it possible to closely combine guidance and the masses, to make the masses of working people guard their position as the master in revolution and construction and acquit themselves fully of their responsibility and role as the master. Therefore, if the party of the working class is to lead revolution and construction to victory, it must establish a revolutionary and scientific work method and to this end, must create a work method embodying the mass line which is the mass leadership principle based on the chuche ideology.

The Anti-Japanese Guerrillas style work method which the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song created amid the flames of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle, and which was conretized and developed into the Ch'ongsan-ri method to suit the new reality of socialist construction, is precisely the synthesization and admirable model of the revolutionary work method embodying the mass line.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"The Ch'ongsan-ri spirit and the Ch'ongsan-ri method are our party's traditional revolutionary mass line concretized and developed to suit the new reality of socialist construction." (Ibid., p 298)

The mass line is thoroughly embodied in the basic demands of the Ch'ongsan-ri method in which higher level organs help lower level organs and superiors help subordinates and going down to the field all the time, observe and grasp the state of affairs and establish the correct means of solving questions, and giving priority to political work, work with people, in all tasks and mobilizing the self-awakened fervor and initiative of the masses, carry out the revolutionary tasks. Precisely this being, the Ch'ongsan-ri method displays its power as a revolutionary work method which makes the masses of working people acquit themselves fully of their responsibility and role in revolution and construction, and represents a powerful weapon for thoroughly embodying the chuche ideology in all areas of revolution and construction.

Thus if the chuche ideology is the most correct guiding thought for revolution and construction, the mass line embodies the chuche ideology in the sphere of mass leadership and as such, is the mass guidance principle which makes it possible to successfully carry out revolution and construction in accordance with the demands of the chuche ideology.

The mass line based on the chuche ideology is the leadership principle which the party of the working class must necessarily carry through in order to lead revolution and construction to victory.

The mass line above all is the leadership principle which the party must firmly maintain in order to correctly establish and successfully carry through its lines and policies in all areas of revolution and construction.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"Our party acquaints the masses of people with the intent of the party and synthesizes their creative opinions, and based thereon, formulates its lines and policies. Therefore, the lines and policies of our party enjoy the absolute support of the masses of people, and by the combined strength of the party and the masses, all lines and policies are being successfully carried through." ("Answers to Questions Posed by Foreign Journalists," p 203)

The activity of the party which leads revolution and construction is essentially a task to formulate lines and policies and carry them through, mobilizing the masses. If the party is to lead revolution and construction to victory, it must formulate the most correct lines and policies and energetically orgnize and mobilize the masses in carrying them through.

Inasmuch as the lines and policies of the party are for the sake of protecting the interests of the masses of working people, which must be accepted by the masses themselves, they must through and through reflect the demands and aims of the masses and must be formulated to suit the mental and other preparedness levels of the masses of people. Again, the lines and policies of the party must be formulated as a compass for leading revolution and construction to victory to suit the demands of the developing revolution and subjective and objective conditions, and must enunciate the means of successfully resolving the revolutionary tasks at hand. Such demands arising in formulating the lines and policies of the party can be realized only if the mass line is carried through. Only by going in among the masses and lending a willing ear to their voice in accordance with the demands of the mass line is it possible to understand the demands, aims, and mental preparedness level of the masses and seek out a correct means of solving questions. It is the masses of working people who know the reality best. If the experiences and opinions of the broad masses are synthesized and systematized, it is possible to precisely grasp the reality and seek out a correct means of solving questions. Therefore,for the party to carry through the mass line constitutes a basic guarantee for insuring people-mindedness, scientific nature, and revolutionary character in formulating lines and policies.

If the party of the working class formulates its lines and policies without adhering to the mass line, it will inevitably commit the error of subjectivism nor can it escape pseudoleftist and rightist tiltings and in the end, will make a mess of revolution and construction, divorced from the masses.

None but the lines and policies formulated in adherence to the mass line will suit the demands of the developing revolution and the interests and aims of the people and will become the truly people-minded, scientific, revolutionary lines and policies illuminating the correct way of solving the mature questions presented by life.

The key to successfully carrying through the lines and policies of the party also lies in carrying through the mass guidance principle embodying the chuche ideology--the revolutionary mass line.

However correct lines and policies may be formulated, they cannot be realized unless the masses are correctly organized and mobilized in carrying them through. The party which is divorced from the masses and does not know how to organize and mobilize the masses, not only cannot lead revolution and construction, it cannot maintain its own existence. The lines and policies of the party can be successfully carried out only if in accordance with the demands of the chuche ideology the party unites the broad masses of people, makes the validity of the lines and policies thoroughly understood among them, and energetically organizes and mobilizes the masses in carrying them through. Herein lies part of the important ground that the party must tightly maintain the revolutionary mass line based on the chuche ideology in order to correctly formulate its lines and policies and successfully carry them through.

The revolutionary mass line embodying the chuche ideology is also the basic principle of party activity which the party of the working class must tightly maintain throughout the period of leading revolution and construction.

The socialist, communist cause is accompanied by a sharp class struggle between revolution and counterrevolution before and after the party of the working class comes to power. Again, this is an arduous task of carrying out difficult and complex assignments, breaking through numerous barriers and bottlenecks. Victory or defeat in the arduous, complex struggle for socialism, communism, ultimately depends on who wins more of the masses over to its side. If the party of the working class wins the broad masses over to its side, it can be victorious in a showdown confrontation with the enemy but failing to win the masses over to its side, it cannot be victorious. Therefore, the party of the working class must carry through the mass line consistently from the time it began leading the revolution until the communist cause is attained.

Carrying through the mass line arises as an even more real and immediate question for the party in power. This is so because when the party has come to power, the danger grows that certain functionaries who have not yet established a revolutionary world outlook, may play at bureaucratism.

Why it arises as an especially important question for the party of the working class in power to carry through the mass line is related to the task that it must step up socialist, communist construction, strengthening the politicoideological unity of the entire people and highly promoting the superiority of the socialist system.

Of course, the socialist system constitutes a socioeconomic condition capable of realizing the politicoideological unity of the entire people. But in the socialist society, which is a transitional society, under conditions that there exist the masses of all strata with complex socioeconomic life backgrounds, only if the party of the working class puts great efforts into the task to embrace, indoctrinate, remold the broad masses, and solidly unite them around the party, can it consolidate the politicoideological unity of the entire people solid as bedrock, highly promote the superiority of the socialist system, and energetically hasten the complete victory of socialism.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, by putting forward the revolutionary mass line based on the chuche ideology, has uniquely and most precisely elucidated the basic principle which the party of the working class must tightly maintain in mass guidance, and provided a powerful weapon for leading revolution and construction to victory.

Our party, by putting forward as the basic principle of party activity the revolutionary mass line laid down by the great leader and by thoroughly carrying it through, has been able to ceaselessly strengthen the leadership of the party for revolution and construction and move socialist construction forward along the one straight road of victory.

By thoroughly carrying through the mass line, our party has been able to strengthen and develop itself into a revolutionary party deeply rooted among the masses and, thoroughly uniting the masses of all strata around the party, to solidly organize the chuche-oriented revolutionary forces. Again, our party, by thoroughly carrying through the mass line in each stage of revolution and construction, has tightly bonded guidance and the masses and resolved all the difficult and complex revolutionary tasks by a mass movement.

As a result of having thoroughly carried through the mass line, our party has been able to formulate correct lines and policies to suit the interests of our revolution and cour people and energetically step up revolution and construction without the slightest tilting. In this way in a short period of time it has transformed our country, a backward colonial agricultural state, into a socialist power possessed of complete political sovereignty, sound self-supporting national economy, powerful self-defensive national defense might, and brilliant national culture.

With the mass line thoroughly embodied in all areas of party and state tasks, a basic change occurred in the work method and work attitude of the functionaries, and the Anti-Japanese Guerrillas style work method, the Ch'ongsan-ri method, came to be comprehensively established.

At the bottom of all the victories and successes achieved by our party in revolution and construction lie the immortal chuche ideology and the mass line embodying it.

The mass line based on the chuche ideology has proved its validity and invincible vitality through the practice of our country's revolution and construction.

With the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song founding the chuche ideology and based thereon, a unique thought relating to the mass line, the revolutionary thought of the working class has been deepened and developed onto a new higher level.

To correctly elucidate the revolutionary leadership principle is a basic question arising in the leadership of the party of the working class for revolution and construction and was especially one of the most important questions that had to be solved in the chuche era, a new historic era. Our time, an era of independent stand and attitude in which the masses of people, entering the stage as the master in command of their destiny, work out their destiny and shape history, presented it as a real and immediate demand to establish a leadership principle which would make it possible for the masses of people to acquit themselves fully of their responsibility and role as the master in revolution and construction.

The thought relating to the mass line based on the chuche ideology is a great thought that has given a scientific answer to precisely such real and immediate demand of the times. By this thought came to be worked out and systematized anew the chuche leadership theory which gives comprehensive answers to all the questions arising in leadership for revolution and construction. Thus the revolutionary thought of the working class came to be perfected into a revolutionary thought elucidating not only the revolutionary world outlook and revolutionary theory but even the mass leadership method. Truly, the thought relating to the mass line based on the chuche ideology is a great ideotheoretical heritage that has made an immortal contribution to developing the revolutionary thought of the working class onto a new higher level.

By moving forward with a tight grip on the immortal chuche ideology and the mass line based thereon, we shall more energetically advance the cause for converting the whole society to the chuche ideology.

ARMING WORKING PEOPLE WITH THE CHUCHE IDEOLOGY IS THE BASICS OF IDEOLOGICAL REVOLUTION

Pyongyang KULLOJA in Korean No 7, Jul 80 pp 15-21

[Article by Yi Song-nin]

[Text] Today our people, with a firm faith in the victory of the chuche cause, are energetically stepping up socialist, communist construction.

Emerging from among our working class, cooperatives peasants, and working intellectuals are numerous lofty examples of working devoting their all for the sake of the party and the revolution, for the sake of the fatherland and the people, and the whole country is filled to overflowing with the communist virtue of helping each other and leading each other on.

This revolutionary profile of our society is the shining victory and priceless fruits of the guideline of our party which has thoroughly armed party members and working people with the immortal chuche ideology, ceaselessly deepening ideological revolution among them.

Further strengthening chuche ideology indoctrination to suit the demands of the developing realities, we must prepare party members and working people even better as genuine chuche-oriented communist revolutionaries who stoutly fight on for the attainment of the chuche cause.

Ideological revolution is an important revolutionary task that must be constantly conducted with a tight grip on it until attainment of the revolutionary cause of the working class.

The revolutionary cause of the working class is a rewarding struggle to sweep away the relics of everything outdated and make the masses of people, who are the master of nature and society, enjoy an independent and creative life. In order to make the working people, who have been liberated from exploitation and oppression, enjoy a genuinely independent and creative life, it is imperative to completely liberate them from the constraints of outdated ideas and bring about a basic change in the realm of ideological consciousness.

The ideological revolution to sweep away the capitalist ideas and their dregs in the ideomental sphere and bring up working people as communist social beings of a new type arises as an overall task before the party and state following the establishment of the socialist system.

Victory of the socialist system creates a favorable condition for liquidating the socioeconomic roots which spawned the outdated ideas and for remolding the ideological consciousness of working people the communist way.

It goes without saying that it is a fact that ideological consciousness is affected by material living conditions. But this is not to say that just because the socialist system is established and the material living standard is improved, their ideological consciousness is spontaneously remolded by itself. Even after the establishment of the socialist system, the dregs of outdated ideas will come to remain in people's heads for a long time. In particular, they come to graphically manifest themselves as revolution and construction deepens and more rapidly moves forward.

The task to uproot the dregs of outdated and backward capitalist ideas and turn working people into communist social beings can be successfully carried out only through an incisive struggle between individualism and socialism in the realm of ideological consciousness. If the ideological revolution is neglected and the class consciounsess of working people, revolutionary consciousness, is not ceaselessly enhanced, the influence of outdated ideas will grow among them and their revolutionary consciousness will come to be paralyzed. Should this come to pass, it will be impossible to successfully push ahead with the task of occupying the ideological fortress and material fortress of communism, and it is possible that even the gains of the revolution already won will be threatned.

What is more, under conditions that in the present period the sabotage and subversion machinations of class enemies and capitalist ideocultural infiltration continue, it is impossible to more energetically hasten the revolutionary cause without strengthening the ideological revolution among working people.

Only by putting the ideological revolution up front and bringing up all working pecple as genuine commuist revolutionaries is it possible to comprehensively promote the superiority of the socialist system and also achieve the revolutionization and working classization of the whole society and successfully occupy the material fortress of communism along with the ideological fortress.

The basics of ideological revolution are thoroughly arming all party members and working people with the immortal chuche ideology.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"Most important in carrying out the ideological revolution is thoroughly arming party members and working people with the revolutionary thought of our party, the chuche ideology." ("Kim Il-song Selected Works," Vol 7, p 270)

Chuche ideology indoctrination is an ideological indoctrination task to make the basic doctrine of the great chuche ideology deeply understood among party members and working people and turn it into a rock of faith. This is aimed at making all party members and working people hold lofty ideomental features and devotedly fight on for the sake of the interests of the party and the revolution, the fatherland and the people. Therefore, arming party members and working people with the chuche ideology is an important question of priority in the ideological revolution, the task of remolding social beings.

Thoroughly arming party members and working people with the chuche ideology is first of all a basic guarantee for turning them into genuine chuche-oriented communist revolutionaries.

Today the model of a communist social being of our time is none other than a chuche-oriented communist revolutionary. Therefore, the ideological revolution aimed at indoctrinating and remolding people into communist social beings of a new type must necessarily become a task to bring them up as chuche-oriented revolutionaries and to this end, chuche ideology indoctrination must be energetically launched.

Chuche ideology indoctrination, first of all by making it imperative to establish a revolutionary world outlook among party members and working people, makes it possible to bring up all of them as chuche-oriented revolutionaries.

Establishing the revolutionary world outlook is a precondition for party members and working people to become genuine chuche-oriented communist revolutionaries. Only with the revolutionary world outlook firmly established is it possible to view, analyze, and judge all questions to suit the demands of the times and the law of the developing revolution, and thoroughly defend and attain the socialist, communist cause.

The immortal chuche ideology is the unitarily scientific, revolutionary world outlook which the revolutionaries of our time, the chuche-oriented communists, must possess.

Because the chuche ideology is based on the philosophcial doctrine that man is the master of everything and resolves everything, it provides a most correct understanding about nature and society and a powerful weapon for remaking the world. The chuche ideology elucidates the law of the developing society and energetically inspires the masses of working people to the revolutionary struggle for an independent and creative life. When thoroughly armed with the chuche ideology, people can become deeply aware of their position and role in the world and highly display their sense of responsibility and initiative in the revolutionary struggle and construction tasks.

The chuche ideology, also by elucidating the important demand for thinking out everything with man at the center and serving man, makes it possible for people to have a clearly defined goal and direction in all aspects of discernment and practical activity and hold lofty communist ideomental features which genuine social beings must possess.

The spirit of independent and creative stand and attitude elucidated by the chuche ideology makes it possible for people to hold a firm aim and will to be free from any constraint or enslavement, and turns them into social beings who oppose dependence on others and flunkeyism and know how to solve all questions based on their self-dependent faith and jusgment, displaying the revolutionary spirit of self-reliance. He who has failed to arm himself with the chuche ideology and merely copies others, will eventually become a fool and wind up being a useless existence as a social being. When thoroughly armed with the chuche ideology, people can have life as social beings and become the genuine master of an independent and creative life.

The chuche ideology contains the thought and theory, mental and moral features which must be held not only by people struggling for socialism, communism but also by people who will be living in the future communist society. The chuche ideology elucidates the intrinsic demands of the communist society and all the social relations and mode of activity which will have been formed in the communist society. Therefore, thoroughly arming themselves with the chuche ideology constitutes an important guarantee for all members of society to comprehensively grasp the mental and moral features and mode of activity which genuine communist social beings must possess.

Thoroughly arming themselves with the chuche ideology constitutes a basic condition for people to prepare themselves as forever unchanging revolutionaries without being contaminated by any outdated idea. The chuche ideology is a powerful weapon which makes it possible to thoroughly overcome the capitalist thoght, the feudal Confucian thought, the revisionist thought, and the flunkey thought. He who thoroughly arms himself with the chuche ideology can become a genuine chuche-oriented revolutionary who, untained by any hodgepodge reactionary thought, resolutely struggles solely for the sake of the interests of the working class and the masses of people.

Chuche ideology indoctrination, also by making party members and working people forever faithful to the great leader, brings up all of them as genuine chuche-oriented communist revolutionaries.

"By further strengthening indoctrination in the policies of the party and indoctrination in the revolutionary tradition among working people and by solidly arming them with the unitary ideology of our party, the chuche ideology, we must see to it that all working people are turned into genuine red soldiers of the party, communist revolutionaries, resolutely maintaining revolutionary integrity, whatever the adversity." ("Kim Il-song Selected Works," Vol 6, p 364)

The chuche-oriented communist revolutionary holds the immortal chuche ideology as his immutable world outlook and boundless faithfulness to the great leader as his first and foremost life.

The chuche-oriented communist revolutionary is the communist revolutionary of a new type who holds it as his attribute to loyally uphold the leadership of the great leader and devote his all to the attainment of the revolutionary cause charted by the leader.

For the chuche-oriented revolutionaries, the objectives of life and struggle, all glories and happiness, joy and hope, lie solely in brilliantly realizing the great leader's plan and wish.

Spotlessly clear and clean loyalty to the great leader is the lofty ideological feeling, basic trait of the chuche-oriented communist revolutionary. Away from boundless faithfulness to the great leader, it is impossible to speak about the chuche-oriented communist revolutionary nor is his existence thinkable.

The boundless faithfulness of the chuche-oriented communist revolutionaries is a lofty ideological feeling which is formed and consolidated in the course of deeply mastering the profound doctrine of the immortal chuche ideology and assimilating it into their own immutable faith.

Party members and working people, when they turn the chuche ideology into a rock of faith, can enhance their inifinite pride and self-esteem for fighting revolution, attending the respected and beloved leader, and with a firm viewpoint and stand that know none but the great leader, can protect and defend the leader politicoideologically and with their lives. They can also accept the great leader's thought and teachings as the most valid and hold them as the unitary compass for work and life, and resolutely protecting the leader's thought from any unwholesome ideological tendency, can think and act only in accordance with the leader's thought and teachings. Regarding the great leader's teachings as none other than law, supreme command, and thoroughly executing them to the end, displaying infinite devotion and sacrifical spirit without the slightest complaint or excuse, without faulting the attendant conditions--this revolutionary attitude, too, can be highly displayed when thoroughly armed with the chuche ideology.

Thus, solidly arming party members and working people with the chuche ideology constitutes a basic guarantee for turning them into chuche-oriented communist revolutionaries with the revolutionary world outlook thoroughly established and forever faithful to the great leader. Precisely herein lies part of the most important ground that it is a basic question arising in the ideological revolution to thoroughly arm party members and workng people with the chuche ideology.

Next, thoroughly arming party members and working people with our party's revolutionary thought, the chuche ideology, is a firm guarantee for stepping up our revolution and construction.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"When the masses of working people, with an awareness as masters of the revolution, vigorously launch into the struggle to work out their destiny, they can display their inexhaustible wisdom and creative power and move revolution and construction forward at an extraordinarily high rate of speed. Precisely herein lies the ground that the chuche ideology, which calls on the masses of working people to particiapte in revolution and construction in a manner befitting the masters of revolution and construction with an awareness that they are masters of the revolution, is becoming the propelling force energetically pushing the struggle of our people for building a new life and the guiding compass firmly guaranteeing all victories of our people." ("Answers to Questions Posed by Foreign Journalists," Vol 2, p 138)

The ideological revolution is carried out not for its own ends but for quickly pushing ahead with revolution and construction, highly promoting people's inexhaustible wisdom and creative power.

Our country's revolutionary practice calls for strengthening the ideological revolution and further organizing and mobilizing the inexhaustible strength of the masses of people more than at any time. Today our party and people are faced with the weighty yet glorious task to hasten the complete victory of socialism in the northern half of the republic and attain the historic cause of fatherland reunification at the earliest possible date while consolidating the achievements already scored in the revolutionary struggle and construction tasks.

If this enormous task is to be successfully carried out, above all the revolutionary fervor and creative positivity of the masses of people must be maximally promoted.

The masses of working people are in direct charge of revolution and construction and the decisive factor in the successful prosecution. All movements of the society and the nature remaking task are altogether conducted through human activities, and everything admirable and precious in the world is created by the strength and wisdom of the masses of working people such as the workers and peasants. To make the broad masses of working people positively launch into the revolutionary struggle and display their wisdom and talents to the hilt is a basic codition for the victory of revolution and construction. The creative wisdom and fervor of the masses of people are highly displayed when they have the awareness of being masters of the revolution.

The chuche ideology is a thought that calls upon the masses of people to participate in revolution and construction in a manner befitting the master. Therefore, thoroughly arming party members and working people with the chuche ideology extraordinarily pushes revolution and construction forward because it makes them display infinite enthusiasm and wisdom in the revolutionary struggle and construction tasks, with a heightened awareness and sense of responsibility as masters of the revolution.

To be solidly united in one ideological will is the decisive condition for victory in the revolutionary struggle and construction tasks. When all members of society are solidly unified and united in one ideological will, invincible strength comes to emerge.

The great chuche ideology is a sound basis for unifying and uniting all members of society in one ideological will.

The chuche ideology is the thought of the working class that thoroughly champions the interests of the working class and does not tolerate any slightest tendency and element to bring a loss to the class interests of the working class.

What is more, the chuche ideology is a scientific thought that has come into being reflecting the era of independent stand and attitude and is a people-minded thought that thinks out everything with the masses of working people at the center and thoroughly subordinates it to the masses of working people.

The chuche ideology also calls for continuing innovations, continuing forward movement, always brimming with vigor and enthusiasm free from sloth and laxity, and is a revolutionary thought that makes it possible to attain the revolutionary cause of the working class without any tilting at the earliest possible date.

By such thorough class character, people-mindedness, and greatness of the chuche ideology all members of society come to firmly accept the chuche ideology as their thought and to be firmly unified and united based thereon.

If revolution and construction is to be quickly stepped up, it is also important to make the masses of people have a firm foundation on which to do all their thinking and revolutonary practice to suit the demands of our revolution and construction.

Under conditions that the revolutionary cause of the working class is carried out on a nation-state basis, to be faithful to one's own country's revolution is a basic demand for the victory of the revolutionary cause of the working class. To be faithful to one's own country's revolution is also in complete accord with the law of the ultimate attainment of the revolutionary cause of the working class.

The chuche ideology calls upon the masses of people to oppose national nihilism and firmly hold independent stand and attitude in politics, to oppose dogmatism and thoroughly embody creativity in revolutionary practice. The chuche ideology demands the independent stand to self-dependently solve all questions, displaying the revolutionary spirit of self-reliance, as the basic stand that must be tightly grasped in revolution and construction; the creative stand to solve all questions, relying on the strength of one's people to suit the specific conditions of one's country, as the basic method that must be thoroughly adhered to in remaking nature and society. The chuche ideology also seeks the decisive strength for victory of the revolution always in the role of the chuche-oriented factor, the inner factor.

Therefore, only by thoroughly arming party members and working people with the chuche ideology is it possible to enable them to do all their thinking and revolutionary practice to suit the demands and interests of our revolution and, always believing in their own strength and highly displaying the revolutionary spirit of self-reliance, to break through the barriers encountered and hasten the victory of the chuche cause.

In this way, to thoroughly arm party members and working people with our party's revolutionary thought, the chuche ideology, is a basic question of priority that must be tightly grasped in bringing up all members of society as genuine chuche-oriented communist revolutionaries and energetically stepping up revolution and construction.

Our party from the first day of its founding has steadfastly launched chuche ideology indoctrination, giving a firm priority to the ideological revolution over all other tasks. Thus it has been possible for all of our party members and working people to thoroughly arm themselves with the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's revolutionary thought, the chuche ideology, and the whole society has come to brim with the chuche ideology. That the entire people, holding only one thought, the chuche ideology, as their firm faith, have come to live and work in accordance with its demands, is the greatest change that has taken place in the ideomental features of our people, a priceless achievement that cannot be traded for anything.

Today before us is the task to more energetically launch and ceaselessly deepen the indoctrination work to arm party members and working people with the chuche ideology to suit the demands of the cause for converting the whole society to the chuche ideology, based on the achievements already scored. It is in brilliantly carrying out this task where a firm guarantee for preparing our working people still better as communist social beings, further consolidating our revolutionary ranks solid as bedrock, and bringing about a ceaseless forward movement and upsurge in socialist construction is.

Most important in more thoroughly indoctrinating party members and working people with the great chuche ideology is strengthening indoctrination in the doctrine of the chuche ideology.

Indoctrination in the doctrine of the chuche ideology, because it indoctrinates people in the basic reason and law of the revolutionary struggle and arms them with the chuche revolutionary world outlook, is a powerful means of enabling them to resolutely walk the arduous, trial-filled road of the revolution without the slightest vacillation with the awareness of being the master of the revolution and intense fervor. From where indoctrination in the doctrine of the chuche ideology is well conducted come to emerge genuine communists, trustworthy housekeepers, genuine patriots.

All party organizations, by making party members and working people deeply master the general principles of the chuche ideology such as the intrinsic nature, basis, and basic demands of the chuche ideology, must make them resolutely launch the revolutionary struggle, courageously breaking through all the bottlenecks and barriers encountered, and unyieldingly observe their revolutionary integrity with an indomitable fighting spirit and strong mind, whatever the adversity. In particular, they must see to it that all party members and working people loyally uphold the leader's revolutionary thought and leadership anytime anywhere, whatever the environment, deeply recognizing that the communist revolutonary cause can be victorious necessarily only if they, holding the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's chuche ideology as their guiding compass, move forward along the road charted by the leader.

In order to more thoroughly arm party members and working people with the chuche ideology, it is also imperative to strengthen indoctrination in party policies and indoctrination in the revolutionary tradition among them.

"Party organizations must strengthen indoctrination in the policies of the party and indoctrination in the revolutionary tradition, and stepping up the struggle against all kinds of unwholesome ideas such as bourgeois ideas, revisionism, flunkeyism, dogmatism, factionalism, parochialism, and nepotism, more thoroughly arm all party members and working people with the unitary thought of our party, the chuche ideology of the party." ("Kim Il-song Selected Works," Vol 5, 2d impression, p 521)

All the lines, policies, and shining revolutonary tradition of our party thoroughly embody the chuche ideology and are priceless revolutionary food for indoctrination in the chuche ideology. Here are all elucidated the strategy and tactics and struggle methodology of our party which goes on to solve, based on the chuche ideology, all questions arising in revolution and construction, and are contained the rich experience and achievement in scoring the great victory while firmly maintaining the chuche-oriented stand in the most formidable and arduous environment.

Only he who is armed with the lines, policies, and shining revolutionary tradition of the our party can resolutely hold fast to the revolutionary stand, never losing the chuche stand and attitude, whatever the barrier, whatever the trial, and always brimming with ever higher enthusiasm and strong will, invincible faith and revolutionary optimism, satisfactorily carry out his assigned revolutionary duty.

Party organizations and functionaries at all levels, placing basic emphasis on fostering faithfulness to the party and the revolution among working people, must conduct indoctrination in the policies of the party and indoctriantion in the revolutionary tradition in depth, in substance. In this way they must see to it that party members and working people are thoroughly armed with the unitary ideology of our party and solidly united in one mind, one will, based thereon, are prepared as genuine revolutionary soldiers unconditionally and thoroughly protecting and carrying through all the lines and policies of the party.

To thoroughly uproot all kinds of outdated ideas is an important demand for thoroughly arming party members and working people with the chuche ideology.

Under conditions that even after the establishment of the socialist system the dregs of outdated ideas still remain in people's heads and reactionary ideocultural infiltration by the imperialists ceaselessly continues from without, it is impossible to successfully carry out the task of arming people with the chuche ideology without strenghening the struggle against outdated ideas.

All party organizations and functionaries, by strengthening the struggle against all kinds of reactionary ideas such as the capitalist thought and feudal Confucian thought, revisionist thought and flunkey thought, must see to it that non-working class, unwholesome ideological elements neither sprout from within us nor infiltrate us from without.

In order to thoroughly arm party members and working people with the chuche ideology, it is important to conduct indoctrination in the chuche ideology, closely combining it with revolutionary practice.

The chuche ideology is not a theory for the sake of theory but a powerful weapon for revolutionary changes aimed at commendably conducting revolution and construction. The great ideological remolding task to arm people with the chuche ideology cannot be conducted away from the practical struggle to commendably carry out revolutionary tasks.

Party organizations and functionaries, by conducting indoctrination in the chuche ideology in combination with the specific life of party members and working people, must see to it that they carry out their assigned revolutionary duties responsibly with an attitude befitting the master.

In particular, by commendably conducting the task of indoctrination with the great victory and achievement scored in brilliantly embodying the chuche ideology under the sagacious leadership of the party, they must see to it that party members and working people deeply master the validity and vitality of the chuche ideology and enhance their national pride and revolutionary self-esteem for fighting revolution in the fatherland of chuche.

To make all party members and working people follow the examples of unsung heroes is of great import in combining indoctrination in the chuche ideology with practice.

Our unsung heroes are genuine revolutionaries who, holding the chuche ideology as their immutable faith, have displayed their faithfulness to the party and the leader on a lofty plane.

Their examples vividly show what kind of ideomental features one must possess in order to live and fight in accordance with the demands of the chuche ideology.

Party organizations, energetically launching the movement to learn from the examples of unsung heroes, must see to it that all party members and working people, firmly believing in their own strength and highly displaying the revolutionary spirit of self-reliance, whatever the environment, go on to carry out their assigned revolutionary tasks as befits the master. In this way they must be made to serve the party and the revolution with practical work results and more immediately, to work heroic exploits in the struggle to greet the Sixth Party Congress as a great festival of the victor.

To thoroughly arm party members and working people with the chuche ideology and admirably bring them up as genuine communist revolutionaries is a great glory and lofty duty of our party organization and functionaries.

All party organizations and functionaries, by continuing to deepen indoctrination in the chuche ideology among party members and working people, shall further strengthen the might of our party and revolutionary ranks and hasten the victory of the chuche cause.

IMPROVING WORK METHOD AND ATTITUDE IS AN IMPORTANT DEMAND FOR ENHANCING THE COMBAT STRENGTH OF THE PARTY

Pyongyang KULLOJA in Korean No 7, Jul 80 pp 22-27

[Article by Nam Hak-su]

[Text] At present the whole country is bubbling with a majestic struggle to greet the historic Sixth Party Congress as a great festival of the victor.

Before our party organizations and functionaries about to greet the glorious party congress is the lofty task to further enhance the combat strength and leadership power and energetically step up revolution and construction.

Constantly improving and perfecting work method and work attitude to suit the demands of the party and the developing revolution is of great import in enhancing the combat strength and leadership power of the party.

Only if the party of the working class establishes a correct work method and attitude among the functionaries, can it solidly unite the broad masses around the party and the leader and energetically organize and mobilize them in the revolutionary struggle and construction tasks.

The question of straightening out the work method and attitude arises as an even more important question especially as the authority of the party grows among the masses and the revolution struggle and construction tasks deepen and develop.

All functionaries must ceaselessly improve and perfect the work method and attitude to suit the demands of the party and the developing revolution.

To improve the work method and work attitude of functionaries is an important demand for enhancing the combat strength of the party and successfully carrying out the revolutionary struggle and construction tasks.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"In order to strengthen the party, it is imperative to ceaselessly improve and perfect the party work method. The question of improving the party work method is a question of perfecting the leadership method, leadership art, for the masses and consequently, this is of great import in strengthening the combat strength and leadership power of the party." ("Kim Il-song Selected Works," Vol 7, p 275)

The revolutionary party of the working class if General Staff of the revolution, guiding force, which carries out the revolutionary struggle and construction tasks, leading the masses of people.

If the party is to satisfactorily fulfill its lofty mission and leadership role, the party must, along with the task of consolidating the party organizationally and ideologically based on the unitary ideology of the party, properly establish the mass leadership method, work method and work attitude, for energetically organizing and mobilizing the masses, awakening them politicoideologically and solidly uniting them around the party, and ceaselessly improve and perfect them to suit the demands of the developing revolution.

To establish a correct work method and work attitude is above all an important guarantee for strengthening the party and enhancing its might.

The source of invincible might of the party of the working class lies in kindred ties with the masses, in politicoideological unity and solidarity.

The question of strengthening the kindred ties between the party and the masses and consolidating the politicoideological unity of the revolutionary ranks solid as bedrock can be successfully resolved when party organizations and functionaries establish a correct work method and work attitude.

A scientific, revolutionary work method and a people-minded work attitude are an important means of solidly uniting the broad masses in one ideological will and organizing and mobilizing them in carrying through the policies of the party. Unless the party establishes a revolutionary work method and a people-mined work attitude, can it neither go in deep among the masses of people nor correctly organize and mobilize them.

Outdated work methods and work attitudes such as bureaucratism, subjectivism, and formalism, divorce the party from the masses and in the end, bring about the very grave aftereffect of damaging the authority and prestige of the party and weakening the combat strength of the party.

Only with a revolutionary work method and a people-minded work attitude established is it possible to enhance the infinite adoration of and trust in the party among the masses every day and form kindred ties between the party and the masses and, uniting the masses, constantly strengthen the politicoideological unity and solidarity of the revolutionary ranks.

To improve the work method and attitude is also an important demand for successfully carrying through the lines and policies of the party.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"To improve the party work method and work attitude is an important guarantee for successfully carrying through the lines and policies of the party." ("On Building the Korean Workers Party," Vol 3, p 661)

The basic objective of the leadership of the party for revolution and construction lies in successfully carrying through the lines and policies of the party.

The lines and policies of the party are executed and carried through by the masses. The working masses are in direct charge of carrying through the policies of the party and consequently, whether or not the policies of the party are successfully carried through comes to depend on how highly their revolutionary fervor and creative positivity are promoted.

The task to promote the political fervor and creative positivity of the masses can be successfully carried out only when the functionaries conduct work with a revolutionary work method and a people-minded work attitude.

No matter how precisely the lines and policies of the party have been established, no matter how correctly the measures and ways have been formulated for the execution, if the functionaries, commanding personnel of the revolution, work with a wrong work method and work attitude, it is impossible to score success nor is it possible to energetically push ahead with revolution and construction.

Whether or not the lines and policies of the party are properly carried through entirely depends on the work method and work attitude of the functionaries who execute them.

The lines and policies of the party can be successfully carried through only when the functionaries, in accordance with the demands of the revolutionary work method, directly go in among the masses and with priority to political work, inspire the revolutionary fervor and creative positivity of the masses. Again, only by establishing a revolutionary work method and a people-minded work attitude can the functionaries lead the masses in the forefront of the direct struggle to carry through the policies of the party, and positively setting the strength and wisdom of the masses in motion, successfully carry out the revolutionary tasks at hand.

Thus, to improve the work method and work attitude constitutes an important guarantee for strengthening the party and successfully carrying through the lines and policies of the party.

The question of straightening out the work method and work attitude arises as an even more important demand as the authority and prestige of our party grow further and an organizational sense is established stronger among the masses.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"Because of its devoted service for the fatherland and the people, because of its infinite faithfulness to the socialist and communist cause, our party has won the absolute trust and support of the working class and the entire people of our country. Today the entire Korean people are completely entrusting their destiny to our party and, solidly united around the party, are devotedly struggling to carry through the lines and policies of the party." ("Kim Il-song Selected Works," Vol 7, p 256)

Today our party enjoys absolute authority and prestige among the people because of its immortal achievements compiled before the times and the revolution.

Thirty five long years since the time our party was founded, over half a century since it began striking its historical roots, have elapsed. In this majestic journey braving formidable storms of the revolution, ours has grown and been strengthened into an ever victorious steely party. Today the organizational and ideological bases of our party have been consolidated incomparably and a brilliant victory is being scored in the task to attain our revolutionary cause under the slogan for conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology.

Because of its devoted service for the fatherland and the people, because of its infinite faithfulness to the chuche revolutionary cause, our party enjoys absolute authority and prestige among the working class and entire people of our country.

Our people, who have learned by experience the invincible might and sagacity of the leadership of the party in the course of victoriously clearing the unprecedentedly arduous and formidable road of revolution, are completely entrusting all their destiny to the party, brimming with a firm determination to unswervingly follow the sagacious leadership of the great leader and the party and carry out the revolution to the end, whatever the storm.

The more the authority of the party and trust in the party grow among the masses, the more we must ceaselessly improve and perfect the work method and attitude.

If we fail to establish a correct work method and work attitude among the functionaries, it is possible that there will emerge arbitrariness and the phenomenon of throwing their weight around. Should this come to pass, it will eventually divorce the party from the masses nor will it be possible to promote the positivity and initiative of the masses.

Only if we ceaselessly improve and perfect the work method and work attitude among the functionaries, can we make all people trust the party even more and faithfully fight to the end along the one road of revolution indicated by the party.

Improving the work method and work attitude also arises as an even more important question, as revolution and construction further deepens and develops.

Essentially, the work method must be ceaselessly improved and perfected as objective realities develop, the environment and conditions change, and activities in revolutionary practice deepen.

Only when the work method is adapted to the developing reality and changing environment, can it become a work method that is truly revolutionary and positive, and a powerful means to energetically push ahead with revolution and construction, promoting the inexhaustible strength and creative wisdom of the masses to the hilt.

Today our revolution and construction is deepening and developing onto an ever higher level through the struggle to convert the whole society to the chuche ideology.

Conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology is a process of turning all members of society into genuine chuche-oriented revolutionaries and remaking nature and society in accordance with the demands of the chuche ideology; as such, this is a great political task, an awesome creative task that must be carried out by means of inspiring the revolutionary fervor of the broad masses of people. Consequently, the historic cause for converting the whole society to the chuche ideology can be successfully attained only if the functionaries conduct work with a most scientific, revolutionary work method.

Only if the functionaries solve all questions with a scientific, revolutionary work method to suit the demands of the developing reality, can they energetically carry out the task of turning all members of society into genuine chuche-oriented communist revolutionaries.

Too, the task of remaking all aspects of social life such as the economy and culture in accordance with the demands of the chuche ideology can be successfully conducted only by a revolutionary, positive work method adapted to the new environment.

Ceaselessly improving and perfecting the work method and attitude of the functionaries to suit the demands of the deepening and developing revolutionary practice is where an important guarantee for attaining ahead of schedule the historic cause for converting the whole society to the chuche ideology is.

Truly, the work method and work attitude are a question relating to the leadership method, leadership art, for the masses and as such, ceaselessly improving and perfecting them to suit the demands of the developing reality constitutes an indispensable requirement for strengthening the party and successfully carrying out the revolutionary struggle and construction tasks.

Most important to the cadre ranks and functionaries in having a correct work method and work attitude is thoroughly arming themselves with the great leader's revolutionary thought, the chuche ideology.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"The work method and work attitude are not a question in terms of the work ability or character of the functionaries but an expression of thought. Therefore, without correctly establishing the ideological viewpoint of the functionaries, it is impossible to improve the work method and work attitude." ("On Building the Korean Workers Party," Vol 3, p 664)

The work method and work attitude are not a question in terms of the work ability or character of the functionaries but are determined by the thought and viewpoint, stand and attitude they hold.

Depending on the viewpoint and stand the functionaries hold toward the masses, and on the method they use in viewing and examining social phenomena, different work attitudes and work methods come to emerge from among them. When the functionaries, with a correct viewpoint toward the masses, view and examine social phenomena from the chuche-oriented stand and scientifically understand the law of the course of history, a revolutionary work method and a people-minded work attitude will come to emerge; conversely, when they disregard the masses and view and examine social phenomena in terms of idealism, in terms of metaphysics, erroneous work methods and attitudes such as bureaucratism, subjectivism, and formalism, will come to emerge.

Therefore, in order to establish a scientific and revolutionary leadership method, a correct work method and work attitude, the functionaries must hold a scientific and revolutionary thought and viewpoint, stand and attitude.

To make the functionaries thoroughly arm themselves with the great leader's revolutionary thought, the chuche ideology, and assimilate it into their flesh and bone is an indispensable requirement for establishing a revolutionary and people-minded ideological viewpoint and attitude among them.

The great leader's revolutionary thought, the chuche ideology, embodies the revolutionary thought and viewpoint of the working class on the highest plane, and is the unitarily correct revolutionary world outlook that most precisely elucidates the stand and attitude and method which must be tightly grasped in revolution and construction.

The great leader's revolutionary thought, the chuche ideology, is a thought which holds it as its basic content, as its basic demands, to solve all questions arising in revolution and construction by the strength of the masses of people and to struggle to provide a more independent and creative life for the masses of people; a revolutionary thought in which the party spirit, working class character, and people-mindedness are flawlessly embodied. Again the chuche ideology is a powerful weapon of discernment and remaking, which is quite capable of successfully solving any question, however complex and difficult.

Only when armed with the great leader's revolutionary thought, the chuche ideology, is it possible to have a revolutionary mass viewpoint, a correct stand and attitude toward the masses and based thereon, to establish a most scientific revolutionry work method and people-minded work attitude.

To learn from the communist features, revolutionary work method and people-minded work attitude held by the great leader is an important task that arises in establishing a revolutionary and people-minded work method and work attitude.

The communist features, revolutionary work method and people-minded work attitude held by the great leader are the highest model of the work method and attitude which genuine revolutionaries, the communists, must hold, and are examples for all functionaries and working people to follow.

In the communist features, revolutionary work method and people-minded work attitude held by the great leader are synthesized all the contents of the communist work method and attitude embodying the party spirit, working class character, and people-mindedness, whose truth and greatness have been brilliantly proved in the course of long revolutionary practice.

Therefore, only when the functionaries accept in toto the revolutionary leadership art, leadership method, and people-minded work attitude held by the great leader, can they become reliable commanding personnel of the revolution and go on to most satisfactorily realize mass guidance.

In this way, to establish the unitary ideology system of the party and thoroughly arm themselves with the respected and beloved leader's great revolutionary thought, the chuche ideology, and learn from the revolutionary leadership method and work attitude held by the leader, constitutes the basic way for all functionaries to thoroughly establish a revolutionary work method and a people-minded work attitude.

Another important way of establishing a revolutionary work method and a people-minded work attitude is energetically launching an ideological struggle to do away with the old work methods and attitudes among the functionaries.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"In order to improve the party work method and work attitude, it is imperative to energetically launch an ideological struggle to do away with old ideas among the party functionaries. Party organizations, energetically launching the ideological struggle to eliminate the old work methods and work attitudes, must see to it that all party functionaries admirably work with a revolutionary work method and a people-minded work attitude for the sake of the party and the working class and the people." (Ibid., p 665)

The work method and work attitude are an expression of the thought of functionaries. The outdated work methods and attitudes are rooted in outdated bourgois and petty bourgeois ideas.

The task to correctly establish the work method and attitude is unthinkable away from the ideological struggle to eliminate the old work methods and attitudes. The process of establishing a revolutionary, communist work method and attitude is none other than a process of correctly establishing a new work method and attitude, a process of the ideological struggle to eliminate the old work methods and attitudes.

We must energetically launch the ideological struggle to thoroughly eliminate the old work methods and attitudes such as bureaucratism, subjectivism, and formalism, and establish a revolutionary work method and a people-minded work attitude.

First of all, we must strengthen the struggle against bureaucratism.

Bureaucratism is an anti-people ruling method used by government officials of the old society in repressing and exploiting the people.

Bureaucratism is basically incompatible with the work method of our party which serves for the sake of the people and struggles for the sake of the interests of the people, and absolutely cannot be tolerated in the work of our functionaries, who are people's faithful servants.

Bureaucratism, a relic of the old society, prevents the party and the people's administration from fully accomplishing their missions and inflicts great harm on revolut8on and construction.

Under the sagacious leadership of the great leader our party has energetically launched the ideological struggle to do away with bureaucratism among the functionaries, and as a result, bureaucratism has been basically eliminated among our functionaries. But under conditions that there are the dregs of old ideas in the heads of functionaries, the root cause for reemergence of bureaucratism still remains.

Therefore, it is imperative to ceaselessly strengthen the ideological struggle against bureaucratism among the functionaries and thoroughly eliminate the slightest expression of bureaucratism without overlooking it in unprincipled compromise.

Along with the struggle against bureaucratism, we must strengthen the struggle against the old work methods of formalism and over caution-ism, work methods unbecoming the master such as doing work imprecisely and roughly without substance and passing the buck to superiors or subordinates.

Formalism and over caution-ism are old work attitudes stemming from a menial spirit. Our functionaries fight revolution not because they have been told to nor do they do so just for showoff. Inasmuch as the functionaries are career revolutionaries who have voluntarily embarked on the road to revolution, they must responsibly work from a stand befitting the master with a heightened awareness whether or not anyone watches them.

If formalism and over caution-ism are to be eliminated, it is imperative to develop the habit of launching work based on a correct methodology. When a new task is laid down, the functionaries must make it a habit to deeply study it, hold collective discussions and establish a correct methodlogy and then, launch the work substantively step by step.

To energetically push ahead with the movement to learn from the examples of unsung heroes is of great import in improving the work method and attitude of functionaries.

Reality shows that the movement to learn from the unsung heroes works as a great inspirational force not only in energetically pushing the ideological remolding of people and mass technical innovations but also in overcoming the old work methods and work attitudes and establishing the great leader style work method in the entire party and the whole society.

All functionaries, always going in deep among the masses like the unsung eroes, must energetically inspire the masses with priority to political work, and working and living together with the masses, look after and lead them with a motherly feeling. In this way they must see to it that one and all, thoroughly armed with the guidelines of the party and solidly united around the party, faithfully fight on.

To raise the standard of functionaries is an important way to improve their work method and attitude.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"The question of improving the political standard and job performance ability of the guidance functionaries of party and state organs is one of the important tasks before our party today. We must pay keen attention to this question." ("Kim Il-song Selected Works," Vol 1, 2d impression, p 374)

Only if the functionaries, who are indoctrinators of the masses and commanding personnel of the revolution, hold a high politicoideological standard and technical job performance standard in addition to their boundless faithfulness to the great leader and the party, can they set the thought of the broad masses in motion, organize and mobilize them and admirably carry out the revolutionary tasks at hand.

No matter how much the functionaries subjectively wish to be faithful to the party, if their training in party spirit is deficient and their job performance ability is low, they inevitably fall victim to timidity and extant experience and conduct work by means of dictation and directive.

A low political job performance standard is precisely one of the major reasons why the old work methods and attitudes still remain among the functionaries and why it is so difficult to uproot them.

Deeply aware that their abilities and standards are not yet equal to the demands of the developing reality and of the party, our functionaries must steadfastly strive to improve their political job performance standard.

The functionaries also must not only have high qualifications politico-ideologically and in terms of technical job performance but possess lofty communist moral traits. Only then can they become functionaries whom the masses truly follow and respect.

All functionaries must always go in deep among the masses, lead the masses setting examples by their own actions, and not only regard as precious the interests of the party and the revolution, orgnaization and collective, but love labor and consciously observe the law and order of the country. And they must thoroughly uproot all the old moralities and life customs, more wholesomely organize life to suit the new socialist way of life, and highly promote the attitude of revolutionarily living and working.

Today when an all-out march movement is energetically under way to greet the sixth congress of our party as the festival of a great victor, the duty of our functionaries is truly heavy, and the party's expectations of them are very great.

All functionaries, by decisively improving their work method and work attitude with a deep self-awakened partywide sense of responsibility, must admirably perform the role of an organizer, vanguard fighter, who energetically leads today's all-out march movement.

CEASELESSLY TEMPERING THEIR PARTY SPIRIT IS THE SACRED DUTY OF PARTY MEMBERS

[Article by Ch'oe Tong-sok]

[Text] By the majestic struggle of the entire party members and working people to greet the historic Sixth Party Congress with high political fervor and brilliant labor achievements, new leaps forward and miracles are happening day after day in the socialist construction of our country and our revolution is moving forward extraordinarily fast.

Today when our revolution is moving forward very rapidly and we are faced with more weighty and rewarding revolutionary tasks, our party demands that the functionaries, commanding personnel of the revolution, and party members, by ceaselessly tempering their party spirit, more thoroughly prepare themselves as genuine communist revolutionaries sacrificially struggling, devoting their all for the sake of the party and the leader, the fatherland and the people.

In the demand of the party for ceaselessly tempering the party spirit is contained the lofty will to make our functionaries and party members forever add luster to their political life on the one road of the struggle for attainment of the glorious chuche cause and further strengthen and develop ours into a revolutionary party brimming with the vibrant and militant vigor of energetically moving revolution and construction forward.

By loyally upholding the lofty will of the party and ceaselessly tempering our party spirit we must keep forever shining the priceless political life bestowed on us by the great leader and acquit ourselves fully of our revolutionary attributes as members of the glorious Korean Workers Party.

Tempering the party spirit is an important demand for party members to prepare themselves as genuine communist revolutionaries forever loyal to the party and the revolution.

To say to temper the party spirit means to resolutely protect and defend the lines and policies of the party, whatever the environment, and to hold the indomitable revolutionary spirit of sacrifically struggling with total devotion for the sake of the interests of the party and the revolution.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"What is called the party spirit is boundless faithfulness to the party." ("Kim Il-song Selected Works," Vol 3, 2d impression, p 159)

The party spirit--this is the indomitable revolutionary spirit of devotedly struggling for the sake of the party and the leader and of struggling, jumping into fire and water, to carry out the revolutionary tasks assigned them by the party.

The party spirit as faithfulness to the party flows from the historic mission shouldered by party members, the communists.

Party members are revolutionaries who, pledging to share destiny with the party, have embarked on the road of struggle for attainment of the revolutionary cause of the working class, the socialist and communist cause. Therefore, if party members, the communists, are to acquit themselves fully of their historic mission and add luster to the priceless life as revolutionaries, they must ceaselessly temper their party spirit. Only then can they be forever faithful to the party, thoroughly protecting and defending the interests of the party and the revolution and sacrificially struggle for attainment of the revolutionary cause of the working class, the socialist and communist cause.

The party spirit is a high class-awareness based on a revolutionary world outlook.

The party spirit is the revolutilnary spirit flowing from a lofty class-awareness desirous of fighting for the sake of the leader and the party, the working class and the people, holding the revolutionary thought of the working class as one's unitary faith, as one's firm revolutionary world outlook, and is the strong trait of a revolutionary who courageously breaks through whatever barriers, with a firm conviction of the validity and victory of the socialist, communist cause.

Precisely because it is based on the revolutionary faith and firm world outlook of those who breathe and act on the leader's revolutionary thought, the party spirit is characterized by a high principled nature, militancy, and revolutionary character.

Consequently, the process of tempering the party spirit is none other than a process of establishing a revolutionary world outlook. Only if party members ceaselessly temper their party spirit, can they become genuine communist revolutionaries deep and thorough in the revolutionary world outlook and strong in fighting spirit who always think and act in accordance with the ideological will of the party and the leader, carry through the lines and policies of the party to the end, whatever the environment, and struggle with total devotion for the sake of the interests of the party.

The party spirit is also faithfulness to the working class and a high awareness in terms of the working class. The revolutionary spirit and awareness of defending the interests of the party and the revolution and struggling for the realization precisely start from a high class-awareness.

The party is a class vanguard and organizational unit protecting the interests of the working masses such as the working class and struggling for the realization. What constitutes the base of the interests of the party is none other than the interests of the working class and the working masses. Inasmuch as the party struggles for the sake of the interests of the working masses such as the working class, for the realization of their aspirations and aims, the interests of the party coincide with the interests of the working class. Consequently, faithfulness to the party, a high party spirit, becomes at the same time a manifestation of the working class character, people-mindedness.

The party spirit is intensively expressed in faithfulness to the leader.

Faithfulness to the leader is the supreme expression of the party spirit. Away from faithfulness to the leader there cannot be the party spirit.

The leader of the working class is the supreme brain behind the revolution, the personifier of the interests of the party and of the masses of people, the unitary center for urity and solidarity.

The party of the working class is the struggle weapon for realizing the revolutionary thought of the leader who has first charted the road to revolution, and General Staff of the revolution which insures the leadership of the leader and leads revolution and construction to victory.

All the lines and policies laid down by the party are designed to embody the revolutionary thought and intent of the leader, and faithfully contained therein are the basic interests of the working class and the masses of people and their organized will.

Therefore, if party members, the communists, are to be truly faithful to the party, they must first of all be faithful to the leader. Away from faithfulness to the leader, it is impossible to speak about faithfulness to the party, the party spirit.

Only he who turns into his credo the leader's revolutionary thought and loyally attends the leader can become a genuine communist revolutionary who is truly faithful to the party and keeps on acquitting himself fully of his revolutionary attributes.

For those of us who are KWP members, the party spirit is boundless faithfulness to the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, our party's founder and leader.

To loyally attend the great leader and acquit ourselves boundlessly of our loyalty to the leader is the most important of the traits that our party members must possess which is none other than a lofty party spirit.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song is the personifier of the interests of our party and our people, and the supreme brain behind our revolution.

Early embarking on the formidable road to the revolutionary struggle, shouldering the demands of the times and revolution and the ardent wish of the nation, and ushering in a rewarding new era of revolution, a new chuche era, the great leader has led our revolution along the one road of victory, and turned our people, who used to groan under exploitation and oppression, mistreatment and contempt in bygone days, into an energetic and dignified people independently and creatively working out their destiny with a tight grip on it.

Under the sagacious leadership of the great leader, our fatherland is today radiating its radiant rays all over the sorld as a boundlessly growing and prospering socialist fatherland known for its self-dependence, self-support, and self-defense.

The boundless loyalty of our people to the great leader is thus one that has struck its roots deep in their hearts and been solidified in a tough struggle over a long period of time and been turned into a credo through real life and priceless experience. The spotlessly clear and clean faithfulness of our party members and people to the great leader--this is a revolutionary faith, a forever unwavering revolutionary will flowing from a lofty ideological feeling of our people entrusting all their destiny to the leader whom they infinitely respect and adore, deeply understanding the greatness of the respected and beloved leader through revolutionary practice over a long period of more than one-half century. For our party members, the bosom of the great leader is none other than the bosom of the party. Away from the bosom of the great leader party members can neither add luster to their glory as party members nor acquit themselves fully of their attributes as revolutionaries. Therefore, the party spirit of our cadres and party members must above all be manifested in being boundlessly loyal to the leader, loyally upholding the thought and intent of the great leader.

Thus, a high party spirit and faithfulness to the great leader absolutely cannot be separated from one another, and faithfulness to the great leader is the highest expression of the party spirit. Consequently, away from boundless faithfulness to the great leader it is impossible to speak about faithfulness to the party and the revolution.

It may be said that only he who loyally attends the leader and goes on to highly uphold the thought and intent of the leader and devotedly struggles for the realization, is a functionary, a party member high in the party spirit and boundlessly faithful to the party and the revolution.

Through the leading character in feature film "Road of the First Trip" and the examples of unsung heroes in our society we come to clearly see how the party spirit, working class character, and people-mindedness of genuine communist revolutionaries should be expressed.

In particular, the leading character in feature film "Road of the First Trip" is a model of a genuine communist revolutionary possessed of a high party spirit, boundlessly loyal to his party and leader and as such, impresses us greatly.

He is a revolutionary possessed of a strong will and indomitable fighting spirit who struggles devoting his all for the sake of the party and the revolution, for the sake of developing a rich and strong fatherland. The high party spirit of the leading character boundlessly faithful to the interests of the party and the revolution is intensively expressed in his lofty loyalty for loyally attending the great leader and realizing the leader's thought and intent without the deflection of a fraction of an inch.

The leading character in the film indomitably fights on, always thinking how to give a greater joy to the leader, even more loyally upholding the intent of the great leader concerned with the enrichment and strengthening of the fatherland and the happiness of the people.

In such lofty loyalty of the leading character we come to feel warmly with all our hearts that he is a communist revolutionary faithful to the party and the revolution, possessed of a high party spirit.

The party spirit of a communist revolutionary is also expressed in a high organizational sense.

The organizational sense is the resolute stand and viewpoint of a party member who infinitely loves and approaches his party organization with dignity, strictly adheres to the party, consciously observes the rules of the party, and stops at nothing until executing to the end, jumping into fire and water, the revolutionary duty assigned him by the party.

If party members are to forever add luster to their title as revolutionaries and live out their lives in a worthy manner, fighting for the sake of the party and the revolution, they must live with a high organizational sense. For party members, the party organization is as valuable as life. Away from the party organization the party member can neither add luster to the reward and glory as a revolutionary nor can sustain his priceless political life. The revolutionary possessed of a high party spirit always holds a high organizational sense, preserves and loves his party organization like the apple of his eye, lives strictly adhering to his party organization, and struggles, holding it as an iron rule of life to fulfill to the end on time, the revolutionary duty assigned him by the party.

The party member strong in his party spirit regards his party organization as the genuine protector of his political life, as the bosom of a genuine mother, always lives strictly adhering to the party, and goes on to prepare himself as a revolutionary forever loyal to the great leader and the party.

The party spirit as faithfulness to the great leader and the party is expressed especially in the high revolutionary attitude of unconditionally accepting, protecting, and carrying through the lines, decisions and directives of the party to the end.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"Faithfulness to the party and the revolution, in other words, the party spirit, must be expressed above all in unconditionally accepting the lines and policies of the party and unconditionally executing them." ("On the Question of Socialist Economic Management," Vol 3, p 122)

It may be said that what we refer to as the party spirit of party members is the high revolutionary spirit, revolutionary attitude of resolutely defending the interests of the party and of accepting with all their hearts and unconditionally carrying through the lines, decisions and directives of the party to the end.

The decisions and directives of the party are the organized will of our party and the unitary guiding compass which all cadres and party members must tightly grasp. In the decisions and directives of the party are comprehensively enunciated concrete ways to successfully carry out the revolutionary struggle and construction tasks.

The struggle to carry through the lines and policies, decisions and directives of the party is a rewarding struggle to embody the far-reaching plan of the leader, moving revolution and construction forward in accordance with the intent of the great leader and the party, and a sacred struggle to realize the aims and aspirations of our working class and the masses of people.

When our party members and functionaries unconditionally accept and thoroughly carry through the lines and policies, decisions and directives of the party, they can brilliantly realize the intent and plan of the great leader and acquit themselves fully of their attributes as chuche-oriented communist revolutionaries.

Away from the struggle to carry through the decisions and directives of the party, it is impossible to speak about the activity of party members, about the party spirit of party members.

To resolutely struggle to unconditionally accept, protect and carry through the decisions and directives of the party is the manifestation of a high party spirit of party members and a lofty partywide duty shouldered by them.

Through the struggle to carry through the lines and policies, decisions and directives of the party, the interests of the party and the revolution come to be thoroughly protected and defended, and revolution and construction energetically moved forward. How faithful party members are to the party and the revolution with how high a party spirit is manifested in how they accept the lines, decisions and directives of the party and in their practical struggle to carry them through.

To unconditionally accept the lines, decisions and directives of the party and struggle to carry them through to the end is the lofty feature and traditional attitude of our party members.

Through their struggle to accept with all their hearts the lines and policies laid down by the great leader and carry them through, our party members have brought about ceaseless innovations and leaps forward in all areas of revolution and construction and energetically moved our revolution forward. What made it possible for our fatherland, which used to be so backward in bygone days, to display its commanding appearance as a socialist power of self-dependence, self-support, and self-defense and for our revolution to come such a long way along the one road of making a long drive taking advantage of victory is the fact that with a high party spirit our party members under the sagacious leadership of the great leader have energetically carried through the lines and policies of the party.

At the same time, the party spirit of party members is expressed in such struggle as to defend and strengthen the unity and solidarity in ideological will of the party ranks, to protect and defend the interests of the working class against all negative phenomena and class enemies bent on infringing them.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"Faithfulness to the party, in other words, the party spirit, must be expressed first of all in the steady struggle to defend the airtight unity and solidarity of the party." ("Kim Il-song Selected Works," Vol 2, 2d impression, p 267)

Only when the party of the working class achieves unity and solidarity based on the revolutonary thought of the leader, can it become a revolutionary party possessed of invincible might and leadership power and lead the complex and arduous revolutionary struggle and construction tasks to victory.

Therefore, in order to defend the basic interests of the party and successfully attain the revolutionary cause of the working class, it is imperative to defend and ceaselessly strengthen the unity and solidarity of the party which is the guiding force for the cause.

In any environment, however complex, to resolutely protect and defend the politicoideological unity and solidarity of the party, to resolutely struggle against all kinds of opportunist currents, to thoroughly observe the revolutionary discipline and order of the party is an important stamp of the party spirit of party members.

Only by tolerating no elements, however small, to infringe the interests of the party and destroy the unity and solidarity of the party and by thoroughly observing the organizational discipline of the party can party members ceaselessly consolidate and develop the party and win victory in the unprecedentedly arduous and complex revolutionary struggle and construction tasks.

Attaching great significance to tempering the party spirit of party members in each period, each stage of the developing revolution, our party has ceaselessly strengthened their party life. Thus the party spirit of party members has been enhanced more than at any time and basic changes have occurred in their ideomental features.

With party ideological indoctrination work deepened and party life ceaselessly strengthened under the sagacious leadership of the great leader, our party members are being prepared as communist revolutionaries with their chuche revolutionary world outlook thoroughly established and forever faithful to the party and the revolution.

Today the party spirit of party members has become extraordinarily high through the struggle to convert the whole society to the chuche ideology.

Among our party members and functionaries is being highly promoted more than at any time the revolutionary attitude to struggle with total devotion for the sake of the party and the revolution, regarding it as the loftiest attribute, revolutionary integrity, of the revolutionary soldiers to acquit themselves boundlessly of their loyalty to the great leader and the party.

Today's reality wherein the all-out march movement is being energetically accelerated to convert the whole society to the chuche ideology under the tested leadership of the party calls for energetically launching the struggle to temper the party spirit among party members and functionaries.

By substantively launching the struggle to temper the party spirit and by thoroughly establishing the chuche revolutionary world outlook among functionaries and party members, party organizations can make them always think and act in accordance with the teachings of the great leader and the intent of the party and unconditionally carry through to the end the teachings of the leader and the guidelines of the party, whatever the adversity.

The high party spirit of party members is not something that is spontaneously tempered. It is tempered through substantively launching ideological indoctrination work and strengthening party organizational life among party members and in revolutionary practice.

In order to temper the party spirit, it is imperative to substantively launch ideological indoctrination work among party members and functionaries.

To substantively launch ideological indoctrination work is an important demand for bringing up people as genuine revolutionaries with the revolutionary world outlook thoroughly established and strong in the party spirit to fight on, devoting their all for the sake of the party and the revolution.

Substantively launching revolutionary indoctrination, class indoctrination, typified by indoctrination in the unitary ideology of the party, among party members and functionaries, party organizations must thoroughly prepare them as communist revolutionaries forever loyal to the great leader and the party, with the chuche revolutionary world outlook firmly established.

Only then is it possible to make party members and functionaries fight on to the end, whatever the adversity, with one mind of loyalty to the great leader and the party, for the sake of the interests of the party and the revolution, for the sake of the attainment of the chuche cause.

In order to temper the party spirit of party members, it is important especially to ceaselessly strengthen party organizational life among them.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"Only by strengthening party life is it possible to have the party spirit of party members tempered and their vanguard role enhanced in revolution and construction and to successfully carry out the revolutionary tasks before us." ("Kim Il-song Selected Works," Vol 5, 2d impression, p 515)

To strengthen party organizational life is one of the basic ways to temper the party spirit.

As the great leader taught, organizational life is the blast furnace for thought tempering, school for revolutionary indoctrination. Only through strong organizational life can anyone have himself revolutionarily tempered and grow up to be a genuine revolutionary faithful to the revolutionary cause of the working class.

Only through party organizational life can party members nurture their organizational character and spirit of discipline and revolutionarily temper themselves, taking timely action to correct deficiencies appearing in their work and life.

Strong revolutionary organizational character and spirit of discipline together with ideological character are an important part of the stamp of the communist. Only by possessing revolutionary organizational character and spirit of discipline can one become a genuine communist strong in the party spirit and successfully carry out the revolutionary struggle and construction tasks, overcoming all barriers and trials.

Such strong revolutionary organizational character and spirit of discipline of party members are achieved through party organizational life.

By regarding their party organization as the bosom of a mother and always loving and approaching their party organization with dignity and by positively participating in party organizational life and thoroughly establishing the attitutde of working and living under the guidance and control of their party organization, all party members must ceaselessly temper their party spirit. Party members must highly display the revolutionary attitude of reporting to their party organization everything from their work and life to personal problems and of working adhering to their party organization.

For party members and functionaries, the process of carrying out their party organization's decisions and assignments is none other than a process of revolutionizing themselves and tempering their party spirit.

Party members and functionaries must sincerely and diligently accept their party organization's decisions and assignments and with high political fervor, execute them on time without fail, and through this process, must keep on revolutionarily tempering themselves.

Also important in tempering the party spirit of party members is strengthening criticism and self-criticism among them.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"Launching the ideological struggle by means of criticism and indoctrinating and remolding them through the ideological struggle--this is the invariable guideline our party is tightly maintaining in revolutionizing people." (Ibid., p 469)

Criticism and self-criticism is an energetic weapon for revolutionarily tempering party members.

Criticism and self-criticism is an admirable method which enables one and all to wholesomely conduct party life and ceaselessly temper their party spirit, taking timely action to make them realize by heuristic means the deficiencies that have appeared in their work and life.

It is the nature of law that there are the positive and negative in the developmental process of all objects. In the process of the party life of party members, too, there could be deficiencies while there are the positive. Therefore, in party organizational life, it is imperative to take timely action to correct the deficiencies while ceaselessly making the positive come alive.

Party members, as they wash their faces every day, must frankly and sincerely criticize their own deficiencies on time and must accept, with an open mind, the criticisms of fellow comrades. Only if party members strengthen criticism and self-criticism in this manner, is it possible to uproot all kinds of morbid ideological elements, take timely action to correct deficiencies appearing in work and life, and ceaselessly train and temper themselves revolutionarily.

Inasmuch as criticism is aimed at straightening out the party member who has committed an error, it must be principled yet comradely.

Deficiencies appearing in the party life of party members are all rooted in old ideas, and the criticism to rectify them must be sharp. Criticism among party members, especially among functionaries must be as pungent and sharp as directed at one who can't cut the mustard. Ony then could the erring one clearly understand the essential nature of the error and quickly correct it.

For making a principled, sharp criticism, it will not do to do it in an unbridled, highhanded manner. Criticism must be oriented through and through in correcting an error and strengthening comradely solidarity.

What is of great import in tempering the party spirit of party members is revolutionary practice. Revolutionary practice is an energetic means of remolding people's ideological consciousness and revolutionarily tempering it.

In the difficult and complex practical struggle to remake nature and society people get ceaselessly tempered and revolutionarily grow up.

Therefore, the task to temper the party spirit of party members can score an admirable success only when conducted in close combination with the revolutionary struggle and the awesome practical activity to build socialism, communism.

Through the process of carrying out the revolutionary tasks assigned them, party members must ideologically temper themselves and ceaselessly nurture their strong will as revolutionaries. In particular, those functionaries who are separated from production practice, by going into the awesome reality of socialist construction, can even more deeply experience with all their hearts the sagacity of the leadership of the great leader and the validity and invincible vitality of the lines and policies of our party and, learning from the organizational character, militancy, and burning loyalty to the fatherly leader of the working class, can revolutionarily temper themselves.

Under the sagacious leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song our people have come a long way in revolution and construction.

But we absolutely cannot afford to remain self-complacent with the achievements to date and must more energetically step up revolution and construction. By doing so we must realize at the earliest possible date the complete victory of socialism and the long-cherished aspiration of the nation, the independent reunification of the fatherland.

At present before us is the heavy task to fulfill this year's plan ahead of schedule before the party congress, more vigorously fueling the fire of a revolutionary upswing on all fronts of socialist construction by dynamically racing forward with the force of speed battle added to Chollima.

The historic sixth congress of our party is drawing nearer every day.

All party members and functionaries, by ceaselessly bringing about heroic exploits in production and construction, highly displaying the revolutionary spirit of self-reliance and fortitude with boundless loyalty to the great leader and the party, must further spur today's awesome forward movement.

By keeping up the continuing innovations and continuing forward movement with the ever higher revolutionary vigor and enthusiasm of a chuche-oriented communist revolutionary, we shall greet the approaching Sixth Party Congress as a great festival of the victor.

COLLECTIVISM IS A LOFTY IDEOMENTAL FEATURE OF THE COMMUNIST REVOLUTIONARY

Pyongyang KULLOJA in Korean No 7, Jul 80 pp 35-40

[Article by Cho Song-mo]

[Text] Today our revolution is ceaselessly deepening and developing on a new higher level.

In order to more energetically step up our revolution and construction to suit the demands of the developing reality, it is imperative to prepare all party members and working people still better as genuine chuche-oriented communist revolutionaries. An important question arising here is seeing to it that all party members and working people truly live and work in the lofty spirit of collectivism for the sake of the party and the revolution, the fatherland and the people.

Collectivism--this is one of the most important characteristics of the working class and is the communist thought helping each other and leading each other on under the slogan "one for all, all for one." To put it another way, this is a lofty revolutionary thought loving the collective and organization and devoting all for the sake of the interests of the society and the people, for the sake of the interests of the party and the revolution, not for personal sloth and pleasure. Faithfulness of the communists to the party, to the revolution, to the people comes to be highly displayed when they hold precisely such spirit of collectivism.

Collectivism is an ideomental feature inseparable from the communist revolutionary.

The communist is a revolutionary fighter who has come forward to devote himself to the societywide cause aimed at realizing the common ideal and aim of the masses of working people typified by the working class. Away from devoted service for the working class and the people, for society and collective, a genuine revolutionary, the communist, is unthinkable. For the communists who have embarked on the road to revolution, pledging to devote their whole lives to the attainment of the cause for the sake of the working class and the masses of people, it is their natural attribute, their lofty duty to subordinate their all to the interests of the working class and the masses of people, to the interests of society and collective.

What stand and attitude to assume toward the interests of the working class and the masses of people, toward the interests of collective and society is related to the question of the communists how to live out their lives, how to fight.

If the communists are to genuinely serve the revolutionary struggle, devoting their all, they must hold the spirit of scrifical service in the interest of the working class and the masses of people, society and collective. This is the demand of socialist, communist construction and constitutes an important guarantee for its victory. He who does not have the spirit of scrificial service in the interest of the working class and the masses of people, society and collective, cannot become a revolutionary nor can he enjoy the reward and value of genuine living.

To possess the lofty spirit of collectivism arises as an important question in making the communists add luster to their glory as revolutionaries, acquit themselves fully of their attributes and move revolution and construction forward.

To possess the spirit of collectivism is above all an indispensable requirement for firmly establishing a revolutionary world outlook.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"In order that people may establish a revolutionary world outlook, it is imperative that they have a strong will, together with revolutionary mental preparedness, to be undaunted, whatever the barrier, and know the way to carry out their revolutionary duties. In addition, they must know to love the fatherland the people, love the collective and comrades, and consciously observe the revolutionary organizational discipline." ("On Socialist Literature and Arts," p 508)

Establishing a revolutionary world outlook is a precondition for becoming a communist. In order that people may be faithful to the revolution to the end, they must hold a firm revolutionary world outlook.

The revolutionary world outlook is the viewpoint of the working class turned into a credo and the revolutionary will to fight for the attainment of the revolutionary cause of the working class to the end, whatever the adversity. Therefore, without establishing the revolutionary world outlook people cannot struggle, devoting their all, to build socialism, communism, breaking through all kinds of barriers and trials.

Whether or not people firmly hold the revolutionary world outlook depends in large measure on whether or not they have the communist ideological consciousness based on collectivism. The communist ideological consciousness based on collectivism makes it possible for people to have the revolutionry faith and will to fight for the sake of the revolution to the end, whatever the adversity.

Only when possessed of the spirit of collectivism, can people tightly maintain, however difficult and complex the environment, the revolutionary integrity, indomitable fighting spirit of defending the interests of the revolution to the end and the communist faith and will of continuing the revolution to the end for generations to come if they cannot realize it in their generation. He who fails to hold dear the interests of the working class and the masses of people and subordinate his personal interests to the interests of the collective and society, cannot hold the genuine viewpoint of the working class nor can he devotedly launch into the revolutionary struggle. Therefore, in order to become a communist revolutionary thoroughly armed with the revolutionary world outlook, one must possess the lofty spirit of collecivism.

For the revolutionary who is armed with the spirit of collectivism, his determination to be faithful to the revolutionary cause to the end is not simply an ideological viewpoint but a firm faith and will. The revolutionary cause which the communists strive to attain is a historic cause for building the communist society where the masses of working people such as the working class will have become the genuine masters of society. That is why only those revolutionaries who hold dear the working class and the masses of people come to struggle to the end, whatever the adversity, for the attainment of the revolutionary cause, convinced of its validity and victory.

Experience in the revolutionary struggle over a long period of time clearly shows that he who fails to hold a firm stand and attitude to devotedly serve for the sake of organiztion and collective, society and people, cannot launch into the revolutionary struggle and even if he did so, could not fight revolution to the end. This is an immutable law and a priceless lesson the history of the communist movement teaches.

To possess the spirit of collectivism is also an important demand for the communists to add luster to the most precious political life.

For people fighting revolution, the political life is the first life, precious beyond comparison with the physical life. Deprived of the political life even though physically allive, one is as good as dead. The unsurpassed reward and value of living, the great glory and happiness of he who fights revolution, precisely lie in his political life.

The political life so precious for the revolutionary is the sociopolitical life which he can engrave in his heart and add luster to it only by displaying the lofty spirit of collectivism of devoting his all for the sake of society and collective.

People's physical life is natural life, personal life and as such, is connected with blood ties but the political life is social life, collective life and as such, is connected with class and societywide ties. This being so, the political life comes to be guarded only through the revolutionary struggle, sociopolitical activity to achieve class and national liberation. When people devote their all to the revolutionary struggle for the prosperity and happiness of society and collective, of the fatherland and the people, they come to hold the political life as their most precious life, ceaselessly adding luster to it.

He who only pursues his personal comfort, looking away from the common cause of society and collective, the revolutionary struggle, cannot guard his political life, and eventually comes to forfeit his worth as a social being. In the final analysis, this is the decayed way of life, mode of activity of the exploiting class based on individual egoism which puts his personal interests up front at the sacrifice of the interests of the country and the working masses.

Unhesitatingly dedicating all their personal interests and comfort and life solely to liquidating all kinds of exploitation and oppression, enslavement and fetters and to building the socialist, communist society, a bright future for mankind, is where the road to living in a worthwhile manner as revolutioanries is, where the genuine road to adding everlasting luster to their sociopolitical life is. So it is that the revolutionaries, the communists, come to feel the greatest reward and happiness in regarding societywide interests, interests of the revolution as their own invaluable interests and in devoting their all to them, and to fight, resolutely protecting the interests of the party and the revolution, the fatherland and the people, even at the risk of their personal, physical lives.

Collectivism is also the revolutionary spirit and attitude which the communist revolutionaries must of necessity tightly maintain in order to successfully attain the socialist, communist cause.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"Since its first days in the arena of history the working class has always regarded unity as the most precious weapon in the struggle against international capital, and on the strength of unity, it has won victory in the difficult struggle." ("Kim Il-song Selected Works," Vol 5, 2d impression, p 179)

The socialist, communist cause is a collective struggle cause based on class unity of the communists. This being so, if the communists are to successfully build socialism, communism, they must be consolidated into one strong revolutionary force in unity and solidarity. Only through the strength of revolutionary unity, organized strength, can the communists successfully carry out the historic task to completely liberate the masses of working people from all manner of enslavement and constraint of nature and society and insure an independent and creative life for them.

Revolutionary unity which is the most powerful weapon of the communists in socialist, communist construction comes to be achieved and consolidated based on comradely love among them.

As the great leader taught, the word comrade means he who shares the same will, in other words, he who shares the same thought. He who with the same thought struggles for the same objectives is called a comrade. The word comrade is an unsurpassably glorious and precious title used among revolutionaries and an expression of great trust and love for a comrade in arms. Consequently, only the unity of revolutionaries based on comradely love can become a genuine revolutionary unity and display invincible ·ght.

This is an immutal truth the entire historical course of our revolution proves. Day in and day out of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle and the postliberation struggle to build a new society, a new life, and day in and day out of the Fatherland Liberation War and the rewarding struggle to erect a prosperous socialist industrial state, clearing the postwar ashes, Korea's communists and people were always able to win shining victory in such complex environments by stoutly fighting, solidly united around the great leader.

Truly, to possess the spirit of collectivism is an important requirement for becoming a revolutionary, a communist. Anyone who wishes to become a genuine communist revolutionary must necessarily turn the spirit of collectivism into a trait native to him.

Today under the sagacious leadership of the great leader the lofty spirit of collectivism is being highly manifested among our party members and working people.

To devote their all to the attainment of the socialist, communist cause, helping each other and leading each other on in the spirit of sacrificial service for the party and the revolution, the fatherland and the people, is the bedrock life credo, mode of activity of our working people.

Our party members and working people, because of their lofty spirit of collectivism, are becoming a revolutionary people embodying the noble mental and moral features of a revolutionary on a high level.

To acquit themselves fully of their loyalty to the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is the loftiest mental and moral features of our party members and working people who are thoroughly armed with the spirit of collectivism.

Faithfulness to the leader is the basic factor in determining the height and might of the spirit of collectivism.

To hold boundless loyalty to the leader and thoroughly carry through the lines and policies laid down by the leader is none other than sacrificially serving in the struggle to realize the interests of the party and the revolution, society and people, and precisely herein lies the genuine road to displaying the spirit of collectivism on the loftiest plane.

Today our party members and working people, living every minute of their lives solely for the sake of the great leader and regarding it as a revolutionary attribute inviolate in the slightest to devote their all for the sake of the leader, are adding luster to their political life on the one road of acquitting themselves fully of their loyalty to the leader.

The examples of unsung heroes who have fought 10 years, 20 years as one day for the sake of the great leader constitute a most graphic demonstration of the loyalty held by our people. The unsung heroes, by regarding it as their highest glory, as their greatest duty to solve questions as intended and wished by the great leader and by launching a tireless struggle devoting all their wisdom and enthusiasm, have accomplished truly admirable things.

This lofty loyalty of the unsung heroes, literally transferred to the hearts of all of our party members and working people is dynamically pulsating today.

The hearts of all of our party members and working people, like those of the unsung heroes, are burning with a firm determination to live and fight for the sake of the great leader. Today all of our functionaries, party members, and working people are working with only one desire, one thought, whether awake or asleep, as to how to repay, if only a little, the great leader's implicit political trust and concern and give joy to the leader.

They have no right even to die before carrying through the teachings of the great leader and the intent of the party, whatever the conditions and environments--this is the bedrock will and faith that our people hold.

Because they deeply hold spotlessly clear and clean loyalty to the great leader, our party members and working people are so resolutely fighting on for the attainment of the sacred cause for the sake of the party and the revolution, the fatherland and the people.

The lofty spirit of collectivism being promoted among our party members and working people is also being demonstrated in bringing about collective innovations in socialist construction as they help each other and lead each other on in their sacrificial struggle for the sake of the collective and society.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"... in our society, the genuine comradely relationship wherein people mutually respect, trust, and cooperate with each other based on the collectivist principle prevails societywide." ("Kim Il-song Selected Works," Vol 6, p 349)

To devotedly struggle for the victory of the socialist, communist cause, holding dear the interests of the collective and society and helping and leading each other on, is an important demand of the spirit of collectivism. Away from the spirit of devotedly struggling for the sake of the collective and society, helping and leading each other on, collectivism is unthinkable.

Our party members and working people who hold collectivism as their lofty mental and moral features are highly displaying the noble revolutionary spirit of dynamically fighting on for the enrichment, strengthening, and development of the fatherland and the happiness of the people along the road indicated by the great leader, helping and leading each other on.

In particular, our party members and working people are bringing about innovations in production and construction, a collective helping a collective and all the collectives joining forces under the slogan "one for all, all for one." The working class and functionaries of the Anju District Coal Mine Complex, the whole collective vigorously launching into the struggle to positively mobilize their internal potential and bring about technical innovations with one mind to unconditionally carry through the teachings of the great leader, are generating one great upsurge in coal production; and the locomotive engineers of Chongju Locomotive Fleet, each shift helping one another and energetically launching the movement to do good deeds, are bringing about ceaseless innovations in transportation work.

Again, the members of farms in Mundok County, South P'yongan Province, by energetically launching the movement for mutual help between sub-workteams, between work teams, are setting brilliant examples of collective innovation in the battle to occupy the 9.5 million ton grain height; and scientists of the Academy of Sciences Research Institute of Botany, thinking of collective honors before personal honors and placing collective interests above personal interests and helping and leading each other on, are making the flower of loyalty blossom beautifully.

Collective innovations being brought about in production with cooperation and unity strengthened--this shows that our party members and working people are embodying the collective life principle on a high level.

The collectivist deeds being highly promoted among our party members and working people today are based on the lofty ideological feeling to genuinely serve for the sake of the collective and society, and this is becoming a powerful force energetically pushing our revolution and construction.

To hold dear and love revolutionary comrades is an important collectivist feature being manifested among our party members and working people.

Our party members and working people, who work and live, holding the great leader's chuche ideology as an immutable faith, possess love for social beings on the loftiest plane and are sparing nothing if for revolutionary comrades.

The beautiful deeds of devotion of the medical collective of the P'yongch'on District Hospital of Pyongyang city for the sake of a revolutionary comrade on the verge of death, and the deeds of the collective of nursery instructors of the Ch'ongjin Steel Works Nursery who of their own volition have admirably reared orphans with all their hearts--these are the noble communist virtue which can be found only among our people possessed of the chuche life outlook for holding dear and preserving revolutionary comrades.

Accounts of warm love for revolutionary comrades of our party members and working people who beautifully embroider our society and make it blossom day after day are something which is absolutely unthinkable in the capitalist society where individualism, egoism forms the basis of life.

Because of the presence of the chuche-oriented communist social beings possessed of infinitely noble comradely love, our society is always bubbling with revolutionary enthusiasm and optimism full of vigor, and the unity and solidarity of our revolutionary ranks is being thoroughly consolidated into the most solid one with the greatest vitality firmly united in ideological will.

Under the sagacious leadership of the great leader our socialist fatherland is radiating radiant rays as a beautiful paradise where the loftiest, noblest collectivist virtue is blossoming in full bloom, and our revolution is making a ceaseless advance toward a new higher peak of victory.

The noble collectivist virtue being highly displayed among our party members and working people will blossom even more fully on the road of the sacred struggle for the attainment of the chuche revolutionary cause.

To strive to possess the lofty collectivist spirit is a rewarding task for party members and working people to prepare themselves as genuine communist revolutionaries and energetically move the revolutionary struggle and construction tasks forward. For party members and working people, the collectivist spirit is an important expression of their faithfulness to the party and the revolution. Struggling with total devotion in the lofty collectivist spirit for the sake of the interests of the working class and the masses of people, for the sake of the interests of the collective and society, is where the genuine road to being forever faithful to the party and the revolution and adding luster to living as revolutionaries is.

To positively struggle against individualism, egoism, is one of the basic requirements in arming oneself with the collectivist spirit.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"In order to arm people with collectivism, it is imperative first of all to strengthen the struggle against individualism, egoism."
("Kim Il-song Selected Works," Vol 5, 2d impression, p 466)

Individualism, egoism, is a relic of the exploiting society and as such, is basically incompatible with collectivism. This is a thought of the exploiting class that they alone want to eat well, live well, whatever may happen to others, and is the greatest obstacle hampering the collective life, organizational life. If the egoistic thought grows in people's heads, they come to pursue only their personal comfort and pleasure, never minding the destiny of the country and the people.

Our party members and working people must ceaselessly struggle to thoroughly overcome the slightest expression of egoism.

Collectivism is based on loving people. Only he who loves comrades, loves the people, can love his collective. We must steadfastly indoctrinate party members and working people so that they may hold the spirit of loving comrades, loving the people. Only then can we thoroughly arm party members and working people with the collectivist spirit and highly promote among them the communist ethos of fighting, devoting their all, for the sake of the party, the state, the people.

Important in collectivist indoctrination is also making party members and working people deeply realize that collective strength is incomparably greater than individual strength.

When people realize that collective strength is greater than individual strength, they come to belive in the collective and live adhering to the collective and more positively struggle for the sake of the collective.

We must make it clearly understood among party members and working people that collective strength is inexhaustible and that if they combine collective strength and wisdom, they are quite capable of accomplishing any task, however difficult. In particular, we must make them deeply understand the prideful journey of our people who under the sagacious leadership of the great leader scored victory at every step of the way, highly displaying mass heroism and bringing about collective innovations even in such difficult and complex environment in the part period.

Collectivism is a lofty ideomental feature of the communist revolutionaries. By further strengthening collectivist indoctrination among party members and working people we shall admirably prepare them as genuine chuche-oriented communist revolutionaries and more energetically hasten the chuche revolutionary cause.

THE ESSENTIAL NATURE AND SUPERIORITY OF THE PRINCIPLE FOR UNITARILY MANAGING FINANCES

Pyongyang KULLOJA in Korean No 7, Jul 80 pp 41-46

[Article by Yun Ki-chong]

[Text] Unitarily managing finances is a unique principle of socialist financial management laid down by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song.

This principle laid down by the great leader is a programmatic compass for managing national finances to suit the intrinsic demands of the socialist society and a most valid financial management principle whose superiority and vitality have been proved through the practice of socialist construction. Unitarily managing finances is precisely where the true road to maximally, effectively utilizing national financial resources is, where a firm guarantee for energetically stepping up production and construction is.

By correctly understanding the intrinsic nature and demands of the principle laid down by the great leader for unitarily managing finances and by thoroughly carrying it through we must further improve socialist financial management and occupy the towering heights of the second Seven-Year Plan ahead of schedule.

To unitarily manage finances is an intrinsic demand of the socialist society and one of the important characteristics of socialist financial management.

As the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught, the socialist society is essentially a highly organized society, a society where everything is meshed organically.

In the socialist society the entire people, solidly united in common objectives and interests, are collectively working and living. In the socialist society, based on societywide ownership of the means of production, all branches, all units of the people's economy constitute one organic whole. In the socialist society, achievement in production of individual branches and units immediately exerts influence on related branches and production units and consequently, if an overall development of the people's economy is to be stepped up and people's living standard raised, it is imperative that all branches, all units must make production grow simultaneously at a ceaselessly high speed.

All this presents it as an inevitable demand that the socialist state, with a unified grip on the overall people's economy, guide and manage the economy on the principle of centralization.

Only if the state's centralized guidance of economic work is strengthened, is it possible to develop the economy at a ceaseless high speed on a planned basis and in a balanced way, effectively utilizing to the optimum all the national manpower and material resources with a unified grip on them to suit the intrinsic nature of the socialist society which is highly organized and where everything is meshed organically.

To strengthen the unified and centralized guidance of economic work arises as an even more important question as socialist construction progresses further and the national economic foundations become stronger.

As socialist economic construction deepens, so grow very big the economy in scope and national production potentialities. Again, the production-consumption connections between branches of the people's economy, between factories and enterprises, become complex and varied, and also the factors that must be taken into account for the rationalization of economic management grow more in number. Under such conditions, without strengthening the state's unified, centralized guidance it will become impossible to plan and organize economic management to suit the intrinsic nature of the highly organized socialist society nor will it be possible to effectively utilize the already created economic resources and production potentialities. The socialist state's unified, centralized guidance, even under conditions that the economy grows in scope and the production-consumption connections become complex, makes it possible to continue to rationalize economic management, determining in detail and thorougly meshing all production elements and ultimately, to enable the already laid economic foundations to show an even greater effectiveness.

What occupies an important place in insuring the state's centralized guidance and management of the socialist economy is the utilization of economic leverages.

In the socialist society, because of its transitional characteristics, commodity-currency relations exist, and the means of production circulated between enterprises under statewide, all people's ownership come to assume the form of commodity. Consequently, the circulation of social products in the socialist society comes to be accompanied by the movement of funds.

As the movement of funds reflects the movement of production elements, when the state moves forward with a correct grip on financial revenues and expenditures, it is possible to more satisfactorily realize the state's guidance and control of production and construciton.

In the socialist society the state, utilizing financial leverages in grasping the movement of funds, goes on to strengthen its centralized guidance of economic work. Finances in the socialist society, by providng by means of centralization the cash funds necessary for national housekeeping and supplying funds to various areas such as economic and cultural construciton and people's living conditions and by exercising control over their precise utilization, make it possible to strengthen the state's unified guidance of economic work.

If socialist finances are to be enabled to satisfactorily perform such functions, it is imperative to unitarily manage finances.

Just as it is imperative that one person must have the purse-string power to properly run the housekeeping of a family on a planned basis, so it is to unitarily spend the state's money in order to properly run national housekeeping. If this person or that person were to spend, as the spirit moved him, the state's funds which belong to the people, it would be impossible to meticulously run national hosuekeeping nor would it be possible to properly manage the socialist state.

The great leader, with his keen insight into such intrinsic demands of the socialist society, laid down the principle of unitarily managing finances.

To unitarily manage finances is one of the most important principles for socialist economic management.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"To spend money more than appropriated by the state or disburse money in violation of the appropriation is all an act of violation of a state law. Inasmuch as the state budget is a state law adopted by the Supreme People's Assembly, the supreme ruling organ, no one has the right to violate it." (Booklet "Let Us Further Hasten Socialist Construction, Properly Conducting Fiscal Management Work," p 13)

The principle enunciated by the great leader for unitarily managing finances is a thoroughly unified, centralized socialist financial management principle which places all financial revenues and disbursements under provisions of a state law, makes state funds to be disbursed only as provided for by the law, and allows no one to spend state's money as one pleases.

The state budget in the socialist society is discussed by the supreme ruling organ and proclaimed as a state law. In our country the state budget is the state's basic financial plan and as such, is deliberated and adopted as law by the Supreme People's Assembly, the supreme ruling organ, and the statement of accounts, too, showing how the law has been exeucted, is deliberated by the Supreme People's Assembly and approved as a state decision.

Therefore, national finances must be disbursed only as provided for by the law and must allow no one to spend the state's money as one pleases, in violation of the law. Should the unavoidable necessity arise in the course of executing the state budget to make partial changes, such changes must necessarily receive the approval of the president of the state. Precisely so doing is unitarily managing finances.

In our country, the laws regarding the state budget and the state laws and rules regarding financial management all embody the great leader's plan and intent, and the financial management thought and guidelines laid down by the leader. Accordingly, to manage finances only in accordance with the state laws and rules, thoroughly carrying through the principle for unitarily managing finances and to use state finances only as provided for by the law is none other than most precisely realizing the leadership of the great leader.

The principle for unitarily managing finances applies not only to the state budget but also to other areas of the financial system governed by the law regarding the state budget. Be they the financial plans of people's economy branches, the financial plans of factories and enterprises, local budgets or the estimated expenses of the budget organ, they are all reflected in the state budget in an integrated way. Therefore, to precisely execute the financial plans of people's economy branches, the financial plans of factories and enterprises, local budgets, and the estimated expenses of the budget organ and at the same time, to allow no one to arbitrarily change them or spend the state's money in violation of them is an important demand for unitarily managing finances.

To unitarily manage finances is one of the socialist financial management characteristics that can be realized only in the socialist society based on societywide ownership of the means of production.

In the capitalist society the means of production belong to the private ownership of capitalists and the profits obtained by exploiting working people, too, belong to the private ownership of individual capitalists. Consequently, in the capitalist society, unitarily managing financial resources on a societywide scale with a unified grip on them is utterly inconceivable.

In capitalist countries, state budgets are established, to be sure, with the money plundered from the people but such budgets cannot encompass all of the overall national finances. Capitalists and landlords regard not only the profits obtained by exploiting working people but also state budget funds as an important source of accumulating their own wealth and enjoying personal pleasures.

But in the socialist society where the means of production belong to societywide ownership, finances belong to people's ownership and the state budget entirely serves the people. In the socialist society the state with a unified grip on all national financial resources unitarily manages them and most effectively utilizes them to suit the interests of the people. Precisely herein lie the characteristics of socialist financial management.

The principle laid down by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song for unitarily managing finances possess a great superiority.

Realization of the principle for unitarily managing finances makes it possible above all for the state to maximally, effectively utilize all the national financial resources with a unified grip on them.

To say to effectively utilize financial resources means to produce and build more with existing funds, mobilizing all the national financial resources to the hilt and disbursing them rationally on an economical basis.

The principle for unitarily managing finances, by making all the units obligated to send in money to the state fulfill the mandate, makes it possible for the state to take timely action to mobilize the created funds on a centralized basis, gaining a unified grip on them and to supply the mobilized funds only as provided for by the law to thoroughly suit the party policy demands. In this way it makes it possible to most effectively utilize funds, eliminating the phenomena of funds being unnecessarily accumulated or of being diverted or wasted.

This principle of financial management also manifests a great superiority in ceaselessly improving economic guidance and management.

One of the important demands arising in improving economic guidance and management is properly formulating the plan and commendably conducting the work of insuring all the necessary economic technical conditions.

The principle for unitarily managing finances, because it supplies funds only as needed in management activities and even this supply is made in concurrence with the extent of progress made in fulfilling the plan, positively operates to make factories and enterprises thoroughly formulate their plans, determining production elements in detail and strictly observing planning discipline. At the same time, by making the economic guidance functionaries repudiate empiricism and the attitude of working by rough estimates, always go down to the base level and determine the state of materials and labor, the state of all the necessary conditions for facilities and the state of their utilization, it enables them to ceaselessly improve, ahead of production, the work of providing all the necessary economic technical conditions. In this way it sees to it that factories and enterprises normalize, standardize enterprise management and scientize management activities.

Carrying through the principle for unitarily managing finances also positively operates to establish a revolutionary work attitude and lifestyle among functionaries and working people.

The principle for unitarily managing finances provides by law for creating and utilizing financial resources and allows no one to use state finances as one pleases, in violation of the state law. Such principled demands in financial management hold in themselves a great significance for indoctrination in discernment. This also operates to enhance the law-abiding consciousness and establish a revolutionary way of life among functionaries and working people, exercising control so that finances may be managed in accordance with the state law and order. In the course of unitarily managing finances, the functionaries come to highly display the spirit of collectivism and the communist way of life which hold dearer the collective interests, the societywide interests, thoroughly overcoming departmentalism and provincialism which put the narrow interests of their own organ or their own locality up front.

The principle for unitarily managing finance, especially by thoroughly repudiating "liberalization," "decentralization of authority" in financial management, by elimianting any gap for the outdated ideological dregs remaining in people's heads and the old ways of life to gain a foothold or resurrect, and by removing elements which may allow all kinds of violation of the law to surface, makes the functionaries and working people work, displaying high revolutionary fervor and creative positivity in jointly defending, consolidating and developing the gains of socialism.

Under socialism, the principle for unitarily managing finances, because it gets combined with democracy, manifests its superiority more clearly.

The principle for unitarily managing finances presupposes democracy instead of repudiating it, and is closely combined with democracy.

Democracy in socialist financial management not only highly inspires the revolutionary fervor of working people, giving priority to political work but highly promotes the sense of responsibility and initiative of the producers through carrying through the socialist principle of distribution and thoroughly implementing the independent economic accounting system and local budgetary system. Thus by firmly turning around financial management work itself as the task of the masses themselves and making one and all consciously participate in financial management in a manner befitting the master, it makes it possible to realize even better the principle for unitarily managing finances and even more highly promote its superiority.

All this graphically shows that indeed the principle laid down by the great leader for unitarily managing finances is a guiding compass for financial management precisely reflecting the intrinsic demands of the socialist society and the characteristics of socialist financial management and that when this is thoroughly carried through, it will be possible to energetically step up socialist construction.

To more energetically step up socialist construction, thoroughly carrying through the principle for unitarily managing finances, is one of the important tasks before us.

Today our country's people's economy, even under conditions that its scope has grown very big, is developing at a very high speed.

Having fulfilled ahead of schedule the enormous tasks of the first two years of the second Seven-Year Plan, a plan unprecedentedly magnificent in the history of socialist construction, our people are dynamically launching an all-out march movement in order to fulfill the third year's task before the Sixth Party Congress. In step therewith, the financial scope has grown so incomparably that in the last 10 years alone, state budget revenues have grown fast at the high average annual rate of 13 percent, and the scope of the state budget, too, has grown 3.4 times. Today our country's finances insure an amount equal to the entire budget revenues for year 1949 in a mere 5 days.

Such rapid growth of the economy and finances presents it to all branches, all units of the people's economy as a real and immediate task to decisively improve economic guidance and management, more thoroughly carrying through the principle for unitarily managing finances and to bring about fresh innovations in financial management.

As socialist construction progresses, financial demands are growing ever bigger. In order to satisfactorily insure the rapidly growing financial demands, it is imperative to produce and build even more with existing funds, effectively utilizing existing financial resources along with creating still more financial resources. This can be successfully resolved only by unitarily managing finances.

In order to more thoroughly carry through the principle for unitarily managing finances, it is imperative above all for all functionaries and working people to thoroughly understand the intrinsic nature and superiority of the financial management principle enunciated by the great leader and thorougyly realize its demands.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"Only if we manage finances, thoroughly armed with the unitary ideology of our party and with chuche established, can we make them admirably serve our revolution and construction." ("On the Question of Socialist Economic Management," Vol 3, p 356)

In the chuche socialist financial management thought and guideline laid down by the great leader are comprehensively enunciated the intrinsic nature and superiority of the principle for unitarily managing finances, and the necessity and ways of more thoroughly carrying it through.

All of us, deeply studying the financial management thought of the great leader and the embodiment, the financial policy of our party, must hold them as our firm faith and thoroughly establish the revolutionary attitude of unconditionally carrying them through to the end.

At the same time, all branches, all units of the people's economy, with a correct stand and viewpoint toward the question of unitarily managing finances, and based on state laws and rules, must precisley manage finances, seeing to it that there surface no undisciplined phenomena, however small, such as using state funds as one pleases in violation of the law.

In order to thoroughly carry through the principle for unitarily managing finances, it is important to strengthen financial control and financial discipline.

To say to strengthen financial control and financial discipline means none other than to manage and operate national finances in accordance with state laws and rules. Therefore, strengthening financial control and financial discipline constitutes unitarily and thoroughly managing finances.

Without strengthening financial control and financial discipline it is impossible to jointly defend the socialist finances which belong to the people and to precisely manage and operate them to suit the interests of revolution and construction and the people, nor is it possible to carry through the principle for unitarily managing finances.

All branches, all units, deeply understanding the significance and importance of strengthening financial control and financial discipline in the present period, must fulfill without fail their obligation to send in money to the state and at the same time, positively saving every penny, must effectively use state funds in compliance with the state laws and rules. Again, energetically launching ideological indoctrination and ideological struggle, they must see to it that there be no phenomena of recklessly using state funds or of misappropriation and waste of state finances.

One of the important ways to strengthen financial discipline and thoroughly carry through the principle for unitarily managing finances is properly conducting the work of summing up finances.

Only by substantively conducting the work of summing up finances on a regular basis is it possible to strengthen mass supervision and control for the execution of the financial budget and strictly establish financial discipline, eliminating the phenomena and elements of all kinds of waste.

All state organs, enterprises, and cooperative organizations, commendably summing up the progress in the execution of the financial budget, must take timely action to precisely ascertain how much money they have earned, how much money they have spent, how much profit they have given the state, and acquaint the masses with them concretely. In particular, thoroughly carrying through the guidelines laid down by our party for summing up daily production and finances, they must firmly turn around financial management as the task of the masses themselves and relying on the masses, must strengthen financial discipline. When precisely doing so, they can strengthen the conservation struggle and ceaselessly rationalize management activities and setting the strength of the masses in motion, carry through the principle even better for unitarily managing finances.

In order to effectively utilize financial resources on a societywide basis, unitarily managing finances, to improve financial management and expand and develop socialist ownership, it is imperative to further improve accounting and statistical work. What is important here is positively mechanizing accounting work.

Accounting work positively mechanized, it will be possible to improve accounting and statistical work to suit the demands of the developing realities, thoroughly insuring the accounting time and accuracy and to reduce manpower as well. Therefore, all branches, all units of the people's economy, by stepping up the mechanization of accounting work and by improving and strengthening the economic accounting and statistics of production and distribution, circulation and consumption and the bookkeeping work for finances, must bring about ceaseless innovations in financial management.

One of the important ways to precisely carry through the principle for unitarily managing finances is enhancing the role of financial banking organs.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"In order to correctly execute the state budget, financial banking organs must precisely perform their role. If financial banking organs were to consider their duties fulfilled by summing up the budget and balancing the accounts, it would be a big mistake. Financial banking organs must of necessity ceaselessly exercise control and inspection so that organs and enterprises of all branches of the people's economy may execute the budget without deflection and properly use state funds." ("On the Question of Socialist Economic Management," Vol 2, p 290)

In direct charge of managing the socialist finances are financial banking organs and functionaries of the financial banking branch. When financial banking organs and functionaries of the financial banking branch execute the state budget without deflection to suit the demands of the developing realities and establish a strict system and order for financial management, the principle for unitarily managing finances will be thoroughly carried through.

All financial banking functionaries, with a heightened awareness of being the hosuekeeper in charge of national housekeeping, must set standards by their own actions in observing the financial management principle in an exemplary manner, and must persistently strive to give a still bigger profit to the state, paying out state funds only as provided for in the laws and saving one more penny of the state money. At the same time, they must oversee and control all branches, all units all the time so that they may thoroughly observe the financial management principle, and must see to it that there is no gap, however small, for causing a waste of state funds in violation of financial discipline.

To carry through the financial management principle laid down by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is a responsible task to fulfill the new long term plan ahead of schedule with our own financial resources, solidly consolidating the national financial foundations, and step up socialist, communist construction.

By thoroughly carrying through the principle for unitarily managing finances in the spirit of absolutism, unconditionality toward the teachings of the great leader and the embodiment, the policy of the party, one and all shall bring about one great innovation in national financial management work.

RATIONAL UTILIZATION OF ECONOMIC LEVERAGES IN ENTERPRISE MANAGEMENT

Pyongyang KULLOJA in Korean No 7, Jul 80 pp 47-52

[Article by Yi Kun-hwan]

[Text] One of the important questions arising in rationally managing and operating the socialist economy is improving enterprise management, correctly utilizing economic leverages.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"... deserved attention shall be paid to correctly utilizing economic leverages in economic management in accordance with the demands of the law of the socialist economy." ("On the Question of Socialist Economic Management," Vol 3, p 543)

An economic leverage is an economic means purposefully utilized to rationally manage and operate the socialist economy.

What is utilized as an economic leverage is an economic category reflecting a certain economic relationship. If an economic category is an objectively existing economic relationship itself, an economic leverage is an economic relationship purposefully utilized by people. It is related to such fact that from one and the same economic relationship known as price comes to stem what is known as a price category and a price leverage.

Economic relationships which are utilized as economic leverages objectively exist even as they are closely connected with the functions of the economic laws. Precisely through economic leverages people utilize the economic laws and improve enterprise management.

Of course, this is not to say that the work of rationally organizing enterprise management is achieved only through correctly utilizing economic leverages. Rationalization of enterprise management in the socialist society is also achieved through properly doing production organization and labor organization, through improving the work of setting norms, through normalizing and standardizing enterprise management. Such tasks are mainly related to technical economic organizational work which in itself is not utilized as an economic leverage. An economic leverage is a means to rationalize economic guidance and enterprise management, utilizing the economic laws.

In the socialist society there are various economic leverages. In the socialist society operate various economic laws native to the socialist society, such as the basic law of the socialist economy and the law of the balanced development of the people's economy on a planned basis, and as the commodity-currency relationship remains, the law of value also operates on a limited scale. In the socialist society, inasmuch as various economic laws operate, there come to exist, consistent with them, economic categories such as planning, materials supply, wage, cost, profit, price, and independent economic accounting, which are utilized as major economic means in improving socialist economic management, especially enterprise management.

If factories and enterprises are to more tightly plan and organize enterprise management, they must rationally utilize economic leverages.

To say to rationally utilize economic leverages means to utilize various economic leverages in combination so as to not only improve any one dimension of management activity but further improve overall enterprise management to suit the demands of the economic laws.

In the socialist society, all management activities are conducted thoroughly in accordance with the economic laws. Therefore, in managing and operating factories and enterprises it is imperative to properly calculate the demands of the economic laws, organize and execute all tasks to suit them. What is important here is scientifically analyzing economic phenomena and production results which exert influence on enterprise management. What is utilized in improving management activities, analyzing economic phenomena and production results and bringing to light the factors operating on them is precisely an economic leverage. This bespeaks that, economic leverages correctly utilized, it will be possible to make positively come alive the affirmative that has emerged in management activities and to straighten out, with stimuli and control, what has brought a loss to management or gone wrong.

An economic leverage individually cannot become an effective means of improving overall enterprise management. The demands of the economic laws operating in the socialist society are different from one another but they operate not independently but in close combination with one another. Again, as each economic leverage performs its functions, reflecting the economic relationship of a certain specific dimension of management activity, it is impossible, with any one economic leverage alone, to scientifically analyze overall enterprise management and precisely bring to light all factors exerting influence on it. In order to satisfy all the demands of the economic laws at the same time and improve overall enterprise management, it is imperative to necessarily utilize various economic leverages in combination. Any effort to properly conduct materials supply work which occupies an important place in socialist economic management also calls for organizing planning work and for correctly utilizing economic leverages relative to the commodity-currency relationship, materials supply in commercial form. When economic leverages are utilized in correct combination, it will be possible to more rationally conduct economic management, enterprise management, stimulating production and contr lling expenditure and ultimately, to further enhance the creative positivity of the producers as well.

To correctly utilize economic leverages arises as an even more real and immediate question as socialist economic construction deepens.

As socialist construction progresses, the economy grows in scope and the links between branches of the people's economy and reproduction become very close and complex. Accordingly, economic factors grow in number which must be taken into account in establishing and carrying out a people's economic plan and so rises higher the demand for further stimulating the production desire of working people and thoroughly planning and formulating economic organizational work as well. Under such conditions, only by utilizing economic leverages in combination to suit the role each of them plays, is it possible to more thoroughly plan and organize guidance and management work for the large-scale socialist industry and improve enterprise management to suit the demands of the economic laws.

If enterprise management is improved with the rational utilization of economic leverages, it will become possible to continue to step up production and construction, effectively mobilizing national economic resources and production potentialities which become more solid as socialist economic construction deepens. The rational utilization of economic leverages makes it possible to further step up production and construction with existing labor, existing facilities, existing materials, existing funds, providing stimuli and control for maximally mobilizing the already created production potentialities. This bespeaks that utilizing economic leverages in combination to suit the socialist economic laws and the socialist economic management principle is where an important guarantee for improving economic guidance and enterprise management and continuing to accelerate the pace of the socialist construction march is.

Therefore, we must make the mighty economic foundations laid in our country sufficiently show their effectiveness, correctly utilizing economic leverages, and must occupy ahead of schedule the towering targets of the new long term plan, further enhancing the efficacy of societywide labor.

In socialist economic management, either neglecting the utilization of economic leverages or overemphasizing the utilization of individual economic leverages will make it impossible to rationalize overall enterprise management or to substantively conduct the work of stimulation and control so that the state plan may be carried out without deflection by the specific indexes.

In rationally utilizing economic leverages, it is imperative to necessarily hold fast to the principle of precisely taking account of what is leading and supplementary and of utilizing them in combination. Only by tightly maintaining this principle is it possible to satisfactorily fill the demands of all economic laws throughout the course of management activities and make the economic leverages fully perform their functions as a tool for realizing the economic policy of the party.

What is important here is attaching priority importance to utilizing the economic leverages which reflect the intrinsic nature of the socialist system.

In the socialist society where the masses of working people have become the master of the ruling power of the state and the means of production, all economic activities are conducted on a planned basis. The capitalist economy, which is based on private ownership of the means of production, moves fortuitously, anarchically, but the socialist economy develops at a ceaseless high rate of speed in a balanced way in accordance with the state's unified plan which has taken into account the demands of the laws of the socialist economy. In the socialist economy, all links of reproduction from production, distribution, exchange to consumption, and production elements are taken into account and utilized through a series of economic leverages such as planning and materials supply. Therefore, in utilizing economic leverages, priority attention must necessarily be paid to utilizing the economic leverages native to the socialist society. When doing so, it will be possible to make the economic leverages thoroughly serve to propel the development of the people's economy and display the superiority of the socialist system to the hilt.

The economic leverages which exist relative to the transitional character of the socialist society must be utilized on a planned basis as a supplementary means to rationalize enterprise management.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"In the transitional period when dregs of the old society still remain in many areas of social life, only by correctly utilizing economic leverages such as the law of value is it possible to rationalize economic management. In the socialist society, it will not do to try to conduct economic management the capitalist way, overestimating the importance of the law of value but it is just as wrong to disregard the transitional character of the socialist society and totally negate the importance of the law of value. ... In the socialist society, it is imperative to utilize the law of value on a planned basis as a supplementary means to rationalize economic management." ("Kim Il-song Selected Works," Vol 6, p 395)

The law of value is the economic law of commodity production; consequently, this operates when commodity production prevails. The law of value operates in a certain way even in the socialist society, which is a transitional society, inasmuch as commodity production goes on and commodity-currency relationship exists, but the law of value operates on a limited scale, not blindly as in the capitalist society, and is utilized in realizing the demands of the law of the socialist economy. If in socialist economic management the law of value and related economic leverages are not correctly realized, it will be impossible to rationalize enterprise management and a lot of the means of production and labor could result in a waste.

In the socialist society the law of value operates in a certain specific way in carrying through the demands of the laws of the socialist economy for conserving labor, facilities, and materials and lowering the cost, insuring a high rate of speed in economic development, and systematically improving the standard of living for the people. The law of value, especially subordinated to the operation of the law of the planned, balanced development of the people's economy, is a supplmentary means to correct the shortcomings that may surface in planning and insure the precise execution of the established plan. Therefore, only by properly utilizing on a planned basis the law of value and related economic leverages is it possible to more thoroughly insure the planning nature and balanced character of the developing people's economy and provide stimuli for lowering the standard of material consumption per unit of product and more improve the quality of product as well.

Today what is important in rationally utilizing economic leverages is properly calculating planning work, materials supply, and funding leverages in close combination so as to normalize production on a high level, maximally mobilizing existing materials, existing funds.

Raw materials and supplies are important production elements. If production is to be conducted on a normal basis, raw materials and supplies must be properly secured, and sufficient funds must be provided for financially guaranteeing them.

Raw materials and supplies are secured by materials supply. Materials supply is an economic category that has newly come into being in the socialist society where the law of the planned, balanced development of the people's economy operates, and is an economic leverage which is significantly utilized in rationalizing economic management. An important characteristic of materials supply lies in positively propelling the development of production by making the supply of the means of production to state-operated enterprises achieved on a thoroughly planned basis and by making production linkages and balance insured through planned supply between branches of the people's economy, between factories and enterprises.

Materials supply, as it is achieved in commercial form, also performs controlling functions. The commercial form in the planned supply of the means of production is a form of planned supply effected only under conditions that relevant enterprises have liquid funds for selling and buying them at prices set by the state and as such, provides stimuli for effectively utilizing materials and funds and performs a controlling role as well.

Therefore, economic guidance functionaries must see to it that there emerge no phenomena such as factories and enterprises having on hand unnecessary materials and materials in excess of actual needs or excessive unfinished products and semi-finished products or carrying finished products too long. The materials supply branch, by supplying materials only for ready cash in accordance with the demands of the Taean Work System, even if the materials are meshed in the plan, must provide stimuli and exercise control so that raw materials and supplies are utilized on a planned basis. Only by so doing will it be possible to make factories and enterprises plan and organize production only with the means of production absolutely necessary for fulfilling the state plan, prevent phenomena of waste, and raise the efficacy of fund utilization as well.

Very heavy is the responsibility of factory and enterprise functionaries, who directly organize and plan production, in maximally, effectively utilizing raw materials and supplies, closely combining materials supply and funding leverages. Factory and enterprise functionaries must dovetail materials supply plan and materials supply contract to absolutely necessary quantities of raw materials and supplies by the classification, by the specification, by the grade, based on detailed calculation for fulfilling the state plan by quantitative indexes of products according to classification; and by fulfilling the state plan without fail by the day, by the ten-day period, by the month, by the quarter, with the means of production received, they must thoroughly observe planning discipline and at the same time, must see to it that no liquid funds lying idle in the production and circulation areas obstruct production. In this way they must strive to normalize production on a high level, more rationally utilizing raw materials and supplies and to produce more with less funds, quickening the pace of materials movement and fund movement.

Factories and enterprises must also pay keen attention to utilizing various economic leverages in proper combination so as to increase production and balance accounts.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"It will not do for us to consider the balancing of accounts as of little importance just because production is high on our list of priorities." ("A Collection of Writings of Kim Il-song," Vol 2, p 565)

The main objective of enterprise activity in the socialist society is increasing production even more for the promotion of the well-being of working people. But because it is the main objective of management activity to increase production even more, it does not mean that it will do to just increase production without balancing accounts. If economic guidance functionaries irrationally organize management activity, the state's economic burden will grow bigger and in the end, will obstruct the promotion of well-being of the entire people. Therefore, even while increasing production, it is imperative to systematically lower the cost and increase State accumulation, conserving raw materials and supplies and raising labor productivity, and each unit under the independent economic accounting system must commendably balance accounts.

Important in balancing accounts is increasing production, lowering the cost, and eliminating uneconomic expenditures to the utmost.

Production increased with less expenses, the cost per unit of product will become lower even as the total output increases, and the source of wage funds and State accumulation will come to rapidly grow. Thus in the event of increasing production with less expenditures, various economic indicators such as the total output, the cost, state enterprise profits, wage funds, and liquid funds, will come to be expressed affirmatively and the financial state of enterprises will improve as well. But even in the event that the total output was increased, if labor and the means of production were used in excess of the plan or the standard, or wasted, then it could exert negative influence on overall economic activity because it would rather increase the cost, decrease State accumulation, and the shortage of liquid funds would strain the financial state. This shows that attention must be paid to the fulfillment of the total output and at the same time, various economic leverages such as the cost, returns, liuqid funds, and state enterprise profits must be properly calculated. Only by precisely balancing accounts even while increasing production is it possible to satisfactorily conduct management activity and ultimately, to rapidly develop the overall people's economy.

Important in properly balancing accounts is precisely carrying out the cost plan.

Cost is a qualitative index which characterizes the management activity of an enterprise as a whole and an economic leverage which is significantly utilized in adjusting and controlling the expenditure of societywide labor. When factories and enterprises, failing to improve utilization of facilities, waste labor and exceed the standards of material consumption and management cost, it will be difficult to fulfill the cost plan even if the production plan is fulfilled. Factories and enterprises must positively lower expenses constituting component parts of the cost such as labor, material, and depreciation of fixed assets per unit of product, analyze management activity linking it with various indexes such as the classification index and grade index, and effectively utilize a cost leverage in improving enterprise management as a whole. When doing so, it will be possible to satisfactorily solve both the question of increasing production and the question of balancing accounts and to precisely fulfill the state plan by the specific indexes.

In rationally utilizing economic leverages it is important to make the workers pay atention to raising labor norm and increasing per employ output by precisely calculating factors exerting influence on the per employee production volume and by properly combining labor norm and labor reward leverages.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"If work norms are raised and the workers carry them out, the per employee output will increase that much. Therefore, a reward for labor to the workers can and must be increased. It is to augment the wealth of the country and, at the same time, further upgrade the living standards of the working people that we increase production." (Booklet "Let Us Thoroughly Abide by the Socialist Labor Law," p 18)

Per employee output is one of the important indexes showing the developing standard of national productive forces and economic might along with per capita national income. Only with per employee output raised, State accumulation and national income will grow and so will the source of income for working people, and the material and cultural standards of the people will also ceaselessly improve. Accordingly, the question of increasing per employee output arises as a very important question in socialist construction as well as in economic management.

Today our party, while consolidating the experience gained in the struggle to increase per employee output in the past period, has laid down the militant task to increase it to 15,000 won or more.

In order to brilliantly carry out this militant task laid down by the party, it is imperative to increase labor productivity and maximally, effectively utilize deployed labor, decisively raising the ratio of labor of the basic production branch, especially labor of the direct branch based on concrete calculation of all factors exerting influence on per employee output, and stepping up technical innovations. Only then will it be possible to produce more with less expenditure of labor and further improve the standard of living for the working people as well.

In order to increase per employee output, it is imperative to strengthen political work aimed at making the producers pay their keen attention to it and at the same time, to thoroughly implement the socialist distribution principle, the socialist labor reward system.

In order to make all working people in the socialist society energetically step up production and construction with an attitude befitting the master, it is imperative above all to give priority to political work. If the revolutionary fervor of working people is higher, per employee output comes to rise by that much. But this is not to say that properly implementing the socialist distribution principle, the socialist labor reward system is less important. In the socialist society which is a transitional society, only if the socialist distribution principle, the socialist labor reward system is thoroughly implement, along with strengthening politicomoral stimuli, is it possible to further enhance the production desire of working people and energetically press on with the development of productive forces.

In order to correctly implement the socialist labor reward system, it is imperative to properly set labor norm, systematically raise it, and at the same time, increase labor reward as the higher labor norm is carried out.

Labor norm is labor quota that must be carried out within a specific unit number of hours, and properly setting it forms the basis for precisely implementing the socialist labor reward system. The purpose of properly setting labor norm and systematically increasing it lies in improving the standard of living for the working people by further increasing production and correctly implementing distribution for their expenditure of labor. Only if labor norm is set high and wage, bonus, and bounty are increased accordingly, will working people come to positively strive, voluntarily concerning themselves with carrying out the labor norm, to achieve technical innovations, conserve labor and material, and further increase production. When this happnes, it will be possible to create favorable conditions for further improving enterprise management activity by increasing the output volume of products and improving their quality. Therefore, economic guidance functionaries must periodically review labor norm, systematically increase it, and raise labor reward accordingly.

Properly conducting the work of evaluating labor is an important way to stimulate and inspire working people to work even better not only quantitatively but qualitatively as well. Only under conditions that labor is precisely evaluated quantitatively and qualitatively, will it be possible to make distribution to working people for the amount they have worked, for the amount they have earned, and further enhance the production desire of working people.

Economic guidance functionaries must properly evaluate the quantity and quality of working people's labor in combination with their progress in fulfilling the production quota, their progress in utilizing materials, their progress in improving the quality of product, their progress in adopting new technologies. In particular, the functionaries of enterprises must precisely organize accounting work, further strengthening the daily system of summing up production and finances, whose superiority and vitality have been proved to the hilt in practice.

While overseeing the entire course of socialist reproduction, overall enterprise management, to correctly calculate the functions and characteristrics of individual economic leverages and rationally utilize them is a difficult task which calls for high economic knowledge and job performance abilities. Only the functionary possessed of high economic knowledge and job performance abilities can ably utilize economic leverages and take timely action to solve various questions arising in enterprise management.

Economic guidance functionaries, thoroughly establishing a revolutionary study attitude, must substantively study the teachings the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has given for the economic management area and the embodiment, the economic policy of our party, the socialist economic management method. Thus they must further improve enterprise management and put management activity on a higher scientific level.

To rationally utilize economic leverages in enterprise management is a rewarding struggle to maximally, effectively utilize the already created economic resources and production potentialities.

By further improving and strengthening economic guidance and enterprise management to suit the law of the socialist economy and the principle of socialist economic management, we shall fulfill that part of the state plan assigned our branch, our unit, ahead of schedule before the Sixth Congress of the glorious Korean Workers Party and further step up production and construction.

IT IS IN THE NATURE OF LAW THAT THE MORE REPRESSED THE STRONGER THE RESISTANCE GROWS

Pyongyang KULLOJA in Korean No 7, Jul 80 pp 53-59

[Article by So Ch'i-yol]

[Text] Today in south Korea the struggle of the people is dynamically under way to sweep away the remnants of "yusin" and realize the democratization of society. This is an inevitable result brought by the diabolical colonial military fascist rule of U.S. imperialism and its lackeys who are intensifying their unlimited exploitation and oppression of the south Korean people.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"It is in the nature of law that where exploitation and oppression exist, there is the resistance of the people. It is inevitable that for their own freedom and liberation the south Korean people should struggle against the oppressors." ("Kim Il-song Selected Works," Vol 5, 2d impression, p 196)

That the more repressed the stronger the resistance grows is the intrinsic characteristic of people demanding independent stand and attitude.

People are social beings holding independent stand and attitude as life. He who is deprived of independent stand and attitude cannot hold human dignity nor can he feel the reward of living. He who is deprived of independent stand and attitude and socially forsaken, is as good as dead as a human being. People's independent stand and attitude is by no means something that is realized by itself. This can be won only through struggle against all kinds of oppressors trampling their independent stand and attitude. Precisely this being so, no one wishes to allow oneself to live under the oppression and enslavement of others and struggles to realize one's independent stand and attitude.

The aim and aspiration of the masses of working people who oppose oppression and enslavement and demand independent stand and attitude absolutely cannot be stifled by the bayonet. It is inevitable that the more the oppression is intensified, the bigger the aim of the masses of people grows to cast it off and independently live.

The course of history from the first outbreak long ago of slave rebellion against the suppression of slaveholders to today's struggle of oppressed peoples against the tyrannical oppression and plunder of the imperialists graphically shows that precisely, the more the oppression of the reactionary ruling class is intensified, the more dynamically the resistance of the masses of people breaks out.

Precisely so reveals the history of our country too. In bygone days, against the vicious exploitation and oppression of the feudal ruling circles numerous struggles such as the Kapo Peasants War [1894] had broken out, followed by indomitable struggles of broad circles of people against the crafty colonial rule of Japanese imperialism, such as the 1 March [1919] Independence Movement, the 10 June [1926] manse struggle, the Kwangju students movement, the general strike of Wonsan dock workers, the strike of Sinhung Coal Mine workers, the struggle of Purabol peasants.

In the end, the reactionary ruling class trampling people's independent stand and attitude is destined to fall by the resistance and struggle of the people. This is a truth proved in a long history and practical struggle.

U.S. imperialism and its lackeys are resorting to every machination in an attempt to maintain their colonial rule over south Korea with utterly barbaric fascist suppresison. But U.S. imperialism and its lackeys can never realize their heinous objective, whatever desperate machinations they may resort to. The more the scoundrels' fascist suppression is intensified, the more dynamic the struggle of the south Korean people becomes.

From the first day it occupied south Korea, U.S. imperialism has committed the criminal act of dividing the nation, going against the will of our people, and has enforced the most vicious policy of colonial enslavement in south Korea with a tight grip on all the political, economic, military and cultural areas.

Gathering pro-U.S. reactionaries such as its well-groomed running dog Syngman Rhee, U.S. imperialism viciously perpetrated its barbaric suppression against the south Korean people. But this merely resulted in making the south Korean people rise up in the struggle to oppose the colonial rule of U.S. imperialism and the Syngman Rhee puppet gang and realize freedom and democracy and the reunification of the country.

The September general strike, the October people's resistance, the struggle against the 10 May unilateral election, and the Yosu military uprising which the south Korean people launched following liberation, eloquently bespeak this.

In particular, the April Popular Uprising of 1960 was a mass people's uprising which vividly showed that the more the suppression of U.S. imperialism and its lackeys is intensified, the bigger the people's resistance against it grows.

With the outbreak of the 19 April Popular Uprising in south Korea, the Syngman Rhee puppet gang who had been indulging in tyranny of every description,reigning over the south Korean people, at last came to an end.

The Pak Chong-hui puppet gang, who intercepted political power by means of a military coup following the April Popular Uprising, transformed the whole area of the south into a vortex of fascism, enforcing military dictatorship by far more vicious than the Syngman Rhee rule.

The diabolical traitor Pak Chong-hui puppet gang, enforcing the "yusin system," ruthlessly suppressed and massacred the south Koren people and unhesitatingly perpetrated all kinds of criminal acts for perpetual division of the country. Under "yusin" fascist dictatorship suppression south Korea, literally lying in ruins where democracy was completely violated and wiped out, was transformed into a land of darkness where even the most elementary freedom and right of the people were mercilessly trampled.

Thus the grievances and anger of the south Korean people against the "yusin" fascist dictatorship permeated heaven and earth, and the people experienced it to the quick that leaving the dictatorship alone, they could never cast off their misfortunes and sufferings, lack of rights, and poverty.

Precisely this being so, the south Korean people have persistently launched the struggle against the "yusin" fascist dictatorship from the first day it was established.

Following "October yusin" the Pak Chong-hui puppet gang's fascist suppression was unprecedently intensified and struggle conditions became very difficult but the south Korean youth and students and people of all strata, as undaunted as ever, launched without interruption bloody struggles such as the October strugle of 1973 and 3 April struggle of 1974 to oppose the "yusin" fascist dictatorship and realize the democratization of society and hasten the reunification of the country. In particular, popular uprisings broke out last October in Pusan and Masan to put an end to the colonial military fascist rule. These were popular uprisings reminiscent of the April Popular Uprising of 1960.

The uprisings in Pusan and Masan became an important turnaround point that put an end to traitor Pak Chong-hui, the fascist dictator who had perpetrated all kinds of bestial suppression and atrocities, reigning as fascism incarnate for nearly 20 long years.

Following the death of scoundrel Pak Chong-hui, the south Korean people strongly demanded that the "yusin" fascist system be abolished at the earliest possible date and democratization be realized in all areas of sociopolitical life; and the general popular feelings were focused on democratization.

But the remnants of "yusin," taking to the road of flagrantly defying such aim and demand of the people and going against the general trend, pressed down the people even more ruthlessly.

The gang of Chon Tu-hwan, who has inherited fascist frenzy as part of his physical constitution in the bosom of traitor Pak Chong-hui and become proficient in covert intelligence stratagem and fraudulence, came out to perpetrate vicious stratagemical machinations for maintaining the diabolical "yusin system" by hook or by crook, taking advantage of the complex and chaotic political situation created in south Korea following the 26 October incident.

Scoundrel Chon Tu-hwan, a fascist maniac killer, by stratagemical means gained a tight grip on the military and the "Central Intelligence Agency," and on 17 May this year, placed the whole of south Korea under expanded "emergency martial law" on the pretext of "threat of invasion from the north" and "security." This is a carbon copy of the 16 May military coup whereby the previous dictator had intercepted the puppet political power, mobilizing armed force, and blatantly bared their inherent nature to hold in check the democratic development of south Korean society and even more intensify the suppression of the people.

Under the "emergency martial law" proclaimed by the gang of Chon Tu-hwan and under their "martial proclamation No 10" which is even more vicious than the "emergency decree No 9" under the Pak Chong-hui rule, all political activities are prohibited throughout south Korea, all universities and colleges are closed, and free activities such as assembly, demonstration and speech are banned. In addition, many youths and students, and personalities of the political, academic, press, and religious circles who courageously struggled for democratic freedoms and rights against fascism, have been arrested and jailed. Thus south Korea has come to face a very grave situation as a stifling living hell, more insufferable than the suppression of traitor Pak Chong-hui for 19 years.

The outrageous act on 17 May by the remnants of "yusin" further intensified the acute confrontation between the fascist forces and the democratic forces in south Korea and could not but make utterly indignant the youth and students, and the people of all strata, who, so disillusioned with the fascist "yusin system," had sacrificially fought against it, unafraid of prison and the gallows. The anger of the people against the remnants of "yusin" soared throughout the whole of south Korea, and the antifascist democratization struggle expanded rapidly.

From 18 May onward, the patrictic people, the youth and students of Kwangju, reflecting such torrential stream of democratization overflowing throughout the land of the south, at last rose up in a heroic war of resistance. Loudly shouting slogans such as "lift the emergency martial law at once," "remnants of yusin, step down," "execute Chon Tu-hwan," they launched mass resistance.

The Kwangju Popular Uprising, which gave vent by a stroke to the longstanding indignation and anger of the south Korean people, once again eloquently proves the truth that the more repressed, the stronger the resistance grows.

The great leader Comrade KimIl-song taught as follows:

"Only by struggle can oppressed peoples liberate themselves. This is a simple, clear truth proved by history." ("Kim Il-song Selected Works," Vol 4, 2d impression, p 521)

It is inevitable that the masses of working people should struggle to liberate themselves from exploitation and oppression.

The mass resistance that burst into flames in Kwangju was a just struggle of the people to cast off the fascist oppression of the oppressors.

The Kwangju Popular Uprising shows that when repressed by ironfisted rule, the strength of the masses of people grows incomparably bigger.

Even in the face of multilayer encirclement of Kwangju city by enormous forces of the puppet army under stringent "emergency martial law" enforced by the remnants of "yusin," the Kwangju resisters held every day a large-scale mass meeting against the "yusin" fascist system and courageously fought, standing up to the vicious "martial law army" coming at them, mobilizing even aircraft and tanks.

The rebellious masses dealt telling blows to U.S. imperialism and the south Korean puppets, by forming "do-or-die units" and heroically fighting, never slacking their struggle in the slightest even amid the grim trial that the scoundrels were perpetrating bestial atrocities and indiscriminate violence.

Truly, the patriotic people of Kwangju, by sacrificially struggling with a heroic resolve to die rather than live as the slaves of fascism any lorger in their fierce confrontation with the fascist forces, have left behind immortal achievements that will long shine in the history of the fatherland.

The recent Kwangju Popular Uprising is a historic event of extraordinary significance in the struggle histories of the south Korean people and of other oppressed peoples for the sake of freedom and democracy against oppressors.

[The significance of] the Kwangju Popular Uprising lies above all in that it was the biggest and most fierce mass rebellion, a first in the modern [kundae as against hyondae or contemporary] histories of the Asian peoples to oppose despotism and realize democracy.

The modern histories of the Asian peoples record many bloody struggles against feudal despotism and colonial oppression. But never before has there been such a big, fierce mass armed resistance as the Kwangju Popular Uprising.

The Kwangju Popular Uprising which began as a peaceful demonstration struggle, had to fight, standing up to two heavily armed divisions.

The insurgents fought with empty hands at first but in the process, raided the armories of the puppet police and "reserve army" and armed themselves with several thousand pieces of weapons, several score thousand rounds of ammunition, several armored vehicles, and several hundred military vehicles.

Along with arming themselves with weapons taken from the enemy, the insurgents organized their armed ranks such as "the citizens army" and "special guard units" as self-defensive armed organizations to fight in direct confrontation with the enormous regular armed forces.

Thus armed, the Kwangju resisters, erecting obstacles such as barricades along the line of confrontation with the puppet army, courageously fought to the end against the scoundrels.

The Kwangju Popular Uprising is a mass uprising of the people that continued for an unprecedented duration with unprecedented persistence and fierceness.

After occupying puppet organs of authority such as the "provincial government office" and bringing their functions to a complete halt, the Kwangju insurgents formed self-governing organizations such as "citizens committee" and "democratic struggle committee" and turned the whole of Kwangju city into something like a liberated area.

Under said organizations the insurgents led the struggle in a unified way on the one hand and, printing and disseminating flyers and even an underground newspaper, expanded the struggle to the periphery of the city and even amid the attacks and sabotage machiantions of the puppet army being intensified in every possible way, held the city for as long as a dozen days.

Even under such difficult conditions that the scoundrels were intensifying their military threats, their cunning appeasement and deception, their economic blockade such as cutting off food supplies, and even in the face of enormous casualties such as several thousand dead and more than ten thousand injured, the patriotic people of Kwangju, never submitting to the scoundrels, resolutely fought on to their last moment of life.

The Kwangju Popular Uprising is also a popular uprising unprecedentedly big in the scale of particiaption and the scope of struggle.

Participating in the Kwangju Popular Uprising were the broad masses of all strata such as the workers, peasants, the youth and students, intellectuals, petty merchants, handicraft workers, religious personalities and even the "public officials" of puppet organs, police and businessmen too. And many youths and older adults from other regions such as Seoul and people from many areas in South and North Cholla provinces joined forces. The Kwangju Popular Uprising that began as a 5,000-man demonstration, expanded in no time to a force of 100,000, 200,000, 300,000 as old people and women, even 10-year-old children joined forces, not to mention workers and peasants, the youth and students. This is equivalent to 41 percent of the Kwangju city population or 10 times as large in scope as the Kwangju city struggle at the time of the 19 April Uprising of 1960.

Viewed in terms of regional scope, too, the struggle was unprecedentedly enormous.

The struggle that began in Kwangju spilled over to most areas of South South Cholla Province such as Mokp'o, Naju, Hwasun, Yonggwang, and Tamyang and even to North Cholla Province, and 17 cities and counties were seized by the insurgents.

Indeed, the Kwangju Popular Uprising is a mass armed rebellion unprecedented in the struggle history of the people to realize freedom and democracy.

That is why foreign press dispatches reported that the Kwangju rebellion was "in the form of a kind of Kwangju commune."

The Kwangju Popular Uprising also showed that even under the ruthless fascist suppression system the south Korean people are not dead but alive and possess the enormous strength capable of achieving freedom and liberation by their own struggle.

The south Korean people, deprived of every democratic freedom and right to living under the evil rule of diabolical "yusin," are being subjected to unprecedentedly ruthless fascist tyranny and are living in a stifling condition.

But the Kwangju Popular Uprising of last May eloquently showed that even under the tyrannical rule of such ruthless "yusin system" the south Korean people are fighting, resolutely rising up, and that if the people struggle with determination and unity, they are quite capable of toppling the remaining fascist forces.

The uprising of Kwangju people--an uprising in which they fought against heavily armed regular armed forces in a frontal clash, staging a mass anti-"government" rebellion under the "emergency martial law" which cast a stringent surveillance net, mobilizing colossal suppression forces--displayed the fact that the fighting spirit and class awareness of the south Korean people rising so high and their strength is growing so strong that they will be quite capable of fighting to the end, unafraid of sacrifice.

The fire of a mass people's resistance that began burning in Kwangju is one of the eloquent instances that showed the indomitable will of the south Korean people who, the more repressed, the more resolutely resist.

The Kwangju Popular Uprising has taught the south Korean people the precious truth that freedom and democracy are not something someone else brings to them but could be won only by their own struggle, and is energetically encouraging the struggle of all the south Korean people against the remnants of "yusin."

The Kwangju Popular Uprising, which displayed to the hilt the tremendous struggle potentialities and heroic vigor of the south Korean people, has dealt telling blows to U.S. imperialism and its lackeys, the remnants of "yusin," striking extreme unease and fear into the scoundrels.

The patriotic people of Kwangju in their resistance struggle killed several hundred members of the puppet military police and destroyed or burned several hundred military vehicles, scores of puppet organs of authority such as the "provincial government office" and their broadcasting station.

The Kwangju Popular Uprising provided an opportunity to completely expose the fascist identity of the gang of Chon Tu-hwan before the world. That is why the remnants of "yusin" headed by Chon Tu-hwan are being unanimously cursed and denounced by the entire Korean people and world peoples, and are being more and more isolated and denounced every day.

At present our overseas compatriots living in various countries of the world such as the United States, unable to hold back their soaring anger at the utterly hateful atrocities of murder committed by the evil gang of Chon Tu-hwan in Kwangju city, are unanimously shouting "tear this homicidal maniac to pieces" and "put the gang of Chon Tu-hwan to summary execution by shooting."

The social and press circles of many countries of the world are also exposing and denouncing the bloody suppression atrocities of the remnants of "yusin" who turned the whole of Kwangju into a people's sea of blood. In particular, the government of Seychelles, scathingly denouncing the remnants of "yusin" who bestially suppressed the Kwangju Popular Uprising, resolutely decided to break diplomatic relations with the south Korean puppets. Also with the Kwangju incident as a turning point, the tendency of many countries to avoid contact with the south Korean puppets is growing every day.

The external isolation of the south Korean ruling circles is driving into a graver crisis the south Korean economy which depends on foreign forces as the lifeline and is threatening the very existence of the remnants of "yusin."

With the Kwangju Popular Uprising as a turning point, the vicious, cunning U.S. imperialist aggression policy and the true colors of the scoundrels as the positive protector of the dictatorship regime have been bared even more clearly before the world.

It is one of the customary techniques of the U.S. imperialist colonial policy to maintain their colonial rule and intensify suppression against the people by means of encouraging their puppets. U.S. imperialism has by such means been driving the successive puppets of south Korea into suppressing the people and even today is still positively backing the evil military fascist gang of Chon Tu-hwan.

When the gang of south Korea's military dictator Chon Tu-hwan committed fascist outrage on 17 May, the U.S. authorities outwardly expressed "regret" or "concern," but actually, true to their attributes as aggressors, arranged to have several divisions of the puppet army under the command of the U.S. military commander moved into suppressing the people. What is more,a high-ranking U.S. scoundrel, publicly mouthing "the insurgents of Kwangju must be put down by iron fists," wove the web of a heinous plot to mobilize even the U.S. forces in occupation of south Korean into putting down the people's rebellion.

On the other hand, fabricating a wild falsehood that "outside forces might take advantage of" the chaotic situation creatied in south Korea, U.S. imperialism even carried out military operations in south Korea and vicinity such as emergency mobilization of the Airborne Warning and Control System and aircraft carrier.

Under U.S. imperialist encouragement and support, the gang of Chon Tu-hwan, military fascist hooligans, perpetrated the most bestial, the most merciless genocide unprecedented in human history, and the city of Kwangju, a city of resistance, was stained with the red blood of the resistance fighters and good citizens crying freedom and democracy.

All facts eloqeuntly prove that it is indeed the U.S. imperialists who were the mastermind that drove and backed up the gang of Chon Tu-hwan to commit mass murders against the people of Kwangju city who vigorously launched into the struggle for antifascist democratization.

Whatever cunning two-faced stratagem it may resort to, U.S. imperialism absolutely cannot evade the criminal responsibility for causing the bloody tragedy.

Today the entire Korean people and overseas compatriots and the progressive peoples of the world are unable to hold back their soaring indignation against south Korea's military fascist gang and the U.S. imperialists who bestially suppressed the just struggle of the people of Kwangju, and are sternly condemning the scoundrels.

Truly immortal shall be the shining exploits which the youth and students and people of Kwangju have left behind in the sacred struggle cause for freedom and liberation.

Even though the blood shed by the patriotic people of Kwangju did not come to bear the deserved fruits on account of the bestial suppression by the fascist oppressors, their aim and aspiration shall inevitably be realized.

As the great leader taught, it is in the nature of law that where there is oppression, there is resistance and that where there is resistance, revolution breaks out.

Historical experience shows that the more intensified the suppression and oppression by reactionary ruling circles, the more resolute the resistance and struggle of the people against them.

U.S. imperialism and its lackeys, a gang of military hooligans, may put down the just struggle of the people temporarily by the bayonet but they absolutely will not be able to long sustain their remaining lives.

The flames of the south Korean people's struggle will sooner or later give birth to a second, a third Kwangju, more dynamically engulfing the whole region of the south and the remnants of "yusin" will at last burn to death in the flames.

Experience of the Kwangju Popular Uprising shows that the indignation and dissatisfaction of the people against the fascist rule, once turned loose, will display a terrifying strength indeed.

At present the gang of Chon Tu-hwan reigning as the military fascist dictator, organizing what is called "committee of emergency measures for national defense," are desperately trying to resurrect the military fascist dictatorship system.

But the gang of Chon Tu-hwan are being utterly isolated from the south Korean youth and students and people of all strata and are running into the resistance of numerous opposition forces even within the puppet military and "kuyo tanggwon" [? blessed party in power]. At present the gang of Chon Tu-hwan are trembling with unease and fear that they may die at any moment at the hands of the south Korean people and opposition forces.

Then, there is the serious economic crisis, compounding this.

Today the south Korean economy is going through a serious crisis in all areas of currency and production, investment and consumption, and filling the streets to overflowing are an enormous number of the unemployed, stemming from enterprises going bankrupt.

Consumer prices increased fourfold and the cost of living by 40 percent in the first quarter of this year over the same quarter of last year. The number of the unemployed increased by some 400,000 in the same period. In addition, a trading deficit to the tune of some $5 billion is even more driving the south Korean economy into a blind alley. This is threatening the very existence of the gang of Chon Tu-hwan, causing a total collapse of the south Korean economy and a society-wide chaos.

No matter what desperate measures south Korea's military hooligans headed by scoundrel Chon Tu-hwan may take under the positive encouragement of U.S. imperialism, the day of reckoning for the scoundrels is getting ever closer.

It is in the nature of law that fascist dictators who defy the will of the masses of people and put down their just demands by the bayonet, do not last long.

In recent years this was shown by the fate of two dictators--Pahlavi of Iran and Somoza of Nicaragua; this was also proved by the last days of traitors Syngman Rhee and Pak Chong-hui in south Korea.

Neither can be any different the fate of the gang of Chon Tu-hwan clinging to military fascist rule to the end, going against the stream of history.

The present south Korean military fascist ruling circles, finding a deserved lesson in the miserable last days of their predecessors, should refrain from recklessly going wild.

The "yusin" military fascist remnants must lift the "emergency martial law" at once, give up forthwith the fascist military rule, and immediately release the democratic personalities, the patriotic youth and students, the people of all strata who have been unjustly arrested and imprisoned.

At the same time, they must give up anticommunist stratagemical machinations such as the nonexistent "threat of invasion from the north" and "infiltration of the communists" and stop suppressing the people.

Today the anticommunist stratagemical machination so false that no one would believe it but to which south Korea's military fascist elements are clinging is a ruse to cover up the true state of the south Korean situation created by their reactionary suppression policies and intensify their suppression against the people and their war policy.

The south Korean military fascist elements, whatever excuse and plot they may use, never can rationalize the fascist dictatorship unanimously cursed and denounced by the people nor can they justfy the bestial suppression atrocities against the south Korean people.

Today, history is being shaped to suit the aim and aspiration of the masses of people, not the will of the imperialists and their lackeys.

There is no force that can stand in the way of the struggle of the south Korean people to abolish the "yusin system," realize the democratization of society, and hasten the independent and peaceful reunification of the fatherland.

Inevitably victorious shall be the antifascist democratization struggle of the south Korean people who receive the positive support and encouragement of the people of the northern half of the republic and the progressive peoples of the world.

UNEMPLOYMENT IS AN INEVITABLE PRODUCT OF THE CAPITALIST SYSTEM

Pyongyang KULLOJA in Korean No 7, Jul 80 pp 60-64

[Article by Kim Chong-ho]

[Text] Today unemployment is becoming a serious social problem in capitalist countries.

The reactionary ruling circles of capitalist countries, every time they make their policies public, talk about "measures" or "plan" as if they would "insure jobs for people who are living without hope" but this is no more than one of their deceitful techniques to pacify the dissatisfaction of the people growing daily on account of unemployment and poverty.

As the general crisis of capitalism deepens, it further fuels chronic unemployment in many capitalist countries and the ranks of the unemployed and underemployed ceaselessly grow.

Unemployment which is becoming an increasingly serious problem in capitalist countries is more and more betraying the state of decay of the capitalist system resulting in intensifying the conflicts between the exploiting class and the exploited class.

Chronic unemployment is an inevitable product of the capitalist system.

Labor is an indispensable requirement and right for human life but this is not to say that such right is satisfactorily insured in any and all societies.

Under the capitalist system where an extreme minority of the exploiting class monopolizes the powers of the state and the means of production and has everything at its beck and call, it is one of the social phenomena that the right to labor of the masses of working people is mercilessly trampled and many people capable of labor cannot avoid unemployment.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"In the exploiting society, because the working masses do not have the ruling powers of the state and the means of production, they remain an object of exploitation and oppression, unable to become the master of society, and suffer all kinds of humiliation and contempt in terms of personality. In the capitalist society where money talks, the personality of a man is also assessed by money and he who does not have money is treated as if he were a thing." ("Kim Il-song Selected Works," Vol 6, pp 343-344)

The capitalist society is a most reactionary society where a minority of privileged classes such as landlords and capitalists with a grip on the powers of the state and the means of production, oppress and exploit an absolute majority of the working masses as they please.

In the capitalist society, an extreme minority of exploiting classes such as capitalists holds a grip on all the means of production such as machines, facilities, and raw materials as well as a monopoly on all products.

The broad working masses in the capitalist society are in direct charge of production but, only because they possess none of the means of production, they are being used by the capitalist class as an object of exploitation and oppression, as a means of making money.

In the capitalist society, an absolute majority of the working masses in fact have nothing but their labor. Only if they sell their labor to the capitalists, can they avoid starvation to death and barely sustain their lives.

Precisely this being so, in the capitalist society an extreme minority of the capitalist scoundrels rides roughshod over an absolute majority of the working masses and exploits the working masses as it pleases and kicks the workers out of their jobs whenever deemed necessary for its interests. In such capitalist society the phenomenon comes to appear that a certain specific portion of the population possessed of labor abilities loses the means of livelihood, unable to find jobs.

Private ownership of the means of production by the capitalists constitutes not only the basis for determining capitalistic production relationships but also the root cause spawning the economic enslavement and exploitation, impoverishment and unemployment of the working masses by the capitalists.

In the capitalist society, unemployment comes to grow rapidly on a larger scale as capital gets concentrated.

The capitalists employ the workers and run business in order to make more money by exploiting them, not by any means to produce things needed by the working masses.

The capitalists, as long as they make a lot of money, could not care less about the misfortunes and sufferings of the workers, whether they live or die. On the contrary, if the production of certain things does not make money, they stop producing them, no matter how essential they are for the society and social beings.

Capitalistic production is aimed at extracting maximal profits with the least possible capital.

The capitalists expand production in order to extract still greater profits.

The capitalists squander for their luxuries and pleasures part of the surplus value earned by exploiting the workers and use the rest as capital for expanding production on a larger scale.

The growth of capitalistic production increases capital accumulation and ceaselessly enhances the organic structure of capital. In the modern capitalist society, especially as the capitalists adopt new machinery and technology in production on the excuse of "rationalizing" production, they quickly increase the share of invariable capital in the organic structure of capital while conversely reducing the relative demands for variable capital, that is, labor force.

In the capitalist society, the developing new technology and the ensuing production organization, instead of lessening the backbreaking labor of the workers, come to bring the result of employing a less number of workers and turning them into an integral part of machines. In this way, the more the capitalists introduce machinery and technology and "rationalize" production organization and management activity, the worse the labor conditions of the workers in employment and the higher the labor intensity and the larger the number of workers who are kicked out of their jobs.

For instance, last year Japan's "Toyota" automobile plant, by means of "rationalizing" the assembly process and accelerating the speed of the assembly conveyor, increased labor intensity more than 30 percent and let many plant workers go.

In this way, as capitalism develops, mass unemployment expands even more and a large working population comes to completely lose their jobs and means of livelihood.

The developing capitalistic production, as it also intensifies the conflicts between production and consumption, ceaselessly spawns economic panic and massive unemployment.

Under modern capitalism the conflicts between production and consumption intensify and drive economic life as a whole into an extreme chaos.

At present in the capitalist countries, faced with compound difficulties such as unprecedented raw material shortages, fuel shortages, and fund shortages, economic life as a whole is going through a serious crisis. In many capitalist countries nearly all economic branches such as the metallurgical, machine manufacturing, extractive, and textile branches are in a state of stagnation, and industrial production is rapidly falling.

In the case of the U.S. economy, too, the steel, automobile, and construction branches known as the "three pillars" of U.S. industry, are suffering from severe blows. The U.S. automobile industry, on account of severe management difficulties, are closing assembly plants en masses, kicking many workers out of their jobs.

In Japan, too, which is said to have registered "high growth" in economic development in recent years, enterprises are going through management difficulties. At present in Japan, enterprises are operating at 70-80 percent of capacity and branches such as shipbuilding at a mere 50 percent. As for other capitalist countries such as France and West Germany, the situation is the same.

On account of a serious economic crisis sweeping the capitalist world, factories and enterprises in capitalist countries are going bankrupt en masse.

Last year in the United States many medium and small enterprises went bankrupt on account of management difficulty of one kind or another, and in Japan some 16,000 enterprises went bankrupt. In other countries, too, such as France, West Germany, and Belgium, many enterprises went bankrupt and among them were even large monopoly companies.

Under such conditions the monopoly capitalist scoundrels are resorting to all kinds of machinations to avoid by hook or by crook the losses stemming from the economic crisis and are shifting all burdens onto the working masses such as the workers.

The monopoly capitalist scoundrels on a variety of execuses are forcing more ruthless labor conditions and labor intensity upon the workers, intensifying the exploitation of them more than at any time, and under the pretext of reducing so-called "production cost," are driving a large number of workers out of the factories.

The fact that in capitalist countries the unemployed continue to grow in number is also related to the various machinations which multinational enterprises, large monopolies, are perpetrating to pursue maximal profits.

The monopoly capitalists who have fattened themselves by exploiting their domestic workers, come to advance into other countries in order to make still more profits. They grasp even enterprises in other countries by various means such as either buying them out outright or eventually buying out, by means of financing, those enterprises which are expericing management difficulties. In particular, multinational enterprises which are imperialist monopolies, advance on a large scale into many countries of the world to exploit "cheap labor force." By advancing into countries where the sources of raw materials are located and where labor is relatively cheap, instead of investing in the production branches of their own countries, the multinational enterprises are causing a lot of unemployment in their own countries.

Under the capitalist system where the means of production are thus held in the hands of an extreme minority of exploiting classes and production is conducted for their wealth, it becomes an inevitable social phenomenon that no matter how much the working masses work their fingers to the bone, they are completely robbed of their fruits of labor by the capitalists and in the end, have to roam the streets, kicked out of their jobs and deprived of the means of livelihood.

At present in every country of the capitalist world many people, deprived of their jobs, are roaming the streets in a steady stream and their ranks are increasing in number day after day.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"Many capitalist countries such as the United States, Japan, and West Germany, are being driven into a great chaos on account of a drastic drop in production, runaway inflation, constantly skyrocketing prices, and the unemployed in the millions are filling the streets to overflowing." ("Answers to Questions Posed by Foreign Journalists," Vol 2, p 215)

Essentially, unemployment in the capitalist society has been a constant social phenomenon but never before has it become such an acute social problem as today.

At present, unemployment in capitalist countries is becoming a social problem more serious than at any time.

The seriousness of unemployment in capitalist countries is above all in the enormous scale the unemployed ranks have reached.

According to data, at present the completely unemployed in capitalist countries number 50 million. The underemployed added to this figure, the number exceeds 350 million. This is an astounding figure which exceeds the total population of "European Common Market" countries by nearly 100 million.

It is becoming an unstoppable trend that the unemployed ranks in capitalist countries are increasing with each passing day.

In the United States, the unemployed numbered 3.93 million in 1960 but the figure has increased to 8.2 million this year. In last May alone, an additional 900,000 workers lost their jobs in the United States and joined the unemployed ranks.

The unemployed in the member nations of the "European Common Market" numbered 5.04 million in 1975, which increased to 6.2 million as of the end of last year. But this is an official figure and the actual number reaches 10 million. The unemployed in Britain, too, numbered 1.47 million as of January this year or 115,000 more than as of the end of last year. In France, the number of the unemployed increased 11 percent in the past one year to 1.99 million.

An extreme minority of exploiting classes monopolizing the means of production gets richer every day without even moving a finger but the broad working masses, even though they work their fingers to the bone, cannot escape poverty and misfortune and get mercilessly kicked out of their jobs. Precisely such is the reality of the capitalist society today.

The seriousness of unemployment in capitalist countries lies in that it has become a chronic malaise, not a temporary phenomenon.

In the past period, it used to be a general phenomenon that unemployment in capitalist countries went up and down in step with the cyclical boom of the capitalist economy.

In the past, there was a revolving pattern in many capitalist countries that as economic panic occurred, the unemployed drastically increased in number but as the economy regained a temporary boom, the number of the unemployed also decreased to a certain extent.

But in recent years, regardless of the cyclical boom of the economy, the number of the unemployed has continued to rise in many capitalist countries, increasingly taking on the character of a chornic malaise.

From 1977 onward after the 1974-1975 economic panic, capitalist countries showed a partial "recovery in boom" but the unemployment rate increased further instead of decreasing.

For 1975 in the panic period Britain had 978,000 unemployed which increased to 1.446 million in 1978; and for the same period, the unemployed in Italy increased from 654,000 to 1.57 million.

Chronic unemployment is making even more miserable the already sorry plight of the unemployed masses without the means of livelihood.

The many unemployed in capitalist countries who have no means of livelihood are barely sustaining their lives from day to day amid constant misfortunes and sufferings without any hope for today and tomorrow.

It is no accident that even bourgeois publications, reporting on the "growing unemployment" in capitalist countries, write it is a "miracle" that the large unemployed masses, who have no means of finding jobs, are somehow managing to remain alive.

In the capitalist countries, the underemployed ranks are also ceaselessly growing, in addition to the completely unemployed.

At present in the capitalist countries, the number of those underemployed who somehow manage to work only a few days in a week or a month exceed 300 million indeed, it is reported.

Those who live amid constant fear and suffering because their jobs are insecure, are in fact no better off than the completely unemployed.

The seriousness of unemployment in the capitalist society lies in that unemployment occurs not just in any one branch of the economy but in nearly all branches simultaneously.

In the past, it used to be a general phenomenon in capitalist countries that unemployment mainly occurred in seasonal labor branches such as agriculture and construction, or in medium and small enterprises and some supplementary production branches temporarily requiring a great deal of labor. But now the unemployment cyclone in capitalist countries is sweeping not just individual branches but nearly all branches including basic economic branches such as the machine, steel, and metallurgical branches and the processing industrial branch. Thus in the vast armies of the unemployed in the capitalist countries the ratio of healthy youths and women is increasing more and more.

To take a look at the case of "European Common Market" countries, one-third of the total number of the unemployed is youths below the age of 25, and 42 percent are women. In the capitalist countries of Western Europe, and the United States, Canada, and Japan many youths are losing jobs; in Italy, one-third of the 1.2 million unemployed youths is graduates of schools at all levels including universities; in France, 60 percent of the unemployed are women.

The reality wherein those in the prime of life and youths who have received professional education are being driven out of jobs on a large scale bespeaks well how serious the unemployment problem is becoming in the capitalist countries.

The ceaselessly increasing unemployment in the capitalist countries is intensifying the conflicts between the masses of working people and the capitalists and is further deepening the general crisis of capitalism.

The unemployed masses in large numbers who have lost the means of livelihood, kicked out of their jobs, are stepping forward to defy the monopoly capitalist scoundrels and reactionary ruling circles with slogans such as "we oppose dismissals" and "give us jobs." Again, many workers in employment who nevertheless feel their jobs constantly threatened, are launching a mass struggle demanding stable jobs and improvement of their treatment.

The struggle of working people in capitalist countries for their right to living against unemployment is further expanding with each passing day and is gradually developing into a political struggle for democratic freedom and right.

This is a great blow to the monopoly capitalist scoundrels and reactionary ruling circle scoundrels, putting unease and fear in the scoundrels.

The reactionary ruling circle scoundrels of capitalist countries talk of a society of "welfare for all people" every time they open their mouth but this is no more than a cunning stratagem to cover up the decayed state of the capitalist social system and deceive the masses of working people.

Leaving the decayed, sick capitalist social system alone, where exploitation and oppression form the basis of social relationships and the law of the jungle operates, there is absolutely no prescription that can cure the problem of unemployment.

Unemployment can be solved only when overturning the capitalist exploitation system which is the socioeconomic condition that spawns unemployment.

To struggle against the capitalist exploitation system which forces nothing but misfortunes and sufferings of all kinds on the working masses and drives them into unemployment and poverity is the deserved right of the people of capitalist countries; and their just struggle shall inevitably be victorious.

Pyongyang KULLOJA in Korean No 4, Apr 81 pp 2-8

[Text] At present the entire party members and working people, as they greet the birthday of . . great leader of our party and people, Comrade Kim Il-song, in a meaningful manner as the happiest national holiday, give glory to the respected and beloved leader in the highest with an infinite feeling of respect and adoration and humbly wish him a long and healthy life.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has struggling throughout his life, devoting his all solely for the sake of the freedom and happiness of our people, for the sake of the unending growth and prosperity of the fatherland and the nation, and compiled great achievements that will take their permanent place in the history of the fatherland, in the revolutionary struggle history of the working class, with uncommon ideotheoretical activities and awesome revolutionary practice that no one could match.

It is one of the most precious achievements scored by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song for the sake of the development of the Korean revolution and world revolution that the respected and beloved leader, enunciating a unique thought and theory regarding the establishment of the unitary ideology system of the party and brilliantly embodying them in party construction and party activity, has strengthened and developed ours into an ever-victorious steely revolutionary party and led our revolution along the one road of victory.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, by setting forth the unique thought and theory regarding the establishment of the unitary ideology system of the party, has illuminated the most correct road to consolidating and developing the party of the working class forever into the leader's, the founder's, and to victoriously moving the socialist, communist cause forward and attaining it along the one road indicated by the leader who has marked the beginning of the revolution; and has made immortal contributions to the developing revolutionary theory of the working class.

All party organizations and functionaries, by ceaselessly deepening the task of establishing the unitary ideology system of the party to suit the demands of the cause for conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology, must go forward to strengthen and develop ours into a chuche party and brilliantly attain the chuche revolutionary cause charted by the great leader.

Establishing the unitary ideology system of the party is an important task which must be constantly adhered to for the victory of the socialist, communist cause.

The struggle for communism is for liberating the masses of people once and for all from all kinds of exploitation and oppression, enslavement and inequality and comprehensively providing an independent, creative life for them, and as such, is a process of most incisive revolutionary transformation and creation which is carried out over a long period of time. This historic cause of the working class comes to be successfully attained only by holding the leader's revolutionary thought as the guiding principle and thoroughly embodying it in all areas of revolution and construction. Therefore, in order that the party of the working class and the communists may attain the socialist, communist cause to the end, it is imperative to resolutely defend the cause of the leader who has first charted the road to revolution and ceaselessly strengthen it with a constant grip on the task of establishing the unitary ideology system of the party.

The task of establishing the unitary ideology system of the party is for making the entire party and the whole society filled to overflowing with the leader's revolutionary thought, the purity intact, and for thoroughly realizing the leader's unitary leadership for revolution and construction.

Attaining the revolutionary cause charted by the leader, the socialist and communist cause, is the ultimate objective of the task to establish the unitary ideology system of the party, and the task of establishing the unitary ideology system of the party constitutes the basic way to defend and win the victory of the leader's cause.

The cause for conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology which our party and people are carrying out today calls for further deepening the task to establish the unitary ideology system of the party with a tight grip on it.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"Our party, the revolutionary vanguard of the Korean working class and working people, laying down the militant program for dyeing the whole society one color with our party's revolutionary thought, the chuche ideology, is today struggling for the realization." ("Kim Il-song Selected Works," Vol 7, p 80)

Conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology--this is a great communist program for building and perfecting a society, the communist society, where the immortal chuche ideology, the guiding thought for revolution and construction of our time, will have been completely embodied, and is the strategic goal which our party must constantly keep in sight.

The struggle to convert the whole society to the chuche ideology is the continuation of our revolutionary cause charted by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the course of conversion to the chuche ideology on a new higher stage. The historic task in this stage is accelerating the course of conversion to the chuche ideology and winning the ultimate victory of the communist cause by dyeing all aspects of social life one color with the great leader's revolutionary thought, the chuche ideology. This bespeaks that the struggle to convert the whole society to the chuche ideology is a process of the most incisive revolutionary transformation with a profound content, a high demand, a towering goal beyond comparison with all the social transformations already accomplished in earlier stages.

From this, in order to attain the cause for conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology, it is imperative that the task of establishing the unitary ideology system of the party be deepened even more and lifted onto an even higher stage.

Further deepening the task of establishing the unitary ideology system of the party is the basic demand for successfully attaining the historic cause for conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology, which is a new higher stage in the conversion to the chuche ideology.

What makes this so lies above all in that further deepening the task of establishing the unitary ideology system of the party constitutes the decisive guarantee for indoctrinating and remolding all members of society into genuine chuche-oriented communist revolutionaries boundlessly faithful to the party and the leader.

Turning all members of society into chuche-oriented communist revolutionaries constitutes part of the basic content of the task of converting the whole society to the chuche ideology and the decisive factor in its successful fulfillment. The task of converting the whole society to the chuche ideology, in the final analysis, boils down to the question of remolding people's ideological consciousness, in other words, the question of remolding people into genuine communist revolutionaries.

Turning people into communist revolutionaries boundlessly loyal to the party and the leader constitutes not only the basic condition for bringing them up as fervent revolutionaries and occupying the ideological fortress of communism but also the key to reshaping all aspects of social life such as the economic and cultural aspects in accordance with the demands of the chuche ideology and successfully occupying the material fortress of communism.

This flows from our party's ideotheoretical principle which holds that the basics of revolution and construction tasks are people's thought and that everything is resolved by people's thought.

Ideological consciousness is the decisive factor that governs all actions of people and makes them the master controlling nature and society. Precisely because people have ideological consciousness, they become the most energetic beings in the world.

The role played by people's ideological consciousness grows incomparably big especially in the socialist society, and the more socialist and communist construction progresses, the bigger it grows. The communist society is a society where all people consciously work for the sake of society and collective, a society which is maintained, consolidated, and developed by people's high ideological consciousness and conscious activity.

Therefore, if conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology is to be stepped up and the communist cause attained, it is imperative to direct priority attention to the task of thoroughly remolding the thought of people and turning them into communist revolutionaries in whom none but the chuche-type blood courses.

What is called the chuche-type blood is the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's revolutionary thought, the chuche ideology and boundless faithfulness to the leader and the party. Chuche-oriented revolutionaries are communist revolutionaries possessing the loftiest ideomental features who hold the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's revolutionary thought, the chuche ideology, as their firm world view and boundless faithfulness to the party and the leader as their first and foremost life. Precisely because of this, genuine chuche-oriented revolutionaries become the model of communist social beings comprehensively personifying the intrinsic demands of a society dyed one color with the chuche ideology, the communist society.

Turning all members of society into communist revolutionaries holding the chuche revolutionary world view and possessing boundless faithfulness to the party and the leader constitutes the basics of establishing the unitary ideology system of the party.

The historic task that has to be resolved in establishing the unitary ideology system of the party in the new higher stage of the developing revolution calling for conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology, is turning all members of society into genuine communist revolutionaries with politicoideological, mental, and moral features on the highest standard.

The high demand and goal of conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology for turning all members of society into communist revolutionaries accomplished in the chuche world view and boundless faithfulness to the party and the leader come to be successfully realized only by ceaselessly deepening the task of establishing the unitary ideology system of the party.

What makes the ceaseless deepening of the task to establish the unitary ideology system of the party the basic demand for converting the whole society to the chuche ideology also lies in that it constitutes a firm guarantee for successfully reshaping all aspects of social life such as the eocnomic and cultural aspects in accordance with the demands of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's revolutionary thought, the chuche ideology.

Reshaping all aspects of social life such as the economic and cultural aspects in accordance with the demands of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's revolutionary thought, the chuche ideology, constitutes an important part of the content of converting the whole society to the chuche ideology.

Only by thoroughly reshaping all aspects of social life such as the economic and cultural aspects in accordance with the demands of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's revolutionary thought, the chuche ideology, is it possible to occupy the material fortress of communism, realize the intrinsic demands of the communist society in the realm of economic life, material and cultural life, and successfully attain the cause for conversion of the whole societr to the chuche ideology.

A firm guarantee for thoroughly reshaping all aspects of social life such as the economic and cultural aspects in accordance with the demands of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's revolutionary thought, the chuche ideology, lies in ceaselessly deepening the task of thoroughly establishing the unitary ideology system of the party among party members and working people.

Inasmuch as it is an extraordinarily incisive and awesome task to reshape all aspects of social life such as the economic and cultural aspects in accordance with the demands of the chuche ideology, the task can be successfully carried out only when the revolutionary fervor and creative positiveness of all people who participate in it are maximally mobilized. This is not a simple economic job performance task but a great political task that can be carried out only by a revolutionary method, a political method which indoctrinates and remolds thoroughly into communist revolutionaries the people who take charge of the task and makes them consciously, devotedly mobilize themselves.

Therefore, in order to brilliantly carry out the awesome task of re haping all aspects of social life such as the economic and cultural aspects in accordance with the demands of the chuche ideology, it is imperative to conduct more in depth than at any time the task of establishing the unitary ideology system of the party and make all party members and working people, with boundless faithfulness to the party and the leader and an attitude befitting the master of the revolution, bring about ceaseless innovations and leaps forward in revolution and construction.

The task to remake nature and society in accordance with the demands of the chuche ideology also urgently calls for thoroughly establishing societywide a strong revolutionary discipline and order where all people move as one body based on a high awareness, for firmly insuring the unitariness and unity of revolution and construciton, for ceaselessly strengthening partywide guidance. All this can be firmly realized only by ceaselessly deepening the task of establishing partywide and societywide the unitary ideology system of the party.

Because the deepening of the task to establish the unitary ideology system of the party strengthens at the same time our politicoideological might in every way, it constitutes a firm guarantee for winning the victory of the historic cause for conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology, the communist revolutionary cause.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"The entire party thoroughly arming itself with the chuche ideology and all party members positively upholding the leadership of the party is where the source of the invincible might of our party is, where the decisive guarantee for all of our victories is." (Booklet "Summing-Up Report on the Work of the Central Committee to the Sixth Congress of the Korean Workers Party," p 105)

The invincible unity and solidarity of the whole party and the entire people thoroughly armed with the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's revolutionary thought, the chuche ideology and solidly united around the leader, is the source of our politicoideological strength and the decisive guarantee for all victories.

Because the task of establishing the unitary ideology system of the party unites the entire party members and working people airtight around the great leader and the party, firmly insures the politicoideological purity of the revolutionary ranks and makes all members of society live and fight on with high faithfulness to the party and the leader, it makes it possible to incomparably strengthen our politicoideological might and energetically hasten the cause for conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology.

Thus, ceaselessly deepening the task of establishing the unitary ideology system of the party, because it turns all party members and working people into communist revolutionaries forever loyal to the party and the leader and strengthens our politicoideological might in every way, constitutes a basic guarantee which makes it possible to successfully carry through the task of converting the whole society to the chuche ideology.

For our party, the struggle to establish the unitary ideology system of the party started from the time the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song founded the party and began leading it.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"The task of establishing the unitary ideology system of the party must be ceaselessly continued as long as the party exists, and the more the revolution deepens and develops, the more the task must be strengthened." (Ibid., p 110)

Our party, putting it forward from the first day of its founding as an overall task of party construction and party activity, as a crucial question determining the victory of the revolution and the fate of building a new society to establish the unitary ideology system of the party, has always energetically led this task throughout the course of leading revolution and construction.

With the Party Center proclaiming conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology as the supreme program of our party and leading the struggle at the helm for the realization, the task of establishing the unitary ideology system of the party has come to be deepened and developed on a new higher stage.

Our glorious party, setting forth the revolutionary principle and guidelines for thoroughly establishing partywide and societywide the unitary ideology system of the party, has sagaciously led all party organizations to tightly grasp, as the main line of party work, the task of establishing the unitary ideology system of the party.

The guidelines of the party for ceaselessly deepening the task of establishing the unitary ideology system of the party, grasping it as the main line of party work, are revolutionary guidelines that make it possible to conduct party work, party activity thoroughly based on the thought, theory, and method of chuche and solidly consolidate the organizational and ideological cornerstones which constitute the source of the invincible might and combat strength of the party. The guidelines constitute a guiding principle which makes it possible to attain our revolutionary cause to the end, strengthen and develop ours forever into a glorious chuche-oriented revolutionary party.

Where our party is always putting great efforts in establishing the unitary ideology system of the party is the task to ceaselessly improve party ideological work to suit the demands of the developing realities.

Party ideological work is a powerful weapon for thoroughly establishing the unitary ideology system of the party among party members and working people. Inasmuch as the struggle to establish the unitary ideology system of the party is a task to thoroughly arm people with the leader's revolutionary thought and turn them into genuine communist revolutionaries boundlessly loyal to the leader and his cause, it urgently calls for aggressively launching the ideological indoctrination task among party members and working people.

Our party is sagaciously leading the way to improve the content and method of party ideological work to suit the demands of conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology, conduct it with mobility closely linking it to revolutionary practice, and make it become a live indoctriantion task that can give practical help to the establishment of a revolutionary world view of party members and working people.

With the guidelines clearly set forth for indoctrination in faithfulness to the party and the leader, party ideological work with primary emphasis on indoctrination in the unitary ideology, and with all parts of the content of ideological indoctrination work thoroughly subordinated to establishing the unitary ideology system of the party, our party ideological work, completely freed from the conventional old framework, has come to be able to genuinely serve in bringing up all party members and working people as communist revolutionaries with the chuche world view firmly established.

It constitutes a crucial historic event which has brought about an epochal turnaround in establishing partywide and societywide the unitary ideology system of the party that our party, setting forth the unique party construction gudielines for converting the entire party to the chuche ideology, has taken steps to strengthen the party organizationally and ideologically and enhance its militant functions and leadership role.

Essentially, the task of converting the entire party to the chuche ideology is thoroughly establishing the unitary ideology system within the party. Only by energetically launching the struggle to convert the entire party to the chuche ideology, turn all party members into revolutionary soldiers forever loyal to the party and the leader, and revolutionarily improve party work, party activity, is it possible to thoroughly establish the unitary ideology system within the party and consolidate like bedrock the organizational and ideological cornerstones of the party. Only if our party is further strengthened and developed into a chuche-oriented revolutionary party and its militant functions and leadership role are ceaselessly enhanced, is it possible to even more thoroughly establish the unitary ideology system of the party societywide.

Our party has led the way to turn all party members into chuche-oriented communist revolutionaries and conduct party construction and party activity thoroughly based on the thought, theory, and method of chuche, on the one hand and has energetically launched the struggle to establish a steely revolutionary discipline whereby the entire party moves in unison under the unitary guidance of the Party Central Committee.

With the struggle to establish the unitary ideology system of the party vigorously launched under the energetic guidance of the glorious Party Center, the politicoideological unity and revolutionary solidarity of the whole party and the entire people have come to reach a new higher standard today. The whole party and the entire people have come to be united airtight around the Party Central Committee headed by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song and solidly bonded in terms of ideological will based on the chuche ideology.

The revolutionary spirit has been established partywide of unconditionally accepting the decisions and directives of the party and carrying them through to the end, and the steely discipline established whereby all party organizations and party members move in unison under the unitary guidance of the Party Center. Along with the deepening of the task to establish the unitary ideology system of the party has come to be thoroughly established among party members and working people the revolutionary spirit to thoroughly establish the chuche revolutionary world view, think with chuche brains, act with chuche will, and one and all have come to be able to energetically step up socialist construction, displaying high revolutionary fervor and creative positiveness with an attitude befitting the master toward the revolution.

The glory-filled struggle journey of the Korean revolution brimming with great events shows that when we go forward to thoroughly establish the unitary ideology system of the party among party members and working people, we can win the ultimate victory of the revolutionary cause, breaking through any storm, however formidable.

Today when the struggle is energetically under way to convert the whole society to the chuche ideology, in order to brilliantly attain the chuche revolutionary cause it is imperative to even more deepen the task of thoroughly establishing partywide and societywide the unitary ideology system of the party to suit the new demands of the developing revolution.

Most important in deepening the task of establishing the unitary ideology system of the party to suit the demands of conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology is further strengthening indoctrination in the chuche ideology among party members and working people.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"The unitary ideology system of our party is an ideology system of chuche. We must thoroughly arm all party members with the chuche ideology and make the whole party filled to overflowing with the chuche ideology." (Ibid., p 110)

The immortal chuche ideology is a scientific world view the communists must possess and the unitarily correct guiding principle for successfully carrying out the Korean revolution.

Only if all party members and working people are thoroughly armed with the great chuche ideology, can they firmly establish their independent stand and self-dependent opnions toward the Korean revolution and victoriously move our revolution forward with their own strength, overcoming all bottlenecks and barriers.

Only by strengthening indoctrination in the chuche ideology among party members and working people is it possible to firmly arm them with the chuche ideology and energetically move revolution and construction forward in accordance with the demands of the chuche ideology.

That today our people hold such high dignity and glory and our party commands such absolute authority and prestige that nothing can break--this is altogether a precious achievement scored as a result that they have stoutly fought along the road illuminated by the immortal chuche ideology under the sagacious leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song.

At present when the struggle is energetically under way to convert the whole society to the chuche ideology, it is imperative above all to further strengthen indoctrination in the chuche ideology among party members and working people and thoroughly prepare them politicoideologically in order to brilliantly attain our revolutionary cause.

All party members and working people, systematically and deeply studying the original texts of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's imperishable works and teachings where the immortal chuche ideology is comprehensively embodied, must thoroughly master the profound thoughts, contents, and ways of the prosecution contained therein. In this way all party members and working people must be made to hold the chuche ideology as their firm creed, think and act in accordance with the demands of the chuche ideology, and hold the firm stand and viewpoint that they know none but the chuche ideology.

Important in establishing the unitary ideology system of the party is also further strengthening the unity of ideological unity and revolutionary solidarity of the party ranks based on the chuche ideology.

Strengthening the politicoideological unity of the party and the revolutionary solidarity of the entire people constitutes the basic condition for thoroughly establishing partywide and societywide the unitary ideology system of the party. This is a firm guarantee for defending the chuche character of our party, for consolidating the party ranks organizationally and ideologically, for brilliantly carrying forward and attaining the chuche revolutionary cause, whatever the storm and trial.

By the sagacious leadership of the great leader and the glorious Party Center the unity and solidarity of the whole party and the entire people is reaching a high standard today. It is because of the presence of the strength of this great unity and solidarity that in the past period we were able to always win victory and move forward in the awesome struggle to oppose internal and external class enemies and revolutionarily remake and transform nature and society.

Only by the strength of unity and solidarity of the whole party and the entire people solidly united as one around the respected and beloved leader and the party is it possible to go forward to brilliantly attain the historic cause for conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology.

Under conditions that old ideological dregs still remain in people's heads and the imperialists continue their counterrevolutionary ideological offensives, there could be no absolute guarantee without a ceaseless struggle to establish the unitary ideology system of the party that insures the purity of the party ranks and the unity of ideological will of the revolutionary ranks.

By further deepening the task of establishing the unitary ideology system of the party to suit the demands of conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology while consolidating the achievements scored in the task in the past period, we must strengthen the unity of the party and the solidarity of the revolutionary ranks in every way.

All party members and working people must defend like the apple of the eye the airtight unity and solidarity of the whole party and the entire people achieved through the struggle of half a century and must uncompromisingly struggle against all kinds of morbid phenomena gnawing at the unity and solidarity of the party.

Establishing a revolutionary work system and discipline within the party is an important demand arising in establishing the unitary ideology system of the party.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"In establishing the unitary ideology system of the party, it is very important to establish a revolutionary work system and discipline within the party." (Ibid., p 111)

Establishing a revolutionary work system and discipline within the party is a firm guarantee for satisfactorily realizing the leadership of the party for revolution and construction and enhancing the militant functions and leadership role of the party.

As the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught, the thought and leadership of our party get embodied by the revolutionary guidance of the Party Central Committee, and revolution and construction, too, only under the precise guidance of the party can move forward along the straight road of victory and get accomplished to the end.

Only if a revolutionary work system and discipline are firmly established within the party, is it possible to brilliantly embody partywide and societywide the thought and leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and energetically step up revolution and construction in accordance with the thought and intent of the respected and beloved leader. Only then is it also possible to defend the purity of the chuche ideology and firmly insure the unity of ideological will and action of the party ranks.

Even more thoroughly establishing a revolutionary work system within the party, we must establish partywide the spirit of unconditionally accepting and carrying through to the end the decisions and directives of the party and strengthen the revolutionary discipline whereby the entire party moves in unison.

Today for our party, the task of establishing the unitary ideology system of the party can be successfully realized only through the unitary guidance of the party.

The unitary guidance of the Party Center is revolutionary guidance for thoroughly embodying partywide and societywide the thought and leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, for moving our revolution forward and leading it to victory as intended by the leader, for attaining generation after generation to the end the revolutionary cause charted by the leader.

The unitary guidance of the party is precisely for embodying the unitary leaderhip of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song. Only by insuring the unitary guidance of the Party Center is it possible to thoroughly establish the unitary ideology system of the party and insure the unconditional, complete unity of ideological will and action of the entire party and the whole society, and based thereon, successfully resolve the difficult and complex task of dyeing the whole society one color with the chuche ideology.

All party members and working people must unconditionally accept and carry through to the end the guidelines set forth by our party and thoroughly establish a steely centralized discipline whereby the entire party and the whole society move in unison under the unitary guidance of the Party Center. In this way they must make the entire party and the whole society brim with the immortal chuche ideology, and even more thoroughly organizing our revolutionary ranks and with the strength of unity and solidarity of the party and the people, must go forward to energetically hasten the historic cause for conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology.

When the whole party and the entire people continue to deepen the task of establishing the unitary ideology system of the party, our revolutionary forces will be further strengthened, great leaps forward and innovations will ceaselessly happen in revolution and construction, and the chuche revolutionary cause will be attained ahead of schedule.

Invincible is the struggle of our people going forward solidly united around the great leader and the glorious party to attain the cause for conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology and there will only be victory and glory on the road ahead for us.

THE CHUCHE REVOLUTIONARY TRADITION ESTABLISHED BY THE RESPECTED AND BELOVED LEADER IS A PRICELESS HERITAGE OF OUR PARTY AND REVOLUTION

Pyongyang KULLOJA in Korean No 4, Apr 81 pp 9-15

[Article by Kim Ch'ol-man]

[Text] Today our people, amid an environment wherein they are dynamically launching an all-out march in all areas of revolution and construction loyally upholding the programmatic tasks laid down by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song at the Sixth Congress of the Korean Workers Party, greet the respected and beloved leader's birthday in a most meaningful manner as the happiest national holiday.

Greeting this day, our people's hearts are burning with an infinite feeling of adoration and loyalty for the fatherly leader who has been devoting his whole life to providing us with today's happiness envying no one anything in the world and a brilliant future, as they look back with deep emotions on the immortal revolutionary achievements of the respected and beloved leader.

What occupies an important place in the immortal achievements compiled by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song before the party and the people is that he has established the glorious revolutionary tradition which is the historical roots of our party and revolution.

Because of the presence of the glorious revolutionary tradition provided by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the Korean revolution has been able to walk only the road of victory and glory, clearing all kinds of barriers and trials, and it has been possible for ours to strengthen and develop itself into a most authoritative and tested steely party like today.

The chuche revolutionary tradition created by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is the historical roots of our party and revolution, and a priceless heritage that must be brilliantly carried forward and developed generation after generation of the revolution.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"The brilliant revolutionary tradition established in the period of the anti-Japanese armed struggle is a priceless heritage of our revolution and a precious resource for revolutionarily indoctrinating the people."
("On Socialist Pedagogy," p 393)

Revolutionary tradition is the lifeblood that connects the entire course of the revolutionary struggle of the working class for socialism and communism, a source of strength that gives it an eternal life force, and a basic cornerstone that must be held as a firm support in the struggle for its victory.

In the revolutionary tradition of the party of the working class are synthesized the ideomental heritages, priceless achievements, and struggle experiences scored by the leader who has first charted the road to revolution. Only if the party of the working class and the masses of people resolutely protect and defend, brilliantly carry forward and develop these precious revolutionary heritages provided by the leader, can they successfully discharge their revolutionary duties in various stages of the difficult and complex task to transform nature and society, and resolutely defending the lifeblood of the revolution, attain the socialist, communist cause to the end.

The revolutionary tradition of the working class is established in the historical period of an outstanding leader charting a correct road to victory of the revolution and victoriously moving the revolutionary cause forward.

The leader of the working class, in the course of charting the revolutionary cause to suit the basic demands and interests of the masses of working people and leading it to victory in the forefront of the class, founds the guiding thought for the revolution, scores immortal revolutionary achievements, and creates rich ideomental heritages. All the achievements and heritages created by the leader of the working class in the course of organically combining the revolutionary theory and revolutionary practice and victoriously moving the revolution forward become none other than the revolutionary tradition, and the struggle to carry forward and develop it becomes the historic task which the working class must carry out.

The glorious revolutionary tradition our party and people have inherited was created by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song amid the flames of the unprecedentedly arduous and bloody anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle.

The anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle--this was a glorious revolutionary struggle organized and launched under the leadership of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song whom our people had waited for thousands of years in their history to attend as the leader of revolution, as the center for unity and solidarity; this was a great revolutionary struggle during which the roots of our party were struck and the sacred road to fatherland restoration charted. By the brilliant victory of this struggle our people came to be rescued from the life-and-death crisis; an end was put to the long history of national misfortune and suffering; and a new history of hero Korea came to unfold.

In bygone days, because they had not had an outstanding leader, the plight of our nation and people was miserable beyond description. The whole country was immersed in a sea of blood, a sea of fire, and the revolution repeatedly had to go through bitter failures, twists and turns.

The initial communist movement of our country which began developing in the early 1920's had to go through trials, unable to find a correct direction and ways of the struggle in the absence of the leadership of an outstanding leader. The early communist movement leaders and nationalists, divorced from the masses, wasted time indulging in empty talks that had nothing to do with the revolution, and were up to their ears in satifying their ugly political ambitions; thus they fragmented the revolutionary ranks every which way, driving the revolution into a state of extreme chaos.

Thus our country's anti-Japanese national liberation movement which was ceaselessly launched in various forms ended in failure, leaving behind only blood lessons.

How to lead the Korean revolution along what road was a crucial question bearing on the destiny of the revolution.

As the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song took the helm of the revolution with the banner of the anti-Japanese revolution held high in such dark period when national misfortune and suffering had reached the peak, the dawn of national rebirth came to break and the road to victory of the Korean revolution came to be charted.

Incomparably great was the jubilation and excitement of the Korean communists and the entire nation who came to loyally attend the great leader of the revolution for whom they had so earnestly waited.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song opened up a new road to revolution entirely different from that of the nationalist movement leaders or of the eearly communist movement leaders, and with a chuche-oriented revolutionary line, outstanding strategies and tactics, and intrepid guerrilla war techniques, beat back the Japanese imperialist aggressors and brilliantly attained the historic cause for fatherland restoration.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song established our party's revolutionary tradition amid the flames of the long and arduous anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle leading the Korean revolution to victory under the ganner of the chuche ideology, and further developed and enriched it in the course of embodying it in all areas of postliberation revolution and construction. In the revolutionary tradition of our party the thought, theory, and method of chuche founded by the great leader are comprehensively embodied and the priceless revolutionary achievements and experiences personally scored by the leader are fully synthesized.

The glorious revolutionary tradition achieved by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is the historical roots of our party and revolution, most precious heritages that must be forever defended, carried forward and developed generation aftrer generation.

This is so because our party's revolutionary tradition is the basic source which makes it possible for our revolution to move forward only along the road the immortal chuche ideology teaches.

Our party's revolutionary tradition, because it has been achieved in the course of embodying the immortal chuche ideology, is becoming the banner of struggle brightly illuminating the road ahead for the revolution and construction of our time.

The anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle was a historic struggle in which chuche was firmly established in our revolution for the first time. That it was conducted with the chuche ideology firmly held as a guiding compass based on the principle of independent stand and attitude is where the intrinsic characteristics of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle differentiated from all prior struggles is. The banner of chuche held aloft by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song at such a difficult time when flunkeyism and dogmatism prevailed, was indeed a great beacon that rescued the fate of the Korean revolution. Had not our people fought with their own strength bearing arms under the banner of the chuche ideology, the Korean revolution would not have been able to move forward along the road of victory nor would our nation have been able to be resuscitated ever.

Precisely because our party's revolutionary tradition was achieved in the course of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle organized and launched under the banner of the chuche ideology founded by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, all the contents and achievements held therein are permeated with the chuche ideology.

Our party's revolutionary tradition permeated with the immortal chuche ideology is the lifeline of revolution connecting the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle and the bright future of communism, not to mention today's struggle, with the chuche lifeblood.

Our party's revolutionary tradition, because it is a great revolutionary tradition embodying the immortal chuche ideology, will be functioning as the eternal factor of victory, as the source of invincible strength even after the changing of generations has taken place in the revolution.

What makes our party's revolutionary tradition created by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song the precious heritage of revolution also lies in that it richly holds in greatest width a priceless content which constitutes a prototype, model, for attaining the chuche cause.

The anti-Japanese revolutilnary struggle during which our party's revolutionary tradition was established, was not a simple armed struggle against the Japanese imperialist aggressors but a great revolutionary struggle which had solved the overall questions arising in charting the road ahead for the times and revolution and our nation's destiny all together.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song in the course of leading this sacred revolutionary struggle gave comprehensive answers to all the large and small questions arising in the revolutionary struggle from the basic principle, strategy and tactics of revolution to the work method for organizing and mobilizing the masses.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song in the course of organizing and leading the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle provided solid heritages indeed for the development of the Korean revolution and the ultimate victory of the chuche cause, such as laying sound foundations for the founding of a party and strengthening and developing it and the cornerstone of a people's administration, and establishing revolutionary armed forces.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song illuminated a unique road to founding a party already in the first days of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle, and uniting all the people embarking on revolution, into organizations and indoctrinating them, brought them up as the genuine backbone of the Korean revolution, as fervent revolutionaries. In the process, priceless achievements and experiences were scored in the areas of party construction and party activity, such as the experience in realizing the unity and solidarity of the anti-Japanese revolutionary ranks based on the unitary ideology system, the experience in conducting work with people which is the basics of party work, the experience in strengthening the party life of party members and enhancing their vanguard role, the experience in performing mass political work.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, with his scientific insight into our country's class relations, our revolution's character and immediate duties at the time, set forth a unique line for building a revolutionary administration and in the course of brilliantly embodying it, gained rich experiences of principled significance in the establishment, strengthening and development of a people's administration.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, who founded the Anti-Japanese Guerrillas, the first revolutionary armed forces of our country, enunciated important principled questions arising in building armed forces and gained rich experiences in establishing the conscious discipline of the revolutionary army and the spirit of unity of the government and the army, unity of the army and the people and in setting up an all-people defense system with primary emphasis on arming all people and fortifying bases, and created new guerrilla war tactics and methods.

All the priceless achievements and experiences scored by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song day in, day out of glory in organizing and leading the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle have been comprehensively embodied in our party's revolutionary tradition and the content enriched.

Thus in our party's revolutionary tradition have been comprehensively synthesized the extraordinarily rich and many-sided experiences and achievements scored in solving the difficult and complex questions arising in all aspects of social life from the political, economic, and military questions to culture and arts.

All these precious achievements and rich, many-sided struggle experiences contained in our party's revolutionary tradition constitute an admirable model, a genuine prototype of the struggle to attain the chuche revolutionary cause and precious resources that must of necessity be carried forward and developed throughout the historical period of the Korean revolution.

What makes our party's glorious revolutionary tradition a precious heritage of our revolution also lies in that it is becoming an inexhaustible source of our people's ideomental strength in the struggle for the ultimate victory of the chuche cause.

The great leqer Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"Our working people, engraving in their hearts a great sense of pride and responsibility for being heirs of the anti-Japanese partisans' revolutionary cause and encouraged by their heroic struggle achievements every time barriers and bottlenecks stand in the way, are displaying extraordinary patriotc devotion and initiative in socialist construction." ("Kim Il-song Selected Works," Vol 3, 2d impression, p 180)

Our party's glorious revolutionary tradition is the inexhaustible ideomental motive power of our party members and working people in revolution and construction and an important factor for all victories and successes.

The fighting spirit and revolutionary ethos of members of the Anti-Japanese Guerrillas who won in the fight against robber Japanese imperialism in a struggle of not one or two years but 20 long years, overcoming formidable trials beyond human imagination in a difficult environment where there was no support of a regular army nor the rear of the state, infinitely move people and energetically inspire them to struggle.

In particular, the mental world, infinite faithfulness to the leader of members of the Anti-Japanese Guerrillas who fought to defend the command headquarters of the Korean revolution during the arduous anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle, constitutes a brilliant model that makes our party members and working people loyally attend the party and the leader.

The revolutionary spirit and immortal services of members of the Anti-Japanese Guerrillas who had resolutely protected and defended the command headquarters of the revolution politicoideologically and at the risk of their lives in the arduous struggle in which they had to break through the forest of bayonets at every step of the way vividly show on what stand with what posture the communist revolutionaries must attend their leader.

Members of the Korean People's Revolutionary Army regarded it as their lifetime revolutionary duty to go forward to brilliantly attain the chuche revolutionary cause charted by the great leader, and whether they were left alone on a lonely island in the far-off sea, whether they were put behind bars by the enemy, whether they were about to die on the gallows, their hearts throbbed to the last breath of life with the glory and pride for being the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song's revolutionary soldiers, and they stopped at nothing until unconditionally carrying through the leader's orders and directives to the end, whatever the adversity.

The faithfulness of the late anti-Japanese revolutionary fighters who, with one mind of boundless loyalty to the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, had infinitely believed, followed, and revered none but the fatherly leader, is a brilliant exemplar which our party members and working people must necessarily learn from and carry forward and develop generation after generation.

Thus our party's revolutionary tradition brims with precious living examples which infinitely move our party members and working people and energetically inspire them to heroic struggle. Therefore, our party's revolutionary tradition constitutes revolutionary food that makes our people always disply high devotion and mass heroism in revolution and construction, an inexhaustible source that gives people strength, courage, and faith.

Every time they have run into difficult barriers in the revolutionary struggle and construction tasks, our people have gained faith and sought out the ways of struggle from the anti-Japanese revolution tradition, and they have not only resolutely fought courageously breaking through whatever storms and trials but are racing forward even more dynamically toward a bright communist future.

Our party's glorious revolutionary tradition is thus a basic factor for victory throughout the historical course of the developing Korean revolution, an infinitely precious revolutionary heritage constituting a source of great strength powerfully propelling our developing revolution.

Because of all this, our party's revolutionary tradition created by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song writing a new chapter in the history of the revolution constitutes the greatest, most glorious tradition unprecedented in the history of the revolutionary movement, shining brilliantly as an eternal beacon for the attainment of the chuche cause.

The glorious revolutionary tradition created by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is being even more solidly consolidated and brilliantly carried and developed as a heritage for the ages for the ultimate victory of the chuche cause under the sagacious leadership of our party.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"By tightly grasping it as an important task of party work to struggle to continue and develop the revolutionary tradition, we shall energetically step up revolution and construction and brilliantly continue and attain the chuche revolutionary cause." (Booklet "Summing-Up Report on the Work of the Central Committee to the Sixth Congress of the Korean Workers Party," p 119)

The revolutionary tradition created by the leader of the working class comes to be defended, developed, and enriched by the party infinitely faithful to the leader's cause.

To brilliantly carry forward and develop the anti-Japanese revolutionary tradition, giving prominence to it as the permanent cornerstone of the revolution unwavering for the ages is the stern will of our party which struggles to attain generation after generation to the end the chuche cause charted by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song.

Precisely such principled stand and attitude toward the revolutionary tradition is at the base of the positive activity and struggle of our party which, holding infinitely dear all the heritages created day in and day out of the anti-Japanese revolution, is making them blossom in full bloom. From this, our party always presents the task of carrying forward the revolutionary tradition as a most crucial question in continuing the lifeblood of the revolution, as a vital question for the very existence, strengthening, and development of the party itself.

With our party setting forth the anti-Japanese revolutionary tradition created by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song as a permanent cornerstone, the revolutionary tradition has come to shine even more brightly as the cornerstone of the revolution unwavering for the ages, as a precious heritage that must be glorified for tens of thousands of generations to come, and the task of carrying forward and developing it has come to be enunciated not as a temporary task but as a perpetual task that must be carried out throughout the period of attaining the chuche cause.

By the most precise principled stand toward the revolutionary tradition enunciated by the party our people have come to deeply engrave in their hearts a rock-hard faith intent on forever carrying forward and developing generation after generation the revolutionary tradition created by the great leader, and the chuche revolutionary tradition has come to shine even more brilliantly as a heritage for the ages that gives our revolution an unending life force without losing its brightness even after tens of thousands of years.

Our party, by thoroughly protecting and defending the politicoideological purity of the revolutionary tradition and by carrying forward and developing only one tradition, the chuche revolutionary tradition, is making the anti-Japanese revolutionary tradition even more solidly consolidated as a heritage of our revolution for the ages.

Protecting and defending the purity of the revolutionary tradition is a precondition which has basic significance in consolidating it as a precious heritage of the party and the revolution, and a basic question directly connected to the question of carrying forward the leader's cause. If hodgepodge ideas should infiltrate the revolutionary tradition in the slightest, the purity of the revolutionary tradition will be muddied and its character degerated, and in the end, will result in losing its significance as a heritage of the revolution. Only if the purity of the revolutionary tradition is preserved, will it be possible to unchangingly preserve the original face of the revolutionary tradition achieved by the leader even as the revolution continues and the changing of generations takes place, long glorify it as a precious heritage of the revolution, and attain to the end the revolutionary cause charted by the leader. Historical experience in the revolutionary struggle shows that, failing to preserve and brilliantly carry forward the purity of the revolutionary tradition, which is the roots of the party and the revolution, it will become impossible to victoriously move revolution and construction forward.

Our party, firmly maintaining the stand that there could be none but the chuche revolutionary tradition within the party, has prevented a scintilla of anything that has nothing to do with the revolutionary history of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song from slipping into the revolutionary tradition, and correctly seeking out for all areas of revolution and construction the revolutionary tradition achieved during the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle, has led the way to thoroughly carry forward and develop it. The revolutionary guidelines of the party for positively seeking out for the domains of literature and arts the precious heritages created during the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle and for being faithful to the original works and original music in the creation of revolutionary arts graphically show the principled stand of our party for preserving the purity of the revolutionary tradition.

By the principled stand and sagacious leadership of our party today our party members and working people, regarding it as a basic question in preserving the life of the revolutionary tradition to defend the purity of the chuche revolutionary tradition, are resolutely protecting and brilliantly carrying forward and dewveloping our party's revolutionary tradition. Because of this, the anti-Japanese revolutionary tradition, as its purity is being preserved, whatever the adversity, is being solidly consolidated as a cornerstone unwavering for the ages.

The chuche revolutionary tradition created by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, in the course of being comprehensively embodied in all areas of revolution and construction under the energetic leadership of our party, is blossoming in fuller bloom as a precious heritage of the revolution.

The revolutionary tradition is neither a mere legacy nor simple historical data. The revolutionary tradition comes to manifest its might and high value in revolution and construction commendably conducted with it as a resource.

Our party, putting it forward as an important party task to carry forward and develop the revolutionary tradition, has led the way to energetically push ahead with the task of arming the entire people with the revolutionary tradition and the task of embodying it in practical activities as one unified process. By doing so it is leading the way to have the chuche revolutionary tradition deeply implanted in all people's hearts and make miracles and innovations happen with it substantively embodied in all areas of revolution and construction.

In particular, our party, by ceaselessly deepening indoctrination in the revolutionary tradition to suit the realistic conditions that our revolution takes on a long-term nature and arduousness and the changing of generations of the revolution takes place, is thoroughly preparing the entire working people and the younger generation soundly as people in charge of the revolution, as reliable continuers of the revolutionary tradition.

Our party's slogan calling for conducting all tasks in manner of the Anti-Japanese Guerrillas is a militant banner which has immense significance in making blossom forever in full bloom the precious heritages created in anti-Japanese days. This slogan of the party "production, study, and life--all in manner of the Anti-Japanese Guerrillas!" by making not any one dimension of the revolutionary tradition but all of its ideomental heritages from the fighting spirit to the work habit and method, work style comprehensively embodied in our work and life, contains the lofty will to long glorify the glorious revolutionary tradition achieved by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and attain to the end the chuche revolutionary cause charted by the leader.

That today in the mode of thinking, way of work, and struggle trait of all of our functionaries and working people a basic turnaround has occurred and the fire of speed battle is blazing even more sweepingly in socialist construction--this bespeaks well that, with the plan of our party brilliantly realized for making precisely the anti-Japanese revolutionary tradition display its spirit vigorously societywide, it is manifesting its immense vitality.

By the sagacious leadership of the party everywhere throughout the country have been respectfully preserved and fixed up revolutionary battlefields, revolutionary sites, museums of the revolution, museums of revolutionary artifacts, research rooms for revolutionary thought, which have come to genuinely serve in arming party members and working people with our party's revolutionary tradition. Our people, who visit the Taeroch'on Museum of the Revolution in the region of Paektu Mountain, the sacred mountain of revolution, and the Museum of Revolutionary Artifacts in the Onsong region, as they look back with deep emotions on the brilliant revolutionary history of the fatherly leader who had cleared the road of bloody battle day in and day out of the anti-Japanese struggle, warmly feel with all their hearts the great leadership of our party leading the chuche revolutionary cause to brilliant victory.

Truly, because of the presence of the tested leadership of our party which always starts from the revolutionary tradition and brilliantly carries it forward in planning and launching all tasks arising in revolution and construction, all the heritages created in anti-Japanese days are being more solidly consolidated and are brilliantly blossoming in full bloom.

More than half a century has elapsed since the bright road ahead for the Korean revolution was charted and a new beginning of socialism and communism made under the sagacious leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song.

This long journey has been a prideful travel in which the glorious chuche revolutionary tradition has been created and brilliantly embodied in revolution and construction.

In the future the same as in the past we must more brilliantly carry forward and develop the revolutionary tradition created by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song.

Only if we carry forward and develop our party's revolutionary tradition, the purity intact, can we strengthen and develop ours forever into a chuche party, thoroughly defend the revolution, and attain the revolutionary cause to the end.

By conducting revolutionary tradition indoctrination in width and by making all party members and working people faithfully uphold generation after generation the immortal revolutionary achievements scored by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and our glorious party, we must brilliantly carry forward and attain our revolutionary cause.

In particular, we must substantively indoctrinate party members and working people in the anti-Japanese revolutionary tradition.

The objective of revolutionary tradition indoctrination lies not in merely acquainting them with the past historical facts but through and through in making them learn from and follow that lofty revolutionary thought and fighting spirit which have scored brilliant victory overcoming all kinds of trials, following the sagacious leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song.

In the early period of the revolutionary activity when our revolution began dawning, Korea's genuine young communists had loyally attended the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song with firm convictions as the unitary center for unity, as the sun of the revolution; and the late anti-Japanese revolutionary fighters, unswervingly following none but the fatherly leader and whatever the barrier and trial, had defended the command headquarters of the Korean revolution politicoideologically and at the risk of their lives.

Learning from such fighting spirit and examples, we must prepare ourselves as genuine communist revolutionaries, and must go forward to resolutely fight for the attainment of the chuche cause.

Strengthening our party in every way and loyally upholding the leadership of the party is the decisive guarantee for glorifying the revolutionary tradition for tens of thousands of generations to come.

The leadership of our party is a leadership for thoroughly embodying the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's revolutionary thought partywide and societywide, for moving our revolution forward as intended and wished by the leader, for attaining to the end the revolutionary cause charted by the fatherly leader.

By loyally upholding the leadership of the great leader and the party and glorifying the chuche revolutionary tradition for tens of thousands of generations to come we shall more dynamically step up the struggle for the attainment of our revolutionary cause charted by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song.

THE GREAT LEADER'S IMMORTAL CHUCHE IDEOLOGY IS A MAN-CENTERED WORLD VIEW

Pyongyang KULLOJA in Korean No 4, Apr 81 pp 16-22

[Article by Yang Hyong-sop]

[Text] The glorious journey of revolutionary activity the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has walked passing the critical points of multilayer barriers and formidable trials is a most lofty and beautiful history that he has devoted his whole life to the sacred cause for the freedom and liberation of the people, and a brilliant history of immortal world-historic achievements compiled before the Korean revolution and world revolution, before the times and mankind.

In the great achievements scored by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song through his revolutionary activities over half a century, his ideotheoretical achievements occupy an outstanding place.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, providing a most scientific and revolutionary world view by founding the immortal chuche ideology with his creative thinking and tireless energetic disquisition, has brought about a basic change in the people's ideological life and mode of thinking, and made infinitely precious contributions to hastening the victory of the cause of sovereignty.

The history of victory of the Korean revolution, the miraculous achievements scored in our country's revolution and construction, all the momentous events taking place in the international arena, and the entire course of the developing world history of our time graphically show the correctness and inexhaustible vitality of the chuche ideology and the greatness of achievements of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song who has founded the chuche ideology.

Establishing a correct world view is one of the very crucial questions that arise in successfully carrying out revolution and construction.

Revolution and consttuction are a task to remake nature and society to suit the demands of the masses of people aiming for an independent life; consequently, it is predicated upon a scientific discernment of the world, target of the remaking. Only with a scientific and revolutionary world view is it possible to establish a correct understanding and attitude toward the world and seek out the precise ways of remaking the world.

The history of mankind shows that, depending on the kind of world view held by people, their mode of thinking and the character and content of their ideological life have been determined and the success or failure of their activity of discernment and of their activity of remaking the world has been influenced.

A progressive and scientific world view, by enunciating for people a correct understanding and attitude toward the world, has helped them cast off the influence of a reactionary world view and made them highly display independent and creative stand and attitude in their practical activities to remake nature and society.

Conversely, a reactionary and unscientific world view, by giving an erroneous understanding and attitude toward the world, has nibbled away at people's independent consciousness and creative abilities, paralyzed their fighting spirit, and obstructed their activities of discerning and remaking the world.

Thus great beyond measure is the role played by a world view in people's activities to discern and remake the world, in revolution and construction.

Ours is an era of independent stand and attitude that the people who used to be oppressed and mistreated in bygone days have entered the stage as the master of the world and independently, creatively work out their destiny. Our era, giving the people who have risen up in the struggle for inuependent stand and attitude, the awareness and conviction that the master in command of their destiny is themselves and that the strength to work out their destiny also resides in themselves, called for a new guiding thought, a new world view that solves all questions arising in revolution and construction with man, the masses of people, at the center.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, by founding the immortal chuche ideology with his deep insight into the new characteristics and basic demands of our era, has provided a most scientific and revolutionary world view basically differentiated from prior world views in terms of its basis, ideotheoretical content, and mission, and given an ever-victorious guiding thought to the people struggling for independent stand and attitude.

"The chuche ideology is a man-centered world outlook that everything must be thought out with man at the center and geared to serving man, and is a revolutionary theory aimed at realizing the independent stand and attitude of the masses of working people." (Booklet "Summing-Up Report on the Work of the Central Committee to the Sixth Congress of the Korean Workers Party," p 31)

In this classical proposition set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is formalized the basic characteristics of the chuche world view. The basic characteristics of the chuche world view differentiated from all prior world view lies in that it is a man-centered world view enunciating the understanding and attitude toward the world with man at the center. That it is a man-centered world view is precisely where the uniqueness, scientific character, and inexhaustible practical might of the chuche world view lie.

What makes the chuche ideology a man-centered world view lies above all in that it solves, with man at the center, all questions arising in discerning and remaking the world.

To say to think out everything with man at the center means to examine, starting from man's demands, the questions arising in discerning and remaking the world, and solve them with primary emphasis on man's role.

Man is the subject of discernment and remaking.

Discernment and remaking are an activity of people to cast off the enslavement of their surrounding world and enjoy an independent, creative life. Therefore, apart from man there could be no discernment and remaking of the world, and without enhancing man's role it is impossible to expect any success in the task to discern and remake the world. This shows that thinking out everything with man at the center is a demand flowing from the intrinsic nature itself of the activity of discernment and remaking.

What makes the chuche ideology a man-centered world view also lies in that this ideology is a world view that gears everything to serving man.

To say to gear everything to serving man means to consider man as the most precious being in the world and target the activities of discernment and remaking, the objectives and mission of revolution and construction on providing an independent and creative life for people.

Man is the most precious resource in the world and the most energetic being who resolves everything. is by people's creative labor and goal-conscious struggle that nature is e, material wealth produced, and social transformation and progress achieved.

To launch the activity of discernment or to struggle to remake nature and society is not the end in itself but is through and through to insure an independent, creative life for people. It may be regarded that the value of everything of nature and society is ultimately determined by how much it serves people.

Thus, thinking out everything with man at the center and gearing everything to serving man is where the major ground that the chuche ideology is a man-centered world view is.

The chuche ideology founded by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is the most scientific and revolutionary world view because it places man at the center of the understanding and attitude toward the world.

Essentially, placing man at the center of a world view is the deserved demand arising from the intrinsic nature and practical mission of a world view.

A world view is a system of people's understanding and attitude toward the world, and people hold a world view from their earnest demand to work out their destiny. People's desire to know the face of the world and the law of its movement and development stems from their practical demand through and though to remake nature and society to suit their demands. Therefore, all attemps to enunciate the understanding and attitude toward the world without placing man at the center of all questions are incompatible with the intrinsic nature and mission of a world view itself, and as such, cannot have any significance in people's real life nor is it possible to give correct answers to the pressing questions arising in the struggle of the masses of working people for independent stand and attitude.

This fact bespeaks that a world view, precisely when it becomes a man-centered world view, comes to have a scientific nature and revolutionary character.

The chuche ideology, which is a man-centered world view, is the most scientific and revolutionary world view because it is based on a scientific elucidation of man's position and role in the world.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has provided a sound theoretical cornerstone of the man-centered world view by setting forth for the first time the philosophical principle that man is the master of everything and resolves everything.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"The chuche ideology is based on the philosophical principle that man is the master of everything and resolves everything." ("Kim Il-song Selected Works," Vol 7, p 260)

The philosophical principle of chuche, by enunciating man's position and role in the world, gives a correct answer to the question of relationship between man and the world, scientifically defining the basic characteristics of the existence and movement of the real world.

To say that man is the master of everything means that man is the most developed being who subordinates and controls the world to suit his demands. Man's relationship with the world is characterized by the fact that man occupies the position of the master in the world as he lives controlling the outside world. As man's independent stand and attitude grows, the realm of man's control over the world is widened and man's position in the world as the master is further enhanced.

To say that man resolves everything bespeaks that man is the most energetic being who remakes and transforms the world to suit his demands. The relationship between man and the world is characterized not only by man's position in the world as the master but also by the immense role man's creative activity plays in the transformation of the world. The history of mankind shows that as man's creative abilities grow, so grow man's functions exerted on the transformation of the world.

Placing man at the center of a world view is a corollary of precisely such position and role of man in the world. To put it another way, because man occupies the position and plays the role in the world as the master, it is imperative that in the activity of discerning and remaking the world, everything must of necessity be thought out with man at the center and geared to serving man. Therefore, a world view that does not examine everything with man at the center, a world view that cannot serve man's practice, cannot properly discharge its mission.

This bespeaks that thinking out everything with man at the center and gearing everything to serving man is the most important condition that guarantees success in the activity to discern and remake the world and makes it possible for the world view to admirably discharge its mission.

Again, the chuche ideology which is the man-centered world view is the most scientific and revolutionary world view because it is based on the most scientific understanding of man's inherent nature.

An understanding of man's inherent nature, an attitude toward man's dinity and value is one of the important questions which shows the scientific nature and progressive character of a world view or the lack of them.

The question as to what kind of a being man is and what are man's inherent attributes had been an object of debate for thousands of years since the emergence of philosophical speculation. But even as people had launched activities to remake nature and society for a long period, they failed to come up with a correct elucidation as to what kind of a being man, the subject of nature and society, is.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, by defining man as a social being possessing independent and creative stand and attitude, has scientifically elucidated man's inherent attributes basically differentiated from other material beings and established the most correct understanding of man.

Man's independent stand and attitude is his nature to live, subordinating and controlling his surrounding world to suit his demands instead of passively adapting or subordinating himself to it. Because man possesses such characteristics, he becomes the unitary being who defends his independent position in his relationship with his surrounding world, the master of nature and society, the master in command of his destiny.

Man's creative stand and attitude is his nature to remake the objects and phenomena of his surrounding world to suit his independent demands by his goal-conscious, active activity, produce what is nonexistent in nature, and go forward to solve all questions to suit his specific conditions. Creative stand and attitude expresses one of the intrinsic characteristics native to all activities of a social being possessing an ideological consciousness.

Because independent stand and attitude and creative stand and attitude are attributes characterizing the basic mode of the existence and activity of a social being, they have key significance in enunciating man's inherent nature. Man's other attributes, when compared with his independent stand and attitude and creative stand and attitude, are secondary and non-intrinsic through and through.

Man, precisely because he is a social being possessing independent stand and attitude and creative stand and attitude, is the master of everything, the basic factor resolving everything, the most developed and energetic being, the most precious being in the world.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, by establishing the chuche-oriented understanding of man, has provided an energetic ideotheoretical weapon which makes it possible to set man's value the highest and thoroughly protect his dignity.

Truly, the chuche world view which is based on a profound and unique understanding of man's position and role in the world and man's inherent nature, is the most scientific and revolutionary world view that firmly guarantees success in the activities of discernment and remaking, and a great ideotheoretical weapon which people struggling for independent stand and attitude must tightly grasp.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, by establishing the man-centered world view for the first time in history, has compiled immortal achievements which will long shine in the ideological history of mankind and made brilliant contributions to the development of the great task of sovereignty.

The immense wo ld-historic significance of the firmly established chuche world view lies in having brought about a new revolutionary turnaround in the realm of world view and given the people struggle for independent stand and attitude an energetic weapon for discerning and remaking the world.

The ideological history of mankind stretches over thousands of years but none of the world views had been able to scientifically enunciate man's position and role in the world, thus failing to provide an understanding of the world with man at the center.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, by founding the chuche ideology, has firmly established the most scientific and revolutionary man-centered world view in complete accord with the intrinsic nature and mission of a world view based on man's position and role in the world as the master.

The firm establishment of the chuche world view--this represents the greatest revolution in the ideological history of mankind, a crucial event that has opened up a new stage in the developing world view.

By the founding of the chuche ideology the framework of world views merely engaging in abstract and unrealistic debates divorced from man, the masses of working people, has been completely shattered and an entirely new and most scientific viewpoint and attitude of approaching the world with man at the center have been established and the overall system and content of world view perfected. This bespeaks that as a result of the firm establishment of the chuche world view, a new history has begun in the developing world view which examines and resolves everthing with man at the center.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, by firmly establishing the man-centered world view, has not only opened up a new stage in the developing world view but provided the most correct guiding principle which guarantees victory and success in revolution and construction.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has set forth a new revolutionary theory, strategy and tactics based on the chuche ideology which is the man-centered world view. The chuche revolutionary theory and strategy and tactics are the principles of the man-centered world view applied to people's struggle for independent stand and attitude, and as such, their intrinsic characteristics lie in viewing all questions arising in revolution and construction with man, the masses of working people, at the center and solving them based on the role of man, the masses of working people.

All social movements including the revolutionary movement are man's movements. Apart from man and his activity there could be no social movements, no social phenomena. The law of the developing revolution operates through man's conscious activity, and the decisive factor influencing the victory or defeat of revolution and construction, too, lies in chuche factor, not in objective conditions.

Of course, in order that the revolutionary struggle may win and society may develop, there have to be created objective conditions. People's goal-conscious struggle to reshape social relations and develop society is predicated upon the matureness of certain objective material conditions. Unless this is taken into account, the demands for the remaking of society cannot have feasibility; and the revolutionary struggle launched disregarding this fact cannot score success.

But this is not to say that objective conditions are the decisive factor determining the fate of revolution and construction. Objective conditions themselves are changed by man, and the conditions unfavorable to the revolution are turned around as favorable conditions and matureness of the necessary conditions expedited by the conscious struggle of the masses of working people. The decisive factor determining the victory of revolution and the development of society is through and through man who is the master of everything and resolves everything, the masses of working people who are the subject of history.

This fact enunciates the inevitability that the revolutionary theory must be evolved with man, the masses of working people, at the center and that the strategy and tactics of revolution must be established based on the role of man, the masses of working people.

All the revolutionary theories and strategies and tactics laid down by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song have been evolved with the masses of working people at the center and established based on the role of the working masses, and as such, always illuminate the most straight road to the victory of revolution and construction and display invincible might.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has laid down the chuche methodology based on the man-centered world view.

The chuche methodology is a man-centered methodology which seeks in man the key to the solution of all questions arising in revolution and construction. To put it another way, it is the most scientific and revolutionary methodology that resolves everything with primary emphasis not on objective conditions or environment but on bringing up man, the masses of working people, as energetic beings and enhancing their awareness as the master.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"... most important in social development is bringing up people as more energetic beings; and in order to energetically push ahead with revolution and construction, it is imperative to give priority to work with people, work to remold people." ("Kim Il-song Selected Works," Vol 6, p 277)

Inasmuch as man is the master of nature and society and the basic factor resolving everything, it is possible to successfully carry out revolution and construction only by bringing up people as energetic beings and enhancing the revolutionary awareness of the masses, strengthening work with people. It is a truth tested and proved by revolutionary practice that everything gets resolved properly when people are brought up as energetic beings and work with people is commendably conducted, otherwise there follows standstill and marking time.

Establishment of the chuche revolutionary theory and methodology has immeasurably crucial theoretical and practical significance in the developing revolutionary thought of the working class and its attainment of the cause of sovereignty.

The chuche revolutionary theory and the chuche methodology--they are infinitely precious ideotheoretical heritages that have developed the communist revolutionary theory onto a new higher stage and the most correct guiding theory, guiding method that makes it possible to successfully solve all questions arising in revolution and construction with man, the masses of working people, at the center.

By the establishment of the chuche revolutionary theory and the chuche methodology the revolutionary thought of the working class has come to be perfected as a great monoaxial revolutionary theory complete with a man-centered world view, and a man-centered revolutionary theory and man-centered methodology based thereon; and an ever-victorious ideotheoretical weapon has come to be provided for remolding nature, society, and social beings and successfully carrying out the great tasks of national liberation, class liberation, and human liberation.

The chuche ideology which is the man-centered world view, brilliantly embodied in our country's realities, is manifesting great vitality.

Establishing a correct line and policy is a crucial question influencing the destiny of revolution and construction. One of the important criteria for the correctness and might of the line and policy hinges on how precisely the aim, demand, and interest of the masses of working people are reflected.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song establishes all lines, policies, and guidelines, placing the aim, demand, and interest of the masses of working people in the first and foremost place based on the man-centered world view.

The demands for thinking out everything with man at the center and gearing everything to serving man are thoroughly embodied in all the lines, policies, and guidelines of our party such as the unique guidelines for giving priority to the ideological revolution in socialist and communist construction, the unique party work guidelines with primary emphasis on work with people, the guidelines for giving priority over all other tasks to educational work which is an important part of work with people, and the chuche guidelines for economic construction and technological revolution. Precisely herein lies an important secret that all the lines, policies, and guidelines of our party always dynamically capture the people's hearts, get transformed into an indeflectible creed of the masses, beget great victories and miracles and manifest inexhaustible vitality in the realities.

The chuche ideology which is the man-centered world view, comprehensively embodied in our country's socialist system, is bearing great fruits.

Our country's socialist system provided by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is the most superior and people-oriented social system where man, the masses of working people, have become the genuine master of society and everything of the society is thoroughly geared to serving man, the masses of working people. In our country, with the chuche ideology comprehensively embodied in all aspects of social life, people are considered the most precious, their individualities and rights are maximally respected, and all of them enjoy an independent, creative life to their hearts' content as they add luster to their dignity and value and make their talents blossom in full bloom.

The immortal chuche ideology is a powerful weapon of ideological liberation that has brought about a basic change in the ideomental features and ideological life of our people. As a result that they have thoroughly armed themselves with the chuche ideology, the man-centered world view, our people have come to free themselves completely from the shackles of flunkeyism, national nihilism, and dogmatism which used to nibble away at their independent consciousness and national pride, paralyze their creative stand and attitude, inflict such enormous harm on the nation's development, revolution and construction and to have the high awareness that the master of their destiny is themselves, and an invincible faith in their strength.

Our country's brilliant realities wherein the entire people's hearts are burning with the fervor of loyalty to the party and the leader and they are dynamically moving forward toward the victory of the chuche cause, united airtight around the party and the leader, graphically show the greatness and incisiveness of the revolutionary transformation that has occurred in our people's ideomental features, ideological life, and mode of thinking.

This is an energetic part of proof that testifies to the great vitality of the chuche ideology and an infinitely precious achievement that firmly guarantees the ultimate victory of the chuche cause.

Truly, the immortal achievements which the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, establishing the man-centered world view, has compiled in the developing ideology of mankind and in the attainment of the cause of sovereignty, will be eternally shining in history and our country will be radiating rays for tens of thousands of generations to come as the glorious fatherland of chuche.

Today our people are energetically launching the rewarding struggle to realize the program for conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song set forth at the Sixth Congress of the Korean Workers Party.

The cause for conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology is a sacred task to build the communist society, holding the chuche ideology as a firm guiding principle and thoroughly embodying the chuche ideology.

The most important task arising before our party members and working people in the historic struggle to attain the cause for conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology is studying the chuche ideology in depth and thoroughly establishing the chuche world view which is a man-centered world view.

Only by thoroughly establishing the chuche world view can they acquire the ideomental qulifications of a chuche-oriented revolutionary and solve all questions arising in revolution and construction, to suit the demands of the chuche ideology.

By further strengthening chuche ideology indoctrination we must strive to make all party members and working people assimilate the chuche ideology into their flesh and bone, into the unitary principle for their activity, and think and act to suit the demands of the chuche ideology.

Invincible is the revolutionary cause of our people dynamically moving forward along the one road the chuche ideology teaches under the sagacious leadership of the glorious Party Center, loyally revering the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, founder of the immortal chuche ideology.

THE SELF-RELIANT NATIONAL ECONOMIC CONSTRUCTION LINE SET FORTH BY THE GREAT LEADER AND ITS INVINCIBLE VITALITY

Pyongyang KULLOJA in Korean No 4, Apr 81 pp 23-29

[Article by Hyon Mu-kwang]

[Text] The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, with his unique ideotheoretical activities and awesome revolutionary practice since he early embarked on the road to revolution to the present, has compiled immortal achievements before the times and mankind.

What occupies an important place in the immortal achievements compiled by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is that he has transformed our country into a socialist power in a historically short period, setting forth the self-reliant national economic construction line and brilliantly embodying it.

The self-reliant national economic construction line set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is a unique economic construction program that graphically illuminates the road to successfully laying the material and technical foundations of socialism and communism, and a powerful ideotheoretical weapon that makes it possible to maximally step up socialist, communist construction.

The correctness of the self-reliant national economic construction line has been graphically proved through the practice of our country's socialist construction, and its invincible vitality is being displayed more energetically with each passing day.

Achieving economic self-sufficiency is one of the important tasks that arises in firmly insuring the country's independent stand and attitude and bringing about the nation's unending growth and prosperity.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"Only if economic self-sufficiency is achieved by commendable economic construction, is it possible to consolidate the independence of the country, insure an independent and creative life for the people, and successfully build socialism, communism." ("Kim Il-song Selected Works," Vol 7, p 266)

Independent stand and attitude is the life of a country and nation; and an important guarantee for firmly insuring the independent stand and attitude lies in achieving economic self-sufficiency. Economic self-sufficiency is the material cornerstone of political independence and independent stand and attitude.

A nation which has been unable to achieve economic self-sufficiency, absolutely cannot be politically free either. If a country comes to rely on another country economically, the country comes to follow that country politically as well, and if a country comes to be subordinated to another country economically, the country will be unable to correctly defend its politically independent stand and attitude either. Only if a country becomes economically self-reliant, can it consolidate its national independence, and thoroughly maintaining its politically independent stand and attitude, resolutely defend its national dignity and glory, whatever the environment.

A powerful self-reliant economic might constitutes a sound resource that can firmly insure an independent and creative happy material and cultural life for the people. When a country's economic self-sufficiency is strong, it can ceaselessly improve the standard of living for the people, satisfactorily filling the daily growing material needs of the people on its own, and firmly achieve an unending growth and prosperity of the nation, breaking through all barriers and bottlenecks with its own strength.

Our era, which is an era of independent stand and attitude, calls upon the people who have embarked on the road to building a new society, to more energeticall launch the struggle to achieve economic self-sufficiency.

Ours is an era of independent stand and attitude in which the people, who used to be oppressed and mistreated in bygone days, have entered the stage as the master of the world, and work out their destiny, holding it in their own hands. In order that a nation may go forward to work out its destiny on its own responsibility to suit the demands of the era of independent stand and attitude, it is imperative that it must thoroughly maintain its independent stand and attitude and at the same time lay self-reliant economic foundations that can materially underpin it.

Apart from the struggle to achieve economic self-sufficiency a nation cannot work out its destiny independently, creatively. Only by thoroughly repudiating reliance on outside forces and energetically launching the struggle to achieve economic self-sufficiency can a nation liquidate the centuries-old backwardness in the economy and technology, and poverty left behind by the imperialist colonial rule and firmly insure materially the people's stand as the master of the state and society.

All this clearly shows that achieving economic self-sufficiency is one of the vital questions arising before a country and nation and a pressing task our era presents.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, by setting forth early on the self-reliant national economic construction line with his deep insight into this crucial question the times and the revolution present, illuminated the straight road to achieving national economic self-sufficiency and energetically stepping up revolution and construction.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"If politically complete independent stand and attitude is to be had, it is imperative to necessarily have economic self-sufficiency; and if economic self-sufficiency is to be achieved, it is imperative to build a national economy possessing its own sound raw material base, developed in many-sided ways and equipped with modern technical provisions." ("Answers to Questions Posed by Foreign Journalists," Vol 2, p 139)

To say to build a self-reliant national economy bespeaks to create an economic might powerful enough to run on its own the nation's economy and the people's hosuekeeping, relying on the strength of the people and on the resources of the country.

What constitutes an important part of the content of self-reliant national economic construction is firmly insuring the many-sided character and independent nature of industrial branch structures. Only an economy where the many-sided character and independent nature of production structures are insured complete with all the necessary branches of the people's economy such as the heavy industry with the machine building industry as the core, the light industry, and agriculture, is capable of self-dependently conducting expanded reproduction and satisfactorily filling on its own the needs of the people.

A self-reliant national economy is also an economy possessing its own sound raw material and fuel bases. An economy relying on others for raw materials and fuel agsolutely cannot develop foresightedly on a secure basis. Only by soundly organizing its own raw material and fuel bases and basically satisfying on its own the needs of raw materials and fuel is it possible to build a powerful national economy assuredly walking on its own feet under whatever conditions.

One of the important demands arising in self-reliant national economic construction is equipping the people's economy with modern technical provisions and solidly organizing its own national cadre ranks. Only by building an economy which is equipped with modern technical provisions and run by its own technology and managerial cadres is it possible to firmly insure national technical and economic self-sufficiency and sustain a ceaseless high rate of speed of economic development.

Thus, when a modern, comprehensive economic system has been created which is run by its own raw materials, technologies, and national cadres, complete with all the production branches necessary to the extent of basically satisying with its own production the diverse material needs arising in its own country, it may be said that a sound self-reliant national economy has been built.

Under conditions that each country has a different economic developmental standard, different kinds of natural resources and different amounts of their deposits, it is never an easy task to build a sound self-reliant national economy. But if each country maximally mobilzies and utilizes its own manpower and material resources, it will be quite capable of building a self-reliant national economy. A basic way of building a self-reliant national economy with one's own strength and resources lies in thoroughly embodying the revolutionary principle of self-reliance.

Self-reliance is a thoroughly revolutionary stand intent on completing one's own country's revolution basically relying on its own chuche strength and an independent stand intent on carrying out the building of its own country with the labor of its own people and the resources of its own country. Manufacturing what is nonexistent and seeking out more of what is in short supply and courageously breaking through all kinds of barriers and trials with one's own strength is precisely self-reliance.

Only if the revolutionary principle of self-reliance is tightly maintained in economic construction, is it possible to successfully solve various complex questions arising in economic construction, maximally mobilizing the strength and wisdom of one's own people and the resources and production potentialities of one's own country and to amply provide with one's own strength a happy material and cultural life for one's own people. Unless the revolutionary principle of self-reliance is tightly maintained in economic construction, one will not believe in one's own strength, one will be unable to effectively mobilize and utilize one's own country's internal resources, and in the end, one will merely come to look to others out of hand. Practicing self-reliance is precisely where the road to stepping up economic construction with one's own strength and building a sound self-reliant national economy is, where a firm guarantee for achieving one's country's enrichment, strengthening and development is.

The self-reliant national economic construction line set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is a revolutionary economic construction line that makes it possible to insure the victory of the socialist, communist cause, stepping up revolution and construction with one's own strength.

If the ultimate victory of the socialist, communist cause is to be won, it is imperative to occupy the ideological fortress and material fortress of communism; and in order to successfully occupy the material fortress of communism, it is imperative to step up economic construction and lay sound material and technical foundations of socialism and communism.

To say to lay the material and technical foundations of socialism and communism means to completely liberate working people from backbreaking labor and create produtive forces developed to the extent of realizing the communist principle "from each according to abilities, to each according to needs." As long as national differences remain and states exist, such material and technical foundations must be laid on a nation-state basis, and to this end, a self-reliant national economy must be built.

Self-reliant national economic construction, precisely because it makes it possible to form a modern, comprehensive economic system with the strength of its own people, the technologies of its own country, and the resources of its own country, makes it possible to quickly liberate its working people from backbreaking labor and satisfactorily fill their material needs. If without building a self-reliant national economy one goes forward to develop only a few of the branches of the people's economy, it will become impossible to comprehensively utilize the country's natural resources and production potentialities and insure a high rate of speed of the growth of production, unable to self-reliantly balance the branches.

Therefore, the self-reliant national economic construction line is a revolutionary economic construction line that makes it possible to soundly lay with one's own strength the material and technical foundations of socialism and communism, quickly promote the well-being of the people, and ultimately insure the final victory of the socialist, communist cause.

The self-reliant national economic construction line set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is also the most correct economic construction line that makes it possible to eliminate national inequalities and admirably discharge the national duties and international duties of the working class all together.

The practical basis of national inequalities lies in economic backwardness. National inequalities are not something that disappears forthwith once national independence is achieved and the exploiting system liquidated, nor are they something that is overcome by the union of nations by this or that means. In order to eliminate national inequalities and ultimately solve the question of nations, their practical basis, economic backwardness, must be eliminated, necessarily achieving economic self-sufficiency.

Self-reliant national economic construction, because it enables each nation to have a sound economic might, makes it possible for each nation to eliminate the factors that have spawned national inequalities, achieve its own maximal free development and comprehensive blossoming, and develop external relations on the principles of complete equality, reciprocity, and independent stand and attitude.

Building a self-reliant national economy, because it also firmly reinforces the individual links of the world revolution, makes it possible to strengthen the overall economic might of countries aiming for independent stand and attitude, lessen the burden of fraternal countries, and help even better the revolutionary peoples fighting against imperialism, colonialism.

All this graphically proves that the self-reliant national economic construction line is a powerful weapon for maximally stepping up economic construction to suit the demands of the era of independent stand and attitude, a revolutionary economic construction line which makes it possible for the working class to discharge its national duties and international duties admirably all together. Precisely herein lie the important significance, correctness, and revolutionary nature of the self-reliant national economic construction line set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, sagaciously leading the struggle to carry through the self-reliant national economic construction line, has scored immortal achievements in socialist economic construction.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"... setting forth the line for building a self-reliant national economy as early as immediately after liberation and braving all barriers, we have carried it through." ("Answers to Questions Posed by Foreign Journalists," p 210)

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, setting it forth already in the early days of building a new society as one of the key questions influencing the rise or fall of the country and the people to build a self-reliant national economy, sagaciously led the way to energetically launch the struggle to lay the foundations of a self-reliant national economy.

But the struggle in our country to lay the foundations of a self-reliant national economy was interrupted temporarily by the war provoked by U.S. imperialism, and after the war we had to start all over again.

The postwar situation in our country was difficult indeed. Everything had been destroyed, not one brick remaining intact, and the people's living conditions were also very hard. Mouthing that Korea would never be able to rise again in a hundred years, the U.S. imperialists viciously perpetrated machinations to provoke another war. Indeed the circumstances at the time were such that it was difficult to decide where to begin first.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, precisely at such a time setting forth a unique economic construction line and guidelines with his deep insight into our country's socioeconomic conditions and future prospects of development, opened up a wide road to energetically launching the struggle to clear existing difficulties and build a self-reliant national economy.

One of the most important questions that arose in building a self-reliant national economy was correctly defining the basic direction of economic construction. Only by precisely solving this question was it possible to energetically step up economic construction along a straight road toward a clearly defined goal and successfully solve difficult and complex questions arising in self-reliant national economic construction, effectively mobilizing and utilizing to the maximum all the manpower and material resources of the country.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, setting forth the basic line of socialist economic construction, graphically enunciated the basic direction of economic construction, and precisely defining the stages for the realization, sagaciously led the struggle to build a self-reliant national economy. By the basic line of socialist economic construction set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song for developing heavy industry with priority but simultaneously with light industry and agriculture a new road was illuminated to maximally stepping up self-reliant national economic construction by quickly developing heavy industry, light industry, and agriculture all together in close linkage instead of waiting until after the construction of heavy industry before building light industry or as was the case in capitalist countries, of developing light industry first and with capital funds earned therefrom, building heavy industry.

The struggle to carry through the basic line of socialist economic construction in our country was a process of incisive struggle against flunkeys, dogmatists. The antiparty, counterrevolutionary factional elements who were stubborn flunkeys and dogmatists, mouthing "rice does not grow on machines," persistently maneuvered against the party line and in the end, came out to blatantly challenge our party and the government of the republic.

But our party, unwavering in the slightest and resolutely smashing the machinations of the flunkeys and dogmatists, went forward to carry through the socialist economic construction line. Our party, above all rationally combining the rehabilitation, reconstruction, and new construction of heavy industry factories in accordance with the basic line of socialist economic construction, put great efforts into building heavy industry, not as heavy industry for the sake of heavy industry but as heavy industry that could most effectively serve in the development of light industry and rural economy. Thus in a historically short period with comparatively less funds it was possible to build a powerful heavy industry base and based thereon, quickly develop light industry and agriculture as well, and completely overcoming the colonial deformities and lopsidedness of the economy, achieve a many-sided development of the people's economy.

One of the most important tasks arising in self-reliant national economic construction is realizing socialist industrialization and technological revolution. Only by carrying out socialist industrialization and technological revolution is it possible to strengthen national technical and economic self-sufficiency and lay sound material and technical foundations of socialism.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, setting forth a unique industrialization line with the construction of a self-reliant, modern industry as a major part of its content, unlike the past theory on socialist industrialization solely aimed at establishing a modern heavy industry, illuminated a new road to realizing socialist industrialization to suit the demands of self-reliant national economic construction, and provided a sound guarantee for extraordinarily strengthening our national economic might in a short period. The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, brilliantly embodying the immortal chuche ideology, also comprehensively enunciated the intrinsic nature and content of the technological revolution, the principle which must be strictly adhered to in carrying out the technological revolution, and the ways to solve on our own the question of technical personnel, and setting forth a unique theory on three technological revolutions, opened up a wide road to stepping up the technical improvement of the people's economy and liberating working people from backbreaking labor.

With the thorough realization of the chuche-oriented socialist industrialization line and technological revolution guidelines set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, self-reliant industries have been built in our country which are capable of producing and securing on their own the necessary means of production and consumer goods relying on our own resources and technologies; the historically inherited technical and economic backwardness has been completely liquidated; and all branches of the people's economy have been placed firmly on modern technical foundations.

Thus with the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song setting forth the unique economic construction line and guidelines, our party and people have been able to energetically step up self-reliant national economic construction along a straight road, and overcoming multilayer barriers and trials, extraordinarily strengthen our national economic might. Life clearly shows the correctness and vitality of the economic construction line set forth by the great leader and energetically proves that only when the line is thoroughly carried through is it possible to win brilliant victory in economic construction.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, by going in deep among the masses of workng people every time a difficult and complex task arose in socialist economic construction and by making them maximally display their strength and wisdom, has brilliantly carried out the awesome task of building a socialist self-reliant national economy.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, in the first days of basic socialist construction when internal and external situations were complex and acute more than at any time, personally visited the working class of Kangson, acquainted them with the tense national situation and the intent of the party, and kindled a great revolutionary upswing in socialist construction. Thus in our country the great history of the chollima movement began, and amid the sweeping flames of the chollima movement the difficult situation was overcome and unprecedented miracles and innovations happened on all fronts of socialist construction. All of our working people, dynamically moving forward in the revolutionary spirit of self-reliance and fortitutde, worked the miracles of producing some 13,000 units of machine tools in one year over and above the plan and erecting some 1,000 local industry factories with idle local materials and facilities, and with their own strength and technologies, scored the prideful achievement of producing modern machines such as tractors and trucks.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, also by personally creating the Ch'ongsan-ri spirit and Ch'ongsan-ri method, the Taean work system and a new agricultural guidance system to suit the new environment wherein the socialist reshaping of production relations had been completed and the nation's comprehensive technical improvement expedited, and by leading the functionaries by the hand to thoroughly embody them, made it possible to continue to highly promote the revolutionary fervor and creative positiveness of working people. As, with the establishment of a new economic management system, the work method and work style of functionaries were improved and the functions and roles of state economic organs as economic organizers were enhanced, various difficult and complex questions arising in economic construction were successfully solved and great achievements were scored in the task of establishing a self-reliant national economic system.

Indeed the sagacious leadership of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has been a source of invincible strength that has brought about great leaps forward and miracles in socialist economic construction, and the decisive factor that has made it possible to display to the hilt the correctness of the self-reliant national economic construction line.

The self-reliant national economic construction line set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is displaying great vitality in our country.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"The government of the republic set forth the line of building an independent national economy, and has adhered to the revolutionary principle of self-reliance. As a result, it has admirably built an independent national economy fed with our own raw materials, run by our own technique and our own cadres, comprehensively developed and equipped with up-to-date technology." (Booklet "Let Us Step Up Socialist Construction Under the Banner of Chuche Thought," p 6)

By strictly adhering to the socialist self-reliant national economic construction line, above all we have been able to develop the people's economy at a ceaseless high rate of speed.

Between 1961 and 1970 when the task of socialist industrialization was in full swing, our industry developed at the high average annual rate of 12.8 percent, and between 1970 and 1979 when the struggle was under way to consolidate and develop the achievements scored in industrialization and occupy a new towering height of socialist construction, it grew at the extraordinarily high average annual rate of 15.9 percent.

Thus we were able to brilliantly complete the historic task of industrialization in the short span of no more than 14 postwar years, a task which others had taken one century or even several centuries to accomplish, and even under conditions that the economy had grown unprecedentedly in scope and the linkages between branches, between production units of the people's economy had become very complex and close, we were able to fulfill the enormous Six-Year Plan as much as 1 year and 4 months ahead of schedule and are now overfulfilling every year the magnificent task of the second Seven-Year Plan as well.

This prideful achievement scored in our country at a time when many countries of the world have been going through serious economic unevenness in recent years constitutes energetic proof of the superiority of our country's socialist system and of the might of our self-reliant national economy.

With the construction of a powerful socialist self-reliant national economy we have come to be able to satisfactorily fill with our own production the material needs arising in economic development and people's life.

Today our self-reliant national economy, complet with all branches such as a powerful heavy industry with the machine building industry as the core, modern light industry, and developed rural economy, is mass-producing various kinds of machinery and equipment, raw materials, supplies, and people's consumer goods.

In bygone days, on account of even primitive cutting machines in short supply, our country was unable to properly cut parts nor was it able to produce on its own even simple farm implements. But today our country is producing at will modern machine tools such as 20-meter lathes, automatic and semi-automatic lathes as well as comprehensive plant facilities for newly built factories and enterprises such as power plant facilities, metal factory facilities, and cement plant facilities. Again, our country is brilliantly realizing the automation and remote control of production, producing on its own automation instruments and elements requiring high science and technology and precision.

Under our party's chuche-oriented economic construction guidelines many mines large and small have been newly tapped and many hydroelectric and thermal power plants have been built with definite priority to the extractive industry and power industry, and the self-sufficiency of the metal industry, chemical industry, and building materials industry has been further strengthened. Thus our own raw material, fuel, and power bases have been solidly organized, and the domestic demands for ferrous and nonferrous metal products, chemical products, and building materials of various specifications are being satisfactorily filled on our own.

Our country used to import almost all of its consumer goods but having rapidly developed not only the heavy industry but also the light industry, we are now satisfying with our own production the daily growing demands of working people for consumer goods. Today in our country, with the bases of a modern textile industry, food industry, and daily necessities industry solidly organized, there have been created resources capable of quickly increasing the production of consumer goods in the future.

Through the struggle to build a self-reliant national economy the historically inherited rural backwardness was eliminated in a short period, and the material and technical foundations of agriculture have been incomparably strengthened. With the introduction to the rural economy of irrigation and electrification completed, irrigation canals have been laid like a spider's web and the rural areas electrified, and with mechanization and chemicalization expedited, the peasants are now doing farming by machines and weeding by chemicals. With the mechanization and modernization of agriculture expedited and the chuche farming method carried through, we are reaping year after year high harvests on a secure basis in spite of the severe effects of the cold front.

Today in many countries of the world the unemployed ranks are growing daily and hundreds of millions of people are going hungry but our people, thanks to the self-reliant modern industry and developed rural economy, are enjoying a happy life to their hearts' content, free from any worry about food, clothing, and shelter.

With the thorough realization of the self-reliant national economic construction line set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the international authority and prestige of our republic have risen extraordinarily high.

As a result of the sound construction of a powerful socialist self-reliant national economy our people, forever casting off their sorry plight of humiliation and contempt of all kinds to which they were subjected in bygone days only because of a backward economy, have come to be able to enter the international arena in their own right as an energetic, developed people with the same rights as all the other nations of the world large and small. Today our country, as a socialist state with dignity that no one may dare taunt, is developing relations with other countries, and the international prestige of our country is growing higher with each passing day.

Truly the achievements our people have scored in self-reliant national economic construction are victory of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's immortal chuche ideology and priceless heritages for the happiness of tens of thousands of generations to come.

Today we are faced with the glorious task to further strengthen our socialist self-reliant national economy, carrying through the guidelines set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song for chucheization, modernization, and scientization of the people's economy.

The entire party members and working people, by deeply engraving in their hearts fiery loyalty to the party and the leader and by energetically launching the struggle to step up the chucheization, modernization, and scientization of the people's economy with the revolutionary spirit of self-reliance highly displayed, shall further strengthen our national economic might and occupy ahead of schedule the magnificent targets of the new long-term task.

THE GREAT-LEADER-STYLE WORK METHOD IS A CONSUMMATE COMMUNIST LEADERSHIP METHOD

Pyongyang KULLOJA in Korean No 4, Apr 81 pp 30-36

[Article by Yi Chae-yun]

[Text] The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, creating a communist mass leadership method and brilliantly embodying it in the course of leading the unprecedentedly arduous and complex Korean revolution, has compiled immortal achievements before our party and people.

The communist work method created by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song is a prototype of the revolutionary leadership method most correctly solving all questions arising in mass leadership and a brilliant model of the scientific leadership art leading the revolutionary cause to victory.

The communist work method provided by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song is a completely unique work method that can only be named after the leader's revered name, the great-leader-style work method, whether in terms of of its ideotheoretical basis and the background of its creation, or in terms of how it has come to be comprehensively established.

The prideful journey in which the chuche revolutionary cause was charted and its victorious forward movement has been made practically proves the correctness and invincible vitality of the great-leader-style work method and graphically shows the fatherly leader's consummate leadership art.

Establishing a scientific and revolutionary leadership method is one of the most important questions arising before the party of the working class.

Inasmuch as the master of revolution and construction is the masses of people, only if the party of the working class possesses a mass leadership method to correctly organize and mobilize the masses of people, can it successfully attain the socialist, communist cause.

As socialist, communist construction progresses, it arises as an even more pressing question to correctly establish a mass leadership method to energetically organize and mobilize the masses in revolution and construction.

Only if the party of the working class keeps ceaselessly perfecting the mass leadership method to suit the new demands of the developing revolution, can it energetically step up revolution and construction.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, by creating a unique revolutionary work method and continuing to ceaselessly perfect it in the course of his revolutionary activities over a long period, has brilliantly solved the mass leadership question.

Our people call it the great-leader-style work method, naming the revolutionary work method after the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song which he has personally created and set brilliant examples of it.

The great-leader-style work method is a consummate mass leadership method embodying the immortal chuche ideology and a revolutionary mass line based on it.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"It is the invariable work method of our party in revolution and construction to believe the inexhaustible strength of the masses, rely on them, discuss with them, and inspire their wisdom and creative positiveness." ("Kim Il-song Selected Works," Vol 3, 2d impression, p 3)

The scientific nature and greatness of a work method are determined by the guiding thought and mass guidance principle underlying it. Only a work method based on a correct guiding thought and guiding principle can become a great mass leadership method. The chuche ideology and the revolutionary mass line enunciate the ideotheoretical basis and methodological principle of the great-leader-style work method.

The great-leader-style work method, by holding the chuche ideology as the ideotheoretical and methodological bases of mass guidance, views the masses of people as the master of revolution and construction and makes revolution and construction conducted by means of ceaselessly enhancing their role. In this way it makes it possible for the masses of people to acquit themselves fully of their responsibility and role as the master in the complex revolutionary struggle to remake nature and society.

The great-leader-style work method, by putting forward the revolutionary mass line as the basic principle of mass guidance, also places the interests of the masses of people in the first and foremost place and deals with everything to suit them, and by going in deep among the masses of people, makes all questions solved relying on their wisdom and strength.

The intrinsic revolutionary nature of the great-leader-style work method lies, in a word, in that it is a work method of solving all questions arising in revolution and construction with a correct viewpoint and stand toward the massea of working people and relying on their strength and wisdom. Resting on the immortal chuche ideology and comprehensively embodying the demands of the revolutionary mass line is precisely where the intrinsic characteristics of the great-leader-style work method is, where its correctness, uniqueness and the inexhaustible source of its invincible vitality are.

What makes the great-leader-style work method a consummate communist leadership method lies above all in that it is a work method flowing from the inherent nature of the communists.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"It may be said that it is the work method flowing from the inherent nature of the communists to fight revolution, mobilizing the masses." ("On the Question of Socialist Economic Management," Vol 3, p 40)

The communists are revolutionaries shouldering the glorious mission to liberate the masses of working people from all kinds of exploitation and oppression and build the communist society where their independent stand and attitude will have been completely realized. It is a task that absolutely cannot be carried out by the strength of the communists alone to liberate the masses of people from all kinds of constraints and provide an independent and creative life for them.

The communists, only if they rely on the broad masses and mobilize the masses, can successfully expedite the difficult and enormous task of transforming society and remaking nature and brilliantly discharge their lofty mission and weighty duties. Therefore, it is a most important intrinsic demand made of the communists to carry out revolution and construction, relying on the masses of people and setting the masses of people in motion.

For the communists, there could be no revolutionary tasks, no revolutionary activities apart from the masses of people. It is the mode of activity native to the communists to always work and live together with the masses of people. Only if the communists believe the strength of the masses of people and going in deep among them, share life and death with the masses, can they most precisely find out the opinions and demands of the masses of people and resolve everything to suit their interests.

The great-leader-style work method is a revolutionary work method which makes it possible to resolve everything to suit the interests and demands of the masses of people, going in deep among them, and successfully realize an independent and creative life for the masses of people. In this work method are graphically embodied the respected and beloved leader's warm love and concern for the people and his noble people-oriented character and consummate leadership power always firmly believing the strength of the masses of people and conducting work relying on them. Precisely because of this, the great-leader-style work method constitutes a work method native to the communists, a genuine model of the revolutionary owrk method.

What makes the great-leader-style work method a consummate communist leadership method also lies in that it is a mass leadership method correctly embodying the demands of the law of socialist, communist construction.

Socialist, communist construction is an incisive class struggle and at the same time a creative task to revolutionarily reshape nature, society, and social beings. This task, every part of it, can be successfully carried out only by a scientific leadership method consistent with the objective laws.

The task of revolutionarily reshaping nature, society, and social beings cannot be conducted within an inflexibly set framework, for the task calls for resolving everything creatively to suit the objective realities.

If we were to work clinging to extant theories or experiences without considering the concrete realities, not only would we be unable to score success; we would be unable to avoid failure.

The great-leader-style work method is a fresh, creative work method which, eliminating the old conventional, stereotyped method of conducting work in conformity with a fixed form without considering the specific conditions, makes one think out all questions with one's own head and solve them to suit the specific conditions. To put it another way, the great-leader-style work method is a work method in which the functionaries ceaselessly seek out animated, fresh ways to successfully carry out the revolutionary tasks at hand, deeply studying and analyzing the complex realities, and energetically launch organizational political work by various methods in various forms. This work method, by relying on the creative wisdom and practical experience of the masses in solving all questions, makes it possible to eliminate subjectivism and find a most scientific and revolutionary way for the solution to all questions. Accordingly, the great-leader-style work method, by always insuring creative stand and attitude and scientific nature in work with the masses, makes it possible to most successfully realize mass leadership to suit the demands of socialist, communist construction.

What makes the great-leader-style work method a consummate communist leadership method also lies in that it is a work method which comprehensively enunciates the principled questions arising in mass guidance in all stages, in all areas of revolution and construction.

The revolutionary struggle of the working class calls for a rich and many-sided mass leadership method.

None but a rich and many-sided work method which has been tested and proved in its practical application in all stages, in all areas of the struggle to realize the independent stand and attitude of the masses of people can become a genuine mass leadership method energetically leading the revolutionary struggle of the working class.

The great-leader-style work method comprehensively enunciates concrete forms and methods in correctly organizing and mobilizing the mass struggle in different historical environments from the low stage to the high stage of the developing revolutionary struggle of the working class. Here are comprehensively included many-sided and rich work methods encompassing all the political, economic, cultural, and military areas such as the underground struggle method and lawful activity method, the violent struggle method and non-violent struggle method, the methods of administration construction and economic management and operation, etc.

The great-leader-style work method not only enunciates the mass guidance method in all stages of the revolution but comprehensively sets forth even the concrete methodology arising in mass leadership.

In the great-leader-style work method is comprehensively enunciated the correct methodology which makes it possible for the functionaries to successfully solve concrete questions arising in mass guidance from the methods of blueprinting, operational planning, and organizing and launching work to the methods of meeting people, talking with them, and heuristically teaching them.

Comprehensively enunciating the general principle and concrete work methodology arising in mass guidance in all areas of revolution and construction, in all stages of the revolution where a major part of the ground that the great-leader-style work method constitutes a universal communist leadership method is.

With a revolutionary work method created by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the party of the working class and the communists have come to have a revolutionary leadership method that meets the intrinsic demands of their activity and be able to successfully solve whatever difficult and complex questions arising in all stages, in all areas of revolution and construction as well.

Moreover, the revolutionary thought of the working class has come to be further developed and enriched as a revolutionary thought thoroughly complete not only with the theories on revolution and construction but even with the leadership method for embodying them and leading revolution and construction to victory.

Indeed the creation of the great-leader-style work method constitutes a great event which has provided a theoretical and practical weapon for most precisely solving all questions that arise in realizing revolutionary leadership for the masses.

The entire period in which the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has led our revolution along the one road of victory is a prideful journey in which he has created the communist work method and set brilliant examples of it, and a glorious history of having sagaciously led the Korean revolution.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, enunciating the precious truth of revolution in the course of organizing and leading the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle that the master of revolution is the masses of people and that if their creative power is organized and mobilized, there is nothing that cannot be done, created a work method relying on the masses of people, the anti-Japanese guerrilla work method.

The anti-Japanese guerrilla work method created amid the flames of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle is our party's traditional work method, and as such, constittutes a prototype of the great-leader-style work method.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, in the course of the difficult and complex revolutionary struggle in many stages of the revolution such as the postliberation anti-imperialist, antifeudalistic democratic revolution, the socialist revolution, and socialist construction, brilliantly embodied the traditional revolutionary work method and ceaselessly developed and perfected it.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, concretizing and developing the traditional work method which he had early on created, to suit the new demands of socialist construction, created the Ch'ongsan-ri spirit, the Ch'ongsan-ri method.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"The Ch'ongsan-ri spirit and the Ch'ongsan-ri method are our party's traditional revolutionary mass line concretized and developed to suit the new reality of socialsit construction." ("Kim Il-song Selected Works," Vol 4, 2d impression, p 298)

The Ch'ongsan-ri spirit, the Ch'ongsan-ri method holds as its prototype the anti-Japanese guerrilla work method permeated with the immortal chuche ideology and the revolutionary mass line based on it, which has been concretized and developed to suit the new reality of socialist construction.

The Ch'ongsan-ri spirit, the Ch'ongsan-ri method is a model of the great-leader-style work method where the unique thought and all revolutionary work methods created by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song regarding mass guidance are monoaxially synthesized.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, brilliantly embodying the chuche-oriented revolutionary leadership theory in the long period of leading revolution and construction to victory, has created a great exemplar of tested leadership art.

The leadership art which the great leader has uniquely created and personally set practical examples of it, covering matters ranging from the methods of blueprinting, operational planning, and organizing and launching work to the concrete question of bringing about a ceaseless upsurge in the revolutionary struggle, is a revolutionary leadership art which makes it possible to lead revolution and construction along an ever-victorious road.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, above all setting forth correct lines and guidelines and outstanding strategies and tactics, is brightly illuminating the road ahead for our revolution.

Socialist, communist construction is a process of creation and transformation where all questions must be solved anew. Only if correct lines and guidelines are enunciated, can the people victoriously work out the communist future with a firm faith in victory without any tilting whatever.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, perceiving in the simple voice of common workers and peasants the mature demands of the developing revolution and the earnest wishes of the people throughout the country, translates them into policies. In this way in our country what the people wish, what the people consider good is forthwith turned into policies and guidelines of the party and the state.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, also always going in deep among the masses of people and inspiring the inexhaustible strength of the masses, their revolutionary fervor and initiative, is sagaciously leading them to work ceaseless miracles and innovations in revolution and construction.

The tested leadership skills and organizational power of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song who goes forward to resolve the revolutionary tasks at hand lightning-quick, firmly believing the strength of the masses of people and setting them in motion, have become the decisive factor in leading our country's revolution and construction along the ever-victorious one road. It is precisely because the great leader, embodying the revolutionary mass line, goes forward to solve all questions by an all-party, all-people movement that in our country revolution and construction go well and numerous miraculous events occur one after another.

Also, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, every time heavy tasks arise before revolution and construction, always goes in among the masses of people, timely acquaints them with the plan and intent of the party, and boldly pushes ahead with the struggle for the realization with uncommon revolutionary launching power and stern will.

During such difficult postwar period the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song personally visited the working class of Kangson and energetically inspired them to majestic struggle for carrying through our party's chuche-oriented socialist economic construction line, acquainting them in detail with the difficult situation of the country, the demands of the revolution, the party's determination and telling them that we only had the main force of our revolution to trust, the working class.

Because of the presence of the consummate leadership of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, who is always with the people, confronts all barriers head on together with them and leads revolution and construction to a ceaseless upsurge, we have always been able to win brilliant victories, be it in the postwar rehabilitation and reconstruction conducted clearing the ashes, or in the struggle to carry out economic construction and national defense construction simultaneously, or in the battle of great socialist construction.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, kindling innovation at one unit and generalizing it countrywide, is sagaciously leading the way to have new miracles and feats happen ceaselessly in all areas. The great leader, discovering a budding innovation at a small nameless local factory in the course of his on-the-spot guidance, initiated the "machine tool-begets-machine tool movement" which brought forth a massive corps of machines, and through the struggle to generalize the experiences of Ch'angsong and Pukch'ong, led the way to make the whole country blossom into an El Dorado of mountains of gold and orchards.

Brilliant examples of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's consummate leadership method, leadership art, are seen intensively in his on-the-spot guidance.

In the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's on-the-spot guidance method are monoaxially synthesized the communist work method and consummate leadership art. The great leader, through his historic on-the-spot guidance for Ch'ongsan-ri not only graphically enunciated the direction of socialist agrarian construction and its concrete struggle tasks but set brilliant examples of a revolutionary work method and consummate leadership art for the functionaries, such as the method of going down to the base level and helping it, the method of ascertaining and analyzing the state of affairs and working out a concrete way of work, and the work method of giving priority to political work in all tasks and focusing strength on the central link.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song's on-the-spot guidance is reaching all regions of the country, all areas of revolution and construction, and every nook and corner of our people's life. There is no place in our country from Sosura, the northernmost point of the country to a small lonely island off the west coast which has not been imprinted with the blessed on-the-spot guidance of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song. The on-the-spot guidance of the respected and beloved leader who always opens up a road of victory at the helm of our revolution has written a new chapter of miracle and creation in history and given our people a rewarding and happy life.

Truly, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's tested consummate leadership art constitutes an inexhaustible source of strength victoriously leading revolution and construction.

The revolutionary mass leadership method created by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is being comprehensively carried forward and developed by our party today.

Our party, with a view to thoroughly embodying the great-leader-style work method partywide, laid down revolutionary guidelines such as the guidelines for conducting party work in manner of the Anti-Japanese Guerrillas, the guidelines for correctly establishing the party work methodology, and the guidelines for establishing an orderly work system for all functionaries to go down to the base level, and is sagaciously leading the struggle for the realization.

With the party's sagacious guidelines laid down for thoroughly embodying the great-leader-style work method, the chuche leadership theory and leadership method set forth by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song are being even more brilliantly carried forward and developed, and the leader's thought and leadership have come to be more brilliantly embodied partywide and societywide.

As a result of the great-leader-style work method brilliantly embodied under the sagacious leadership of the party, a basic change is occurring in our party work.

The militant functions and roles of all party organizations have come to be enhanced more than at any time and an orderly party work system with primary emphasis on work with people thoroughly established within the party.
By the new party work system the old conventional work method has come to be thoroughly overcome, the work system thoroughly established whereby the functionaries of higher units deeply penetrate the realities and substantively help base-level functionaries, and a basic turnaround brought about in functionaries' work style as well.

As a new change occurs in party work, the process of revolutionarily remaking our society is being extraordinarily expedited and people's mental and moral features also are changing beyond recognition.

Today our people, entrusting all their destiny to the party, are infinitely trusting and following the party, and absolutely supporting and protecting the lines and policies of the party, are struggling, devoting their all, for the realization.

All of our people are brimming with a fiery resolve to protect and defend the party politicoideologically and at the risk of their lives, whatever the storm and trial, and share destiny with the party to the end.

All this graphically proves the correctness and inexhaustible vitality of the great-leader-style work method.

Thoroughly embodying the great-leader-style work method is an important guarantee for energetically hastening the cause for conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology.

Converting the whole society to the chuche ideology is the overall duty of our revolution and the first great revolution for completely realizing the independent stand and attitude of the masses of working people. This is a very difficult and complex struggle, an unfamiliar task that has to chart a path never before walked by anyone.

If we are to energetically lead this historic cause, we must strengthen more than at any time the leadership role of our party which is the heart of the society and a great driving force for the revolution.

Our party's sagacious leadership is a firm guarantee for accomplishing generation after generation to the end our revolution which has been charted and developed under the banner of the chuche ideology.

Only under the tested leadership of our party can our people reunify the divided fatherland and win the complete victory of socialism and ultimately attain brilliantly the cause for conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology.

If the party's leadership role is to be strengthened, it is imperative to ceaselessly improve the party work method.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"Only by ceaselessly improving the method of party work is it possible to successfully carry through the lines and policies of the party and thoroughly unite the broad masses around the party." (Booklet "Summing-Up Report on the Work of the Central Committee to the Sixth Congress of the Korean Workers Party," p 123)

Ceaselessly improving the party work method is an important task to turn ours into a party vibrant and powerful in combat might and a firm guarantee for correctly insuring the leadership of the party.

Only by ceaselessly improving the party work method to suit the demands of conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology is it possible to strengthen and develop ours into an even more revolutionary and militant party and brilliantly discharge the overall duty of the party for remolding man, society, and nature in accordance with the demands of chuche.

All party organizations, thoroughly embodying the great-leader-style work method, must strive to even more thoroughly establish a revolutionary work system and order within the party and make the revolutionary spirit of unconditionally accepting and carrying through the the decisions and directives of the party to the end prevail partywide.

Only if the whole party becomes a militant column moving in unison in accordance with one ideological will, is it possible to embody even better the thought of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the intent of the party in all areas and energetically hasten the cause for conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology.

Party organizations, firmly giving priority to political work in all tasks in accordance with the demands of the great-leader-style work method, must energetically organize and mobilize the broad masses in fulfilling revolutionary tasks, and move and set in motion all party members and working people by means of moving one who in turn moves ten who in turn move a hundred who in turn move a thousand and so on.

To penetrate the realities all the time, teach the base-level people with kindness and substantively help them is an important work attitude and life-style that our functionaries must possess.

The functionaries must go deeply into the bubbling realities, and breathing together with the masses, discuss with them the ways to carry out revolutionary tasks, have pending questions solved with timliness, and energetically lead the masses by setting personal examples.

At the same time, they must approach the masses magnanimously with a motherly feeling and warmly lead them, and must live a simple, frugal life anytime anywhere as do the people.

The immediate struggle task arising before our party and people today in converting the whole society to the chuche ideology is winning the complete victory of socialism.

Energetically launching the struggle to occupy the new 10 major prospective targets of socialist economic construction set forth by the Sixth Party Congress has great significance in laying sound material and techncial foundations consistent with the completely victorious socialist society and in epochally improving the material and cultural standards of living for the people.

At present the whole party and the entire people have vigorously launched in unison into a rewarding all-out march movement, loyally upholding the new prospective targets and this year's militant tasks. The revolutionary fervor of our party members and working people who have launched into the new rewarding battle is very high and their fighting spirit is also very good. The question is: How will our functionaries who are in the driver's seat of the revolution organize and command today's rewarding all-out march? Only if our functionaries revolutionarily improve their work method and spiritedly, ably organize the battle to suit the heightened spirit of the masses, can they energetically accelerate today's all-out march and ceaselessly bring about new miracles and innovations on all fronts of socialist construction.

Today our party earnestly calls upon the guidance functionaries of all branches, all units, to energetically accelerate the all-out march with bold operational planning, able command, and energetic political work, thoroughly embodying the great-leader-style work method.

Bold operational planning, able command, energetic political work--this is an important demand our functionaries must tightly grasp in embodying the great-leader-style work method in the present period.

All guidance functionaries, setting high struggle goals the way the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song early on set brilliant examples, must boldly launch all tasks, ably organize and command battle to suit existing situation, and spiritedly launch political work that strikes deep chords among the masses. In this way they must make the entire people positively launch into the new all-out march with a firm faith and exuberant fighting spirit and the fire of great revolutionary upswing dynamically blaze on every battlefield of socialist construction.

Even more thoroughly embodying the great-leader-style work method whose correctness and invincible vitality have been proved through life is where a firm guarantee for our functionaries to acquit themselves fully of their duties and energetically accelerate today's all-out march is.

By more deeply mastering and thoroughly embodying the great-leader-style work method all functionaries shall bring about a ceaseless upsurge in socialist construction and energetically hasten the cause for conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology.

REVOLUTIONARY CAMARADERIE AND ETHICS HIGHLY DISPLAYED ON THE ROAD OF THE GLORIOUS CHUCHE CAUSE

Pyongyang KULLOJA in Korean No 4, Apr 81 pp 37-44

[Article by Paek Hak-nim]

[Text] More than half a century has elapsed since the chuche revolutionary cause was charted under the sagacious leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song.

The chuche revolutionary cause charted by the great leader is a sacred revolutionary cause to realize the independent stand and attitude of the masses of working people and a glorious revolutionary cause to build and perfect the communist society, the supreme ideal of mankind.

On the road of attaining the glorious chuche revolutionary cause the Korean communists and people have always struggled united on the basis of revolutionary camaraderie and ethics and won brilliant victories.

The entire journey of the Korean revolution, which has opened up a new era in history with the banner of the great chuche ideology held high, is a prideful travel where revolutionary camaraderie and ethics have been displayed on the loftiest plane.

The strength of the leader and soldiers of revolution, the leader and the people, solidly united in lofty camaraderie and ethics--precisely because of the presence of this great strength the Korean revolution, overcoming all kinds of barriers and trials encountered on the road of its forward movement, has been able to walk the one road of pressing hard on the hells of the enemy.

The unity and solidarity of ideological will of the revolutionary ranks based on revolutionary camaraderie and ethics is an important guarantee for victory of the revolution.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"If victory is to be won in revolution, many peopie must participate in the revolutionary struggle, and unity and solidarity among them must be insured. Genuine unity and solidarity among the people participating in revolutionary tasks is achieved on the basis of revolutionary camaraderie." ("Kim Il-song Selected Works," Vol 6, pp 504-505)

The revolutionary struggle begins with the combination of people sharing the same thought and mind.

Only if there exists a strong revolutionary organization formed with people sharing the same thought and mind and members of the organization achieve solid unity and solidarity of ideological will based on revolutionary camaraderie and ethics, is it possible to win brilliant victory in the revolutionary struggle.

For the people who have embarked on the road to revolution, there is nothing more precious than their comrades. In human relations, love for parents, wife and children, love between brothers, love between close friends are of course important, but no matter how deep and precious such love is, it cannot be compared with comradely love.

People fighting revolution can live away from their parents, wives, and children, but cannot live for a moment away from their comrades. The love between revolutionary comrades enables them to dearly engrave in their hearts political life which is more precious than physical life, glorify it, and fight to the end in the glorious revolutionary ranks.

Within the revolutionary ranks there could be phony comrades dreaming different dreams with different ideas. Between phony comrades there could be no genuine comradely love and ethics nor could genuine unity and solidarity be achieved. History of the people's revolutionary struggle, history of the communist movement teaches numerous blood lessons of excruciating pains caused by phony comrades unfaithful to camaraderie and ethics, betrayers of the revolution.

The nationalist movement and the early communist movement in our country, too, on account of acts of betrayal by phony comrades and degerates who had sneaked into their ranks and of the power struggle among those who outwardly kept step but secretly entertained different ideas, had to go through terrible trials.

Patriots and like-minded people had embarked on breaking the chains of oppression but because there was no outstanding leader who would lead the Korean revolution to victory, they were unable to find their way and had to shed blood in vain and were torn asunder in the absence of a center for unity, even though they had wanted to unite themselves in one revolutionary column.

In precisely such a tormenting period the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song took the helm of the revolution and the Korean revolution made a new beginning and the history of genuine camaraderie and ethics began.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song founded the immortal chuche ideology, early taking the helm of the Korean revolution, and as he was charting a new road to the Korean revolution under its banner, devoted his all to bringing up one by one revolutionary comrades sharing the same thought and mind, and put all his energy into achieving the unity and solidarity of the revolutionary ranks based on revolutionary camaraaderie and ethics.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song who, illuminating the road ahead for the Korean revolution with his uncommon wisdom and sagacious leadership, charts the glorious chuche revolutionary cause and brings up all the people in his inifinitely benevolent bosom of love, is the great leader for whom our people have waited thousands of years in history, the most respected and adored comrade and teacher of the communists and the people.

So it was that those concerned with the destiny of the country and the nation and aiming for a genuine revolution--hot-blooded youths, patriots and like-minded people in the country and in far-off foreign lands--converged on where the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song was, crossing the death line and completely entrusting all their destiny and the future of the revolution to the great leader.

Korea's young communists and people, with fiery convictions from the bottom of their hearts, loyally revered and followed Comrade Kim Il-song the young general as the sun of the revolution, as the center for unity, and solidly united around the leader, went forward to stoutly fight along the one road of chuche.

Thus emerged satellites of the Korean revolution around the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song as the sun and the invincible unity and solidarity of the revolutionary ranks resting on revolutionary camaraderie and ethics centered on the leader.

The Korean communists and people from that time when they began loyally attending the great Comrade Kim Il-song as the leader of the revolution have formed the loftiest comradely relations in history on the one road of revolution charted and led by the leader and kept on highly displaying the flower of revolutionary camaraderie and ethics.

The revolutionary camaraderie and ethics deeply engraved in the hearts of the Korean communists and people and the unity and solidarity of ideological will of the revolutionary ranks based thereon have been the source of invincible strength pushing our revolution along the one road of victory and glory.

The Korean communists and people, by going forward to fight solidly united in one ideological will based on revolutionary camaraderie and ethics under the sagacious leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, were able to win brilliantly victory, courageously overcoming all kinds of barriers and trials in the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle, the most arduous and formidable struggle unprecedented in history.

Our people, by inheriting in toto the beautiful virtue of revolutionary camaraderie and ethics highly displayed in anti-Japanese days and by fighting solidly united as one around the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, were able to brilliantly carry out the task of the democratic revolution in a short period of time even such difficult and complex environment following liberation and to display before the whoel world the heroic vigor of the Korean people, vanquishing the U.S. imperialist aggressors vaunted as "the mightiest in the world" in the formidable Fatherland Liberation War.

Because of the presence of unity of ideological will and revolutionary solidarity based on revolutionary camaraderie and ethics, our people were able to erect a socialist paradise from the ground up, smashing at every step of the way the machinations of the antiparty, counterrevolutionary factional elements and transform our country into a socialist power of self-dependence, self-support and self-defense.

Truly, our revolution's one-half-century history is a prideful history in which genuine unity and solidarity of the revolutionary ranks has been formed resting on revolutionary camaraderie and ethics centered on the great leader and by its might the chuche revolutionary cause has been brilliantly victorious.

The entire journey of the Korean revolution is a travel of glory in which revolutionary camaraderie and ethics centered on the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song have been displayed on the loftiest plane.

The revolutionary camaraderie and ethics displayed by the late revolutionary fighters in the 20 long years of the arduous anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle, beginning with the young communists in the dawning period of the Korean revolution; and the revolutionary camaraderie and ethics displayed by the Korean communists and people on the road of revolution never before walked by anyone, carrying forward the brilliant tradition from liberation to this day--this is an epic of comradely love and ethics that can only be achieved by genuine revolutionaries and people receiving the leadership of an outstanding leader.

Throughout the journey of attaining the chuche cause have been highly displayed among our revolutionary ranks the loftiest revolutionary camaraderie and ethics where the leader firmly believes his soldiers and people and for their part, his soldiers and people believe, follow, and unswervingly attend none but the leader; the beautiful communist virtue of the sincerest and warmest comradely love and ethics where they share blood and even unhesitatingly offer their lives for the sake of revolutionary comrades.

The history of the communist movement tells many beautiful stories of revolutionary camaraderie and ethics but knows of no instance of such lofty, sincere, warm camaraderie and ethics as the camaraderie and ethics displayed by the Korean communists and people on such a lofty plane on the road of struggle to attain the chuche cause.

What makes the revolutionary camaraderie and ethics displayed among the Korean communists and people the loftiest, the sincerest, the warmest lies in that they have been achieved based on the immortal chuche ideology, a man-centered world view.

How deep, pure, and lofty the love and ethics between comrades are depends on the underlying ideological viewpoint and stand of the people. The viewpoint and stand toward revolutionary comrades constitute a basis determing the height, depth, and solidity of the comradely love and ethics.

The revolutionary camaraderie and ethics which the Korean communists and people have deeply engraved in their hearts and highly displayed rest on the great chuche ideology.

The great chuche ideology, based on the phisolosphical principle that man is the master of everything and resolves everything, gives the viewpoint that regards man as the most precious, that regards revolutionary comrades as the most precious.

The Korean communists and people, by thoroughly arming themselves with the great chuche ideology, have come to form comradely relations between themselves in firm kindred ties and display on a lofty plane the beautiful communist virtue of thoroughly observing comradely ethics.

What makes the revolutionary camaraderie and ethics highly displayed among the Korean communists and people the loftiest, the sincerest, the warmest especially lies in that they have been achieved based on the purest and cleanest of loyalty to the leader of the revolution, the rock-hard convictions and stern will to fight revolution to the end, loyally attending the leader and following his leadership.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"Only when the people receive the correct leadership of the leader can they score brilliant achievements in revolution and construction and walk the straight road of victory." ("A Collection of Documents on the Visits of the Great Leader Comrade Kim Il-song to Foreign Countries," p 67)

In the revolutionary struggle of the working class the leader plays the decisive role. The working class and the masses of people can score brilliant achievements in revolution and construction only when they receive the sagacious leadership of an outstanding leader.

Therefore, in order that the working class and the people may win victory in the revolutionary struggle, they must of necessity loyally attend an outstanding leader and acquit themselves fully of their loyalty to the leader.

This is the rock-hard creed and revolutionary ethics the Korean communists have bodily acquired amid their arduous struggle not only in terms of principle but also in terms of life.

In the dawning period of the revolution when there was neither the party nor political power and it was not known when the revolution would win, Korea's young communists had written and disseminated the immortal revolutionary hymn "The Star of Korea" loyally revering Comrade Kim Il-song, young general in his 20's, as the salvation star of national liberation, as the sun of the nation. This was not something anyone had forced them to do and moreover, it was not something they had done in anticipation of glory and fame that would come later. They did so because they had been convinced with all their hearts from the blood lesson of the early communist movement laden with turns and twists and from their personal life experience that only when loyally attending the respected and beloved Comrade Kim Il-song as the leader and going forward following the leader's leadership would they be able to bring about fatherland restoration and win the ultimate victory of the revolution.

The young communists, because of their infinite loyalty to the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, solemnly reaffirmed the oath of forever unchanging loaylty on the one road of revolution following the leader, and neither wavered nor degenerated in the slightest, however formidable the trials and adversities.

Because they were accomplished in their posture and stand attending the leader of the revolution, the late anti-Japanese revolutionary fighters had gathered in the Paektu forests, forsaking their personal comfort and their families, and launched the unprecedentedly arduous anti-Japanese bloody war, loyally attending the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song with all their hearts, and defended the command headquarters of the revolution at the risk of their lives every time it was endangered. Holding it as their lifetime wish to be buried in Paektu Mountain after death and depending on each other and loving each other solidly united around the great leader, they courageously cleared the bramble-filled road ahead for the revolution laden with trials.

The Korean revolutionaries and people regarded it as deserved moral ethics, lofty revolutionary duty to loyally attend the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song who, bringing the dawn of the revolution at a time when the dark cloud of a ruined country was heavily hanging over the mountains and rivers of the fatherland, bestowed on them precious political life. Precisely such being the case, they went forward to stouly fight, solidly united in one mind, in one will, around the leader, singing the immortal revolutionary hymn they had written themselves in praise of General Kim Il-song, the legendary hero of all time. Holding it as their rock-hard creed that they did not have the right even to die before carrying through the thoughts and orders of the great leader, they waded through sea of blood, sea of fire, and fought on, oberserving the revolutionary ethics as the leader's soldiers and shouting at the top of their lungs "Long Live General Kim Il-song!" even on the gallows.

The Korean communists, even as they were sleeping in the mountains and feeding on grass roots, never left the general's bosom, and holding it as their fiery creed to hang together, in life and death, along the one road of revolution the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song was leading, infinitely valued and loved revolutionary comrades and preserved their revolutionary ethics, the purity intact, whatever the storm and trial. Firmly believing each other and uniting with one another based on their infinite loyalty to the great leader, they braved the storms of revolution, and on that road, always thinking of comrades ahead of themselves, not only shared blood but unhesitatingly offered even their lives for the sake of their comrades.

Thus the entire journey of the Korean revolution has been brilliantly embroidered with beautiful stories of the loftiest, sincerest, warmest comradely love and ethics highly displayed based on the purest and cleanest of loyalty, forever unchanging faithfulness to the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song.

Such lofty, beautiful comradely love and ethics absolutely are not something that was formed and displayed spontaneously.

Great thought, great leadership, noble communist character alone begets great love and unites the revolutionary ranks in genuine comradely relations.

The basic factor that has made the Korean communists and people display revolutionary camaraderie and ethics on the loftiest plane throughout the journey of attaining the glorious chuche revolutionary cause lies in the great thought, leadership, and noble communist character of the respected and beloved leader Comre Kim Il-song.

As the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song embarked on the road to revolution at precisely such a time that all of the patriots and the people were thirsting for the emergence of an outstanding leader who would save the fate of the country and the nation in the tormenting period of the Japanese imperialist colonial rule when the misfortune and suffering of the nation had reached the apex and all the fellow countrymen were at a crossroads of life or death chained to colonial slavery, rebirth of the nation began dawning and a bright road ahead for the revolution came to be opened up.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song who, personally shouldering the destiny of the fatherland and the nation, took the helm of the revolution, founded with the uncommon wisdom beyond anyone's reach the immortal chuche ideology which is a revolutionary theory and man-centered world view for realizing the independent stand and attitude of the masses of working people, and clearly illuminated the road ahead for the Korean revolution, setting forth chuche revolutionary lines and guidelines.

The immortal chuche ideology founded by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is the unitarily correct guiding thought for revolution that has given light to the revolutionaries and people thrashing around unable to find their way and clearly illuminates the road ahead for the times, and the banner of struggle, the banner of unity that unites as one the communists and the people in the sacred revolutionary struggle for independent stand and attitude.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, uniting the Korean communists and people under the banner of the immortal chuche ideology, has charted the chuche revolutionary cause, and with consummate, tested leadership, led the Korean revolution along the one road of straight victory.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, because of the greatness of his thought and leadership, has come to enjoy the infinite trust of all fellow countrymen from the first day he took the helm of the revolution and command absolute leadership authority.

The Korean communists and people, revering the name of such great, illustrious young general Comrade Kim Il-song as a new star rising high in the eastern sky, as the sun, have loyally attended the great leader as the center for unity and solidarity, as the great slavation star of the Korean revolution.

In the course of loyally attending the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song as the center for unity and solidarity, as the sun of the nation, and victoriously hastening the chuche revolutionary cause following the sagacious leadership of the leader, the Korean communists and people have come to form kindred comradely relations centered on the great leader and highly display revolutionary camaraderie and ethics based on infinite loyalty to the leader.

The greatness of the leader of the working class lies in his noble communist character as well as in his consummate thought and leadership power. The leader's noble character constitutes a source of strength that solidly unites the communists and people in terms of ideological will, in terms of moral ethics.

To infinitely value and love revolutionary comrades and most thoroughly observe revolutionary ethics is the firm conviction and lofty character of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song with the noblest communist character has set great personal examples of revolutionary camaraderie and ethics throughout the period from the first day he embarked on the road to revolution to this day. The whole life of the respected and beloved leader as the comrade the revolutionaries most respect and adore, as the affectionate father of all people,is a history of great gracious love with which he has held in his infinitely broad and warm bosom and looked after the revolutionary soldiers and people.

The respected and beloved fatherly leader's comradely love and ethics--this is a great love that gives people an everlasting life.

For people, what is more precious than physical life is eternal political life. Political life that even parents cannot give, a life that lives eternally even after death, is one that only an outstanding leader can give.

It was all because of the presence of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's bosom of love higher than the sky and warmer than the sun that in the formidable period when the fate of the country and the nation had one foot in the coffin, the hot-blooded youths who had been thrashing around unable to find their way even though they had had the mind of achieving fatherland restoration, came to learn the truth of the revolution and have an everlasting life even after death on the genuine road of revolution, that the people who, chained to oppression, had been forced to live the life of blood and tears as slaves, came to understand the revolution of working out their destiny and display their glory eternally as revolutionaries, launching into the anti-Japanese bloody war.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Ilsong, embracing in his bosom, with the great love of his deeply held in anti-Japanese days, the workers and peasants who used to groan under lack of rights, obscurantism, and all kinds of mistreatment and humiliation in bygone days, has brought up all of them as the genuine master of the country, as reliable workers, and led them to wage a rewarding fight on the one road of chuche.

Our workers and peasants, who could not afford even crude hemp clothes and straw sandals in bygone days, have now become the master of the country in their own right and are enjoying a most happy and prideful life without envying anyone anything in the world. This is unthinkable apart from the familial love of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song.

Indeed so moving that it is difficult to hold back tears are the stories of the warm comradely love and lofty ethics of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kimil-song who, still remembering to this day even after the passage of so many years the sacrifice made by the revolutionary soldiers whom he had personally brought up during the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle and seeking out all of their bereaved children, is making them remember their parents and is leading the way to make the political life of the soldiers who departed this world first on the road of revolution, shine forever.

Although 30 years, 50 years has elapsed since revolutionary soldiers such as Ch'a Kwang-su, Kim Hyok, O Chung-hup, and Kim Ch'aek, departed the ranks while fighting side by side with him, the fatherly leader Comrade Kim Il-song still remembers them, and calling them one by one by their names and giving prominence to them as the epitome of genuine revolutionaries from whom our communists and people must learn, is directing his great concern so that their meritorious services may shine even more brilliantly together with the advancing revolution.

The history of human love is thousands of years old but such gracious, benevolent comradely love and ethics as the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's cannot be found in any page of the history.

It is because of the great love and leadership and warm familial love of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song that the revolutionary soldiers believing and following none but the fatherly leader have come to be born and to grow up into revolutionary ranks tens of millions strong and that the invincible unity and solidarity of the entire party and the whole society has come to be formed and consolidated where the great leader and the revolutionary soldiers and the people have been solidly united in unbreakable kindred ties and comradely relations.

Truly, the entire journey of the Korean revolution is a travel of glory that has shown with brilliant examples how the relations between the leader and the soldiers and the people should be formed and what the genuine revolutionary camaraderie and ethics should be.

The lofty revolutionary camaraderie and ethics highly displayed throughout the historical journey in which the chuche revolutionary cause has been charted and victorious, are being carried forward in toto and even more highly displayed today under the sagacious leadership of the glorious party on the new great march route toward conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology.

To resolutely defend and further strengthen generation after generation the unity and solidarity of our party resting on the revolutionary camaraderie and ethics achieved by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is none other than a glorious struggle to brilliantly carry forward and attain the leader's revolutionary cause.

It is the immutable creed and will of the glorious Party Center that it is imperative to achieve the unity of ideological will of the entire party and the whole society based on revolutionary camaraderie and ethics, wholeheartedly attend the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, and forever fully discharge loyalty to the leader.

The party has enunciated the iron truth that the comradely relations and ethics and comradely love formed on the road of revolution must be based on unswerving loyalty to the leader who is the brain behind the revolution and the center for unity and that only then is it possible to achieve the genuine unity and solidarity of ideological will. Based on this, our party is sagaciously leading the whole party and the entire people to learn from that spirit, that feature, the purity intact, formed at the time when genuine comradely relations were formed in our revolution for the first time and the new history of the loftiest revolutionary camaraderie and ethics began.

The party's firm determination and sagacious leadership have consolidated our people's comradely love and ethics one grade higher as sincere and revolutionary camaraderie and ethics.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"Truly, never before has there been a parallel to what goes on in our country today--the party believing the people, the people following the party, and the party and people, becoming one, confidently moving forward along the straight road of victory for revolution and construction." (Booklet "Summing-Up Report on the Work of the Central Committee to the Sixth Congress of the Korean Workers Party," p 10)

By the sagacious leadership of the glorious party the very ideological feelings of the lofty revolutionary camaraderie and ethics achieved centered around the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song amid the bloody struggle of the arduous anti-Japanese revolution are warmly pulsating today in every heart of party members and people, and the unity and solidarity of ideological will of the entire party and the whole society based on boundless faithfulness to the leader has been consolidated like bedrock on a new higher standard.

The party and the leader believing the people, the people following the party and the leader, the party and the people becoming one, and all members of society, solidly united, confidently moving forward--this is the revolutionary face and prideful reality of our country today.

Today our communists and people are unswervingly carrying forward and developing boundless faithfulness to the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and revolutionary ethics in upholding the party which is forever loyal to the leader's revolutionary cause.

It has its source in the greatness and gracious love of the glorious party that our party members and people, with an unswerving faith intent on upholding to the end the leadership of the party on the road of attaining the chuche cause, are highly displaying comradely love and ethics based on boundless loyalty to the party and the leader.

Our party, by setting forth the program for conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology and sagaciously leading the struggle for the realization with its consummate, tested leadership, has brightly illuminated the road ahead for the attainment of the chuche revolutionary cause generation after generation to the end, opened up a new historical era majestically moving forward toward the communist future, and ushered in the heyday of growth and prosperity unprecedented in the history of our fatherland and nation.

The glorious Party Center, faithfully personifying the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song's noble character, is bestowing infinite love and concern on our revolutionary soldiers and people to forever glorify the eternal political life provided them by the leader.

Truly, our glorious party is a steely party possessing a consummate, tested leadership power and invincible might capable of attaining to the end the chuche revolutionary cause charted by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, and our party's bosom is a revolutionary bosom where our own fate and that of posterity and the future of the fatherland are completely entrusted.

It is the indeflectible convictions and unswerving creed of our communists and people deeply engraved in their hearts through real life that because of the presence of the glorious party's sagacio9s leadership and bosom of great love we have our today's infinite glory and happiness and the bright communist future.

Precisely because of such convictions all of our party members and working people are dynamically hastening the cause for conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology, solidly united in revolutionary camaraderie and ethics based on firm convictions intent on protecting and defending the authority of the glorious Party Center in every way with the purest, cleanest, warmest of hearts and forever sharing life and death with the party.

The cause for conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology our party is leading--this is a continuation on a new higher stage of the chuche cause charted by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, and as such, the first great revolution moving forward toward communism.

In order to victoriously step up this great revolution and hasten the arrival of the communist future at an early date, it is imperative to resolutely defend and consolidate airtight our party's unity and solidarity oased on revolutionary camaraderie and ethics.

Revolutionary camaraderie and ethics must be based through and through on the purest and cleanest of loyalty to the party and the leader, and only then can they become genuinely pure, sincere and solid ones.

All party members and working people must faithfully learn from the brilliant examples of the revolutionary camaraderie and lofty ethics resting on unswerving loyalty to the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song so highly displayed by the first vanguard of the Korean revolution on the one road of revolution.

The beautiful virtue of revolutionary camaraderie and ethics highly displayed by the late anti-Japanese revolutionary fighters was established in the period when the genuine beginning of the Korean communist movement was being made under the leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and consolidated on the road of the most arduous revolutionary struggle; and precisely because of this, they are becoming so precious heritages and a mirror of struggle and life.

The revolutionary camaraderie displayed during the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle was comradely love hotter than fire formed between people prepared to share life and death for the sake of comrades, and a source that literally turned comradely relations into the crystallization of ideological will. This was also the resolute revolutionary spirit that made them protect and defend the command headquarters of the Korean revolution with their lives, and the inexhaustible moral motive power that enabled them to attain the historic cause of fatherland restoration, wading through the anti-Japanese sea of blood, sea of fire.

Brilliantly carrying forward the precious tradition of revolutionary camaraderie established during the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle and holding the rock-hard convictions as did the late anti-Japanese revolutionary fighters forever loyal to the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song that we know none but the party and the leader, whatever the environement and condition, we must completely entrust all our destiny to the party and the leader and with the one mind of the purest and cleanest of loyalty, must firmly believe, follow, and forever loyally uphold the party and the leader.

By loyally upholding the leadership of the glorious party and continuing to highly display the revolutiolnry camaraderie and ethics based on forever unswerving faithfulness, we shall further consolidate like bedrock the steely unity and solidarity of the entire party and the whole society and hasten the ultimate victory of the chuche cause.

Invincible is the strength of our party and our people going forward to fight solidly united in the loftiest revolutioanry camaraderie and ethics, following the sagacious leadership of the party.

THE UNITY AND SOLIDARITY OF THE WHOLE PARTY AND THE ENTIRE PEOPLE SOLIDLY UNITED AROUND THE GREAT LEADER IS THE DECISIVE GUARANTEE FOR THE VICTORY OF OUR REVOLUTION

Pyongyang KULLOJA in Korean No 4, Apr 81 pp 45-51

[Article by Mun Song-sul]

[Text] Today the unity and solidarity of our party and people has been brilliantly realized on the loftiest plane ever in the history of the communist movement.

The unity and solidarity of the whole party and the entire people consolidated airtight amid the flames of the arduous and formidable revolution is the most precious gain of the revolution won under the sagacious leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and our party.

Because of the presence of such unity and solidarity possessing invincible might, our party and people have been able to win victory and move forward along the one road of chuche, breaking through all kinds of storm and trial. For our people, this is a great national honor and pride.

Protecting like the apple of the eye and ceaselessly consolidating and developing the unity and solidarity of the whole party and the entire people provided by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and further consolidated like bedrock by our party is where a firm guarantee for the ultimate attainment of the chuche cause is.

Strengthening and developing the unity and solidarity of the whole party and the entire people in every way is one of the basic questions arising in attaining the revolutionary cause of the working class, the communist cause, to the end.

The revolutionary task of the working class for socialism, communism, gets realized through an arduous and complex struggle over a long period of time. If the working class and the masses of people are to always win victory and move forward on the arduous road of revolution, it is imperative to realize the unity and solidarity of ideological will centered on the leader. Only the party of the working class which has achieved firm unity and solidarity with the leader's revolutionary thought as the unitary guiding thought, can acquit itself fully of its mission and role as political staff of the revolution; and only the masses of people who are thoroughly armed with the leader's revolutionary thought and organized based on it, can victoriously work out their destiny.

Thoroughly consolidating the unity and solidarity of the whole party and the entire people solidly united around the leader arises as an even more urgent demand as the revolutionary struggle and construction tasks deepen and develop.

As the socialist, communist cause advances, difficult and enormous revolutionary duties come to arise before the party of the working class and the people to thoroughly defend gains of the revolution from the sabotage machinations of all kinds of class enemies and ceaselessly consolidate and develop them.

Only if the party of the working class goes forward to strengthen and develop the unity and solidarity of the revolutionary ranks, can it victoriously move the revolutionary struggle and construction tasks forward, breaking through all the storms and trials encountered on the road of revolution, and attain generation after generation to the end the revolutionary cause charted by the leader.

Today in our country under the sagacious leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song the politicoideological unity and revolutionary solidarity of the whole party and the entire people have been realized brillaintly on a high standard, which are becoming most solid with greatest vitality.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"Today the unity and solidarity of our party have reached a new higher level. The entire party stands airtight centered around the Party Central Committee and solidly united in ideological will on the basis of the chuche ideology." (Booklet "Summing-Up Report on the Work of the Central Committee to the Sixth Congress of the Korean Workers Party," p 104)

...e invincibility of the unity and solidarity of our party and people which have reached a new higher level unprecedented in the history of our party and people lies above all in that they are based on our people's absolute trust in and boundless faithfulness to the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song.

It is our people's indeflectible creed and will deeply engraved in their hearts in the course of the arduous revolutionary struggle that they infinitely trust the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and forever acquit themselves fully of their loyalty to him.

Only because they did not have an outstanding leader to attend in bygone days, our people had to go through bitter twists and turns in the revolutionary struggle and were forced to live the colonial slave life of blood and tears.

Only when they came to attend the respected and beloved Comrade Kim Il-song as the great leader, our people were able to usher in a new era of fulfilling struggle and forward movement, putting an end to the long history of suffering and become a most dignified and proud people building an independent and creative life in the socialist fatherland of chuche.

Indeed, apart from the sagacious leadership and broad bosom of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, today's prosperous fatherland and our people's infinite happiness, glory, and bright future are unthinkable. So it is that our people hold it as their immutable creed to forever revere and follow the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, and entrusting all destiny to the leader, acquit themselves fully of their loyalty in attaining the chuche revolutionary cause charted and still being led by the leader. Because our people hold such fiery loyalty to and infinite trust in the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the politicoideological unity of the whole party and the entire people united with the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song at the center is the most solid unity and solidarity possessing invincible might.

The solidity of the unity and solidarity of our party and people lies in that they are based on the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's revolutionary thought, the chuche ideology.

The unity and solidarity of the revolutionary ranks, only when based on a great guiding thought leading revolution and construction to victory, can become the most solid with the greatest vitality.

The unity and solidarity of our party and people are the most pure and solid unity and solidarity firmly united in ideological will on the basis of the immortal chuche ideology, the genuine revolutionary world view of the working class and the guiding thought of revolution. Today our party members and working people are thinking and acting in accordance with the demands of the chuche ideology, holding the chuche ideology as their firm creed, and are living and struggling on the firm stand and viewpoint that they know none but the chuche ideology. Thus the whole country has literally become a unified body of ideological will pulsating with the chuche ideology, an organic body possessing an everlasting life force.

The entire party and the whole society breathing in unison based on the chuche ideology and speaking and acting as one is precisely where the solidity of the unity and solidarity of our party and people solidly united around the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is.

The invincibility of our people's politicoideological unity and solidarity also lies in that the party and the masses of people have formed unbreakable kindred ties.

The party is the pioneer of people's destiny and the guiding force leading the masses of people to victory. The destiny of the party and the masses of people is always one. The masses of people, only when they receive the leadership of the party, can independently and creatively work out their destiny as the master in command of history. Only if the party, striking its roots deep among the masses of people, receives the positive support of the masses and thoroughly relies on them, can it have invincible might.

Historical experience shows that when such kindred ties as would make the party and the people share destiny are not formed, the genuine unity and solidarity of of the party cannot be achieved and in the end, the very existence of the party itself cannot be sustained.

Our party, establishing correct lines and policies precisely reflecting the aims and demands of the masses of people, is sagaciously organizing and leading the struggle for the realization, and protects people's political life, always directing deep concern for their happy material and cultural life. Our people, confidently seeing their bright future in the sagacious leadership of the party, infinitely trust and follow our party, and completely entrusting all their destiny to the party, are displaying incomparable devotion and sacrificial spirit in carrying through the lines and policies of the party.

It is our people's firm convictions and will that apart from the party, they could neither live nor be happy, and so is our party's stand that apart from the people, it could neither sustain its own existence nor lead the revolution.

The unbreakable kindred ties of the party and the masses of people--precisely herein lies the basic source that makes the unity and solidarity of our party and the entire people most solid and invincible with the greatest vitality that nothing could break.

The unity and solidarity of our party and people solidly united around the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song are also most powerful because they have been formed amid the flames of the arduous revolutionary struggle and consolidated in the course of breaking through trials of the revolution.

The unity and solidarity of our party and people are not something that was handily formed in a smooth and peaceful environment. They struck their viable roots amid the arduous anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle and have been thoroughly consolidated amid dynamic practical struggle in the two stages of socialist revolution and socialist construction.

Truly, the unity and solidarity of our party and people are unity and solidarity based on their fiery loyalty absolutely trusting and following the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the most solid and pure unity and solidarity firmly cemented in one ideological will amid the flames of arduous struggle.

The politicoideological unity and solidarity of our party and people are reaching a new higher standard amid the sacred historic march toward conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology, and are being dynamically consolidated into the permanent and unchanging for generations to come.

Today amid the struggle to convert the whole society to the chuche ideology under the sagacious leadership of the Party Center, the entire party and the whole society are being organized even more thoroughly into the ranks of revolution's pure nuclear elements fighting with total devotion of body and mind for the ultimate victory of the chuche cause, into a solidly united single force of chuche-oriented revolutionaries forever faithful to the party and the leader.

The old revolutionaries who have been protecting and defending the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song politicoideologically and at the risk of their lives, the longtime party members and functionaries who have been resolutely walking the road of revolution from the first day of the founding of the party, and the entire people have been solidly united with none but the respected and beloved leader's revolutionary thought held as their unitary creed.

Because of the presence of the invincible might of the unity and solidarity of the party and the people energetically pushing ahead with revolution and construction solidly united around the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, our party, admirably carrying out revolutionary tasks in many stages amid the flames of the formidable revolution, has been able to erect an energetic, dignified socialist power of self-dependence, self-support, and self-defense as it exists today, and achieve the unending growth and prosperity of our fatherland nation.

Because they had the strength of unity and solidarity solidly united around the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, our people were able to brilliantly defend the independence and glory of the fatherland, vanquishing the U.S. imperialists vaunted as "the mightiest" in the world, and cleared the ashes of the war and worked the miracle of the century of successfully realizing socialist industrialization in the short span of no more than 14 years, fueling the sweeping flames of revolutionary upswing and smashing the gibberish of the enemies that Korea would never be able to rise again in a hundred years.

Because of the presence of the strength of unity and solidarity of the whole party and the entire people solidly united around the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, we have been able to crush at every step of the way the U.S. imperialist machinations to provoke another war. When the U.S. imperialists militarily threatened our republic, creating the incident of the armed spy ship "Pueblo," the incident of spy plane "EC-121," and the "Panmunjom incident," we were able to deal them bitter ignominious defeats with the invincible strength of unity and solidarity solidly united around the party and the leader without the slightest wavering.

The invincible strength of unity and solidarity of our party and people has also been displayed to the hilt in the nature-remaking projects, projects for the ages, set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, and in achieving a ceaseless upsurge in agricultural production year after year, overcoming the effects of the cold fronts which have been sweeping the world.

It is also because of the presence of the invincible strength of unity and solidarity of our party and people solidly united around the Party Central Committee headed by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song that today in our country's socialist construction an astounding march pace is being constantly maintained, everywhere monumental structures are being erected one after another glorifying the Workers Party era, and with The Three Revolutions--ideological, technological, and cultural--energetically stepped up amid the flames of an all-people mass movement, the cause for conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology is being successfully pushed.

Truly invincible is the strength of unity and solidarity of our party and people consolidated airtight by the sagacious leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the energetic guidance of the glorious Party Center.

The great victory and achievement scored in the struggle for the politicoideological unity and solidarity of the whole party and the entire people are the brilliant fruition of the sagacious leadership of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the energetic struggle of the party.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, viewing it from the first days he set out on the road to revolution as one of the basic questions for victory of the revolution to achieve the unity and solidarity of the revolutionary ranks, has sagaciously led the struggle for the realization.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"Our party, by steadfastly struggling to strengthen the unity and solidarity of the party from the first day of its founding, has firmly established the unitary ideology system within the party and realized the bedrock unity and solidarity of the whole party." ("Kim Il-song Selected Works," Vol 7, p 263)

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, based on his priceless experience gained in achieving the unity and solidarity of the revolutionary ranks during the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle, has sagaciously led the struggle to realize the unity and solidarity of the whole party and the entire people.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, by embodying the great chuche ideology and setting forth a unique thought and theory regarding the unitary ideology system of the party, has illuminated the road to firmly realizing the organizational and ideological unity and solidarity of the ranks, which are the life of the party, and made it possible to energetically hasten the revolutionary cause, preserving the purity of the revolutionary ranks and creating powerful chuche revolutionary forces.

Establishing the unitary ideology system of the party is the decisive guarantee that makes it possible to ceaselessly consolidate and develop the unity and solidarity of the party as an organized unit of the working class and thoroughly establish a steely revolutionary discipline and order within the party. This makes the politicoideological unity of the revolutionary ranks realized based on the leader's revolutionary thought and the whole society move as one body under the leader's unitary leadership.

With the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song setting it forth as an invariable principle of party ideological work to strengthen the indoctrination of party members and working people in the party's unitary ideology, the chuche ideology, to suit the demands of the developing revolution and leading the way to energetically push ahead with it, our party has achieved solid unity and solidarity in terms of organization, in terms of ideological will, based on the immortal chuche ideology, and a steely revolutionary discipline and order have come to be established partywide and societywide.

In the struggle of our party to achieve the unity and solidarity of the whole party and the entire people it arose as a particularly important question to oppose flunkeyism and dogmatism, thoroughly establish chuche, defend the purity of the revolutionary ranks, and overcome factionalism and opportunism.

The more complex the internal and external environments of the party and the revolution and the more fierce and arduous the revolutionary struggle, the higher the revolutionary banner of unity and solidarity of the whole party and the entire people held, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song sagaciously led all party members and working people to the struggle to smash the machinations of antiparty, counterrevolutionary factional elements.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, by leading the way to conduct the struggle against factionalism, flunkeyism, dogmatism, revisionism in combination with the struggle to establish chuche, has made it possible to thoroughly overcome all antiparty, counterrevolutionary ideological currents and at the same time, successfully push ahead with the task to thoroughly arm the whole party and the entire people with our party's unitary ideology, the chuche ideology.

Thoroughly liquidating the factional filth which historically had inflicted normous harm on the revolutionary movement was a historic task that could not be put off any longer in realizing the unity and solidarity of the whole party and the entire people centerd on the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and an urgent demand for moving revolution and construction forward.

The factional elements had persistently plotted against the party from the first day of the founding of the party. Every time the party was going through a most difficult trial, the scoundrels came out in frontal opposition to the lines and policies of the party and viciously maneuvered to cause alienation of the party and the masses.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, timely seeing through the antiparty, antistate plots of the factional elements, focused the major attack on factionalism, and setting party organizations and the mass of party members in motion, energetically led a partywide ideological struggle to liquidate the lingering effects of the counterrevolutionary ideological toxin spread by the antiparty factional elements.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, leading the way to strictly adhere to the principle of attacking the active and embracing the passive in the struggle against factionalism and opportunism, made it possible to conclusively smash the machinations of the antiparty factional elements on the one hand and thoroughly liquidate the lingering effects of the ideological toxin spread by the scoundrels.

Thus the factional filth and all kinds of opportunist elements who had long inflicted enormous harm on our country's communist movement came to be liquidated in a clean sweep and the organizational and ideological purity of the revolutionary ranks firmly insured, and the politicoideological unity and solidarity of the whole party and the entire people based on the chuche ideology have come to be more thoroughly consolidated.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song also led the way to conduct the struggle to overcome and liquidate all kinds of antiparty, counterrevolutionary ideological currents such as factionalism and insure the unity and solidarity of the party in close combination with the practical struggle to bring about one great upsurge in socialist construction. Every time a difficult trial confronted the party and the revolution, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, by always firmly believing the masses of people and going in among them and energetically inspiring party members and working people, made the fire of a great revolutionary upswing blaze in production and construction and a resolute counterblow dealt to the machinations of the factional elements and opportunists.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song led the way to energetically launch the struggle against all kinds of antiparty, counterrevolutionary ideological currents on the one hand and strengthening indoctrination in the party's unitary ideology, the chuche ideology, among party members and working people, made them highly display the revolutionary spirit of unconditionally accepting and carrying through the lines and policies of the party to the end.

Thus under the sagacious leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song all kinds of opportunist filth such as factionalism which had been historically active were liquidated, and the unity and solidarity of the whole party and the entire people, which the Korean communists had so wanted to see, was at last completely realized.

The history of the unity and solidarity of our party and people has been a journey of prideful victory in which the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, clearing the formidable road of the revolutionary struggle and going through multilayer barriers and trials with his tested leadership, has crushed all the aggression and sabotage machinations of internal and external enemies.

The unity and solidarity achieved by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song today are being consolidated even more solidly by the energetic guidance of our party and are being brilliantly defended generation after generation.

Our glorious party is leading the way to ceaselessly deepen the task with a tight grip on it as the main line for establishing the unitary ideology system of the party with primary emphasis on indoctrination in faithfulness to the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song among party members and working people with a view to further strengthening the politicoideological unity and solidarity of the party and the people to suit the realistic demands of the developing revolution wherein the cause for conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology has come to the fore.

Tightly grasping it as an important principled question in protecting, defending, and attaining to the end the revolutionary cause charted by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song to struggle to defend and further strengthen generation after generation the politicoideological unity and purity of the revolutionary ranks, our party is also sagaciously leading the way to ceaselessly deepen this task.

Thus the unity and solidarity of our party and people achieved through the sharp and incisive struggle against internal and external enemies and all sorts of opportunists are precious gains of the revolution won solely by the sagacious leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the energetic guidance of the Party Center.

The invincible unity and solidarity of the whole party and the entire people solidly united around the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song constitute a firm guarantee for the ultimate attainment of the chuche cause.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"Today our country's working people are one and all thoroughly armed with the chuche ideology and solidly united around the party in one mind, in one will. This is the most precious achievement we have scored and the decisive guarantee for a new victory in the revolutionary struggle and construction tasks." ("Answers to Questions Posed by Foreign Journalists," Vol 2, p 51)

The airtight unity and solidarity of our party and people possessing invincible might above all make it possible to unswervingly defend our party's chuche character.

The party of the working class is a political weapon for realizing its leader's revolutionary thought.

To say that the party of the working class defends its revolutionary character means essentially to protect and defend the revolutionary thought of its leader who has founded the party and go forward to attain to the end the revolutionary cause charted by the leader. If the party is to defend its revolutionary character and discharge its historic mission, it is imperative tthat the entire party must think and act as one, holding the leader's revolutionary thought as its immutable guiding ideology and forever based on the leader's revolutionary thought. Otherwise, ideas contrary to the leader's revolutionary thought will be encouraged within the party, ideological chaos and disorder spawned, the combat strength of the party paralyzed, and it will become impossible to sustain the very existence of the party itself.

It constitutes a firm guarantee for our party to resolutely protect and defend the leader's thought generation after generation and attain the chuche revolutionary cause to the end that the whole party and the entire people have been firmly united airtight around the Party Central Committee headed by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song.

With the unity and solidarity of our party and people brilliantly realized on the highest standard our party has come to be further strengthened and developed as a glorious revolutionary party forever continuing the chuche bloodline, and the organizational and ideological cornerstones consolidated like bedrock for attaining the chuche revolutionary cause to the end. This is the most precious achievement our party and people have scored, and bespeaks that the basic question influencing the future destiny of the party and the revolution has been brilliantly solved in our country.

It also makes it possible to thoroughly defend the immortal revolutionary achievements scored by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and glorify them for tens of thousands of generations to come that the unity and solidarity of our party and people have been realized like bedrock.

Defending and glorifying the revolutionary achievements scored by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song constitutes an important part of the content of the task to carry forward and attain the chuche revolutionary cause charted by the leader.

The revolutionary cause of the working class gets attained in the course of protecting and defending, carrying forward and developing the revolutionary achievements scored by its leader.

Faithfulness of the party of the working class to the revolutionary cause charted by its leader is intensively expressed precisely in resolutely protecting and defending the revolutionary achievements of its leader. Only when the whole party and the entire people are solidly united in one ideological will, can they thoroughly defend and glorify their leader's revolutionary achievements and attain to the end the revolutionary cause charted by their leader.

The immortal revolutionary achievements scored by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song are being brilliantly protected and defended by our party, and our revolutionary cause is dynamically moving forward along the one road of chuche, unswering in the slightest.

The invincible unity and solidarity of the whole party and the entire people also constitute the decisive condition for energetically moving our revolutionary cause forward only along the one road of victory, breaking through whatever storms and trials.

The road of revolution is not a smooth, wide road, and there could be incalculable barriers and trials on that road.

The party of the working class, only if it breaks through whatever barriers and trials with its own strength, can win the ultimate victory of its revolutionary cause.

A party, no matter how long a revolutionary struggle history it has behind it, if it fails to overcome arduous trials in its revolutionary struggle, will become unable to fully perform its role as a struggle weapon for realizing its leader's revolutionary thought.

With the unity and solidarity of our party and the masses of people consolidated like bedrock under the sagacious leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, our politicoideological might has been extraordinarily strengthened more than ever, which is becoming a source of invincible strength making it possible to attain the cause for conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology to the end.

With the unity and solidarity of the whole party and the entire people brilliantly realized, our revolutionary ranks have been extraordinarily strengthened into one political force and it has become possible to ceaselessly move the revolutionary struggle and construction tasks forward as wished by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and intended by the party.

Truly, the invincible politicoideological unity and solidarity of the whole party and the entire people solidly united around the Party Central Committee headed by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song constitute a firm guarantee that makes it possible to attain the chuche revolutionary cause generation after generation to the end.

Under the sagacious leadership of the party and the leader we have come far along the one road of victory.

In the future just as in the past, solidly united in one ideological will around the Party Central Committee headed by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, we must go forward to dynamically fight for the ultimate attainment of the chuche cause.

There will be none but victory and glory on the road ahead for our party and people dynamically moving forward with the banner of the chuche ideology held high, solidly united in one mind, in one will around the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the glorious Party Center.

THE PROPOSAL SET FORTH BY THE GREAT LEADER FOR ESTABLISHING THE DCRK IS A REUNIFICATION PROGRAM REFLECTING THE AIM OF THE WHOLE NATION

Pyongyang KULLOJA in Koren No 4, Apr 81 pp 52-57

[Article by Kim Kon-hwan]

[Text] The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the peerless patriot, the sun of the nation, the legendary hero is the great salvation star of fatherland reunification confidently leading our people's fatherland reunification cause along the one road of victory and glory, brightly illuminating the road ahead for fatherland reunification with the radiant rays of the immortal chuche ideology.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, setting forth the fatherland reunification cause as the supreme national task from the first day of division of the country and the nation by outside forces, has energetically inspired the whole nation to struggle for the realization.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has enunciated the most precise line and guidelines for fatherland reunification based on the immortal chuche ideology, and has sagaciously led our people's struggle for the reunification along the one road of victory, actively setting forth concrete reunification proposals in each period, each stage of the developing situation.

By the sagacious leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song the door to talks between the North and South was opened and North-South dialogue realized in 1972 and as a result, the historic North-South Joint Statement was published.

With the announcement of the North-South Joint Statement comprising, as its basic content, the three principles of sovereignty, peaceful reunification, and great national unity set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the 3-point principle of fatherland reunification became the unitary, common national program for the reunification confirmed jointly by the North and South and solemnly proclaimed at home and abroad.

Realization of the North-South talks and announcement of the historic North-South Joint Statement were a historic event that provided a turning point for a new turnaround on the road ahead for our people's struggle to attain the historic cause for fatherland reunification.

From that time one, the ground swell of fatherland reunification came to quickly grow on a nationawide basis.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, at that grave time when the danger of perpetual division of the country and the nation into two had been created by the splittist machinations of the U.S. imperialists and their lackeys, enunciated the 5-point guidelines for fatherland reunification and once again opened up the bright prospects for fatherland reunification, blocking and frustrating the plot of internal and external splittists to create "two Koreas."

All the guidelines enunciated by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song for fatherland reunification from liberation to this day are filled to overflowing with his great love and infinite benevolence for the fatherland and the nation and his revolutionary will to bring a reunified fatherland to the entire fellow countrymen and posterity, putting an end to the misfortune of national division at all costs in our generation.

By the sagacious leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song our nation's chuche force is being further strengthened and internal and external situations are changing every day ever more to the advantage of our people's fatherland reunification cause.

Truly it is because of the presence of the sagacious leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song that our people are confidently charting the road ahead for fatherland reunification with a great faith and hope, crushing all the splittist machinations of the enemies.

Today our party and people are faced with the pressing task to bring about the reunfiication of the country at the earliest possible date based on the 3-point principle of fatherland reunification set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song set forth a new reunification proposal in his historic report to the Sixth Party Congress for the North and South to jointly establish a unified state, the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo.

The proposal set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song for establishing the DCRK is a reunfiication banner energetically inspiring the whole nation to a new national salvation struggle and a country-loving, nation-loving banner most precisely reflecting the aim and aspiration of the nation.

The entire people of north and south Korea and all overseas compatriots shall unanimously launch into the sacred struggle to establish the DCRK and bring about the growth and prosperity of the nation.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song in his historic report to the sixth congress of our party enunciated a new fatherland reunification proposal for the North and South to jointly form a confederal state as the most feasible, rational way to reunify the fatherland independently, peacefully, on the principle of great national unity.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"Our party contends that the fatherland be reunified with the North and South organizing a united national government in which the North and South participate on an equal footing on the basis of recognizing and accepting each other's ideology and system as they now exist and under it establishing a confederal republic where the North and South respectively implement a regional autonomous system with the same rights and duties." (Booklet "Summing-Up Report on the Work of the Central Committee to the Sixth Congress of the Korean Workers Party," p 76)

The proposal set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song for establishing the DCRK is one that has embodied the immortal chuche ideology in the solution to the reunification question and a most fair and just reunification proposal based on the 3-point principle of fatherland reunification and the concrete realities of our country, and as such, the national aim and aspiration of our people are precisely reflected in it.

The proposal set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song for establishing the DCRK is above all a reunification program wherein the aim and demand of the whole nation for most correctly resolving the question of the nation's destiny are thoroughly embodied.

The question of a nation's destiny is an important one relating to its rise or fall.

The state of a nation's destiny is, in the final analysis, determined by how that nation's independent stand and attitude is defended.

The question of a nation is essentially one to realize that nation's independent stand and attitude, casting off domination and enslavement in all forms. Whatever country, whatever nation, only if it firmly maintains its independent stand and attitude in all areas of its state activity and properly exercises its sovereign rights, can defend its nation's dignity and interests and work out its destiny to suit its own will and demands.

The proposal for establishing the confederal republic illuminates precisely the true road to realizing the aim and demand of the whole nation for living and developing as the master in command of its destiny, regaining its independent stand and attitude trampled by outside imperialist aggressive forces.

The proposal for establishing the confederal state defines that the proposed DCRK must become a completely independent sovereign state, a nonaligned state which neither becomes a satellite of any other country nor depends on any outside force.

This constitutes the basic guarantee for making the confederal state a completely independent sovereign state which, opposing intervention in all forms by outside forces and dependence on outside forces, exercises complete sovereign rights in internal and external activities and goes forward to independently solve all questions arising in state politics to suit the basic interests of our nation and the specific condtions of our country.

A nation-state, only by establishing an independent administration, can firmly guarantee its independence. Only a nation with an independent administration can decide and carry through its lines and policies according to its own convictions without submitting to any pressure or coercion of the imperialist, dominationist forces.

An administration which permits intervention by outside forces in its internal affairs and moves as pressured or directed by others, cannot assume responsibility for the destiny of its people and in the end, will become unable to firmly maintain its position as an independent state.

The proposal for founding the confederal republic, by establishing an independent, neutral, peace-loving unified state from start to finish, illuminates the correct road that makes it possible to achieve the unending prosperity of the nation, thoroughly embodying the principle of independent stand and attitude in all the political, economic, cultural, and military areas.

Therefore, he who is concerned with the fate and future of the nation, whether he is a nationalist or a communist, regardless of where he is living, espousing what kind of thought and idea and system, must subordinate everything to the struggle to regain the independent stand and attitude of the nation.

The proposal set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song for establishing the DCRK is also a reunification program most precisely reflecting the common interests and demands of the whole nation.

To establish the confederal state, amply reflecting the common interests and demands of the nation, is an important question arising from the objectives and demands of forming the confederal republic. If, in forming the confederal state, the privileged rights of any one specific class, stratum were permitted or only one-sided rights and obligations were set, it would be impossible to form the confederal state and it would also run counter to the objectives of forming the confederal state.

Moreover, under the conditions of our country that different systems exist in the North and South where people with different ideologies live, it arises as a very important question to establish a confederal state which takes into account their interests and demand simultaneously all together.

The proposal for founding the DCRK clearly shows the most rational way to establish a unified state reflecting the common interests and demands of the nation on the basis of recognizing and accepting the ideologies and systems in the North and South as they now exist.

Every part of the content of the proposal for establishing the confederal state has been set rationally and in a fair and just manner completely to suit the interests and demands of the whole nation.

The united government of the confederal state, which will consist of an equal number of representatives from the North and South and an appropriate number of overseas compatriots, will be admirably realizing the aim and aspiration of the entire nation for national reunification by discussing and deciding common questions relating to the overall interests of the country and the nation such as the political question, the question of defense of the fatherland and the question of external relations on an equitable principle consistent with the unity, collaboration and reunification of the entire nation and by expediting the task for the unified development of the country and the nation.

And the proposal for establishing the confederal state provides that on condition of forming a bilateral federal system based on the different systems within the nation, the North and South implement a regional autonomous system with equal rights and obligations in their respective regions. The regional governments, free to act and develop as self-dependent entities, will be launching activities to realize the common interests and demands of the whole nation. Under such conditions it will be possible, even after the formation of the confederal state, to comprehensively realize the interests and demands of the whole nation without damaging in the slightest the interests of all classes, all strata, all parties and factions.

Moreover, even in dealing with the name of the confederal state, the proposal suggests the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo to suit the national feeling of the entire Korean people equitably without favoring either the North or the South.

Koryo is the name of our country as a unified state already known worldwide, and democracy is not only a common political idea congenial and acceptable to people with different ideologies and political beliefs alike but also a sacred right which the masses of people must rightly possess and enjoy. The DCRK as the name of the confederal state is a most rational and precise one that suits the aim and interest of our nation.

Thus the proposal for establishing the confederal state thoroughly reflects the interests and demands of our nation with regard to all questions relating to the formation of the confederal state such as the composition of the federal government, its functions and its name.

The 10 major administrative guidelines which the confederal state will be executing after its establishment clearly prove that the proposal for establishing the DCRK is a reunification program reflecting the interests and aims of our nation.

In the administrative guidelines is clearly laid down the question that the confederal state, firmly maintaining independent stand and attitude which is the unanimous aim of the nation, in all areas of state activity, will implement independent policies, insure democracy in sociopolitical life, and strive for great national unity. The administrative guidelines also brightly illuminate a wide road which will make it possible to thoroughly insure the interests of the nation by providing the content to implement economic collaboration and exchanges based on recognizing the different economic systems and diverse economic activities of enterprises in the North and South, and recognize and protect the state holdings, cooperative holdings and private holdings in the North and South all together.

At the same time, the administrative guidelines provide the content of the interests of the whole nation such as the question of realizing exchanges and cooperation in the scientific, educational, and cultural areas, the question of insuring the unrestricted use of the means of transportation and communications, the question of forming a united national army, and the question of implementing neutral external policies.

When all the questions clearly set forth in the administrative guidelines are resolved, the common interests of our nation will be thoroughly insured, the linkage between the North and South will be strengthened, national ties between the people will be formed, and the unified development of the country will be smoothly insured.

Thus the proposal for establishing the DCRK and the administrative guidelines firmly guarantee the realization of the interests and demands of the nation from start to finish.

The proposal for establishing the DCRK set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is also a reunification program thoroughly reflecting the earnest national aspiration of the entire people of north and south Korea to achieving the reunification of the country at the earliest possible date.

The long-cherished supreme national aspiration of our people is to reunify the fatherland at the earliest possible date, putting an end to the division of the country and the nation.

Our people, whether in the North or the South, unanimously want reunification and wish to live harmoniously in a reunified land.

But our people's aspiration to reunification has yet to be realized even after 36 long years on account of the machinations of internal and external splittists to perpetuate national division, and the tragedy of division is deepening with each passing day. This is a great misfortune and unbearable suffering for our nation which has lived in one territority priding itself on one language and one culture for thousands of years. Only by putting an end to such anomaly at the earliest possible date and realizing the long-cherished national aspiration to fatherland reunification is it possible to achieve the growth and prosperity of the country and liberate the south Korean people from their plight of colonial slavery.

In particular, when viewed from the situations surrounding our country, attaining the cause for fatherland reunification arises as a burning issue that can no longer be put off.

Today in the international arena the interests of various countries are intricately entangled, and confrontation and clashes between the powers are daily intensifying. If at such a time our country should continue to remain divided into the North and South unable to achieve reunification, our nation could once again become a sacrificial lamb of outside forces, a colonial slave. We must never repeat the bitter history of bygone days when the destiny of the country and the nation was turned into a plaything of outside powers, depending on their interests and our people had to live the life of a ruined country, and to this end, we must reunify the fatherland at the earliest possible date.

The proposal enunciated by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song for realizing fatherland reunification by establishing an independent, neutral, peaceful unified state in confederal form is the unitarily correct proposal which makes it possible to establish the nation's sovereign rights and realize national unity without our country becoming a satellite of any country or leaning to any bloc. This proposal is a correct reunification program which makes it possible to admirably and most quickly realize our nation's earnest reunification aspiration without damaging the interests of the neighboring states, not to mention the interests of the North and South, based on our country's internal and external situations and all realistic conditions amply taken into account.

All facts positively prove that the proposal set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song for establishing the DCRK is the most precise reunification propsal which makes it possible to successfully realize fatherland reunification at the earliest possible date to suit the aims and demands of our people.

The proposal enunciated by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song for establishing the confederal state is one for founding a confederal state wherein the question of a confederal state under conditions of different ideologies and systems has been uniquely elucidated for the first time in history.

The proposal set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song for establishing the confederal state constitutes a scientific elucidation of the building of a confederal state consistent with our country's concrete realities and national ethos.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has enunciated that inasmuch as fatherland reunification is the pressing supreme national task and the entire people unanimously desire reunification, the different ideologies and systems currently existing in the North and South could not become a condition making reunification impossible and that, provided both sides maintain the stand not to impose their ideology and system on the other side, there is no reason why people with different ideologies could not live together within one country.

With the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song enunciating the unique thought for forming the confederal state under conditions of different ideologies and systems, a powerful weapon has come to be provided which makes it possible to achieve the reunification of the country, forming a confederal state to suit the common aim and aspiration of the whole nation even under conditions that different ideologies and systems exist within one nation.

Moreover, the proposal enunciated by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song for establishing the confederal state is a reunification outline wherein everything is uniquely set forth and flawlessly elucidated from the question of the apparatus and composition of the united federal government to the question of its name.

The confederal state established in our country, an end will be put to the long history of national suffering, the broken national bloodline will be reconnected, and it will be possible to achieve national prosperity and growth on a nationwide scale.

And our people, advancing into the international arena as a single nation, will be adding luster to national glory and resourcefulness and greatly contributing to the cause of peace in Asia and the world as well.

The proposal for establishing the DCRK, because of its correctness, uniqueness, great significance, is generating great repercussions at home and abroad.

The people of the northern half of the republic, receiving the new reunification program set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, are filled to overflowing with a great hope and faith, and are launching more dynamically than at any time the struggle to hasten the historic cause of fatherland reunification.

Encouraged by the new national salvation program, the south Korean people are courageously launching into the struggle for democracy and peaceful reunification of the country, praising the proposal for establishing the confederal state as "a reunification program precisely embodying the historic national aspirations and existing internal and external conditions," "a brilliant beacon clearly showing the road ahead for the nation," and "the cyrstallization of warm reunification aspirations and patriotism."

Overseas compatriots, too, highly praising "the proposal clearly set forth by the respected and beloved President Kim Il-song for establishing the confederal state is a great reunification charter encouraging and inspiring our 50 million fellow countrymen," are positively launching into the struggle to realize this proposal.

Also, the governments, political parties, social organizations, and progressive peoples of various countries of the world, warmly supporting and welcoming the proposal for establishing the confederal state as "the most correct and rational" and "very realistic," are expressing firm solidarity with our people's cause of fatherland reunification.

Indeed in the proposal set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song for establishing the confederal state is literally embodied the lofty country-loving, nation-loving thought of the fatherly leader who is anxious to give the whole nation a reunified fatherland at the earliest possible date, the division of the country paining him so.

It constitutes a momentous event in our people's struggle for reunifying the divided fatherland that a new proposal has been set forth for achieving the reunification of the country, establishing the DCRK.

Those who love the country and the nation and genuinely wish reunification, whether they are in the North or the South or overseas, whether they are communists or nationalists, should launch in unison into the struggle to establish the DCRK under the banner of fatherland reunification.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"In order to establish a confederal republic and realize fatherland reunification as proposed by our party, all Koreans in the North, South and abroad must struggle, solidly united in one great united national front under the banner of fatherland reunification, regardless of differences in ideology, system, party affiliation, and political belief." (Ibid., p 85)

Forming a great united national front is an indispensable requirement for establishing the confederal state.

Establishing the DCRK is a crucial task relating to our nation's future and a great all-nation task that can be achieved only with the united strength of the whole nation.

Only when all the reunification forces at home and abroad launch an all-nation struggle solidly united in a great united national front, can our people successfully attain the lofty cause to establish the confederal republic, crushing the plot of internal and external splittists to create "two Koreas."

In order that the whole nation may be solidly united in a great united national front, it is imperative to seek the common ground for reunification, transcending differences in ideology and system, party affiliation and political belief.

Inasmuch as establishing the confederal state is a great task for the interests of the whole nation, once everything is subordinated to it the differences in ideology and system, party affiliation and political belief could not constitute a problem.

The entire people of north and south Korea, putting aside until a later date the differences in ideology and system, party affiliation and political belief, must give predence to the interests of the country and the nation and subordinate everything to it.

In order to realize the proposal for establishing the DCRK, it is also imperative to realize democratization of the south Korean society.

Only under conditions that the fascist dictatorship in south Korea has been removed and democratization of the society realized is it possible for the patriotic people of all strata of south Korea to freely participate in the task of establishing the confederal state and for all Koreans in the North, South, and overseas to discuss with an open mind the momentous question of realizing the proposal for establishing the confederal state.

U.S. imperialism is the ringleader obstructing the reunification of our country.

The U.S. imperialists are persistently clinging to their criminal plot to create "two Koreas" in opposition to Korea's peaceful reunification and are inciting the south Korean puppets to fascistize the south Korean society, pursuing confrontation, division, and war machinations. Although the U.S. imperialists are intensifying the state of tension in our country by staging an unprecedently large-scale war exercise racket such as "Team Spirit 81," the scoundrels could not stand in the way of our people to reunify the fatherland, whatever means they might resort to. The U.S. imperialists must go back to their lair, taking with them their aggressive armed forces from south Korea, and give up obstructing our people's reunfiication cause. The scoundrels must prudently act, looking the realities squarely in the eye.

Although the U.S. imperialists and their lackeys are perpetrating all kinds of vicious machinations to perpetuate our country's division, today the overall situation is changing to the advantage of our people's fatherland reunification cause.

When the whole nation rises up solidly united to realize the proposal set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song for establishing the DCRK, our people's fatherland reunification cause will inevitably be attained.

THE IDEA OF SOVEREIGNTY, FRIENDSHIP, AND PEACE SET FORTH BY THE GREAT LEADER IS A FIRM PRINCIPLE OF OUR PARTY'S EXTERNAL POLICY

Pyongyang KULLOJA in Korean No 4, Apr 81 pp 58-64

[Article by Hyon Chun-kuk]

[Text] The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, setting forth the line and guidelines for an independent external policy based on his scientific insight into the demands of our developing revolution and world revolution and sagaciously leading the struggle for the realization, has compiled great achievements and immortal services in the area of international relationship.

By loyally revering the respected and beloved Comrade Kim Il-song as the great leader and moving forward following his sagacious leadership and the guidance of the glorious Party Center, our party and people have scored prideful victory and brilliant achievement unprecedented in the area of international relationship, and our country's international authority and prestige have been incomparably enhanced.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, clearly reiterating the basic idea of our party's external policy in his historic report to the Sixth Congress of the Korean Workers Party, provided a guiding principle to which our party and people must adhere in the area of international relationship.

Our party and the government of the republic, by thoroughly embodying the idea of sovereignty, friendship, and peace in their external policies, will strengthen the international solidarity of our revolution, eliminate domination and enslavement in all forms, and positively contribute to the common cause of mankind to build an independent and peaceful world.

The basic external policy idea of sovereignty, friendship, and peace set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is a firm principle to which our party must adhere in its external policy and external activity.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"In the future the same as in the past, our party shall positively strive to firmly maintain independent stand and attitude in external activities, develop relations of friendship and cooperation with various countries of the world and insure the peace and security of the world. Sovereignty, friendship, and peace--this is the basic idea of our party's external policy." (Booklet "Summing-Up Report on the Work of the Central Committee to the Sixth Congress of the Korean Workers Party," p 97)

To say that our party holds sovereignty, friendship, and peace as the basic idea of its external policy means to positively struggle to firmly maintain independent stand and attitude in the area of international relationship and thoroughly protect the basic interests of the Korean revolution and our people, develop relations of friendship and cooperation with various countries of the world and strengthen the unity of anti-imperialist sovereignty forces, block and frustrate the imperialist poolicy of aggression and war and insure the peace and security of the world.

What makes the idea of sovereignty, friendship, and peace a firm principle of our party's external policy lies in that this idea precisely embodies the immortal chuche ideology, the great guiding thought of our era.

The idea of sovereignty, frinedship, and peace, starting from the demands of the chuche ideology, illuminates a clear way to achieve the growth and development of the anti-imperialist sovereignty forces, thoroughly maintaining independent stand and attitude in external activities and constantly expanding and strengthening relations of friendship and cooperation with all countries of the world which respect the sovereign rights of our country.

Again, this idea embodies the common aspiration of the people of the world who protect independent stand and attitude, to building, solidly united, a peaceful, prosperlus new world free from domination and enslavement of every kind, free from aggression and war.

The idea of sovereignty, friendship, and peace is a guiding idea which most precisely reflects the basic interests of our revolution, the demands of our era, and the current international situation.

Our party above all holds the idea of sovereignty as a firm principle of external policy.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"The Korean Workers Party shall implement an independent external policy with the banner of the chuche ideology held high." (Ibid., p 97)

What kind of idea the party of the working class sets forth in its external relations is an important factor influencing the success or failure of its external relations and exerts great influence on its own country's revolution and world revolution.

In order that the party of each country may commendably conduct its own country's revolution and fully discharge its internationalist duties before the world revolution, it is imperative above all to thoroughly embody the idea of sovereignty in its external policy.

Embodying the idea of sovereignty is a basic demand and precondition for defending national dignity and right. All nations are equal and have the right to self-determination to work out their destiny on their own.

The party of the working class, only if it embodies the idea of sovereignty, can establish an external policy consistent with its own country's ethos and create an international environment favorable to successfully expediting its own country's revolution and construction.

If the party and state of the working class, bereft of independent stand and attitude, fail to maintain the principle of sovereignty in external activities, not only will they be unable to defend the interests of their country's revolution and of their people, they will be following others blindly in international relations in an unprincipled manner and in the end, they will bring the grave aftereffect of messing up the revolution.

If the party and state of the working class are to responsibly carry out their country's revolution, they must of necessity firmly maintain the principle of sovereignty in the area of external relationship.

Independent stand and attitude also constitutes the basis of realizing complete equality and mutual respect between parties, between countries.

Where independent stand and attitude is violated and trampled there will come to be formed relations of domination and subordination, enslavement and dependence. Only by resolutely protecting and maintaining independent stand and attitude is it possible to thoroughly beat back any outside force from violating one's national interests and interfering in one's internal affairs and wholesomely develop external relations respecting the dignity and sovereign rights of other nations on the principle of equality.

Our era's international revolutionary movement calls upon each country's party and state to thoroughly carry through the principle of sovereignty in the area of international relationship the same as in the area of internal policies.

Today ours is an era of independent stand and atitude in which the masses of people, who used to be oppressed and exploited in bygone days, are independently, creatively working out their destiny, entering the stage as the master in command of their destiny, as the master ruling the world for the first time in history. No country, no nation wants to be enslaved to others nor does it permit its independent stand and attitude to be violated or its dignity trampled.

In our era in which the aim of the people for independent stand and attitude is daily heightening, a majority of countries and nations of the world call for developing mutual cooperation in various areas, establishing correct diplomatic relations on the principle of independent stand and attitude and equality whether the countries and nations are large or small.

Our party, setting it forth as an important principle of its activity to defend and thoroughly embody the idea of independent stand and attitude in the area of external relationship, has positively struggled for the realization.

It is precisely because of most thoroughly maintaining independent stand and attitude that our party is moving forward invariably along a straight road without any tilting whatever in its external relations, and not only commands high trust and support among the people of the world but has many comrades and friends everywhere.

Indeed, defending and embodying the idea of sovereignty constitutes a firm guarantee which makes it possible for the party of the working class to insure the overall interests of its own country's revolution and of the world revolutionary movement and discharge its national duties and international duties admirably all together.

Today, strengthening friendship and unity with the people of the world who protect independent stand and attitude is an important demand for the victory of the cause of our revolution and of the world revolution.

The idea of friendship in our party's external policy set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song constitutes a principle which makes it possible for our party to create a more favorable international environment for our revolution, strengthening friendship and unity with the international revolutionary forces, and energetically move the anti-imperialist sovereignty cause of the world revolutionary people forward.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"The Korean Workers Party shall strive to develop friendly relations with all countries of the world which respect the sovereignty of our country." (Ibid., p 98)

Each country's revolution is a link in the chain of world revolution, and proceeds and develops organically linked to it. Therefore, if the party of the working class is to successfully discharge the national duties and international duties of its own country's revolution, it is imperative to strengthen the revolution's chuche strength and at the same time ceaselessly strengthen solidarity with the international revolutionary forces. Only by doing so can it go forward to create an international environment favorable to its own country's revolution and expedite the overall development of the world revolution.

To strengthen solidarity with the international revolutioanry forces, embodying the idea of friendship in external policy constitutes one of the important guarantees for successfully moving our revolution forward. Today our party is faced with the difficult and complex task to realize conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology, stepping up revolution and construction, and achieve the reunification of the country at the earliest possible date, making the U.S. imperialist aggressors withdraw from south Korea. In order to successfully realize this crucial task, it is imperative to energetically push the Three Revolutions--ideological, technological, and cultural--in the northern half of the republic on the one hand and thoroughly smash the plot of internal and external splittists to create "two Koreas," positively supporting the south Korean people's antifascist democratization struggle, and further strengthen the international solidarity of our revolution, strengthening our friendship and solidarity with the world revolutionary peoples.

Today the international environment of our revolution is very complex. While the revolutionary struggle of the people for anti-imperialist sovereignty is upsurging, the aggression and scramble machinations of the imperialsts for maintaining and expanding their sphere of influence are further intensifying.

Such entangled international environment calls upon our party and people to further strengthen our friendship and solidarity with the revolutionary peoples of the world.

Only if we ceaselessly develop our relations of friendship and cooperation with the peoples of the world protecting independent stand and attitude, can we go forward to create an international environment more favorable to our socialist construction and fatherland reunification cause, arousing a broad international support and encouragement for our revolution and isolating and weakening the internal and external splittists.

Friendship and solidarity with the revolutionary peoples of the world also constitutes a powerful weapon which makes it possible to isolate and weaken the imperialist forces with the decisive superiority of the anti-imperialist sovereignty forces and hasten the victory of the world revolution.

Solidarity is the most energetic weapon held in the hands of the revolutionary peoples in the struggle against the imperialist aggressive forces. The peoples who protect independent stand and attitude, only if they are solidly united, can insure an overwhelming superiority of the anti-imperialist sovereignty forces in the international arena and with united strength deal counterblows to the counterrevolutionary offensives of the imperialists.

If this is to be done, it is imperative to strengthen the solidarity of the revolutionary peoples who protect independent stand and attitude, ceaselessly expand and develop relations of friendship and cooperation with other countries, and positively support and encourage the struggle of the peoples of other countries.

To enter into good neighborly relations based on the respect of sovereign rights and develop relations of friendship and cooperation is the unanimous aim of the peoples of a majority of countries in the world. Accordingly, all the countries and nations on the face of the globe, entering into relations of friendship and cooperation with one another on the principles of complete equality and reciprocity, mutual respect and noninterference in internal affairs, are constantly expanding and developing eocnomic and cultural exchanges.

The idea of friendship in our party's external policy enunciated by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is a lofty idea which completely ties in with the aim of our people and progressive peoples of the world who wish to form good neighborly relations with other countries and nations on the basis of independent stand and attitude and equality and develop relations of friendship and cooperation.

When the idea of friendship is thoroughly embodied, friendship and solidarity between countries, between nations will be further expanded and developed and the anti-imperialist sovereignty cause of the revolutionary peoples of the world energetically expedited.

The idea of peace which is a principle of our party's external policy most precisely embodies the unanimous aim and aspiration of our people and of the peoples of the world.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"The Korean Workers Party shall positively struggle for a lasting peace and security of the world." (Ibid., p 99)

The struggle for peace is an inevitable demand flowing from the intrinsic nature of our country's state and social system.

In the northern half of the republic where exploitation and oppression have been eliminated once and for all, there is no class, no stratum interested in trampling the independent stand and attitude of social beings, the independent stand and attitude of nations and in invading and plundering other countries. In our country where exists the most superior socialist system under which the masses of working people have become the master of everything and everything of the society is geared to serving the masses of working people, one and all are enjoying an independent, creative life to their hearts' content. But such independent and peaceful life our people are enjoying today absolutely is not something that has been spontaneously achieved.

As long as the imperialists and warmongers remain on earth, peace can be won only through struggle. It is all the more so in the case of our countty where the U.S. imperialist aggressive troops, the ringleaders of world reactionaries, occupying the southern half of the fatherland, are going berserk in preparing for another war.

In the idea of peace our party maintains in the area of external relationship are contained the aim and aspiration to go forward to build an independent and peaceful world free from aggression and war, thoroughly isolating from the peoples of the world the imperialists clinging to a policy of aggression and war.

Our party and people are exerting every effort to remove the danger of war and insure peace in our country and consolidate the peace and security of the world. It is altogether a result of the positive peace-loving policy of our party and the government of the republic that today peace is being maintained in our country even as the situation in the Peninsula of Korea is becoming tense more than at any time on acocunt of the ever more blatant machinations of the U.S. imperialists and the south Korean military fascist gang to provoke war.

In order to consolidate and develop the state and social system established in our country, energetically step up socialist construction, and achieve the peaceful reunification of the country, it is imperative to positively launch the struggle to insure a lasting peace and security free from war in the Peninsula of Korea and the neighboring regions and ultimately in the whole world.

The question of peace and security in the present period arises as a pressing demand of the developing international situation.

The imperialist powers are further intensifying their scramble for once again enslaving the newly emerging countries and bringing them under their sphere of comination.

The U.S. imperialists, for what they call the "protection of vested interests" and "security," are continuing to expand their military bases, extensively increasing their aggressive armed forces in the major regions of resources and key military strategic areas. In addition, behind the signboard of "cooperation" and "protection" they are cunningly maneuvering to get a grip on the countries in these regions politically, economically, militarily.

Thus the sovereign rights of newly independent states are being violated, the destiny of the people is being toyed with, peace and security are being destroyed in many regions of the world, and the state of international tension continues to intensify.

Such situation is fraught with the danger of clash which may unleash another world war at any moment in any of the regions of Northeastern Asia, the Middle East, and Europe. This is causing a grave concern among the peace-loving peoples of the world.

The situation created in the international arena presents it as a pressing question for the people of the world to prevent the daily growing danger of another world war and protect the peace and security of the world, crushing the imperialist policy of aggression and war.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, setting forth the idea of peace, has laid it down as one of the guidelines of our party's external policy to struggle for world peace, and graphically enunciated practical ways to dissolve all military blocs, abolish aggressive military bases in foreign countries, withdraw foreign troops, establish nuclear-free zones and peace zones in various regions of the world, and peacefully settle the disputes between newly emerging countries.

The idea of peace in our party's external policy is thus the loftiest idea which makes it possible to oppose the imperialist aggressors and war forces and maintain and consolidate world peace, strengthening solidarity with the peace-loving peoples of the world.

All facts bespeak that the idea of sovereignty, friendship, and peace is the guiding principle of our party's external policy which most precisely embodies the great chuche ideology, the basic interest of our revolution, the aim of our era and the aspiration of the people.

The idea of sovereignty, friendship, and peace set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song constitutes the basic idea of external policy which has universal significance in the developing international relations of our era, the era of independent stand and attitude.

It constitutes another brilliant contribution to the common cause of the people for anti-imperialist sovereignty that the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has enunciated anew the basic idea of external policy.

With sovereignty, friendship, and peace enunciated as the basic idea of external policy, the party and state of the working class have come to have a firm guiding principle of external policy for building a new world free from imperialism and free from domination and enslavement, an independent, peaceful, and prosperous new world.

The idea of sovereignty, friendship, and peace is the revolutionary principle our party has invariably maintained in external policy, and its correctness and invincible vitality have been proved to the hilt through practice.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, setting forth in the past period a most precise external policy based on the immortal chuche ideology, has sagaciously led the struggle of our party and people for the realization, and personally conducting tireless, energetic external activities, has compiled great achievements in the area of external relationship.

The authority and glory our party and republic command in the international arena are none other than the high authority and glory of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, and all the achievements in the area of external relationship have been scored solely under the consummate leadership of the respected and beloved leader.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"Our party, launching positive external activities with the banner of independent stand and attitude held high, has further strengthened our revolution's international solidarity and broadened by far our country's international relations."
(Ibid., pp 1-2)

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song under a strategic slogan calling for solidarity with the people of the world who protect independent stand and attitude has ceaselessly strengthened and developed the solidarity of the anti-imperialist sovereignty forces, and actively clearing complex situations, opened up new situations for the Korean revolution and world revolution.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has sagaciously led our party and people to insure an overwhelming superiority of the revolutionary forces over imperialism, strengthen the socialist forces, and reinforce solidarity with the newly newly emerging countries.

Under the sagacious leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song our party has exerted every effort to support and encourage the revolutionary peoples of the world in their struggle for achieving an independent development and hasten the victory of our revolution and world revolution, ceaselessly strengthening the international revolutionary forces and consolidating solidarity with them.

Our party, also firmly maintaining at all times the principle of independently solving all questions arising in external activities, according to its own judgment and convictions, has developed relations of friendship and cooperation with other parties, other countries on the principle of complete equality and mutual respect.

Thus in spite of such complex international situation our party has been able to thoroughly defend the interests of the revolution firmly on the chuche stand and positively contribute to expediting the victory of the overall world revolutionary cause, strengthening solidarity with the broad anti-imperialist sovereignty forces.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, personally conducting energetic external activities, has also made immortal contributions to further expanding and developing solidarity, friendship, and cooperation with the progressive peoples of the world and strengthening the world revolution.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, because of the immortal achievements he has compiled before the Korean revolution and world revolution, enjoys infinite respect and adoration and commands absolute authority among the revolutionary peoples of the world.

Because of the high international authority and prestige the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song commands, the international position of our party and our republic has been extraordinarily enhanced.

Under the sagacious leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song our country is today highly praised by the people of the world as "the fatherland of chuche," "a model country of socialism," and our party's immortal chuche ideology is spreading more widely with each passing day across the continents and oceans.

Our country's external relations are ceaselessly widening and today as we have moved in the 1980's the number of countries which have established diplomatic relations with our country is no less than 103. Today the aim to establish diplomatic relations with our republic and develop economic and cultural exchanges and friendship is growing higher with each passing day.

The international solidarity with our revolutionary cause is growing stronger day after day and our people have come to have many comrades and friends everywhere in the world.

At numerous international meetings such as the summit conference of nonaligned nations and the UN General Assembly the representatives of many countries, reflecting the unanimous demand of the progressive peoples of the world, are expressing complete support for and firm solidarity with our party's guidelines and our people's struggle for the independent peaceful reunification of the fatherland.

The fact that some 260 committees for support of Korean reunification have been organized in various countries of the world and that diverse international events supporting the independent peaceful reunification of Korea are being ceaselessly held on a continentwide or international scale bespeaks well that our revolution's international solidarity is being unprecedentedly strengthened.

This clearly shows that our revolutionary cause is most correct and that the world firmly stands on the side of our people.

All these achievements scored in the area of international relationship are the brilliant fruition of the sagacious leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and of the external policy of our party and an energetic display of their invincible vitality.

Today our party and people are faced with the glorious task to even more energetically launch external activities, holding aloft the banner of sovereignty, friendship, and peace, the external policy program set forth anew by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song.

Our people, positively embodying the idea of sovereignty in external activities, will develop relations with other countries on the principle of complete equality and mutual respect and solve all questions arising in the area of international relationship thoroughly to suit the interests of our revolution and world revolution.

It is the invariable guidelines of our party to develop friendly relations with various countries of the world.

Our people will strive to strengthen solidarity and develop the relationship of friendship and cooperation with socialist countries based on the principle of independent stand and attitude and proletarian internationalism in accordance with the idea of friendship and go forward to strengthen friendship and solidarity in all areas with the nonaligned nations, Third World countries.

At the same time, our people will establish friendly relations with capitalist countries friendly to our country as well and develop economic and cultural exchanges, and will strive to develop good neighborly relations particularly with Asian countries geographically close to us.

A lasting world peace and security are the unanimous aspiration of our people and world peoples.

Our people will resolutely struggle to block and frustrate the daily intensifying aggression and war machinations of the imperialists, stop military buildup and armament race, and realize complete disarmament.

Our people, with a view to protecting the peace and security of the world, will strive especially to dissolve all military blocs, abolish aggressive military bases in other countries, withdraw foreign troops, establish nuclear-free zones, peace zones, in various regions of the world and ceaselessly widen them.

When the external policy idea of sovereignty, friendship, and peace enunciated anew by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is successfully carried through, ours will become an even more dignified country and our relationship of friendship, solidarity, and cooperation with the peoples of the world will be further expanded and developed.

Thus the support and encouragement of the peoples of the world for our cause for the independent peaceful reunification of the fatherland will be further strengthened and the common cause of the peoples for the peace and security of the world will be energetically expedited.

There will only be victory and glory for our party and people moving forward under the sagacious leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song with the banner of sovereignty, friendship, and peace held high.

BRIEFS

'CHON CLIQUE' INSPECTS PUBLIC SERVANTS--Pyongyang, 30 Jul (KCNA)--The Chon Tu-hwan military fascist clique announced that a "special inspection" of "public servants" would start in provinces and cities from 1 August, according to a report. It advertized that "incognito inspection teams" have been formed to "prosecute corrupt public servants" through the "inspection." The military hooligans try to put the label of "corruption" to a few "public servants" and shift responsibility for social corruption onto them in an attempt to lull the resentment of the people and expel "public servants" who fall out of their favor and thus lay a foundation for their long-term office. SENTENCING OF S. KOREAN STUDENTS--Pyongyang, 27 Jul (KCNA)--The Chon Tu-hwan military fascist clique on 24 July staged a trial at the puppet Seoul District Criminal Court and imposed prison terms upon three students including No Se-kuk of the Tongguk University in Seoul under the fascist "Law on Assembly and Demonstration," according to a foreign press report from Seoul. This outrage was committed against them for the reason that they had scattered handbills denouncing the crimes of traitor Chon Tu-hwan when they participated in an anti-"government" demonstration on the campus some time ago. Recently alone the fascist clique arrested 53 students on charges of involvement in anti-"government" demonstrations. [Text] [SK270821 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0803 GMT 27 Jul 81]

PARTY LEADER'S REMARKS ON FUND RAISING

SK310528 Seoul SINMUN in Korean 31 Jul 81 p 3

[Article by reporter Kim Ho-chun]

[Text] Kwangju--Commenting on the soon-to-be-formed financial support group, Kwon Chong-tal, secretary general of the Democratic Justice Party [DJP], on 30 July said: "We will try to ask the majority for a small amount of financial support, and will totally exclude from the group those individuals or businessmen who cast a burden upon us with their contributions, or those who allude to counter-compensation," thus pledging to reject any type of the rumored collusion between the political and economic circles.

While inspecting the office of the party's South Cholla provincial chapter in Kwangju, Secretary General Kwon further said: "The financial support group will be managed independently from the party; the presidium of this group will be carefully selected from those who are renowned for their virtue and will not exceed the target in collecting the fund."

About the plan to set up the financial support group, Kwon said: "We will finish getting subscriptions by 15 August, set it up between 15 and 20 August and finish registration and all the necessary procedures for fund-raising by the end of August."

To this end, he said, the party will assign 30 subscriptions to each of the party's five major post holders, 20 each to the deputy secretary general and chairman of the party's financial committee and 10 each to the financial committee members and chairmen of the party's provincial chapters.

MEASURES TAKEN TO ACHIEVE ADMINISTRATIVE REFORM

Administration of Laws to Improve

SK250444 Seoul THE KOREA HERALD in English 25 Jul 81 p 1

[Text] The government has decided to reduce the discretionary power of public servants to ensure greater fairness in administration, revise the civil law and commercial law and give an overall review on the census registration and license administration.

These are a part of 46 projects which the government decided to improve under its plan to eliminate elements hampering the national growth.

The 46 projects were selected yesterday by a government committee assigned to root out factors standing in the way of a smooth national development. The committee is chaired by Prime Minister Nam Tok-u.

Also included among the 46 are establishing a system to institutionally eliminate influence-peddling and favor seeking, elevating the administrative efficiency of tax and financial business, streamlining the government structure and improving the quality check system.

If necessary, the government plans to abolish obsolete laws or regulations and legislate a quality guarantee code.

The government also has decided to:

--disband or merge committees both in Seoul and provincial areas which exist "in name only" or the jobs of which are similar,

--revise the office regulations of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs,

--diversify the status of Korean diplomatic missions abroad based on their mission and size,

--expand the system in which those who commit minor offences are subjected only to fine.

License-related business will be turned over to provincial governments as much as possible in order to reduce red tape and increase administrative efficiency.

An open-door policy will be implemented at specific administrative areas, including issuance of various licenses, in which favor-seeking or influence-peddling are likely to occur.

It was learned that the 46 projects were discussed at a cabinet meeting held at Chongwadae last Tuesday. Also, the 46 are part of some 900 cases which government ministries and their affiliate organizations picked as potential obstacles to growth. The remaining cases will be handled by the ministries concerned.

Kim Yong-ok, chairman of the Administrative Reform Council, said that emphasis on the revision has been placed on "reflecting President Chon Tu-hwan's policy ideology, preparing for an open society expected in the future, guaranteeing individual rights and benefits and ensuring stability in administration."

He added that necessary measures for the 46 projects will be completed within this year for implementation next year.

Daily Hails Administrative Reform

SK270104 Seoul THE KOREA HERALD in English 26 Jul 81 p 4

[Editorial: "Major Administrative Reform"]

[Text] The government is vigorously pushing ahead with a wide-ranging program to reform administrative and legal systems so as to eliminate factors considered hindering national growth and giving rise to corruption in officialdom. This was made public Friday when a cabinet-level ad hoc committee headed by Prime Minister Nam Tok-u met to decide on 46 improvement projects to be worked out within this year for implementation beginning in 1982.

The decision is the first concrete result of President Chon Tu-hwan's instruction last April for the establishment of "an efficient system of administering state affairs to befit the new era." The special committee, set up in response to the presidential directive, had studied for 3 months some 900 problems submitted by various government agencies before selecting the 46 projects. The rest of the problems are to be examined further by individual ministries concerned for improvements.

Designed to remedy inveterate ailments of administration which have grown over the past three decades since the founding of this republic and rectify those administrative systems and laws that cause inconveniences to the people, the program should be hailed as the second major reform to be undertaken by President Chon's government. The first was the intensive anticorruption campaign last year which saw the forfeiture of vast fortunes illegally amassed by some high-ranking politicians and government officials and the ouster of a large number of corrupt public servants.

It is the embodiment of the government's positive forward-looking posture toward open public administration free of corruption in materializing an open society in this nation. It also reflects a firm will of the government to realize a second economic takeoff during the next five-year development plan (1982-86).

The reform projects can be classified into three main types. The first type is to streamline and reorganize, wherever necessary, administrative structures so as to minimize bureaucratic red tape. The second is to get rid of any legal and administrative impediments to the effective running of economy. The third is to improve the system of dealing with civic petitions for various licenses and permits so as to eliminate room for bribery.

Some of the specific actions recommended by the committee include revisions of the civic law and commercial code, which are largely patterned after Japanese statutes of the pre-World War II era, ameriolation of the complicated traditional family registry system, minimization of official licenses and permits, devolution of licensing authority to local governments or private associations, reduction of discretionary power of public servants, and reformation of taxation and banking practices.

To be sure, those reform measures are long overdue. Previous governments too attempted some corrective steps, but they were invariably limited in scope. The current program raises our expectations very high because it is the first comprehensive administrative reform of such a wide-ranging scope that is ever to be carried out in this country. Accordingly, we feel it necessary to urge all pertinent officials in different government agencies to do away with the past tendency of incoordination between ministries and discard selfish interests so that a successful reform program can be worked out for the broader interests of the nation.

DKP ADOPTS 'NATIONAL HARMONY' AS MAJOR AIM

SK210718 Seoul THE KOREA HERALD in English 21 Jul 81 p 1

[Text] Rep Sin Sang-u, secretary-general of the Democratic Korea Party (DKP), said yesterday the achievement of national harmony is an urgent task for the Fifth Republic, and his party adopts great national harmony as one of the important goals to pursue.

Speaking at the Seoul Foreign Correspondents' Club, the secretary-general revealed guidelines that "will become a partner for those who resolutely pursue democratization."

Rep Sin said, however, democratization itself will be the "ultimate target" of his party in case it finds discrepancies between the utterred goals and practices in the new age.

He also said the DKP would exert all efforts to take power through democratic competitions.

Saying that the arguments about political systems in extreme confrontation should not happen again, Rep Sin declared the best way to solve the problem is to find the cause of the argument and to remove it in a democratic way.

"Through dialogue among political parties and by strengthening parliamentary functions, the arguments over the political system can be contracted into our institutions," he said.

Saying that the constitution of the Fifth Republic is more democratic than the Yusin constitution he insisted that the present constitution cannot be called complete.

Sin said the peaceful transfer of power should be realized by a mature political force and suggested that his party would be interested in doing the job (7 years from now), saying that the DKP hopes to grow as a "center of free and democratic force."

DJP PLANS TO SET UP FINANCIAL SUPPORT GROUP

SK280155 Seoul YONHAP in English 0136 GMT 28 Jul 81

[Text] Seoul, 28 Jul (YONHAP)--Korea's ruling Democratic Justice Party [DJP] plans to set up its supporters' group in August to obtain financial help from it.

Rep Yun Sok-sun, assistant secretary-general of the party, said Monday that his party would embark on the formation of the group beginning early next month and register it with the Central Election Management Committee, a constitutional organ, by the end of August.

He said that his party had waited for minority parties to form their own supporters' groups with a view to managing political funds jointly, but it could not delay the formation any longer because its financial difficulties were serious.

The group will initially consist of some 1,000 members including businessmen and will raise some two billion won (2.93 million U.S. dollars) in political funds this year, Yun said.

The ruling party has already listed some 2,000 businessmen who it thinks can support the party financially and its financial committee members will begin asking them to become the group's members early next month.

Yun emphasized, however, that large enterprises would not be solicited strongly in order to get rid of the impression of collaboration between politics and business.

By law, each political party can form a supporters' group. The political fund to be raised by a supporters' group should not exceed two billion won a year. Those who donated political funds will get tax deductions.

In order to get out of a serious financial pinch, the ruling party collected some 700 million won (one U.S. dollar is worth about 685 won) from its lawmakers and used the money for the party's management funds in June and July, Yun disclosed.

GOVERNMENT TO LEVY EDUCATION TAX 1982-86

SK280605 Seoul YONHAP in English 0340 GMT 28 Jul 81

[Text] Seoul, 28 Jul (YONHAP)--The Korean Government has decided to levy education tax from next year through 1986 as an extraordinary purpose tax.

Testifying before the National Assembly Finance Committee, Finance Minister Yi Sung-yun Tuesday said that the collection of education tax is necessary to improve the national education during the fifth five-year economic development plan which starts next year.

According to Yi, educational renovation during the five-year period requires 4.6 trillion won (some 6.72 billion U.S. dollars) at the 1981 constant price. Under the current budgetary system, however, the government can allocate only three trillion won (one U.S. dollar is worth about 685 won).

The government will levy annually an average of 300 billion won in education tax in the form of additional taxes on national and provincial taxes beginning next year in order to insure the new financial source of some 1.5 trillion won, Yi said.

To that end, the current interests on deposits and dividends and income taxes will be raised by five percentage points to 15 percent, taxes on beer, whisky and other quality liquors will be increased by 10 percent and the prices of cigarettes of more than 300 won for each pack will be raised by 10 percent.

In the case of provincial taxes, property taxes will be raised by 50 percent to help insure the new financial source for educational renovation, Yi added.

PROSECUTORS PETITION FOR EXTRADITION TREATIES

SK270832 Seoul YONHAP in English 0827 GMT 27 Jul 81

[Text] Seoul, 27 Jul (YONHAP)--Korean prosecutors Monday called upon the government to conclude extradition treaties with Japan, the United States and other countries to which Koreans have easy and frequent access.

In an attempt to prevent the overseas flight of criminal suspects and foreign exchange and to check the inflow of organized international criminals into the country, they also proposed strengthening cooperation with foreign investigation authorities and domestic investigation networks.

"Such problems are expected to increase in the days to come, following government measures to liberalize overseas travel by Korean citizens," one official said.

They said that they had already decided to set up ad hoc teams in prosecutors' offices across the country to specialize in investigating such crimes and in thoroughly checking the moves of possible criminals, and to step up cooperation with U.S. Army investigators in Korea and foreign investigation authorities such as Interpol.

Persons facing trial or being investigated and those who have reportedly issued large number of bad checks will be prevented from traveling overseas, they said.

The officials will also make a list of Koreans residing overseas who are believed to have violated the Dishonored Check Control Law and the Foreign Exchange Management Law. The list will be sent through the Foreign Ministry to the governments of the foreign countries where the persons reside to limit the persons' rights to be protected as Korean residents, the prosecutors said.

PARTIES' ATTITUDE ON ASSEMBLY SESSION CRITICIZED

SK260113 Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 26 Jul 81 p 2

[Article by Cho Pyong-il]

[Text] Rival political parties are passing the buck to each other for what they claim is rigidity or uncompromising manner in dealing with the business of convoking the 108th special house sitting.

As a result of this stubborness, moves for the opening of an extraordinary National Assembly session this month have flopped. Political parties are not willing, even by a fraction of an inch, to work out mutually acceptable compromise terms, raising even a suspicion as to whether they really wanted to hold the session.

It appears that instead of adopting a give-and-take approach--a common principle in any kind of negotiations--the floor leaders of the Democratic Justice Party [DJP], the Democratic Korea Party [DKP], and the Korean National Citizens Party [KNCP] felt that backing down from their original stances would be equivalent to humiliation.

These attitudes are indisputably contrary to the prime goal of the 11th-term National Assembly to untie the knot of conflict, if any, through dialogue without falling into the rut of old political methods.

The three whips--Reps Yi Chong-chan of the DJP, Ko Chae-chung of the DKP, and Yi Tong-chin of the KNCP--locked horns over the operational method of standing committee meetings first or otherwise the plenary session, rather than over what to tackle and how.

Their talks, which were held five times, turned out to be across to their rivals. Especially, the breakdown of their 13 July agreement to hold the special house session on 20 July may have a traumatic effect on the future function of the whips in setting operational schedules and agendas.

A point in their dispute arose out of a perception gap between the reform-minded DJP, which called for committee meetings, followed by a plenary session, and the minority DKP (KNCP joined the DKP) sticking to what it called the practices of holding, above all things, plenary sittings.

The DJP originally planned to call foreign affairs and defense committee sessions to hear reports from the administration on the outcome of President Chon Tu-hwan's 15-day state visits to the five ASEAN member countries.

The DJP, obviously so as not to give the impression that it was steering clear of the house sitting, consented to the scheme of holding a plenary meeting to take President Chon's tour as a single agenda item.

However, it withdrew its consent when the DKP, aligned with the KNCP, attempted to get in the hair of the DJP, by demanding house deliberation of a host of agenda items. It contended that it had prepared about 90 different agenda items to be handled during the special house session.

The house seems to have suffered a setback as the rival camps failed to sell the other side on the need for the extraordinary session no matter what it might be, committee-level meetings or plenary sitting. Furthermore, the DKP came up with no concrete subject to convince the rival DJP.

The possibility of a confrontation that has been brought into being this time despite a strong call for a new political pattern in the new house is precisely what political observers fear in connection with the timetable for the forthcoming regular house sitting in September.

The observers, nevertheless, pinpoint the characteristics of the political "acrobatics" which can quickly make the once-frustrated ties between rival political parties as smooth as ever if they are determined to display problem-solving capacity through reconciliation or touch on the essence of issues rather than pitting themselves against each other over such an insignificant issue as the operational method.

Already, there are signs of a movement inside the DJP to resume dialogue with the DKP sooner or later after a cooling-off period, thereby seeking a way to soften the frozen climate.

As to the DJP's plan to persuade the DKP to concur [with] its unswerving stance to concentrate parliamentary activities on committee meetings, the minority party still terms it an abnormal method of running the house.

BRIEFS

BUSINESSMEN TO JOIN POLITICS--Rep Yi Chae-hyong, chairman of the Democratic Justice Party, has said that it is right and proper for businessmen to enter politics. There is no reason for business leaders to shy away from politics, he said, citing the fact that many labor leaders make inroad into politics. In a speech during a seminar of top managers at Mt Sorak Wednesday, the majority party leader said the businessmen's joining in politics should not be viewed as "collusion" but as "co-existence." In view of labor issues, capital, and the international trustworthiness which business leaders have achieved, it was very natural for businessmen to join politics, Rep Yi said. This was more so in view of the government plan to make a "second take-off" in economics, he said. The seminar is sponsored by the Korea Management Association and ends today. 'NATIONAL SPIRITUAL EDUCATION' BODY--Seoul, 29 Jul (YONHAP)--The Korean Government has decided to set up an inter-ministry body to deal exclusively with policies on national spiritual education. The decision came during a regular cabinet session at the Capitol conference room Tuesday and empowers the body to deliberate on and coordinate major policies on national spiritual education concerning democratic consciousness, anti-communist stance and national unification. The body will also cooperate with government agencies, private enterprises and schools at all echelons in conducting the spiritual education and evaluate the outcome of the education given by such organizations. The body chaired by Prime Minister Nam Tok-u will have 11 minister-level government officials as its members. They include the ministers of home affairs, defense, education, labor, culture-information, government administration, the directors of the National Unification Board and the Agency for National Security Planning, the senior presidential secretaries for political affairs and education and culture and the chairman of the Social Purification Committee. EXIT-ENTRY PROCEDURES LIBERALIZED--Seoul, 25 Jul (YONHAP)--Korea's cabinet Friday amended immigration regulations to simplify exit procedures for Korean workers headed overseas and entry procedures for Koreans residing in foreign countries. According to the amendment, Korean seamen assigned to foreign service may leave the country simply by presenting their seamen's papers for an exit screening on the day of their departure. The present regulation obligates seamen to file applications, recommendations and papers for the screening 2 days prior to their departure. The new amendment also requires prior entry notice by Korean residents abroad only in those cases where the justice minister deems it necessary, liberalizing the present rule which demands such notice unconditionally 5 days prior to such persons' entry. [Text] [SK250313 Seoul YONHAP in English 0249 GMT 25 Jul 81] Seoul, 25 Jul (YONHAP)--South Korea's cabinet Friday approved new passport issuance procedures to go into effect next month which will greatly liberalize travel opportunities for the country's citizens. Multiple use passports valid for 5 years will replace the much more restricted passports so far issued to persons going overseas for cultural or business purposes, longterm study, marriage, employment, residence or technical training. The new 5-year passports will be valid for travel to all but 19 restricted countries--most of them in the communist bloc. Passports issued for visitation, tourism or short-term study purposes, however, will be effective for only 1 year. Government officials said a ban would be enforced, in principle, on holders of visitation passports going abroad again within 6 months of their return home. The revision also drops an age limit which forbids married couples to travel abroad together until they had reached a certain age. Export performance will no longer be a condition for obtaining visas for those going abroad for business purposes if they produce documents certifying purchases, orders, invitation letters and technology acquisition contracts. Beginning in July 1982, Koreans will be allowed to travel overseas if friends invite them and pay air fare and other costs and starting in January 1983 people aged 50 or over can go out of the country as tourists, the revision says. Those seeking overseas travel on an invitation from their friends or for sightseeing purposes, however, will be required to leave a financial deposit to guarantee their return. NEW CHIEF BODY GUARD--Seoul, 13 Jul (YONHAP)--President Chon Tu-hwan Monday appointed Chang Se-tong, an army general, as his chief bodyguard, succeeding Chong Tong-ho. Chong was returned to active military duty effective the same day. Chang, 45, a graduate of the Korean Military Academy's 16th class, has served with the Office of the Presidential Security Service and the Capital Garrison Command. ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT PLAN ENDORSED--Seoul, 11 Jul (YONHAP)--Korea's ruling Democratic Justice Party (DJP) Friday finalized its suggestions for part of the country's fifth five-year economic development plan, to start next year. The suggestions, expected to be submitted to the government next week for reference, call, among other things, for increasing the wages of low-income people, expanding medical insurance and easing the housing shortage. The party endorses building multi-purpose dams, developing water sources and expanding agricultural irrigation systems in order to achieve self-sufficiency in food production. The DJP also calls for increasing subsidies to the provincial government from the current 12.1 percent of their budgets to 15 percent to improve their financial self-sufficiency, and for fostering small and medium industries through expanded tax holidays to boost employment. Emerging from a party policy committee meeting, chief policymaker Yi Chun-u said that the party had expressed its opinion in only three fields--small and medium industries, rural development and social welfare--all of which are directly related to the party's campaign pledges. IMPROVED CONDITIONS OF LOW-INCOME PEOPLE--The government plans to set up an inter-ministry body to deal exclusively with improving the living conditions of low-income people, it was learned yesterday. This was contained in a long-term program for the improvement of the living conditions of the grassroots, which is now being jointly drawn up by the premier's Office for Administrative Coordination and the Korean Development Institute on special instructions from President Chon Tu-hwan. President Chon had earlier instructed the cabinet to work out a long-range program to "liberate the people from poverty." The body now envisioned by the government will handle such matters as wage-distributing projects and implementation of technical training for low-income persons. PUNISHMENT OF STUDENTS--(Taegu) Kwon I-hyok, president of Seoul National University, on 29 July said: "It is impossible to extend a helping hand to those students who are punished by society because of acts considered in conflict with their positions as students." Answering questions on the issue of punishment for students in connection with campus disturbances during a friendly get-together with parents of students, to which some 500 from Taegu and the North Kyongsang Province area were invited and which was held at the Kyemyong College auditorium on the afternoon of 29 July, President Kwon went on to say: "The university authorities are employing every possible effort to save even one more of the problem students." EMERGENCE OF FOREIGN BUSINESS CONSULTANTS DISCUSSED

Seoul TONGA ILBO in Korean 13 Jul 81 p 3. Seoul U.S. Embassy Translation [Summary]

[Text] Richard Holbrooke, former Assistant Secretary of State for East Asian and Pacific Affairs during the Carter Administration, has come to be much talked about in Korea for his position as "adviser" to Hyundai Group. Holbrooke is known as a first-class theorist reminding us of former Under Secretary of State George Ball.

With the inauguration of the Reagan Administration, he assumed the post of executive vice president of the Public Strategy Co., business consultants, in Washington. With an annual stipend, he will provide counsel and advice at the request of Hyundai. To be exact, Hyundai has become one of his clients; he has not been employed as "Hyundai's consultant." Details of his service c industrial policy of a high order," according to Hyundai st-ff.

Last April, he contributed an article criticizing "70 Days of Reagan Diplomacy" to the Wall Street Journal. In that article, he urged Vice President George Bush and Secretary of State Alexander Haig to visit the PRC.

It does not appear begetting a diplomatic theorist to provide counsel on industrial policy. Yet, his enthusiasm over the PRC and his farsighted views on Asia are expected to serve as a guide to the development of Korea's industrial policy. His role and his annual stipend remain veiled, but it will be too hasty a conclusion to expect anything beyond business ties.

Former Vice President Agnew, who has become a broker, former Secretary of State Rogers, and former Treasury Secretary George Shultz who has become executive vice president of Bechtel Corporation, are now generally better known as business executives. Defense Secretary Weinberger and Treasury Secretary Regan of the Reagan Administration are also businessmen who might someday come back to the business circles.

In Korea, it is generally accepted that one hailing from a government department might be better received in a related industrial field. But this idea is not accepted in foreign society. A recent trend is rather for foreigners to make use of the Korean notion of individual association and relationship.

Former Japanese Ambassador to Korea Kaneyama recently became an adviser to Sony. He visited Korea and met with the minister of commerce and industry to discuss Sony's withdrawal of its share in Whashin-Sony as the Whashin Group appeared to be on the verge of bankruptcy. He did so by capitalizing on his old acquaintance with Korea.

Former American Ambassador to Korea Sneider has reportedly become an adviser to Westinghouse Electric, now eagerly seeking to sell nuclear plants to Korea. Last time, he visited Korea together with American coal businessmen and met with the minister of energy and resources. His proposition was that he would use his good offices if Korea wanted to import American coal. With an annual trade volume of $40 billion and with orders being placed for nuclear power plants and electronic switching systems, Korea has long become an attractive target for business inroads by international business concerns.

A "memorandum on cooperation" issued by Secretary of State Haig to American ambassadors abroad last month is interesting to note. He urged them to take the van of selling America, without indulging only in making lip service and playing the gentleman. In fact, foreign envoys nowadays pay courtesy calls at the office of the commerce-industry minister no less frequently than at that of the foreign minister.

With the internationalization of business operations, there has arisen a boom of consultant firms. There are some companies powerful enough to be used as lobbyists. They may not be as professional as Jewish lobbyists. But it might be worth trying to ask them to help make Korea known as it is.

The more such business ties, though not necessarily with Agnew and Holbrooke alone, the better. This is so particularly in this era of "national salesmanship" in which foreign ambassadors present themselves on the business frontline.

LAG IN SEMICONDUCTOR TECHNOLOGY DISCUSSED

Seoul MAEIL KYONGJAE SINMUN in Korean 13 Jun 81 p 7

[Text] The domestic electronics industry has collided with the barrier of technology. While we spend time arguing about means of measuring the domestic consumption market, the advanced countries are consolidating their monopoly manufacture of semiconductor technology. At the point where we should be moving to the next stage in color television, domestic industry has not been able to make an inch of progress because of the high semiconductor technology barrier.

This is chiefly because in the semiconductor technology war, the United States and Japan control semiconductor technology on a worldwide basis, much as they do certain commodities, as not-for-sale technology. With the trampling of the American market by Japan which resulted from the backflow of semiconductors developed in the United States to Japan, a bilateral offensive and defense struggle has developed which is intensifying as time passes.

Considering current spheres of influence, in which Japan has begun gradually to surpass the United States, the future transfer of semiconductor technology to Korea looks very pessimistic.

The fact that the semiconductor issue was raised during the Korea-Japan Civil Economic Committee meeting which opened in Seoul on the 11th, though it was not on the preliminary agenda, is indicative of the concern of domestic industry, which reflects a similar international environment.

Kim Won-hui, president of the Electronics Industry Promotion Association, who boarded a plane for a European business trip today, attracted the attention of the Japanese representatives by suddenly calling for the transfer of semiconductor technology to Korea under the rubric of "ultramodern technology transfer."

President Kim began by explaining that the development of the semiconductor industry in Japan, one of the two world spheres of interest, had brought many benefits to Korea and had also brought disadvantages.

He pointed out that the selling of older technology contributed to today's growth in the Korean electronics industry, but that to monopolize video tape recorder and semiconductor technology, causing the industry's current predicament, is unreasonable.

President Kim cited the example of the Japanese semiconductor industry, which was facilitated in its growth by the introduction of American technology under license, and claimed that the refusal to transfer specialized technology to Korea is tantamount to Japan denying its own past, in view of the fact that fully 60 percent of our electronics technology comes from Japan.

The semiconductors which are becoming the focus of the world trade war are collectively called luminous element groups for transistors and integrated circuits. And it is the unanimous opinion of specialists in the field that this technology will become the new weapon of world domination in the eighties.

England dominated the world with its ships in the 1800's, and the United States came to dominate the world with its aircraft after 1930, but since the seventies, the world has become completely dominated by OPEC oil.

In view of these chronological changes in the weapons of world domination, it is a likely prospect that semiconductors are about to take their place in the eighties.

Applications for semiconductors are virtually limitless. From industrial robots to marine radars, not to mention household electronic equipment, electronic switching equipment, auto engine parts, all kinds of energy conservation equipment, as well as satellites and missiles--all are wondrous creations of semiconductor technology.

In a word, semiconductor technology is in a state of dynamic change. It is difficult to predict where this technology, which is constantly being renewed and formidably improved, will end.

While transistors have improved into integrated circuits, "very" large-scale integration is now at the successful stage of very high speed integration (VHSI).

The U.S. State Department is assured of the final outcome of the semiconductor struggle, and scientists see without a doubt that application of this developing VHSI technology will bring world supremacy.

World trade in semiconductors is a snowballing gold market.

Growing from around 4.4 billion dollars in 1975 to 12.5 billion last year, it is estimated that by 1985 volume will surpass 30 billion dollars.

Estimates are that control of an international market on such a scale would be 90 percent U.S. and 0.2 percent Korean.

On top of there being no roots to domestic semiconductor production, which began in 1965 with the Korean-U.S. joint venture, Korea-U.S. Products, there is not even any soil.

Although direct investment from U.S. companies such as Motorola, Skenetics and Fairchild was infused, we have not yet been able to rise above a wage industry in repair processing.

Korea Semiconductor, which was established in 1974, sowed the seeds with production of the first domestically produced wafer, but after being taken over by Samsung due to running in the red, the company is barely able to maintain its advanced position, while the stupendous losses remain the same.

Still, the Samsung Semiconductor production of CMOS (complementary metal oxide semiconductor) chips is only the fourth on record worldwide, and the National Television System Committee-style color signal control developed last year, in its own way, signifies the accumulation of development strength.

Also, although Gold Star Semiconductor began in the semiconductor business as ESS, a joint venture with America's Western Electric, the semiconductor plans of other known and unknown enterprises remain blank sheets.

Thus, the difficulty of semiconductor production may be attributed to the peculiarity of not being able to follow changing new technology from moment to moment, in the face of a market in which the technology is unavailable at the outset, even supposing a joint venture.

How do we nurture semiconductor production? The government must take the lead, pressing civilian enterprises to get on with the job.

CONSTRUCTION OF NEW SHIP REPAIR DOCKS REPORTED

Seoul HYUNDAE NEWS in English Jun 81 p 8

[Text]

Hyundai Mipo Dockyard Co., Ltd. (HMD) is going to build two more large repair docks. Under the ship-repair expansion program of the Korean government, HMD will invest 55.4 billion Won to construct a 400,000dwt and a 250,000dwt repair dock to carry out the repair of vessels ranging from 10,000dwt to 300,000dwt. The construction will begin in July this year with completion scheduled for June 1982.

The Korean government has analyzed the competitiveness of Korean ship-repairers on the world market and found that Korea's repair facilities are short. Therefore, it has decided to build two additional repair docks at HMD and another 150,000dwt dock at another Korean shipyard.

The current boom in the shipping and shipbuilding industries brought about increased demands for ship-repairs. Changes in ocean transportation patterns, replacement of old engines with fuel-saving engines and anti-pollution regulations increased the needs for the conversion of ships.

Ship-repairing is a labor-intensive industry and calls for a high level of technology. In this respect, Korea has abundant, skilled labor and technology accumulated over the past years. As far as ship-repair is concerned, Korea is strong enough to compete with Japan and Singapore. HMD's steel and painting works are the most competitive in the world.

The ship-repairing industry can contribute to the growth of the national economy through the high foreign exchange earning ratio and an increase in employment. Furthermore, such expansion will enable HMD to provide quick service to local ship operators who suffer from the lack of repair facilities in Korea.

The planned site of HMD is very deep and suitable for container-ships and large oil tankers. The sizes of the two docks will be 360m (L)×65m (W) ×12.7m (D) and 265m (L)×65m (W) ×12m (D). Once these repair docks are completed by the end of next year, HMD's repair capacity will be 450 to 550 vessels per year from the current 250 to 300 vessels.

HMD Lands on Brazilian Shipping Market

The Agencia Maritima Laurits Lachmann S.A., Brazil, which entered into an agency agreement with HMD in early 1979 for the Brazilian ship repair market, has done their best to introduce HMD in this shipping circle. At the end of continuous sales activities, they recently succeeded in obtaining affirmative results for HMD: the first Brazilian award, the G/T S.T. JOSE BONIFACIO (126,760 G/T) from Petrobras/Petroleo Bras.. .ro S.A., one of the leading shipping companies in Brazil.

She arrived at HMD on June 10 after discharging at Oita, Japan, and the repair work completed by June 26 is as follows: about 6,000 m^2 blasting on side-shell platings, installation of a total of 2,912 pieces of cathodic protection in No. 1, 3, 6 and 8 cargo tanks, and considerable work on machinery.

This first VLCC from South America will be a good opportunity for HMD to develop and consolidate business relations with shipowners of Brazil, and other South American countries as well.

LEGALITY OF BUSINESS CONSOLIDATION EXAMINED

Seoul CHOSON ILBO in Korean 19 Jul 81 p 2

[Excerpt] The Economic Planning Board has begun screening 10 business corporations to determine whether or not their business consolidation made since the enforcement of the Fair Trade Law on 1 April, has been fair and lawful. The 10 business enterprises including Miwon Heavy Equipment, Taihan Electric Wire, Daelim Industry, and Kumbokchu, have either absorbed other business firms and consolidated businesses through the acquisition of other company stocks or the transfer of goodwill.

The Fair Trade Office said on 18 July that a total of 27 different business firms have declared the facts about their business merger 15 July. Of the total, 17 firms have been determined as those which have consolidated businesses through fair methods. They include Korea Fertilizer, Kwangju Expressway Bus, Daewoo Industries and Samhwan Enterprise.

The EPB is now examining the remaining 10 firms as to whether they have merged other business firms through unfair means or for purposes of restricting fair competition. The 10 business firms are those which have absorbed other business firms by means of merger, stock acquisition (10 percent or more), or concurrent assumption of board membership. Miwon Heavy Equipment has merged Miwon Machinery; Taihan Electric Wire, Taihan Construction; Kolon Nylon, Kolon Polyester; Chindo Industry, Chindo Mulsan; and Samik Housing, Samik Enterprise.

Those determined as having merged other firms through legal and fair means under the law include Korea Shipbuilding and Engineering (which merged Okp'o Enterprise), Korea Electronic (Hankuk Television), Hapdong (Doosan Development), Hyundai Heavy Industry (Hyundai Special Chemical), Chunusa (Songch'u Farm), Samik Musical Instrument (Korea New Hope); and Kwangju Expressway Bus (which has taken over the goodwill of Orient Expressway Bus), Ch'onji Industry (Choyang Development's electrical work license), Chinsong Remicon (part of Pusan Industry's business); and Daewoo Industries (which has acquired 10 percent or more of the capital stock of Sina Shipbuilding), and Hyundai General Trading (Donga Industry).

OIL TO BE IMPORTED FROM MEXICO

SK250149 Seoul YONHAP in English 0108 GMT 25 Jul 81

[Text] Seoul, 25 Jul (YONHAP)--Korea has agreed to import crude oil from Mexico, the largest oil producer in Latin America.

The agreement was made Friday in Seoul by Korea's Energy-Resources Minister Pak Pong-hwan and visiting Director General Julio Rodolfo Moctezuma of the state-run Mexican oil company PEMEX, ministry officials said.

Emerging from a 1-hour meeting with Moctezuma. Pak told reporters that Korea had decided to import a small amount of oil from Mexico from a long-term perspective, to promote bilateral economic cooperation, even though Korea now has an excess in its crude oil supplies.

Pak said he asked the PEMEX chief to supply light oil rather than heavier oil, for which Korea has poor refining facilities.

Moctezuma, agreeing with Pak on the necessity for closer bilateral economic cooperation, promised a stable supply of crude oil as demanded by Korea.

Moctezuma also explained that Mexico's oil policy is to seek long-term economic cooperation and secure stable buyers, rather than pursue short-term profits.

Saying that the agreement would surely enhance an economic partnership between resource-rich Mexico and technically powerful Korea, Pak expressed hope for Korean participation in Mexican shipbuilding, fisheries and farming machine production and construction.

Moctezuma, accompanied by two senior PEMEX officials, flew into Seoul Friday from Tokyo on part of an oil-selling tour.

KOREAN PLAN FOR NON-DEPENDENCE ON PETROLEUM DISCUSSED

Tokyo DENKI SHIMBUN in Japanese 16 Jun 81 p 2

[Text] Mr Yi Yong-hi, office manager and a director of the Korean Electricity Board [KEB], came to Japan as a guest of the 60th Regular General Meeting of the Japanese Electricity Board. Taking advantage of this opportunity, we interviewed him about the Korean plan for independence from petroleum and about the activities of the KEB. According to Mr Yi, during the next 10 years until 1991, Korea will spend a total of $30 billion and expand its generating capacity to 27.4 million KW, approximately three times the present capacity. Of the total capacity, 40.9 percent, or 11.2 million KW will be from nuclear power; 18.1 percent, or 5 million KW from coal, and 11.9 percent, or 3.3 million KW from water power. Korea plans to strongly pursue its goal of independence from petroleum and to drastically reduce its dependence on oil from the current share of 74 percent to below 20 percent. On the other hand, the KEB is pushing activities for the thorough conservation of energy, and is aggressively engaged in educational activities and publishing as a result of increased membership.

Question: Korea has succeeded in remarkable economic achievements. What is the present generating capacity and what are your plans for future expansion?

Electric Power Source To Be Increased Three-Fold in 10 Years

Answer: The economic growth rate of Korea was 10.3 percent in 1977, 11.6 percent in 1978 and 6.4 percent in 1979. In 1980, we saw the first negative growth rate of 5.7 percent. The rate will again be on the level of plus 5 percent in 1981, and is expected to average about 8 percent per year for the next 10 years from 1982 to 1991.

Accordingly, the demand for electric power increased by 16.4 percent in 1977, 19.7 percent in 1978, 14 percent in 1979 and even in 1980, the year of negative growth, increased by 5.1 percent.

The total generating capacity at the end of 1980 was 9,391,000KW--73.7 percent, or 6,922,000KW from oil; 12.3 percent, or 1,157,000KW from water power; 7.7 percent, or 725,000KW from coal, and 6.3 percent, or 587,000KW from nuclear power.

We plan to increase this capacity approximately three-fold to 27,400,000KW by 1991, by implementing the fifth electric power development five-year plan next year and the subsequent sixth five-year plan, to be in accord with [the projected] annual economic growth rate of 8 percent.

Question: How will you become independent of petroleum?

Nuclear Power To Be Increased to 41 Percent

Answer: At present we are building one oil-fired thermal power plant, but this will be the last one. Thereafter, we will pursue independence from oil mainly through nuclear power.

Specifically, we plan to build 36 power plants by 1991, which comprise 12 nuclear power plants, 10 coal power plants, 2 liquefied natural gas power plants, 8 hydro power plants, and 2 pumped storage power plants. By 1991, the composition [of our generating capacity] will be: 40.9 percent, or 11,216,000KW from nuclear power; 11.9 percent, or 3,265,000KW from water power, and 18.1 percent, or 4,970,000KW from coal. Power from petroleum will drastically drop to 18.3 percent, or 5,003,000KW. Of the total power generated, 51.4 percent will be from nuclear power and 10.9 percent from petroleum.

Question: What are the activities of the KEB?

Awareness of Energy Conservation

Answer: For energy conservation, the KEB considers the wasting of electricity as the wasting of oil, and thus the wasting of dollars. The KEB promotes saving by providing factories with free diagnoses of energy conservation. In the future, I believe that we must make home users thoroughly aware of energy conservation.

Question: The KEB seems to have expanded much recently.

Merged With Engineers Association

Answer: Last September, the KEB merged with the Engineers Association, which was a separate organization. This increased the membership of the KEB to 180 regular members, 210 special [corporate] members and 10,000 engineers.

Question: It seems that you do not have many special members.

Answer: Until now, the special membership was small because the KEB was centered only in the Seoul area without any local chapters. By merging with the Engineers Association, the KEB inherited eight local chapters of the association and made them into chapters of the KEB. I hope to use these chapters as the core for future expansion.

Question: What are your future plans?

Survey Team to Japan

Answer: First, I want to stress the education of our engineer members to cope with fast-paced technological innovations. For our special members, I would like to hold seminars to provide them with new technological information from abroad. As a trial activity, I plan to send in October of this year a team of 35 or 36 [Korean] industry representatives to survey Japanese industry. The team will visit Japanese manufacturers of heavy electrical equipment, home appliances and wire. These visits will be continued in the future.

Question: We heard that you plan to publish a [trade] newspaper.

Active Publishing, Too

Answer: We almost succeeded in it [publishing a trade newspaper] the year before last. Since both the members and the president of the KEB want to publish a newspaper, I am considering its publication by next year after I study the Japanese DENKI SHIMBUN. I would like to make it a good, solid newspaper in cooperation with the Japanese DENKI SHIMBUN. This is imperative for the development of electrical industry in Korea.

At present, the KEB issues many technical publications such as a monthly newsletter and a yearbook of electricity. Also, we drew up [industrial] codes for indoor wiring last year, and are considering drawing up codes for circuit wiring next year. I wish to continue our active publishing.

KCCI URGES REDUCED GOVERNMENT ROLE IN BUSINESS

SK170934 Seoul YONHAP in English 0850 GMT 17 Jul 81

[Text] Seoul, 17 Jul (YONHAP)--The Korea Chamber of Commerce and Industry (KCCI) Thursday urged government economic policymakers to foster competitiveness by improving marketing structures in order to pursue price stability, and to allow businesses to demonstrate their initiative to the utmost.

The KCCI made those points at a social gathering with Korea's ruling Democratic Justice Party (DJP) at the party's downtown Seoul headquarters, emphasizing that government intervention in business should be limited to complementing market economic system, and that all of the regulations involved in licensing and being licensed should be entirely reorganized for simplification.

The KCCI said that the government should adopt the national welfare of the Republic of Korea as its main policy guideline, while at the same time continuously pursuing democratization of the economy.

The economic body also said that any taxation systems distorted to achieve various policy goals should be rectified "without mercy" to ease the general tax burden, while distinguishing among the different sectors, industries' businesses and income brackets, and to implement more efficient distribution of resources.

The KCCI pointed out, in its proposed economic growth strategy presented to the DJP, that the current 19.5 percent interest on loans was rather high in view of Korea's current emergence from a long, protracted recession.

The KCCI, one of Korea's key private economic organizations, recommended that government policymakers move to reduce the interest level continuously in order to precipitate an economic recovery during the latter half of this year.

On economic cooperation with ASEAN member countries, the organization urged the government to conclude trade agreements such as the one Korea has with Singapore with the four other ASEAN members as soon as possible.

The KCCI also maintained that Korea should move away from a unilateral export policy toward the ASEAN region, and encourage imports from those countries for political purposes, to maintain complementary bilateral trade relations.

GNP GROWTH SAID TO DEPEND HEAVY ON RICE HARVEST

SK280313 Seoul YONHAP in English 0243 GMT 28 Jul 81

[Text] Seoul, 28 Jul (YONHAP)--Korea could attain 9.5 percent gross national product (GNP) growth in the second half of this year and thus the adjusted annual GNP growth rate would be 6.5 percent, if money supply, interest, foreign exchange rates and nominal wage increase could be maintained at current levels during the rest of the year, the Korea Development Institute (KDI), a prestigious economical think-tank in Seoul, predicted Tuesday.

The KDI made the projection in an economic prospect for the second half of 1981 and the latest economic developments in the country.

Korea's current economic policy calls for maintaining the money supply increase rate below 25 percent, adjusted annually, to 23 percent, the lending interest rate at 20 percent, the deposit interest rate at 19.5 percent and holding the depreciation of Korean won against the U.S. dollar to 5 percent (693 won against the U.S. dollar), and the nominal wage increase rate to 20 percent. Both the nation's ordinary revenue and expenditure and the balance of payment would see deficits of 2.7 billion dollars and 2.2 billion dollars respectively and the fixed investment would stand at 3 percent, if the leading economic indicators were held down at the current levels, the KDI said.

Wholesale and consumer price increases could be controlled at 21.5 percent and 21 percent, respectively, under this assumption, the KDI said.

However, the achievement of the 6.5 percent GNP growth projected for 1981 is expected to depend heavily on the outcome of this year's rice harvest, since the GNP growth target was set on the assumption that the rice harvest could reach 38 million sok, an average crop (a sok is equal to 5.12 U.S. bushels).

The KDI survey also said Korea could register an 8 percent GNP growth, 10 percent fixed investment, 25.5 billion dollars in commodity exports and 29.5 billion dollars in imports, creating 4 billion dollars in trade deficit, if the money supply rate was held down to 20 percent, the lending interest rate to 18 percent, the deposit interest rate to 17 percent, and the foreign exchange rate increase to 3 percent (714 won against the U.S. dollar).

JAL ORDERED TO RAISE WAGES--Seoul, 31 Jul (YONHAP)--Korea's Central Labor Committee Thursday ordered Japan Air Lines (JAL) to raise wages for its Korean employees by an average 21.5 percent retroactive to 1 April, committee officials said Friday. The ruling came following a series of meetings between the representatives of the Korean branch of JAL and the Korean employees of the JAL branch under the committee's arbitration. The two parties also agreed that the Korean employees would pursue labor union activities within the limits of the Korean Labor Act and respect the company's management right. The Korean branch of JAL had conflicts with Korean employees on wage problems since March. [Text] [SK310145 Seoul YONHAP in English 0129 GMT 31 Jul 81]

KAL SERVICE TO TRIPOLI--Seoul, 31 Jul (YONHAP)--The Korean Air Lines (KAL) will open its regular service to Tripoli by September, extending its Seoul-Bahrain route to the Libyan capital, KAL officials said Friday. According to the officials, KAL already agreed with Libya on the fee to use the route. Korea and Libya established full diplomatic relations last December, but have not yet concluded an aviation agreement. KAL, thus, would initial the Seoul-Tripoli service under the Libyan Government's temporary authorization, the officials said. The two countries are scheduled to hold a bilateral aviation meeting in October. [Text] [SK310054 Seoul YONHAP in English 0049 GMT 31 Jul 81]

GRAIN PRICE INCREASE--The retail price of government-held rice was hiked by an average 5 percent to 54,380 won (first grade) and to 46,700 won (second grade) per 80 kg each effective midnight yesterday. The Ministry of Agriculture and Fisheries officials said yesterday that along with this, consumer prices for state-owned compound grain and barley were increased by 4.3 and 4.6 percent to 3,860 won per 10 kg and 20,180 won per 76.5 kg respectively. According to the officials, the price hike for state-held grains is part of the government's efforts to reduce snowballing deficits in the "grain account" of the government special budget and to enhance the morale of farmers. With the measure, the ministry officials said, the special grain account deficit will be reduced by 36,200 million won every year. In the meantime, the additional burden imposed on consumers by the increase will be 1,050 won per month for a five-member family. The wholesale and retail prices will be affected by 0.169 and 0.127 percent each, the officials said. In the case of government-held rice, the government has adopted a differential price system (first and second grade) for the first time to stop rice dealers from cheating consumers into buying government-held rice instead of ordinary rice available on the free market. Ordinary rice is superior in quality to government-held rice. [Text] [SK240553 Seoul THE KOREA HERALD in English 24 Jul 81 p 1]

MEXICO OFFERS 40,000 BARRELS/DAY--Seoul, 24 Jul (AFP)--During conversations held today between Julio Moctezuma, director general of PEMEX, and Pak Pong-hwan, South Korean minister of energy and resources, Mexico offered to supply South Korea with 40,000 barrels of crude oil per day at a provisional price of $33.25 per barrel. However, South Korea wanted to purchase only half the amount offered. It will therefore be necessary to negotiate further details. Because of its persistently stagnant economy, South Korea is currently being supplied with more crude oil than it needs; 556,000 barrels per day. Its daily consumption is only 450,000 barrels. SAMSUNG CONTRACT WITH LIBYA--Korea's Samsung Construction Co., part of the Samsung Business Group, has won a $130 million contract for the construction of steel-making factories and infrastructure facilities in the Misurata Steel Mill Complex in Libya, business sources said last week. The sources said that firms from Japan and other advanced countries had bid for the contract, awarded by the state-run Libyan General Corp. for iron and steel projects. SHIPBUILDING FOR MIDDLE EAST--Korea's Hyundai Business Group last week signed a contract with the United Arab Shipping Co. to build nine container vessels for $400 million. Under the contract, Hyundai will construct nine 1,846-TEU (20-foot equivalent unit) container ships of 35,000-DWT class, and 14,000 steel containers, for the Arab shipping firm. The largest in the Middle East, it is jointly operated by Kuwait, Bahrain, Iraq, Saudi Arabia, Qatar and the United Arab Emirates. The vessels will be built at the Ulsan shipyards of the Hyundai Heavy Industries Co., an affiliate of the Hyundai Group, for delivery from January through October 1983. JOINT U.S. PETROLEUM VENTURE--The U.S. offshore drilling firm, Zapex, is the final choice as partner for the state-run Korea Petroleum Development Corp. (PEDCO) in a joint venture for the development of undersea oil resources in a 6,070 sq. km of continental shelf area southwest of Cheju-do, the Ministry of Energy and Resources announced last week. The Korea-U.S. joint oil exploration area--part of the 42,449 sq. km fourth mining block bordering the fifth mining block to the east and the seventh mining block to the southeast--is among the highest in potential for commercial-scale crude oil deposits in the Korean offshore areas. The terms of the contract--signed directly between PEDCO and Zapex--are far more favorable to

Korea than any previous agreements with foreign oil exploration firms for development of offshore hydrocarbon resources, ministry officials said. The joint venture will be equally shared by both sides and the Korean side will collect as much as 20 per cent of the total oil production in royalties, the officials said. The figure is well compared with 12.5 per cent in royalties of oil production which Korea can collect from KOAM--Korean-side concessionares in the seventh submine zone in the Korea-Japan joint development zone, they said. Zapex is to pay 50 per cent of its profits from the oil wells in the joint development zone as corporate tax to the Korean government after completely recovering its costs, they added. It means Korea will take more than 80 per cent of all profits in the fourth mine zone minus exploration and development costs, the official explained. LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS--The Ministry of Labor Affairs held a meeting with officials of the Federation of Korean Trade Unions (FKTU) and various industrial labor unions on 21 July. They discussed the incidence of illegal labor practices as well as the management of labor unions. The meeting was attended by some 35 government and union officials, including Vice Minister of Labor Affairs Chong Tong-ch'ol and FKTU Secretary General Yi Yong-chun. At the meeting, the ministry disclosed that "If any unlawful labor practices are ferreted out in the future those involved will be severely punished pursuant to the provisions of the Labor Standard Law and other pertinent regulations." It further said, "The labor unions are earnestly urged to cooperate closely with employers in efforts to prevent the further occurrence of illegal labor practices through compromise and dialogue rather than extreme confrontation." Responding to this, labor officials asserted that "Illegal labor practices will disappear from our society only if labor union activities become reinvigorated." They then made a suggestion that the scope of labor union activities be expanded. At the meeting, the ministry further revealed that employers of 14 places of business involved in unlawful labor practices were legally booked and that labor union leaders laid off for their leading role in the labor movement had been reemployed. MEASURES TO INDUCE FOREIGN CAPITAL--Seoul, 25 Jul (YONHAP)--The Korean Government will specify in which sectors and to what extent foreign investments are possible in a measure to induce more foreign capital into the country, according to a white paper released Saturday by the Economic Planning Board. The "White Paper on Foreigners' Investment" lists 427 industrial sectors in which foreigners are permitted to invest, 49.9 percent of the country's total business divisions. Among those permitted sectors, foreigners are allowed to invest up to 100 percent in 56 industries which need sophisticated technology and massive facility apparatus, such as computers and some heavy industries. The paper also specifies that in 371 sectors foreigners are permitted to invest up to 50 percent in joint ventures with Korean businesses, including auto parts, dyestuffs and medical materials. The Korean Government has so far dealt separately with each case of foreign investment, approving inducements totaling 1.22 billion U.S. dollars in 822 instances from 1962 through June 1981. ECONOMIC GROWTH IN 1981--Seoul, 16 Jul (YONHAP)--The Korean Government expects the country's economy to grow 6 to 7 percent this year, exceeding the originally projected 5 to 6 percent growth target. Deputy Premier-Economic Planning Minister Sin Pyong-hyon Thursday said that the reflexive growth of the agricultural sector, stemming chiefly from a normal rice crop this year, would boost the economy that much. Sin made the point at a joint meeting of government officials and leading members of the ruling Democratic Justice Party. In a briefing on this year's economic prospects, Sin also said that since increases in prices of raw materials on international markets are expected to slow down in the second half of this year, the government should be able to hold this year's domestic price hikes at 20 percent. Growing exports and stabilized crude oil prices will improve the country's trade balance in the second half of this year, but the current account will not improve considerably due to increased interest payments, Sin said. He said he expected the currently sluggish investments to increase beginning in the last quarter of this year. [Text] [SK160309 Seoul YONHAP in English 0259 GMT 16 Jul 81]

LABOR UNION MEMBERSHIP DECLINES--Seoul, 20 Jul (YONHAP)--Labor union membership has decreased rapidly in Korea since the government revised the Labor Union Act late last year to prevent third parties from intervening in labor problems and to tighten the requirements for establishing labor unions. According to Federation of Korean Trade Unions (FKTU) officials, the number of unionized workers dropped from 947,736 at the end of last year to 940,985 at the end of January, 920,317 in February, and 837,766 in March. A ranking FKTU official Monday said that the rapid decrease in unionized workers was causing serious financial problems in FKTU operations. The official added that another revision of the Labor Union Act is urgently needed to revive Korea's labor unions. [Text] [SK200054 Seoul YONHAP in English 0052 GMT 20 Jul 81]

AGRARIAN LANDTAX BURDEN DISCUSSED

Seoul HANGUK KYONGJE SINMUN in Korean 17 Jun 81 p 7

[Article by Kim Ki-song, Research Staff at the Institute of Agrarian Economy: "Agrarian Landtax Burden Is Heavy"]

[Text] The contradictory and irrational nature of the current agrarian landtax causes its burden to fall heavily on farmers, becoming a major element in farmers' dissatisfaction with taxes.

An on-site study conducted by the Institute of Agrarian Economy last October found that of the 1,802 farm households interviewed, 27 percent (484) said that the agrarian landtax is excessive while no fewer than 64 percent (1,150) stated their dissatisfaction with unfair assessing of the landtax was unfair; the results of the Institute's recent analysis of the farmers' agrarian landtax burden, based on related regulations such as taxation and front-line administrative organ collection of agrarian landtax assessments, show sufficient cause for the farmers' discontent.

That is, not only do the farmers bear an agrarian landtax markedly higher than the urban workers' composite income tax rate, but the second class agrarian landtax (assessed on land used to grow pepper, garlic, apples, ginseng, etc) is heavier than the first class agrarian landtax (assessed) on land used to grow rice), so that the great difference in tax liability for these lands makes for another major element in the farmers' dissatisfaction.

These facts can be seen clearly in the comparison of current tax liability contained in Table 1.

As seen in Table 1, to pay W100,000 in 1980 taxes, the urban worker's tax rate would be only 2.9 percent of a composite income of W3,410,000 whereas a rice farming household's rate would be 7.5 percent of a rice income of W1,330,000 (gross rice income W1,830,000) and a pepper cultivating farm household's rate would be 13.8 percent of a W770,000 pepper income, both much heavier tax burdens than that of the urban worker.

Furthermore, if the urban worker is a salaried employee receiving a 400 percent bonus per year, an additional W520,000 can be figured into his basic tax exclusion so that his tax decreases from W100,000 to W61,800, for a tax rate of 1.8 percent.

Table 1. Current Tax Liabilities, Urban/Rural & Class A/B Agrarian Land

Income & Tax Rate Liability Amount	Rice Income		Pepper Income		Composite Income Tax
	Rice (1) Household	Tax Rate	Pepper Household	Tax Rate	Urban Worker	Tax (2) Rate
₩10,000	₩659,000 (906,500)	1.5%	₩210,000	4.8%	₩2,027,000	0.5% (0)
₩100,000	₩1,330,000 (1,829,400)	7.5%	₩772,500	13.8%	₩3,410,000	2.9% (1.6)
₩200,000	₩2,057,400 (2,830,000)	9.7%	₩1,222,500	16.4%	₩4,427,000	4.5% (3.3)

*(1) Figures in parentheses are gross income from rice production.
(2) Figures in parentheses are tax rates for the case in which the urban worker receives a yearly 400 percent bonus, after the basic tax exclusion of ₩2,380,000 including the ₩520,000 bonus exclusion.

By the same calculation, in a case where the tax is ₩200,000, the tax rate for first class agrarian land is 9.7 percent and for second class agrarian land, 16.7 percent, while by comparison the composite income tax is no more than 4.5 percent (3.3 percent with a 400 percent bonus).

If there were a large proportion of farm households whose rice and pepper incomes were as high as the ₩3,500,000, ₩4,000,000 or ₩8,000,000 incomes of urban workers, the inequality of tax burdens between city and country would not be such a serious problem.

However, in reality the 1979 national average farm household rice income was only ₩960,863 and the income of farms between 1 and 2 hectares, which comprise 41 percent of all farm households, was no more than between ₩1,538,204 and ₩1,701,386 and even those large farms over 2 hectares only reached the level of ₩2,471,390 (gross income from rice production, ₩3,400,000; tax table, ₩2,660,000).

Thus under the tax structure of current tax law (See Table 2), the fact that in the stratum where income exceeds ₩2,400,000 (rice farm household gross rice income, ₩3,140,000; pepper farm household income, ₩2,510,000) the agrarian land tax rate is lower than that of the composite income tax is meaningless as far as keeping the farmers' tax burden as low as that of urban workers; on the contrary, most farm households (those with less than ₩3,140,000 in gross rice income or less than ₩2,510,000 in pepper income) suffer the application of higher tax rates than urban workers and bear a great tax burden.

Table 2. Comparison of Urban/Rural Tax Rate Structure

Rate of Tax Assessment Per Type of Tax	Agrarian Landtax		Composite Income Tax
	First Class (W740,000)	Second Class (W10,000)	(W1,860,000)
Under W150,000	6%	10%	6%
W150,000-300,000	8	15	6
300,000-1,200,000	10	20	6
1,200,000-1,800,000	10	20	8
1,800,000-2,400,000	10	20	10
2,400,000-3,000,000	10	20	12
4,500,000-5,400,000	10	20	21

The following items are cited as elements in the inequality between urban and rural tax burdens.

One: The agrarian landtax basic exclusion is too low, either relatively or absolutely. (See Table 3)

Table 3. Comparison of Agrarian Land Tax and Composite Income Tax Basic Exclusions (in thousands of won)

	77	79	80	80/77	Comparison with Household Expense
First Class Agrarian Land Tax (A)	433 (28.3 som@)	740 (41.4 som)	740 (33.2 som)	167%	44.5%
Second Class Agrarian Land Tax (B)	53	110	110	207%	-
Composite Income Tax (C)	1,200	1,860 2,380*	1,860 2,380*	155%	87.9%
B/A	36.9%	34.0%	39.8%	-	(112.5%)*

@som=4.96 bushels
*includes 400% bonus for urban workers

Compared to the W1,380,000--W1,860,000 basic exclusion of the composite income tax, the agrarian landtax basic exclusion of W740,000--W110,000 is low, and the percentage of the average household expense accounted for by the basic exclusion is only 44.5 percent for the landtax as compared to 87.9 percent for the composite income tax.

Two: The landtax rate applied to medium (1.5-2.0 ha) and smaller farm households is relatively high.

The composite income tax applies rates of 6--8--10 percent up to an income of W4,780,000 (assessment level W2,400,000), but the agrarian land tax applies rates of 6-8-10 percent to incomes ranging from W410,000 (second class land) to W7,560,000 (gross rice income W1,040,000, first class land).

Table 4. Comparison of Tax Rates and Assessment Intervals

Agrarian Land Tax			Composite Income Tax
Assessment Level	%	Interval	Assessment Level	%	Interval
Under W150,000	6	W150,000
Gross Rice Income W890,000	(10)
W150,000-300,000	8	W150,000
Gross Rice Income W1,040,000	(15)
Over W300,000	10	unlimited
	(20)
	10		under W1,200,000	6	W1,200,000
	10		W1,200,000--W1,800,000	8	W600,000
	10		W1,800,000--W2,400,000	10	W600,000
	10		W2,400,000--W3,000,000	12	W600,000
	10		W3,000,000--W3,600,000	15	W600,000
	10		W4,500,000--W5,400,000	21	W900,000

Figures in ( ) are tax rates for second class agrarian land.

Three: The level intervals set by the agrarian landtax in order to apply tax rates and produce taxes are too narrow (refer to Table 4). In comparison to the W1,200,000--600,000--1,000,000--1,500,000 intervals of the composite income tax, the W150,000-W150,000-unlimited interval of the agrarian landtax is narrow; in particular, the first class agrarian landtax assessment interval of W150,000 was set in 1975 when the price of one 54 kilogram kama of rice was W9,530 so that it was then a substantial sum equivalent to 15.7 kama, whereas by the 1981 price levels it had shrunken to 6.7 kama, a 43 percent decrease.

Four: Because the first class agrarian landtax basic exclusion is set by the tax law as a fixed monetary amount (W433,000 in 1977, W530,000 in 1978, W740,000 in 1979/80), the actual basic exclusion amount (in kind) decreases with the increase in rice prices; as a result, the farmers' tax burden increases automatically. The W740,000 basic exclusion current as of the end of 1980 is equivalent to 33.2 kama of rice (government price standard for second grade rice), which, compared with the 41.4 kama of 1979 means a 20 percent decrease in the actual basic exclusion; as a result, the farm household that bore an agrarian landtax of 5.3 kama in 1979 bore one of 6.3 kama in 1980, so that even though other factors such as tax rates and assessment intervals remained fixed, the increase in the government price (25 percent in 1979) caused the farmers to bear a 25 percent actual tax increase during the span of 1 year.

Considering the major problems cited above, in order to alleviate the inequality in tax burdens between city and country, and between first and second class agrarian land households, and thereby ease the farmers' discontent with taxes, the following major changes in the agrarian landtax must be carried out: One, increase the basic exclusion of the agrarian landtax to a certain level, taking into consideration farm household expenses, parity with urban workers, the proportion of taxable crops in agricultural income and increases in rice prices, after which it would be adjusted in linkage with rice prices; two, increase the assessment interval from the current W150,000 to a minimum of W350,000, and; three, change the first class agrarian landtax from the current "rough rice income" standard to an "income amount" standard like that of the second class agrarian landtax borne by the farm households cultivating pepper or like the composite income tax borne by urban workers, and make it possible to adjust assessment amounts by a system of linkage which considers rice yields.

FOREIGN LANGUAGE TRAINING--Seoul, 15 Jul--The Korean Education Ministry plans to set up a foreign language high school next year, and to expand the foreign language curiculum at the 11 high schools already designated by the ministry to give extensive foreign language education. Ministry officials said Wednesday that such measures were necessary for effective foreign language education overall, and to train students who have a natural aptitude for foreign tongues. The ministry also plans to send more foreign language teachers overseas beginning next year to help acquaint them with foreign things and languages, and to host frequent workshops staffed by many foreigners to improve the quality of foreign language teachers. An ad hoc foreign language education improvement committee will be formed this month to discuss and work out other measures such as beginning foreign language education earlier, noting students conversational ability in their academic records and testing it in school entrance examinations, and revamping the current foreign language curricula at middle and high schools, the officials said. JAPAN SEEKS EXPANDED CULTURAL EXCHANGES

[Text] Seoul, 29 Jul (YONHAP)--The Japanese Government has a strong desire for expanding government-level cultural exchanges with Korea as part of its efforts to eradicate the two peoples' prejudice against each other and increase mutual understanding between the two peoples, diplomatic sources here said Wednesday.

The Tokyo government is expected to take up the issue of cultural exchanges between the two countries at the Korean-Japanese foreign ministers conference in August and the Korean-Japanese ministerial meeting in September, the sources said.

According to the sources Tokyo views that Korean-Japanese relations are not developing in close cooperation in recent days and the Tokyo government attributes it to the lack of mutual understanding between the two peoples.

To that end, Tokyo may propose forming a bilateral culture exchange committee to promote mutual visits by youths, scholars, artists and journalists to each other country and expand exchanges of popular art between the two countries, according to the sources.

Korea and Japan have concluded a culture cooperation treaty designed for the return of Korean cultural assets brought into Japan, and the two countries, in line with an agreement at the Korean-Japanese regular ministerial meeting in August 1971, send 10 to 20 college students to each other annually for the particular purpose of cultural exchanges.

Meanwhile, government officials, acknowledging the need to promote cultural exchanges between the two countries, said that they were not sure how the Korean people would accept such a move in the light of their anti-Japanese sentiment.

The officials, however, added that if the Japanese Government makes a formal proposal for such exchanges, the government would decide on it after close consultations with the ministries concerned.

RESTRICTIONS ON OVERSEAS INVESTMENT TO BE LIFTED

SK140902 Seoul YONHAP in English 0823 GMT 14 Jul 81

[Text] Seoul, 14 Jul (YONHAP)--The Korean Government is expected to lift all restrictions on overseas investments in an effort to penetrate the vast export markets in Southeast Asia and insure a more stable supply of natural resources in the wake of President Chon Tu-hwan's recent visit to the five ASEAN member countries.

To that end, the government will allow firms in the agricultural and forestry, precious metals, restaurant, real estate and service sectors to operate in foreign countries, ranking government sources said Tuesday. Such capital investments overseas had so far been banned.

The government will also simplify licensing procedures for such projects as the joint development of natural resources overseas and plant exports, while modifying legal provisions governing overseas investments, so that Korean businessmen can make capital investments more easily.

The government has so far sought a foreign exchange policy emphasizing maximum inducements of foreign capital and minimum flights of foreign exchange overseas. The urgent task now facing the nation, however, is to promote exports and insure a stable supply of raw materials, necessitating a lifting of restrictions on overseas investments, the officials said.

Overseas investments of more than 500,000 U.S. dollars will no longer require government permission if they are approved by the Bank of Korea.

Noting that the removal of restrictions on overseas investments is in line with the government's internationalization policy to encourage overseas study employment and travel, the officials noted that investments in the production of military hardware or real estate aimed at diverting foreign exchange would still be banned.

The government has programmed 30 billion won (43.8 million U.S. dollars) to support overseas investments this year. As of the end of May, however, only 600 million won (one U.S. dollar is worth about 685 won) had actually been invested overseas.

Overseas investments by private Korean firms amounted to 231 million dollars in 318 projects, on an approval basis, during the first 6 months of this year, of which only 134 million dollars was actually invested.

EFFORTS FOR AFRICAN TRADE--Seoul, 13 Jul (YONHAP)--The Korean Traders Association (KTA) Monday called upon both the government and domestic traders to make steadier efforts to boost exports to African countries, which reportedly have vast trade potential. In a report on export strategy for the African region, the KTA pointed out that the country's exports to African countries had fluctuated sharply in recent years because of the lack of effective cooperation channels with them. The KTA report foresaw good prospects for exports of medium raw materials and capital goods to African countries to help implement their industrialization and development projects, and called upon Korean traders to handle orders from them promptly and conscientiously, even if the quantities involved are insignificant. The report also said that measures should be taken quickly to help encourage Korean firms to set up overseas subsidiaries in joint ventures with African countries, particularly in the construction field. Korean firms should participate in development projects in the African region, "not as economic benefactors but as partners," boosting credit exports and strengthening technical training for people there, the report said. REMITTANCES BY FOREIGN FIRMS--Seoul, 18 Jul (YONHAP)--The 821 foreign-invested companies doing business in Korea remitted a total of 38.09 billion won (55.6 million U.S. dollars) last year in profits earned the year before. Top remitters were the four refineries with a total of 7.76 billion won, followed by 175 electronics firms (6.27 billion won) and 10 financial companies (6.26 billion won), according to foreign-invested companies' 1980 corporate taxes filed Saturday with the Office of National Tax Administration (ONTA). Sales by the 821 firms totaled 6.12 trillion won (8.93 billion dollars), of which real income less expenses was 359.1 billion won, thus registering a 5.86-percent profit ratio in 1979, the ONTA data showed. The sales accounted for about 13 percent of the 46 trillion won all the domestic corporations made during the same period, and 23 percent of the domestic companies' 1.82 trillion won in income. Corporate taxes on the foreign-invested firms' income were originally assessed as 103.5 billion won, but their actual payments were 70.28 billion won, since 32.1 percent of the taxes assessed was discounted for the foreign firms. Of the 821, 693 companies engaged in manufacturing achieved a sales performance of 5.86 trillion won, or 95.7 percent of the total sales. Of those manufacturing businesses, the four oil firms' sales were 2.06 trillion won, followed by 175 electric and electronic makers (937.4 billion won), 73 textiles firms (519 billion won) and 63 metals companies (413 billion won). 'YONHAP' PROFILES SECOND POLITICAL AFFAIRS MINISTER

[Text] Seoul, 16 Jul (YONHAP)--Retired Army General No Tae-u, appointed Thursday as Korea's second political affairs minister, was an elite army general who devoted himself to the birth of the country's Fifth Republic, assisting President Chon Tu-hwan with sharp judgment and firm determination in such national crises as the 26 October 1979 presidential assassination, the 12 December 1979 incident and the May 1980 Kwangju uprising.

No, a graduate of the Korean Military Academy's 11th class which was commissioned in 1955, served as the commander of an airborne brigade, assistant deputy chief for operational affairs of the Office of the Presidential Security Force, commander of an army division, capital garrison commander and chief of the defense security command before retiring from active duty Wednesday.

Known as a precise theorist, he is said to value the process of a thing more highly than its results. During his days as a field army commander, his chief motto was warm human relations and unity. He once said that the army is a collective organization that lives on morale--a phrase which has become a byword of the military.

After graduating from the military academy, he received additional military education at a special warfare school in the United States, and at the defense college.

During his cadet days, he ran the 100-meter race in 11 seconds and played a leading role in forming the first rugby team at the academy. His hobbies include tennis and music. He has such a deep knowledge of music that he writes the notes on music paper. He has one son and one daughter.

DAILY MARKS ANNIVERSARY OF WORK ON NATIONAL FRONT

SK221358 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1041 GMT 22 Jul 81

[Text] Pyongyang, 22 Jul (KCNA)--Papers here today dedicate articles to the 35th anniversary of the publication of "On Forming the Committee of the Democratic National United Front," a historic work of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song.

In this historic work published at a meeting of representatives of the democratic political parties and social organizations in North Korea on 22 July 1946 the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song clearly expounded the need to form the Committee of the Democratic National United Front and its purpose and role and set forth a 20-point platform as a common programme of the committee of the DNUF.

In an article titled "Let Us Achieve Cause of National Reunification With United Efforts of the Whole Nation" NODONG SINMUN says:

An idea, theory, policy and fighting tasks clarified in the work have been brilliantly implemented in our peoples revolutionary practice to display their great vitality.

To step up the revolution and construction through a vigorous united front movement is a consistent policy of our party.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song set forth the chuche-oriented line of a united front in the first days of his revolutionary activities in his early years, implemented it with credit and accomplished the historic cause of national liberation. After liberation, he led the united front work to a new higher stage in conformity with the prevailing situation of the country and the requirement of the revolution.

He gave precedence, first of all, to organisationally rallying all the political parties, social organisations and people of all strata striving for the development and prosperity of the country and the independent and peaceful reunification of the fatherland.

He energetically organised and led the struggle to rally all forces supporting the construction of a democratic peoples republic while publishing immortal classic works including "On the Building of New Korea and the National United Front" to thoroughly expose and frustrate the manoeuvres of the U.S. imperialists and their lackeys to disintegrate and weaken the revolutionary forces and the wrong tendencies of the right and "left" opportunists. As a result, the Committee of the Democratic National United Front was formed on 22 July 1946, which was later developed and strengthened into the Democratic Front for the Reunification of the Fatherland.

The Democratic Front for the Reunification of the Fatherland was the only united front organisation of whole Korea embracing all the democratic political parties and social organisations in the north and the south and even many middle-of-the-road and some rightist political parties and social organisations in South Korea desirous of the independent and peaceful reunification of the country.

With the formation of the Democratic Front for the Reunification of the Fatherland, our peoples government could rely on a more solid mass basis and ensure the decisive superiority of the revolutionary forces over the counterrevolutionary forces by firmly rallying broad segments of the popular masses including workers and peasants on a nationwide scale under the banner of anti-U.S. national salvation.

The article points to the fact that the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song wisely guided the united front work in each period and at each stage of the revolutionary development and that the glorious party center bears full responsibility for the destiny of the people of all segments and accords them a deep political trust and solicitude.

It stresses:

To reunify the divided country is the greatest national desire of the entire Korean people and the supreme task of the nation which brooks not a moments delay.

The reunification of the country is not a work for the interests of any separate class or separate circle but the cause of the whole nation. Therefore, only the united efforts of the nation can overcome all the obstacles in the way of national reunification and firmly guarantee the founding of the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo.

To achieve the great unity of the whole nation, we should take the right stand of transcending the differences in ideology and idea, political view, religious belief and social system, treasuring the common interests of the nation above anything else and subordinating everything to national reunification.

DAILIES HAIL XIGANG BATTLE ANNIVERSARY

SK211055 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1032 GMT 21 Jul 81

[Text] Pyongyang, 21 Jul (KCNA)--Papers here marked the 45th anniversary of the historic victory in the Xigang battle organised and commanded by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song in the period of the anti-Japanese armed struggle.

NODONG SINMUN in an article titled "Brilliant Battle Which Demonstrated Outstanding Art of Command and Might of Chuche-Based Guerrilla Tactics" says:

The Xigang battle which was waged in mid-July 1936, under the outstanding guidance of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song was a historic battle of weighty significance in the advance of the Korean Peoples Revolutionary Army into the border area around Mt Paektu-san and the establishment of a new revolutionary base--Mt Paektu-san base.

Xigang located in the doorway to thick forests of Mt Paektu-san was a point which must be seized without fail to constantly expand the military and political activities of the Korean Peoples Revolutionary Army into the border area with Mt Paektu-san as the center and deep into the homeland.

The enemy had a vicious regiment of the puppet Manchoukou army stationed in Xigang, taking into account that it is a very favourable place for the activities of the Korean Peoples Revolutionary Army [KPRA].

After making a thorough calculation of the deployment of enemy forces, the natural and geographical conditions of the area for military action and the task of the main unit of the KPRA, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song chose Xigang as a target of large-scale military action to make it possible to successfully attain the political and military goal of the operation of advance into the border area.

The main unit of the Korean Peoples Revolutionary Army, according to the battle plan drawn up by him completely disarmed the enemy regiment, not suffering even a single loss, by applying a powerful firing operation combined with a fire attack and an active tactics of disintegrating the enemy forces to win a great victory.

The brilliant victory in the Xigang battle was a shining fruition of the outstanding art of command of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the ever-victorious iron-willed brilliant commander, and of a unique guerrilla tactics personally created by him.

The significance of the victory in the Xigang battle lies in that it clearly showed that the tactics and combat methods of the Korean Peoples Revolutionary Army were flexible and diverse and no force could match its might and that it inspired the people and Chinese anti-Japanese units with a confidence in victory and courage and roused our people to courageously turn to the front for the liberation of the country, stresses the article.

NODONG SINMUN' HAILS THREE-REVOLUTION TEAM MOVEMENT

SK231559 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1529 GMT 23 Jul 81

[Text] Pyongyang, 23 Jul (KCNA)--NODONG SINMUN today carries an editorial article titled "Three-Revolution for Realising Party's Leadership Over Three Revolutions."

The article points out that the three-revolution team movement is a powerful movement for vigorously accelerating the revolution and construction under the leadership of the party and is the method of revolutionary guidance of our style on which we should constantly keep a tight hold till we build communism.

It is a question of principle arising in accomplishing the cause of socialism and communism to firmly guarantee the leadership of the party over the three revolutions, ideological, technical and cultural, the article declares, and goes on:

Our revolution which stepped on to a new stage of development entering the 1970's demanded that the three revolutions, ideological, technical and cultural, became further organized and invigorated.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song with his scientific insight into the demand of the new stage of the development of socialist construction, initiated the three-revolution team movement on the basis of the rich practical experiences he had gained in the course of leading the revolution and construction, thus showing a new way for thoroughly realising the party's leadership over the three revolutions.

The initiation of the three-revolution team movement marked the origin of the new method of revolutionary guidance of the working class party and a historic event of great significance in accomplishing the revolutionary cause.

The movement is a powerful method of revolutionary guidance which makes it possible to thoroughly realise the leadership of our party over the three revolutions in compliance with the new demand of the developing realities in which the cause of modelling the whole society after the chuche idea is being accelerated on an overall scale.

It, first of all, helps thoroughly realise the leadership of the party over the three revolutions by strengthening centralist guidance.

It allows the members of the three-revolution teams to disseminate the intention of the party center among the masses in time, not passing through an intermediate stage, and actively organize and mobilize them in the struggle for its implementation, jointly with the party organisations.

If the party's leadership is to be successfully ensured, the party and the masses should be united in one body by blood ties and the will of the masses must be conveyed to the central committee of the party quickly and correctly. The three-revolution team movement guarantees its successful realization through a centralist guidance.

The three-revolution teams make it its main mode of activities to go deep among the masses of the people and lend an ear to their opinions and to carry through the party's policy in one body with the masses.

By making the three-revolution teams always work in this way, the movement helps concentrate on the party in time the creative opinions raised in the fulfillment of the three revolutions and the aspiration and desire of the masses.

The movement also helps thoroughly establish the leadership of the party over the three revolutions by actively organizing and mobilizing the masses in the revolutionary struggle and constructive work through the implementation of the revolutionary mass line.

The three-revolution teams always go deep among the masses and energetically conduct a wide range of political work including political propaganda and economic agitation, while explaining to them our party's policy of three revolutions, the decisions and instructions of the party. They also make it their consistent mode of activity to discuss solutions with the functionaries, working people, scientists and technicians when difficult tasks are rasied and solve the knotty problems by giving full play to the revolutionary enthusiasm and creative wisdom of the masses.

Today the three-revolution team movement is powerfully displaying its validity, advantages and invincible vitality through the dynamic struggle for modelling the whole society after the chuche idea. This movement, above all, the struggle to carry out the three revolutions, ideological, technical and cultural, is becoming more organized and invigorated.

And, with the three-revolution team movement progressing vigorously, militant capacity of the party organisations has increased and their leading role has been heightened still further.

The three-revolution team movement is, indeed, a scientific and revolutionary movement which has given a most correct answer to the question of the method of revolutionary guidance of the working class party under socialism and it has made a great contribution to further developing and enriching the guiding theory of chuche.

Saying that the vast revolutionary tasks facing us and the prevailing situation make it urgent to further strengthen the three-revolution team movement, the article stresses:

We should give full scope to the great might of this movement by keeping a tight hold on it.

'NODONG SINMUN' ON TAEAN WORK SYSTEM

Part Two

SK161108 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1030 GMT 16 Jul 81

[Text] Pyongyang, 16 Jul (KCNA)--NODONG SINMUN, 15 July, in the second part of its editorial article headlined "True Way of Socialist Economic Management Opened by Great Leadership," says that our people under the guidance of the Workers Party of Korea have proved the advantages of the Taean work system and worked great miracles in socialist construction during the past two decades.

The course of establishing and carrying through the Taean work system has been a course of an acute struggle for repulsing the infiltration of all outdated theories of capitalist economic management and resolutely defending and upholding the chuche-based theory of socialist economic management and, through its history of 20 years, the system has powerfully demonstrated its invincible vitality and superiority as a revolutionary economic management system, declares the article. The validity and superiority of the Taean work system, it goes on, lie first of all in that it makes it possible to most thoroughly realize the party's leadership over socialist construction.

The Taean work system is a powerful economic management system for most thoroughly ensuring the collective leadership of the party committee over economic construction. The collective leadership of the party committee is the core of this system.

The collective leadership of the party committee over economic management is, in essence, a political leadership for thoroughly carrying into practice the plan and intention of the party center on accelerating economic construction.

The validity and superiority of this system also lie in that it makes it possible to most fully realise the centralist leadership of the state over socialist economy.

The highly organized socialist economy can be successfully operated only by the centralist leadership of the state under the guidance of the party and the leader.

The centralist leadership of the state over the economy should be further strengthened as the economy develops and socialist construction progresses. Otherwise, the function of the state as an economic organizer will be weakened and spontaneity and imbalance will appear in economic development and, further, the socialist system itself will be endangered.

The Taean work system is a powerful means of fully realising the centralist leadership over the economy because it firmly ensures the uniform and unitary nature of planning work, the first process of economic management, by the state and makes all the economic activities for the fulfillment of the national economic plan highly organised and disciplined.

The validity and vitality of the Taean work system find expression also in that it makes it possible to develop the socialist economy uninterruptedly at a high tempo.

To give precedence to political work, work with people, and rouse the producer masses to action ideologically is the basic demand of the Taean work system.

If one fails to give precedence to political work and conducts only economic and technical work in economic management, neglects work for heightening the ideological consciousness of the working people and lays onesided stress on material incentive, it will become impossible to actively mobilize the masses and energetically push forward economic construction.

Under the Taean work system the dispersed leadership over production is eliminated and the uniform and concentric leadership over production is thoroughly introduced and all economic organization from planning to the management of equipment, materials, manpower and finance is rationally conducted on the principles of the mass line and science. Therefore, the Taean system powerfully promotes the rapid development of production.

Over the past 20 years since the establishment of the Taean work system, the industrial production has grown at a rapid tempo of 14.5 percent on an annual average.

The history of the socialist construction of our country which has followed a road of leaping progress and innovation over the past two decades eloquently substantiates that the Taean work system, a brilliant embodiment of the chuche-based idea of economic management of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, is a most revolutionary and scientific system of economic guidance and management suitable to the nature of the socialist system, stresses the article.

Part Three

SK161533 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1505 GMT 16 Jul 81

[Text] Pyongyang, 16 Jul (KCNA)--Today the Taean work system created by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is being brought into full bloom and firmly established by the revolutionary leadership of our party.

It is an unshakable determination of our party to use the Taean work system as a powerful weapon in economic construction and reorganize economy according to the demand of chuche to accelerate the complete victory of socialism and hasten the cause of modelling the whole society on the chuche idea.

NODONG SINMUN, 15 July, stresses this in the third part of its editorial article headlined "True Way of Socialist Economic Management Opened by Great Leadership."

Our party is energetically leading the work of firmly establishing the Taean work system and giving full play to its superiority, the article notes, and goes on:

Considering it an important problem of defending the chuche-based idea and theory of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song on economic management to establish the Taean work system, our party always directs deep attention to this problem.

The Taean work system is a revolutionary system of economic guidance and management in which the idea of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song on economic management is consummated in an allround way.

Therefore, our party put forward the thorough establishment of the Taean system as the political work of defending and embodying his idea and policy, not as a mere business-like matter.

Our party also solves in time important theoretical and practical questions arising anew in the course of firmly establishing the Taean work system and correctly guides work for their correct application in practice.

In particular, our party meticulously guides work to strengthen collective consultation and give full play to democracy in economic management so that the will of the masses may be fully reflected in the matters discussed and decided upon at party committees and leads them to carry on administrative and economic work by the party's political method, getting rid of practices of undertaking administrative work and [word indistinct].

Our party constantly develops the Taean work system in depth by propounding unique ideas and theories to improve economic management and operation to suit the demand of the developing reality.

Our party consistently takes scientific and positive measures to bring economic management and operation as a whole to a high level by applying the Taean work system.

In order to fully comply with the demands of the Taean work system our party took an epochal step for introducing the cost-accounting system, a method of planned management and operation of socialist enterprises and saw to it that this method was fully applied at factories and enterprises.

Our party put forward the policy of regularizing and standardizing the enterprise management in conformity with the intrinsic requirement of socialist system and, to this end, has energetically pushed ahead with the work of building up a model factory in each domain of the national economy and generalizing its experience.

Under the leadership of our party brilliant successes have been registered in recent years in thoroughly establishing the Taean work system.

Today's pulsating reality firmly convinces our people that the superiority of the Taean work system will be given fuller scope as long as our party guides them in the van.

MINES ACHIEVE SUCCESS IN COAL PRODUCTION

SK271520 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1512 GMT 27 Jul 81

[Text] Pyongyang, 27 Jul (KCNA)--The coal miners throughout Korea are achieving big successes in coal production.

Coal mines in different parts replaced the equipment with large and modern ones and improved economic organisational work in conformity with the demand of the Taean work system, thereby substantially boosting coal output.

The Sunchon District coal mining complex, one of the powerful coal production bases of our country, normalises the fulfillment of the daily coal production assignments at 150 percent.

The 8 February Chikdong youth coal mine of the complex is overshooting the daily quotas 1.5-1.6 times by introducing a new blasting method and the Sinchang coal mine upped the daily coal output by surpassing the tunnelling assignments to over 1.4 times.

The productivity per coal cutter has been raised 1.3-1.5 times at the complex through a vigorous mass technical innovation drive.

The Yongnim coal mine of the Anju District coal mining complex is also effecting an unprecedented upswing in coal production. Entering this month, the Yongnim pit and Chilli pit of the coal mine keep overfulfilling nearly two times their daily production assignments.

The Kowon, Kaechon, Kujang and Tokchon District coal mining complexes have also registered big successes in coal production by giving precedence to tunnelling and earth scraping to create sufficient reserves for coal cutting.

Meanwhile, the Sunchon coal mine machine plant, the 10 May factory and other coal mine machine factories throughout the country produce and supply to coal mines many mining machines including light and effective coal cutters suitable to the coal seam conditions of the country.

DRIVE TO CREATE NEW FARMLAND UNDERWAY

SK300520 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0339 GMT 30 Jul 81

[Text] Pyongyang, 30 Jul (KCNA)--A drive for obtaining 200,000 hectares of new arable land is going on briskly in Korea. It is one of the important ways for steadily boosting agricultural production to expand the area under crops through a vigorous drive to find new land along with the reclamation of tideland in our country where the arable land is limited and grain output per unit area is already on a high level.

The Sixth Congress of the Workers Party of Korea held last year put forward the task to find 200,000 hectares of new land while reclaiming 300,000 hectares of tideland in the 1980s.

Now, a nation-wide survey is under way to acquire 200,000 hectares of new land. Reclaimable land accounting for more than 50 percent of the plan has already been chosen.

South Hwanghae Province has energetically accelerated a survey, having set itself the goal of obtaining 30,000 hectares of new land within 1 or 2 years, and has discovered large tracts of reclaimable land in river basins and hillocks.

Large areas of land suitable for reclamation has been found in North Pyongan, Kangwon, South and North Hamgyong provinces.

Working people in North Hamgyong Province, with a plan to obtain 10,000 hectares of new land within 2 or 3 years, have directed efforts to reclamation, while choosing suitable land. They have upturned 1,000 hectares of land to be used in farming in the past 1 month or so.

METAL INDUSTRY ENACTS CHUCHE-BASED CONSTRUCTION

[Text] Pyongyang, 29 Jul (KCNA)--The metal industry of Korea has rapidly developed into one with all its production domains perfected. With the implementation of the chuche-based principle of industrial construction put forward by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, independent and modern iron and steel bases have been firmly built up in the country.

Through the energetic reconstruction and expansion of the iron and steel works, a large furnace of 1,500 cubic meters, a large continuous sintering furnace with a capacity of 3 million tons, an oxygen converter and other large metallurgical equipment have been built. The Kimchaek iron and steel works has been turned into a gigantic modern metallurgical combine and the Hwanghae iron and steel complex, the Kangson steel complex, the Songjin steel works and other steel bases have been reconstructed and expanded.

During 1984, the last year of the Second Seven-Year Plan, 7.4-8 million tons of steel production is foreseen.

At the Kimchaek iron and steel works more large-size furnaces and various types of converters, sintering furnaces and coking batteries will be built.

Not only iron bases but also large heat and cold rolling bases and second-stage metal processing bases have been built additionally.

The output of rolled steel is now growing fast at the Kimchaek iron and steel works and all other iron and steel works.

Our metal industry produces tin gilded plate, wire-ropes, seamless steel pipes and other products of second-stage metal processing.

The nonferrous metal industrial bases have also been consolidated.

The existing smelteries have been remodelled with modern technique, more furnaces and electrolysers have been built and a process for the utilization of waste from smelting has been set up. The 24 August works and other smelteries have been built to increase smelting and rolling capacity.

Our nonferrous metal industry has a diversified production structure for the comprehensive processing and treatment of minerals to produce nonferrous metals and different pure and rare metals needed for the development of electronic and automatic industries.

The level of modernization of metal industry is very high. Under the wise leadership of the party center, semi-automation, automation, introduction of industrial television and remote control have been stepped up and modern technique introduced into production processes, to make a big stride in modernization and scientification in this field.

Our metal industry will make further development into a powerful industry which will produce 15 million tons of steel and 1.5 million tons of nonferrous metals in the 1980's.

ENGINEERING INDUSTRY CLAIMS SUCCESSES

SK301047 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1014 GMT 30 Jul 81

[Text] Pyongyang, 30 Jul (KCNA)--The Taean heavy machine combine, one of the mighty ordered equipment production bases of the country, is now building several large generators at fast speed on the finishing stage.

Its workers have doubled the speed of processing parts by introducing a high-speed cutting method.

The combine is powerfully pushing ahead with the construction of the central control room by industrial television which will greatly contribute to scientizing and modernizing the command of production and management of enterprise as a whole.

Korea has gained a big success in her energetic efforts to consolidate the material and technical foundations of engineering industry in compliance with the demand of the chuche-orientation, modernization and scientization of the national economy and to increase its production capacity.

A 5,000-ton sheet press, a large horizontal forging machine, a 20 ton high-speed precision stamping hammer and many other stamping equipment have been manufactured and applied to production to markedly enhance the proportion of pressing and stamping.

The invention and introduction of a new casting method has helped accelerate the specialization and intensification of casting.

The Yongsong machine complex has carried out the comprehensive mechanization of the heating oven to double the press and forging capacity. This year it has increased the capacity of processing of ordered equipment by more than 10,000 tons by building an all-purpose extra large gantry planer and other efficient machines.

The engineering industry raised the capacity of ordered equipment production 3.5 times in the first 3 years of the Second Seven-Year Plan by building new modern plants and reconstructing and expanding the existing ones.

Hydraulic monitor and bearing factories and production bases of engines of different capacity have been modernized still further.

Now the engineering industry of Korea produces all kinds of large machines and equipment, modern sets of plants, large cargo ships, electric locomotives, trucks, tractors and other rolling stock needed in all fields of the national economy.

The proportion of self-sufficiency in machinery and equipment is 98 percent.

BRIEFS

POWER OUTPUT STEADILY INCREASING--Pyongyang, 27 Jul (KCNA)--Power output is on the steady increase in Korea. The Pukchang thermal power plant, one of the biggest of its kind in Korea, is topping the hourly capacity of each generator by an average of 8,000 kwh by applying a new operating method. The Pyongyang and Chongchongang thermal power plants also have boosted output by raising the burning efficiency of fuel through the remodelling of the boilers. Power output is going up at the hydraulic power stations, too. The Tokno-gang, Sodusu and Kumgangsan power stations are surpassing their daily quotas 20 to 40 percent by enhancing the utility rate of the installations. The power output of the Chagang provincial complex of medium- and small-scale power stations during the last 6 months was 20 percent above that in last year's corresponding period. Our country aims at turning out 56,000 million-60,000 million kwh of electricity in 1984, the last year of the Second Seven-Year Plan. [Text] [SK271047 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1034 GMT 27 Jul 81]

YOUNG WORKERS INITIATE EFFORTS--Pyongyang, 28 Jul (KCNA)--Young workers of the Taean heavy machine combine, one of the leading machine production bases of our country, on 26 July held a meeting, at which they resolved to more energetically strive for carrying out this year's plan and the Second Seven-Year Plan (1978-84) ahead of schedule and called upon the entire young men and women of the country to wage a socialist emulation of loyalty in celebration of the 70th birthday of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song. The young workers of the combine resolved to launch a vigorous socialist emulation of loyalty for fulfilling the combines national economic plan for this year before the 20th anniversary of the creation of the Taean work system and carrying out the first 6 months assignments of 1982 before 15 April to greet the 70th birthday of the great leader (15 April 1982) as the greatest national holiday. They called upon the entire organisations of the League of Socialist Working Youth of Korea and young people across the country to actively respond to their call for socialist emulation of loyalty. MEETING MARKS OPERA TROUPE ANNIVERSARY

[Excerpts] Pyongyang, 17 Jul (KCNA)--A meeting commemorating the 10th anniversary of the founding of the Pibada Opera Troupe was held on 16 July at the Pyongyang Grande Theatre.

Set up on the platform was a portrait of Comrade Kim Il-song, the great leader of our party and our people.

It was attended by Comrade Yim Chun-chu, member of the Political Bureau of the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea and secretary of the Central Peoples Committee, and Yi Chang-son, Yi Myon-sang and other personages concerned, creative writers and artists of the Pibada Opera Troupe and men of culture and art in the city.

At the meeting Comrade Yim Chun-chu conveyed a congratulatory message of the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea to the entire creative writers and artists of the troupe.

Yi Chang-son, minister of culture and art, made a report.

He said that the glorious party had put forward the outstanding policy of creating a new revolutionary opera of our style brilliantly embodying the idea of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song on the building of a revolutionary opera, putting on the opera stage, in particular, immortal classic works created in the period of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle and making it the starting point of the opera revolution.

The party expounded everything, from the seed of the work to the concrete way of depiction, and perfected each scene of the opera to render it great artistic influence and thereby successfully created the revolutionary opera "Sea of Blood" in a short period, the reporter said, and continued:

The emergence of the revolutionary opera of "Sea of Blood" style was a solemn declaration putting an end to the tradition of the preceding outdated opera and announcing the birth of a new opera meeting the demand of the chuche era and a great event spreading a new era of a true opera art.

Recalling that the glorious party center formed the Pibada Opera Troupe with gifted artists trained in the course of creating the revolutionary opera "Sea of Blood" and named 17 July 1971, the day when it gave the first performance in the presence of the great leader, the founding anniversary of the troupe, the reporter said:

A number of revolutionary operas were created in a short period on the basis of the successes registered in the creation of the opera of "Sea of Blood" style under the guidance of the party and especially the music and dance tale "Song of Paradise" was created to resplendently decorate the latter half of the 1970's.

He called for constantly expanding and developing the successes made in the creation of the operas of "Sea of Blood" style, energetically continuing the work of putting into opera form the revolutionary works created in the flames of the glorious anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle and creating more works high in ideological and artistic level to powerfully demonstrate the validity and vitality of our party's chuche-based theory of literature and art and glirify the exploits performed by the party center.

'KCNA' REPORTS ON MOUNT MYOHYANG-SAN

SK291557 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1534 GMT 29 Jul 81

[Text] Pyongyang, 29 Jul (KCNA)--Mt Myohyang-san is visited these days by working people, school children and youth from all parts of the country and foreign friends.

Trains exclusively for tourists run from Pyongyang to the mountain. It is within a 2 hour drive northward from Pyongyang.

Mt Myohyang-san called the most celebrated mountain of Korea proud of its grandeur coupled with the beauty of Mt Kumgang-san widely known to the world is located in the boundary of Hyangsan County of North Pyongan Province, Huichon of Chagang province, and Yongwon County of South Pyongan Province.

Mt Myohyang-san consists of many cloud-piercing peaks and steep fantastic cliffs with Pirobong 1,909 meters above sea level as the principal peak.

Crystal-clear water flows through deep valleys, forming numerous falls. Various kinds of animals and birds in the forests add to the scenic beauty of nature.

In early summer one can see a summer landscape at the foot of the mountain, a spring landscape in its breast and a winter landscape at its top.

The mountain occupies a vast area--stretching 28 kilometers from east to west, from north to south and 128 kilometers round.

It has many beauty spots, most famous among them being Sangwondong, Manpokdong and Habiro.

At Sangwondong with the unique beauty of its deep valley and at Manpokdong which presents a harmony of steep moss-grown rocky cliffs tourists can see crystal-clear water flowing, washing white stones and forming rainbows, falls and ponds.

In particular, Inhodae of Sangwondong affords a sweeping view of the scenic beauty of the Sanju Falls scores of meters deep and the Yongyon and Chonsin Falls looking like a silk cloth hanging from the sky.

Habiro which was newly developed under the guidance of the glorious party center offers an exquisite beauty of nature with limpid water and magnificent falls in the valley and thick forests and beautiful flowers.

Mt Myohyang-san is rich in faunal and floral resources.

There are more than 600 kinds of trees and grasses in the mountain to form a natural botanical garden. There are also scores of kinds of wild animals including roe deer, sheep and bear and more than 130 kinds of birds including Myohyangsan blue bird designated as a precious natural product.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song gave on-the-spot guidance to Mt Myohyang-san more than 10 times from right after liberation and gave detailed teachings on building the mountain well as a holiday resort of the working people.

He earnestly told functionaries who planned to open a gold mine there in those days when the economic life of the state was difficult that the beautiful Mt Myohyang-san should not be exchanged for a few tons of gold.

Upholding the noble intention of the great leader, the glorious party center saw to it that the mountain was built well to be convenient for mountaineering and of highly educational value.

In the mountain built beautifully under the warm care of the great leader and the party center working people and school children and youth from all parts of the country and a large number of foreign guests spend a pleasant rest.

The six-storied international friendship exhibition with a total floor space of 28,000 square meters was built and opened in August 1978 in Mt Myohyang-san.

The building is a veritable meridian of modern architecture of our country.

On display there are tens of thousands of precious gifts sent with good wishes to the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song from heads of state and government, revolutionary organisations, public and political figures and people of all walks of life of all countries of the world.

Every day a large number of working people and school children and youth visit the exhibition. Through the inspection they cherish deep in their hearts the national pride and honor of having the great leader in the person of respected and beloved Comrade Kim Il-song and harden their determination to strengthen the bonds of friendship with the revolutionary people of the world.

Foreign delegations and many friends also visit the exhibition.

In Mt Myohyang-san there are many cultural relics including the Pohyonsa Temple representing the Korean architecture in the early 11th century.

There are lots of architectures including Pulyongdae where preserved during the period of the Imjin fatherland war against the Japanese aggressors (1592-1598) was the "authentic record of the Yi Dynasty" (diary-style "Government Diary" recording in date order big and small events which took place throughout the country in the period of the rule of the Yi Dynasty feudal state (from 1392 to 1910) and cultural assets including the "80,000 Collection of Complete Buddhist Literature" consisting of printed book vols 1,159.

The "80,000 Collection of Complete Buddhist Literature" with more than 80,000 wooden printings is widely known to the world as a precious cultural asset showing the wooden printing in the reign of the Koryo Dynasty (10th-14th century).

Indeed, Mt Myohyang-san is a place associated with the long history of Korea and her brilliant culture.

Thanks to the on-the-spot guidance of the great leader and the deep care of the glorious party center Mt Myohyang-san is being built better as a mountaineering site, a site of culture and rest and a tourist site to cultivate the courage and fortitude of the working people and school children and youth.

ENVOY PRESENTS CREDENTIALS TO SOMALI PRESIDENT

SK221135 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0823 GMT 22 Jul 81

[Text] Pyongyang, 22 Jul (KCNA)--Kim Pok-man, newly-appointed ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary of our country to Somalia, on 15 July presented his credentials to Somali President Mohamed Siad Barre, according to a report.

The ambassador conveyed cordial regards of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song to the president.

The president inquired after the health of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, expressed deep thanks for the cordial regards and asked the ambassador to convey his heartfelt greetings to the respected and beloved leader.

Pointing out that the August name of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is well known to the Somali people, the president said: the friendship between Somalia and Korea which has grown stronger and developed on deep roots is unthinkable apart from his August name.

Korea is a country deeply engraved on our minds.

We always follow with keen interest the great progress and splendid successes made by the Korean people in the endeavours to raise the material and cultural standards.

The fraternal relations between our two countries were forged for the commonness of our cause.

We are well aware that the Korean people waged a protracted struggle in the past for the independence of the country under the guidance of the great leader Comrade President Kim Il-song and are now struggling for the realisation of national reunification.

We will invariably support the Korean people in their struggle for the independent and peaceful reunification of the country.

He wholeheartedly wished the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song good health and a long life as well as success in his work.

The conversation took place in a friendly atmosphere.

Present on the occasion were the foreign minister and officials concerned of Somalia.

JAPANESE DELEGATION INTERVIEWED IN PYONGYANG

SK291010 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1001 GMT 29 Jul 81

[Text] Pyongyang, 29 Jul (KCNA)--The delegation of the Society of Independence of Japan headed by Yasuhito Fujii, secretary of the Gunma Society for Seeing Korean Films, met with news agency and radio reporters in Pyongyang before leaving for home.

The head of the delegation said:

We are conducting activities for the study and dissemination of Kim Il-songism in Japan with the firm belief that the only guiding idea for the accomplishment of the cause of independence is the chuche idea. We had the honour of visiting the Democratic Peoples Republic of Korea, the homeland of chuche, thanks to the warm solicitude of respected President Kim Il-song.

The purpose of our visit was to deeply acquaint ourselves with the vitality of the chuche idea in the realities of the DPRK where this idea is embodied under the leadership of respected President Kim Il-song.

All that we have seen and heard during our stay in Korea were impressive.

Korea building socialism for the happiness of the people is advancing as a model country of socialism in the world.

The period of our Korean visit was a course of understanding more deeply that the chuche idea, the guiding idea of the present times, is one for the happiness of the people.

We renewed our determination to actively disseminate among the Japanese people lots of things we have learned in the homeland of chuche during our visit and struggle in the van for Japan's cause of independence.

May President Kim Il-song enjoy a long life in good health.

Speaking next, deputy head of the delegation Machiko Shimizu said:

During our Korean visit we very deeply felt the validity and vitality of the cause of Kim Il-songism, seeing the Korean people enjoying happiness to their hearts content under the leadership of his excellency great president who spares nothing for the people.

We are firmly convinced that the only way for the Japanese people to become the genuine master of the country and lead an independent and creative life is to accomplish the cause of Kim Il-songism, holding his excellency President Kim Il-song in high esteem.

Although we are unknown youths, we deem it real happiness and feel great responsibility to contribute to the proud cause of Kim Il-songism.

FOREIGN CREWMEN MARK DPRK WAR 'VICTORY'

SK291050 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1039 GMT 29 Jul 81

[Text] Pyongyang, 29 Jul (KCNA)--Foreign crewmen at Hungnam Port held a meeting Monday celebrating the 28th anniversary of the victory of the Korean people in the great fatherland liberation war.

Placed on the platform was a portrait of Comrade Kim Il-song, the great leader of our party and our people.

The meeting was attended by the crewmen of the Singapore ship "Altaslin," the Panamanian ships "Gull" and "Denebola," the Japanese ships "Katori-Maru No 11," "Ko-Maru No 28" and the Greek ship "Lefthero."

Addressing the meeting, the master of the Singapore ship "Altaslim" said that the U.S. imperialists started a war of aggression against the Korean people on 25 June 1950, and suffered an irrevocable political and military defeat and fell upon their knees before the Korean people in face of the outstanding military tactics and commanding art of his excellency respected and beloved President Kim Il-song, the ever-victorious iron-willed brilliant commander and genius in military strategy.

Condemning the U.S. imperialists for running wild in preparations for a new war, he stressed that the U.S. imperialists must get out of South Korea at once along with all their aggression forces and military equipment.

Speaking at the meeting, masters and crewmen said that the strength of the Korean people rallied rock-firm around the great leader President Kim Il-song is invincible and that if the U.S. imperialists kindle the flame of another war in Korea, they would not escape a fiasco.

Korea, they stressed, should be reunified in accordance with the three principles and five-point policy of national reunification and the proposal to found the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo advanced by the great president.

The meeting adopted a letter to the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song.

[Text] Pyongyang, 20 Jul (KCNA)--A meeting was recently held in Otwock under the co-sponsorship of the Otwock City Committee of the Polish United Workers Party, the Otwock City Administrative Committee and the Poland-Korea Friendship Club on the occasion of the 25th anniversary of the goodwill visit of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song to Poland, according to a report.

Placed on the platform of the meeting hall was a portrait of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song.

On display in the meeting hall were photographs and materials showing the great leader's visit to Otwock in July 1956, his immortal classic works, and photographs and publications introducing our country.

The ambassador and officials of the DPRK Embassy in Poland were present on invitation.

The chairman of the Poland-Korea Friendship Club made a report and the first secretary of the Otwock City Party Committee a speech.

The reporter and speaker pointed to the historic significance of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's goodwill visit to Poland 25 years ago.

They said that the fraternal Korean people owed all their successes in the revolution and construction to the wise guidance of the great leader. They wholeheartedly wished good health and a long life to the great leader who personally provided friendly relations between the peoples of the two countries and between the population of Otwock City and of Sunchon County of our country.

They fully supported the proposal for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo and the 10-point policy for its realisation which were put forward by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song at the Sixth Congress of the Workers Party of Korea and expressed firm solidarity with the Korean people in their just struggle for national reunification.

At the end of the meeting a Korean film was screened.

Meanwhile, a get-together was held at the friendship club.

HYPOTHETICAL PROSPECTS OF REUNIFIED KOREA STUDIED

SK050800 Seoul YONHAP in English 0740 GMT 5 Aug 81

[Text] Seoul, 5 Aug (YONHAP)--A Korea unified under the democratic and capitalistic system would be able to turn out a gross national product (GNP) worth U.S.$367 billion in the year 2000, according to a report released Tuesday by Korea's research center for peace and unification.

The figure more than doubles the $165 billion worth of goods and services which a unified communist Korea would produce in the same year, the private research organization said in the report projecting the future of Korea, which has been divided into two parts for the last 33 years. According to the report, South Korea's GNP would surpass that of North Korea by a ratio of seven to one or $229 billion to $33 billion if Korea continues to remain divided in 2000.

On the other hand, the population of South and North Korea would reach some 60 million in 1985 and 66.5 million in 1990, the report said. It warned, however, that some five million Koreans would be executed as reactionaries, another two million would defect to Japan and millions of others would become refugees, if Korea were unified under communist rule.

Overall, the report projects a thriving welfare state for a Korea unified under a democratic system while it presents a dismal picture for a single communist Korea. By 2000, Koreans would adopt a five-day, 40-hour work week with advanced social security benefits available to all Koreans, if the two Koreas become one democratic state.

On the contrary, all Koreans would be subject to various restrictions on their basic rights and privacy North Koreans now suffer including state intervention in marriages if Korea becomes one state under communist rule. At present, a North Korean man and a woman cannot marry each other without the approval of their party because those couples whose marriages it does not endorse are denied housing.

REPORTS ON DPRK REUNIFICATION STATEMENT DISCUSSED

SK100350 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0332 GMT 10 Aug 81

[Text] Pyongyang, 10 Aug (KCNA)--The XINHUA News Agency of China August 7, reported the joint statement of the political parties and public organizations of our country which was adopted at the 67th meeting of the Central Committee of the Democratic Front for the Reunification of the Fatherland.

The news agency said: The Workers Party of Korea and 22 other political parties and public organizations August 6 proposed to convene a conference for the promotion of national reunification with the attendance of representatives of the political parties and organizations in the North and the South of Korea and representatives of Koreans abroad to discuss the problems of realizing Korean reunification and collaboration and intercourse between the North and the South.

This proposal was made in a joint statement adopted at the 67th meeting of the Central Committee of the Democratic Front for the Reunification of the Fatherland held in Pyongyang on August 6.

The joint statement notes: The conference for the promotion of national reunification would be a united body of all the patriotic forces of the country' at the present juncture it would be the most realistic national consultative organisation which may have a wholesale debate on the reunification question and promote its solution.

The conference would have an open-hearted debate on the proposal for founding the DCRK and all other reunification proposals to be laid before it. It would also discuss the problem of realizing collaboration and interchange in all the political, economic, cultural and military fields between the North and the South and humanitarian questions for alleviating the sufferings of the kindred living separated.

The joint statement says that the conference for the promotion of national reunification may be convened in Pyongyang or Seoul or Panmunjom.

It stresses: For a successful convocation of the conference for the promotion of national reunification, bilateral or multilateral dialogue should be held on a broad scale between representatives of various parties, groupings and various strata hoping to attend the conference as its preliminary step.

For such dialogue, we are ready to meet anybody of South Korea except Chon Tu-hwan group and will leave the door of dialogue always open to anybody.

'PRAVDA' CITES 'NODONG SINMUN' ON U.S. MILITARY

SK080340 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0333 GMT 8 Aug 81

[Text] Moscow, 6 Aug (KCNA)--The August 6 issue of the Soviet paper PRAVDA under the title "Fabricators Exposed" reported a NODONG SINMUN article "What Lurks Behind the False Propaganda?"

The paper wrote:

NODONG SINMUN, organ paper of the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea, noted that the assertions of representatives of the present U.S. administration about "military superiority" of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea over South Korea, the "existence" of a "threat" to South Korea and so forth are a whopping lie.

The paper noted that such fictions are aimed at justifying the U.S. troops continued occupation of South Korea and war preparations of the Seoul "regime."

The paper said: As to the armed forces in South Korea, the U.S. Armed Forces deployed in the south of the Korean Peninsula and in other areas of the Pacific must be taken into account.

As stated many a time by high-ranking officials of the U.S. Defence Department, the U.S. troops in South Korea consist of the "elite" units possessed of a "high degree of manoeuvrability" and "combat power."

'TASS' ON 'NODONG SINMUN' COMMENTARY ON UNC DOCUMENT

SK111555 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1511 GMT 11 Aug 81

[Text] Pyongyang, 11 Aug (KCNA)--TASS August 9 reported the content of a NODONG SINMUN commentary titled "Far-Fetched Logic of Occupationist," which denounced the United States for submitting recently a forged document under the name of the "United Nations Forces Command" in South Korea to the United Nations Security Council, which claims that the DPRK side violated the armistice agreement last year.

TASS said: NODONG SINMUN branded the "Report on the Activity of the United Nations Forces Command in South Korea" submitted by the U.S. mission in the United Nations to the U.N. Security Council as a shameless distortion of facts.

The paper pointed out that the authors of the document reversed black and white, claiming that the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, not the U.S. troops and the South Korean Army, violated the Korean armistice agreement last year.

The paper continued: But the fact is just the opposite. It is none other than the United States and the Seoul "regime" that are hastening war preparations by extensively shipping nuclear weapons and up-to-date military equipment into South Korea, and ceaselessly committing provocations against the Democratic People's Republic of Korea in wanton violation of the armistice agreement.

Cases of violation of the armistice agreement by them in 1980 numbered more than 24,000.

As for the "United Nations Forces Command," it is an entirely illegal existence. It should have long been disbanded in accordance with the resolution of the 30th U.N. General Assembly session.

The United States is using the flag of this international organisation as a fig leaf to whitewash its occupation of South Korea. This is an insult to the United Nations and its resolution.

The United States is seeking to invent a pretext for keeping its troops as ever in South Korea and opposing the Democratic People's Republic of Korea by misleading world public opinion through the circulation of a bald-faced lie. Such acts heighten tension in the Korean Peninsula.

Its occupation of South Korea is a violation of the publicly recognized principles of international law on territorial integrity, respect for sovereignty and non-interference in others internal affairs and a violation of the Korean armistice agreement which envisages the withdrawal of all foreign troops from Korea after the war.

NODONG SINMUN stressed that the United States must withdraw its troops and nuclear weapons from South Korea at once.

DEMONSTRATORS ARRESTED IN S. KOREA--Pyongyang, Aug 4 (KCNA)--The puppet eastern police station in Seoul on July 30 arrested the chairman and the deputy director of the "Society for Defence of the Rights and Interests of Petty Truck Owners" in connection with a recent demonstration and sit-down strike of truck drivers in Seoul, according to a report. As already reported, hundreds of truck drivers in Seoul staged a demonstration for three days from July 20, opposing exorbitant plunder by the company side and demanding private licences for free operation. Those owners of private trucks were attached to transport companies in Seoul to borrow their names, as the puppet clique did not issue private licences, and were robbed of a lot of money by the companies. Their struggle was a just one for existence. But the fascist clique not only suppressed the demonstrators but also arrested the afore-said personages of the "Society for Defence of the Rights and Interests of Petty Truck Owners" on charges of having "encouraged" their struggle. GOVERNMENT PLANS PROGRESSIVE EDUCATION TAX RATES

SK110725 Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 11 Aug 81 p 1

[Text] The government has decided to impose progressive rates of education tax on the dwelling houses instead of levying a uniform rate of 50 percent as originally proposed by the Finance Ministry.

The decision was reached in a dinner meeting between the government and the majority Democratic Justice Party at the official residence of Premier Nam Tok-u in Samchong-dong last night.

In the meeting, the DJP strongly urged the government to allow the proposed education tax rates to vary according to the sizes and values of the houses.

Originally, the Finance Ministry planned to impose a 50 percent education tax in addition to the existing tax on dwelling houses.

The DJP argued in the meeting that it was irrational for the owners of small homes to pay the same education tax as the owners of large and luxurious homes.

Rep. Chong Chong-taek, concurrently minister of state on political affairs, said after the Sanchong-dong meeting that the government accepted the party's demand and decided to change the original educational tax bill of the Finance Ministry.

He said the government's final version of the tax bill would be formulated after public hearing being prepared by either the finance committee or the education-information committee of the National Assembly or jointly by the two committees.

Participants in the Samchong-dong meeting were, from the party: chairman Rep. Yi Chae-hyong, secretary-general Rep. Kwon Chong-tal, chief policymaker Rep. Yi Chin-u and floor leader Rep. Yi Chong-chan.

From the government side were Premier Nam Tok-u, Yu Hak-song, director of the agency for national security planning; Deputy Premier Sin Pyong-hyon; Home minister So Chong-hwa, Finance Minister Yi Song-yon and Rep. Chong.

According to Rep. Chong, the planned revenue in educational surtax on property will be about 50 billion won.

The government plans to raise about 300 billion won in education taxes on liquor, tobacco and security dividends in addition to the ones imposed on property next year. The education tax bill is to be effective for five years only beginning next year.

Rep. Chong said the government had about 110 law and amendment bills in need of parliamentary approval during the forthcoming regular session starting in September.

He also revealed that the DJP proposed advancement of the construction schedules of subway system in the heart of Seoul since it caused severe traffic congestion.

However, the government said the early completion would require added financial burden, Rep. Chong said.

USE OF DEFENSE FUNDS FOR EDUCATION DISCUSSED

SK020355 Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 2 Aug 81 p 1

[Text] The Democratic Korea Party suggested yesterday that the government earmark part of defense funds for educational investments by further strengthening security ties with the United States.

Opposing the imposition of the government-proposed education tax as a new special purpose tax, the first minority party claimed that defense expenses could be appropriated for educational purposes.

Rep. Han Yong-su, chief policymaker of the party, pointed out that 6 percent of the GNP of the country was used for defense expenses, which was a heavy burden for a developing country.

The idea is included in a set of 11 alternatives to the government plan to levy a new tax to finance huge educational investments to improve educational facilities. The package was worked out in a joint meeting of the finance and education-information committees of the party's policy council yesterday.

Announcing the 11 alternatives to secure educational funds for the five years from next year, Rep. Han urged the government to withhold the presentation of the education tax law bill to the National Assembly.

He insisted that the government could secure educational funds amounting to 4,600 billion won during the period of the coming five-year economic and social development plan without imposing the education tax.

"The government tries to raise money necessary for national education in an easy-going way," the DKP chief policymaker contended.

Major alternatives worked out in the joint meeting included use of the present residence tax, which was imposed so as to curb the influx of population into cities, for educational investments.

The government plans to collect a total of 125 billion won in 1981 through the residence tax.

The DKP also suggested the government reduce the scope of the present tax exemption in such a way as to eliminate favors for big businesses to raise money for educational investments.

The government was advised by the DKP to issue education bonds and to sell state-owned property for educational funds.

The first minority party also claimed in the alternatives that the government economic policy heading toward high growth should be modified by compiling the budget with top priority for educational investments.

Rep. Han said that the DKP lawmakers would do their best and wage a strong struggle in the coming regular National Assembly session to secure educational funds not through imposing an education tax but by other means.

EDUCATION TAX PANEL OPPOSED--Rep. Ko Chae-chong, floor leader of the first minority Democratic Korea Party, opposed yesterday the holding of a National Assembly Finance Committee meeting to deal with the government-proposed imposition of an education tax, rejecting a floor leaders' meeting to discuss the panel convocation. It had been learned over the weekend that the whips of the three major parties would have a meeting early this week to discuss the calling of the parliamentary panel in the middle of this month. Rep. Ko's intention not to attend any floor leaders' gathering was according to the majority opinion among party lawmakers that the controversial education tax issue should be handled in a plenary session. Rep. Ko said, "Since the education tax problem is an important matter, we must not be hasty about it. I believe that the issue can be discussed sufficiently in the September regular house session." The majority Democratic Justice Party has already adopted a policy to convene the finance committee to examine the government plan to levy an education tax from next year. TAX EXEMPTION LEVEL--The majority Democratic Justice Party (DJP) plans to increase the exemption point for personal income tax for a five-member family in order to protect people in the low-income brackets. It also aims at fostering middle-class people. For the same purpose, the party is studying readjusting the current tax rate system in such a way as to increase the number of tax rate grades, according to Rep. No Ung-pae, vice chairman of the party policy committee yesterday. He said, "No concrete plan to reorganize the tax rate system has been mapped out yet. But the party will seek an increase in the exemption point, taking into consideration the wage hike ratio of 17 percent and the 20 percent price hike ratio." "Especially, the party plans to lighten the tax burdens of salaried people earning 400,000-600,000 won a month by lowering tax rates," he revealed. The DJP is also examining a measure to expand the objects of the education tax to be imposed additionally on the property tax to all the cities from the government-proposed six major cities. In case the education tax is levied on property taxes in all cities across the nation, the new tax rate will be set according to the grades of the cities. According to the DJP study, the imposition of the education tax on property taxes in cities will not apply to low-income people. The party also is considering exempting owners of the houses of less than 15 pyong (one pyong is equivalent to 3.3 square meters) from the new tax. At the same time, the majority party plans to set the upper limit of the additional tax rate on the property tax at 50 percent in six major cities and 30 percent in other cities. NATIONAL ISSUES DISCUSSED--Seoul, Aug. 11 (YONHAP)--President Kim Chong-chol of the Korea National Citizens' Party Tuesday said in Bonn that the political development in Korea is progressing thanks to enhanced self-control and self government and the firm basis for the peaceful transfer of power. The opposition leader, now visiti West Germany at the invitation of Chairman Werner Mertes of the West German-Korear Association, also said the ease of tension and promotion of mutual understanding are necessary for the ultimate unification of the South and North Korea. In an address titled "The Security and Economy of Korea," Kim foresaw the security situation of Korea would depend largely on the Seoul-Washington relations for the time being since neither mainland China nor Japan could emerge as a military power to contain the Soviet expansion in that part of the world. He emphasized that the unification of the Korean Peninsula would need international cooperation and such cooperation would not conflict with the interests of the powers involved in the region. Commenting on the economy in Korea, Kim said that the country had faced difficulties in the past two years or so as results of increased oil prices, internal instability and bad weather, but added that the country would regain high economic growth rate by the end of 1982 when the prices are expected to be stabilized. Kim's address at the Pulfenfelt Hotel in Bonn was conveyed to Seoul party officials accompanying Kim. [Text] [SK110302 Seoul YONHAP in English 0251 GMT 11 Aug 81]

POLITICAL FUND GROUP--The secretary generals of the three major political parties discussed the formation of supporters' group to collect political funds yesterday but failed to reach any agreement. They only decided to hold another meeting Friday. Rep. Kwon Chong-tal of the majority Democratic Justice Party revealed in the meeting that his party would organize its own supporters' group to be made up of some 300 businessmen by the end of this month. He urged his counterparts from the minority Democratic Korea Party and Korean National Citizens Party to form their own groups of backets as promptly as possible. But Reps. Sin Sang-u of the DKP and Sin Chol-kyun of the KNCP argued that the tendency of business circles to avoid support of opposition parties meant that the minority parties were handicapped in organizing their supporters' groups." The minority parties' secretary generals suggested in the meeting at the engineering club that a joint group be formed and the political funds collected by it be alloted to the parties according to the rations of parliamentary seats. But Rep. Kwon expressed a negative response to the suggestion on the ground that such a method required an amendment to the concerned law. OVERSEAS LABOR ATTACHES--Seoul, Aug. 10 (YONHAP)--The Korean Government has decided to increase the number of overseas labor attaches from 11 in seven countries to 30 in 20 countries by the end of this year, Labor Affairs Ministry officials said Monday. The decision came following the government's earlier decision to liberalize Koreans' overseas employment as a way to develop international labor markets. The ministry will send labor officials to those countries where more than 1,000 Koreans are working and where local guerrilla activities exist, and will increase the number of labor officers in those countries where their workloads are heavy, the officials said. The ministry also plans to dispatch labor officials to Geneva, Japan and the United States to collect international labor information as well as to check labor export dumpings by other countries. According to ministry sources, some 176,000 Korean workers were operating in 38 countries as of the end of March. [Text] [SK100100 Seoul YONHAP in English 0055 GMT 10 Aug 81]

1982 CONSTRUCTION COSTS--Seoul, Aug. 8 (YONHAP)--The Korean Government plans to spend two trillion won (some three billion U.S. dollars) next year to undertake various construction projects. Of the total, one trillion won (one U.S. dollar is worth about 685 won) will be spent on construction of four more multi-purpose dams in addition to the originally projected three such dams, government sources said Saturday. The construction of seven multi-purpose dams next year is designed to develop electric power resources and agricultural and industrial water. The seven dams will increase the country's power generating facility capacity by 863,000 kw, the sources said. The largest portion (25 billion won) of another one trillion won will go to developing technology in the computer, automobile, nuclear power and precision chemistry fields. Other major construction projects to start next year include building a new international airport near Seoul at a total cost of 647 billion won, exploring the fourth mining zone along the continental shelf stretching southeast of Cheju Island for seabed oil resources (168 billion won), constructing Seoul-Yosu and Ulsan-Taejon oil pipelines (196 billion won) and erecting a liquefied national gas import terminal (580 billion won). The two trillion won, earmarked for such construction projects in the first year of the country's five-year economic development plan (1982-86), accounts for 20 percent of the government's general budget for the fiscal 1982, the sources said. TECHNOLOGICAL DEVELOPMENT--Seoul, Aug. 3 (YONHAP)--The Korean Government has decided to further increase its investments and encourage private investments in developing technologies beginning next year as a means of improving Korean enterprises' competitive power in the world arena. To this end, the government will improve its support system for technological development, by nurturing key and strategic industries including the semiconductor industry as a policy project and by establishing a private-initiative technological development system, a government official said here Monday. In order to encourage private investments, the government will render tax favors, financial assistance and other benefits for the private-led technological development projects, the official noted. The government measures under study include an increased tax exemption for the private technological development projects from the current eight to 10 percent to 20 to 30 percent, the official explained. IMPORT LIBERALIZATION--Seoul, Aug. 14 (YONHAP)--Korean Deputy Premier-Economic Planning Minister Sin Pyong-hyon Friday said that the government would totally liberalize imports in fields which lack international competitiveness, as part of the country's long-term import policy. Addressing a Korean International Economic Institute seminar held in Pusan some 320 km southeast of Seoul, Sin said that the government would, initially, pursue such a free import policy in areas where monopolistic and oligopolistic trends are outstanding. Noting that Korea's import policy has so far neglected the importance of importation, Sin claimed that such a policy was essential to keep the country's resources from being wasted in noncompetitive industries. Sin also noted that Korea's exports should be skill-intensive, and added that the government would actively encourage foreigners' direct investments in domestic industries. UNEMPLOYMENT RATE DECREASES--Seoul, Aug. 6 (YONHAP)--Korea's unemployment rate decreased to 3.9 percent on the average in the second quarter of this year from the average 4.4 percent registered in the same period last year, the Economic Planning Board (EPB) announced Thursday. The EPB announcement attributed the drop to a steady economic recovery from a long-protracted recession. The announcement said that the employed population reached an average of 15,15,149,000 [as printed] people during the second three months, 391,000 persons more than a year earlier, while the unemployed fell to an average of 610,000 in the period, compared with the average 672,000 registered in the comparable period last year. The announcement added that Korea's economically active population above the age of 14 stood at 15,759,000 in the period, 329,000 more than one year before. BUSINESS RECRUITMENT--Seoul, Aug. 14 (YONHAP)--Major Korean businesses are planning massive recruitments for the second half of this year as Korea's economy is expected to recover on a full scale beginning next year. According to a Korea Management Association survey of the country's 30 major businesses, Hyundai business group plans to employ some 2,000 newcomers, in addition to the 1,300 recruited in the first half of this year. The number is more than three times bigger than last year's. Daewoo group will also provide some 1,500 jobs for college graduates, 60 percent more than the previous year, plus another 500 jobs for experienced personnel, according to the survey. Samsung group and Lucky group also plan to recruit some 500 persons each during the second half of this year. [Text] [SK140309 Seoul YONHAP in English 0251 GMT 14 Aug 81]

COMMERCIAL BANKS LIMITATION--Seoul, Aug. 13 (YONHAP)--The Korean Government is considering establishing no more commercial banks in the country, except for three now under negotiation. Finance Ministry officials said Thursday that although the government has allowed the establishment of two joint-venture banks with foreign partners, and approved a plan set forth by Korean residents in Japan to open a bank to prop up investment activities by overseas Koreans in their home country, it does not think it necessary to establish more private commercial banks, in view of the current market conditions of domestic banking institutions. At present, Korean businesses are moving toward establishing two joint-venture banks with the Bank of America and with a syndicate of Mideast banking institutions respectively. According to the officials, the projected overseas Korean residents' bank and the Korean-American Bank are expected to go into full commercial operation by the end of this year. Efforts to set up a joint-venture bank with Mideast banking circles will also bear tangible fruit not later than the first half of next year, bringing to eight the number of commercial banks operating in the country. Korea has no need to have more commercial banks because of the limited scale of its money market, the officials explained. [Text] [SK130135 Seoul YONHAP in English 0057 GMT 13 Aug 81]

NEW INVESTMENT RULES--Seoul, Aug. 3 (YONHAP)--Korean small businesses fear that the government's measure to decontrol foreign investment might erode their domestic markets. Officials of the Korea Federation of Small Businesses Monday said the recent government decision to permit foreign investment in 427 sectors would give blows to domestic businesses which are weak in their competitiveness and technologically backward. The officials indicated that 40 sectors which had been designated as "small-business protection" businesses were included among the 427 categories. The officials recommended that the government raise the limit of foreign investment capital from the current 100,000 U.S. dollars to 200,000 dollars. BUMPER RICE HARVEST--Seoul, Aug. 6 (YONHAP)--There are indications that Korea will have a bumper crop in its rice harvest this fall thanks to a continuing spell of good weather. According to YONHAP's local bureau reports, the nation's rice paddies are in best shape and are expected to produce a combined output far surpassing this year's target of 38 million soms (one som equals 144 kg) this fall, provided good weather continues for one more month and possible blights are kept under control. Farmers and local officials interviewed in the reports all forecast an unprecedented bumper crop in Korea's rice harvest this fall, which may break the record harvest of 1976. COAL PRICE INCREASE--Seoul, Aug. 14 (YONHAP)--The Korean Government raised the price of "yontan" (anthracite briquets), the main home cooking and heating fuel, by 10.87 percent, and the prices of coal by an average of 15.81 percent, effective Friday. With prices jacked up, the home-delivery price of a 3.6-kg piece went up from 138 won to 153 won in Seoul, and that of a 7.5-kg piece from 271 won to 302 won, respectively (one U.S. dollar is worth about 685 won). The yontan price hike will put heavier financial pressure on the general public, who have been tightening their belts to fight against rising commodity prices. The country saw coal price soar 38.84 percent and yontan price rise 33.04 percent this year. On April 19, the government raised coal prices by 19.88 percent and yontan prices by 22.17 percent. Announcing the price increases in a press conference, Energy-Resources Minister Pak Pong-hwan said that the government pricing decision was aimed at readjusting the coal price to a realistic level in the non-demand season, thus, minimizing impact on the general public. He said that the coal price hike this time reflected mainly coal production cost increases since the turn of this year, which were not reflected in the April 19 coal price rise, adding that the government would not increase coal prices before the end of this year. Friday's coal price hike is expected to increase wholesale prices by 0.624 percent and consumer prices by 0.629 percent. Yontan accounts for 71 percent of the country's total home fuel and coal is the nation's indigenous and primary fossil fuel, representing 22 percent of its total energy needs, according to ministry officials. JOINT VENTURE FOR MOLYBDENUM--The Amax Co of the United States has established a joint venture firm with the Hyundai Business Group for the joint development of molybdenum mines in the Mt T'aebaek in Korea, according to the Energy and Resources Ministry on 25 July. The ₩560 million joint company was set up at the ratio of 50.5 percent and 49.5 percent between the Korean and American firms. A total of $814 million will be invested in the development of the molybdenum mines over the next 10 years. Under the joint development plan, some 17,000 tons of molybdenum will be produced yearly. The nation's total production of molybdenum last year stood at a mere 557 tons. Amax has concluded that the molybdenum mines in the Mt T'aebaek will be operational for some 31 years. INCREASING TAX BURDEN EXAMINED

National Tax

Seoul CHUNGANG ILBO in Korean 16 Jun 81 p 5

[Article by staff reporter Yi Chae-hun]

[Text] Tax is causing headaches. The national budget scale is getting bigger and more tax revenues must be collected. However, the current economic slowdown has prevented taxes from being smoothly collected. Next year, education tax will be added. Taxpayers will more acutely feel the tax burden weighing on the barely sufficient home budget.

We hereby analyze the current tax situation, breaking it into two categories--national and local tax.

Per capita tax payments last year hit 172,400 won. The budget this year is formulated so that it may be increased to 209,700 won. A five-member family would have to pay 1,048,500 won in tax. One gets upset every time he gets a pay envelope [paycheck] because the tax burden is weighing heavier on him while his income does not increase in real terms owing to inflation. Salarymen acutely feel the heavier tax burden, especially when they receive year-end bonuses.

Merchants say they could not run businesses if they paid taxes as stipulated under the law. Worse yet, a new tax is likely to emerge next year--education tax.

An education tax bill designed to collect 300 to 400 billion won is being drafted. The contention that the education tax should be newly instituted to increase educational financing for the normalization of education is reasonable and persuasive. Taxpayers, however, cannot help but wonder if the new tax is the only way to raise more revenue. Anyway, the tax burden would be heavier, adding 10,000 won in tax to each individual, if the education tax is instituted.

The actual tax burden would be much heavier, depending on how and in which category the new tax is included. The tax burden is felt heavier in the economic slowdown these days, which also causes poor tax collection.

The confirmed reports of composite income taxes in May (for 1980 incomes) showed a decrease of 17 percent from the level of the previous year. Under inflation, the revenues normally do not decrease due to the increase of nominal incomes. However, they actually decreased. This means that the economic slowdown is that much more serious. The collection is not going well not only for income tax but also for other taxes. The total tax revenues as of the end of May amounted to 39 percent of the budget, less than the 42 percent registered in the same period the previous year.

One percent of domestic tax equals 46 billion won; therefore, 140 billion won more should have been collected to catch up to the level of the previous year.

To make the tax collection smooth, the incomes in real terms must be boosted, and subsequently consumer spending must be increased. The family budget cannot catch up with price boosts, and families are forced to spend less. This causes purchase slowdown. This is why the collection of taxes levied on consumer goods is declining.

Those who favor the increases claim that the tax rate of this country is lower. But they overlook the fact that each country is based on different premises. When we look into national debt ratio to GNP, West Germany tops the list with 32.3 percent, followed by the United States with 30.2 percent, Japan with 21.1 percent; Korea's is 18.8 percent (1980). In advanced countries, where a social security system is established, the government pays in many cases what the people should shoulder. If the medicare tax were included, the tax burden rate would hit almost 20 percent in our country.

The tax burden rate will be higher in 1983 when the welfare pension system is instituted. This country's taxation system has many problems such as increasing burdens on the middle class, indiscriminate tax-sharing stemming from increased indirect taxes, distortion arising from excessive numbers of tax-exempted people [due to low income], unfairness in tax-exemption, inadequacy in the property tax levy system, and so on.

The number of tax-paying workers is only 2.33 million. Although the total number of working people is 7.30 million, 68 percent of the working people make less than 150,000 won each, which is the tax-exemption base. Of the tax-paying people, those who make more than 500,000 won are excluded from tax deductions for paying insurance premiums and are subjected to higher tax rates.

People are driven to a situation comparable to double-pay-reduction because there is no tax adjustment while cost of living is rising. The class of tax-payers who bear the heaviest tax rate is the middle class people who make monthly income of between 500,000 and 700,000 won. With this income, they cannot easily manage their household budget. And yet, they are classified as high income earners and are subjected to heavy graduated taxation. Those who make donations for educational institutions are not given tax favors solely for that donation. The proposed tax reform project this year is considering giving tax favors to those who make charity donations. Even this would end up with "a biscuit for an elephant." A bold tax cut is required from the political judgment that the sound protection of middle class families is indispensable for the stability of society.

Local Tax

Seoul CHUNGANG ILBO in Korean 16 Jun 81 p 5

[Article by staff reporter Yi Tu-sok]

[Text] An emergency situation has set in for the local taxation. The burden of local taxes including property tax is getting heavier year after year, thus causing wrinkles to the family budget of common people. The revenues of local taxes are insufficient to finance the local governments.

The collection of property sales tax is lower than previous years because of the continuous slump of the real estate business for years. Despite this situation, the tax-levy standard is going up 20 to 30 percent each year, fanning the boost of land prices. As a result, the tax revenues are on the decrease while the raised levy standard is pushing up the property tax rate, thereby bringing heavier burdens to taxpayers. This has brought the local tax authorities to a difficult situation. To make the situation worse, a portion of the education tax is likely to be added to the local taxation. The portion of education tax the local taxation will bear for 5 years from next year to 1986 would be 900 billion won, that is, 180 billion won each year. (This is 40 percent of the projected revenues of 2,250 billion won in education taxes.) In case this plan is carried out, the total revenues of the local taxes would increase by 20 percent from this year's projected 921.9 billion won.

Furthermore, the total local tax revenues may jump up to 70 percent, when the adjustment for a 20 percent average price increase and the increasing financial demand resulting from the upgrading of cities of Taegu, Inchon and 10 others are accounted for. The local tax rate will thus become as heavy as the [national] tax rate.

Summary

Of the total tax revenues [both national and local], the weight of the local tax is becoming heavier each year. The ratio of local tax to national tax jumped by 5.6 to 16.7 percent in 1977 from 11.1 percent in 1972, and by 0.3 to 17 percent last year. The projected total of local tax revenues this year is 921.947 billion won, an increase of 30.6 percent (216.248 billion won) from 705.699 billion won last year.

Property Tax

Of the local taxes, the most important tax item is property tax. Of the projected total local tax revenues this year, the property tax is to be 146.658 billion won. On top of this, if 62.527 billion won in city planning tax and 16.03 billion won in common fire-fighting facility tax are added, the total payment for the property tax categories will hit 255.188 billion won, representing 24 percent of the total local tax revenues. The tax burden rate is expected to increase to 50 percent next year if the education tax is added.

Property Sales Tax

The collection target of property sales tax is raised year after year, following the property tax. However, it seems difficult to achieve the target because of slow real estate transactions. The property sales tax revenues are targeted to reach 211.358 billion won. Last year, 165.037 billion won was collected.

Farm Land Tax

The government and the Democratic Justice Party have decided to raise the farm land tax exemption base to 1,200,000 won from 960,000 won, which represents 31 percent, or 25 billion won, of the farm land tax revenue target set at 80 billion won. As a result, other local taxes such as property tax have to make up for it.

The compromise bill which the Democratic Justice Party has proposed stipulates that the tax-exempt base for A-class farm land tax (taxation on rice production) should be raised by 24.8 percent to 924,000 won on the basis of the current purchasing price of grains, and that of B-class farm land tax (tax levy on special crops) should be raised from the current 220,000 won to 276,000 won. If the tax-exempt base is so settled, the number of tax-exempted farming households will jump to 1.2 million (which represents 55 percent of the total farming households) from 1 million (44 percent of the total). This will produce a deficit of 25 billion won in tax revenues, thereby forcing the increase of property and residential taxes, if government subsidies are not provided for.

Raising the Tax Levy Standard

There is a problem of raising the tax levy standard for property tax and property sales tax to increase the local tax revenues which will finance the growing local government spending, and to include the education tax in the local tax category. The current tax levy standard for land and buildings is 40 percent of the current market value of the land or the building, that is to say 40 percent of the market value is taken away as tax. Policy-makers say it should be raised to 50 percent.

Under the present circumstances, homeowners who do not have regular incomes also have to pay property tax. Low income people [who own homes] are likely to bear a heavy tax burden which may even threaten their livelihood if the tax levy standard is raised. The local tax authorities worry about the possibility that the increase of the property tax will meet stiff resistance from the inner chamber [individual level] and fan out as public grievances.

Countermeasures

In order to reduce local tax burdens, it is desirable for the local government to engage in profit-making businesses other than tax collection. It is also desirable that local public corporations be set up to do construction work on water pipes, sewers, bridges, housing lots, and other basic city planning jobs by applying the principles of private management. With this purpose in mind the Ministry of Home Affairs is now encouraging local governments to attract private capital and technology to spur their own development under its administrative guidances for city management.

Together with this, it is urgently required to institute a rational tax administration which enables us to establish a local tax that can be transferred as a part of the national revenue, to transfer certain national taxes such as the telephone tax to the local tax category, and to determine by law the proportion of grants-in-aid to be given to local governments from national tax revenues. (One U.S. dollar roughly equals 700 won)

FISHERIES AGREEMENTS SOUGHT WITH 14 COUNTRIES

SK070958 Seoul YONHAP in English 0815 GMT 7 Aug 81

[Text] Seoul, Aug. 7 (YONHAP)--The Korean Government is planning to conclude fisheries cooperation agreements with 14 coastal countries as a measure to envigorate the country's deep-sea fishing industry which is suffering a continued recession following coastal countries' promulgation of 200-mile economic zones since 1977.

The 14 coastal countries are Suriname, Brazil, Chile, Ecuador, Costa Rica, Mexico, Tunisia, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Cote d'Ivoire, the Seychelles, India, Fiji and Papua New Guinea.

Disclosing that the government has already presented draft agreements to the coastal countries, Foreign Ministry officials said Friday that they expect that agreement could be concluded with most of the coastal countries by the end of the first half of next year.

The amount of fish caught by the Korean deep-sea fishing boats has kept on decreasing in recent years--725,000 tons in 1976, 596,000 tons in 1977, 566,000 tons in 1978, 486,000 tons in 1979 and 458,000 tons in 1980.

At present, Korea maintains fisheries cooperation agreements with Japan, Spain, Gambia, the United States and 10 other countries and has initialed similar pacts with Morocco, Mauritania and Australia.

Aside from the plan for fisheries cooperation agreements, the government is also taking necessary procedures to become a member of such international fisheries organizations as the North Atlantic Fisheries Organization, the International North Pacific Fisheries Commission, the Conservation Commission for Antarctic Marine Living Resources and the Inter-American Tropical Tuna Commission.

Korea has already joined the Indian and Pacific Fisheries Commission, the International Whales Commission and the International Commission for Southeast Asian Fisheries.

ROK-ASEAN ECONOMIC TIES TO BE PROMOTED IN SEPTEMBER

SK060134 Seoul YONHAP in English 0053 GMT 6 Aug 81

[Text] Seoul, Aug. 6 (YONHAP)--Private-level economic cooperation between Korea and the five ASEAN member countries is expected to be pushed ahead on a full scale beginning late September as a follow-up measure to Korean President Chon Tu-hwan's June 29-July 15 state visits to those countries.

Officials at the Korean Chamber of Commerce and Industry (KCCI) said Thursday that Indonesia would dispatch a high-powered 60-member delegation led by Arnold Baramuli of Poleko group to the fourth joint conference of the Korean-Indonesian private economic cooperation council slated for September 20-30 in Seoul.

The joint council meeting's major agenda includes bilateral cooperation in the resources field, joint-venture projects and promotion of two-way trade agreed upon during Chon's visit to that Southeast Asian country.

Discussions will focus on the economic fields where the two countries can promote their cooperation, the officials said.

In line with an agreement reached between Korea and Thailand at the Korean-Thai trade ministers conference in Seoul late July, the Korean-Thai economic cooperation council is expected to set up three committees under its wing in September to exclusively deal with promoting bilateral cooperation in trade, joint investments and construction fields.

The committees' activation will be followed by the second Korean-Thai economic council meeting slated for mid-December in Seoul to discuss full-fledged economic cooperation between the two countries, the KCCI officials said.

Korea and Singapore will establish their own private-level economic cooperation councils in September or October as agreed upon during Chon's ASEAN swing, and the two countries will hold the first joint conference of their economic cooperation councils this year to step up capital and technological cooperation between them, according to the officials.

Another economic cooperation council meeting is scheduled to take place in Seoul in November or December to discuss promotion of two-way trade and resources cooperation between Korea and Malaysia.

Aside from the council meetings, Korea plans to send economic cooperation delegations to the ASEAN countries whenever necessary to promote economic cooperation with them on a long-term basis, while trying to become a member of the ASEAN Chamber of Commerce and Industry, the officials added.

ECONOMIC MISSION TO EUROPE--Seoul, Aug. 6 (YONHAP)--A high-power economic cooperation delegation, organized by the Federation of Korean Industries (FKI), will tour six European countries Sept. 5-26, FKI officials said here Thursday. The officials said that the 20-member economic mission composed of leading Korean businessmen would visit the United Kingdom, France, West Germany, Belgium, Switzerland and Luxemburg. According to the officials, the Korean delegates are scheduled to meet with business leaders of their visiting countries to discuss promoting bilateral trade [word indistinct] the inducement of advanced technology into Korea and joint venture projects in third countries. The Korean businessmen will also ask their European counterparts for direct capital investments in Korea and for joint ventures here, the officials said. In the Belgian capital of Brussels, the Koreans will hold a symposium on economy Sept. 16-17 under the joint sponsorship of a British economic newspaper, THE FINANCIAL TIMES, and the European Community (EC) to discuss a wide range of economic issues including economic cooperation and two-way trade expansion between Korea and the European organization. The officials said that 150 industrial leaders from 17 European countries are expected to participate in the planned Brussels symposium. [Text] [SK060153 Seoul YONHAP in English 0124 GMT 6 Aug 81]

MISSIONS TO EUROPE, S. AMERICA--The government plans to soon dispatch large-scale economic survey missions to three areas--Europe, Central and South America and Africa. According to authorities concerned, the high-powered missions, which will be led by economic ministers or vice ministers, will consist of working-level officials of the economic planning board and the ministries of foreign affairs, finance, commerce-industry, energy-resources and construction. Leading businessmen and key members of four economic organizations will join the missions. The three teams will scrutinize a wide spectrum of areas for enhancing economic cooperation with focus on negotiations of loans required for the Fifth Five-Year Economic Development Plan (1982-86), export market expansion, joint development for resources, and capital cooperation in the form of joint ventures. In the first-stage, a joint survey team, led by Commerce-Industry Minister So Sok-chun, will leave for Europe early next month. The two other missions will also be dispatched next month to the African and Latin American regions for the same purpose. [Text] [SK040706 Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 4 Aug 81 p 7]

VISA EXEMPTION ACCORDS--The government has been negotiating with 19 countries to conclude visa exemption agreements to facilitate overseas travel by Korean nationals, it was learned yesterday. The 19 countries are Thailand, the Philippines, Sri Lanka, Bangladesh, Peru, Colombia, Costa Rica, Jamaica, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Ivory Coast, Sudan, Malaysia, Indonesia, India, Panama, Jordan, Liberia and Mauritius. At present, Korea has nonvisa agreements with the Philippines and Thailand, but they are only for those who hold diplomatic or official passports. Informed sources said that visa exemption agreements are expected to be concluded with at least 12 of the 19 countries within this year at the earliest as they showed favorable responses. Once the accord is concluded, travelers can stay in those countries for up to half a year without visa, except for those seeking jobs. The sources explained that visa exemption negotiations will be conducted actively under the government decision to liberalize overseas trips by Koreans. The visa exemption will be conducive to promoting bilateral understanding as it will promote personnel exchanges, they observed. The nation has concluded visa accords, for both diplomatic, official and general passport holders, with 22 countries. [Text] [SK110651 Seoul THE KOREA HERALD in English 11 Aug 81 p 1]

U.S. ENVOY--Seoul, Aug. 12 (YONHAP)--New U.S. Ambassador to Korea Richard L. Walker Wednesday said that it was a source of great honor that U.S. President Ronald Reagan has chosen him as the representative to a country which is so important a friend and ally of the United States and for whose culture and achievements he has long had such admiration. Walker made the remark when he presented his credentials to Korea's President Chon Tu-hwan at Chongwadae, the presidential mansion in Seoul. In his presentation address, the new U.S. ambassador said that he came to the Republic of Korea as Reagan's representative at a time when the relations between the two countries have entered a new era of friendship and cooperation following President Chon's state visit to the United States earlier this year. Walker emphasized, however, that "this is a moment when it is more critical than ever that we work together to maintain peace on the Korean Peninsula and in the Northeast Asian region." In this endeavor, the ambassador said, he will be guided by the pledge which the two presidents of the Republic of Korea and the United States made jointly in Washington on Feb. 2 this year to strengthen U.S.-Korean cooperation in deterring and defending against aggression. The Korean President replied that he welcomed Walker's assumption of his Seoul post because he has a keen insight into the traditional relations between Korea and America, and the realities in the Northeast Asian region. Chon also expressed the hope that the new ambassador would contribute to the further promotion of bilateral friendly relations, adding that next year is the centennial of opening up diplomatic relations between the two countries. Korea's Foreign Minister No Sin-Yong and Minister-Counsellor John C. Monjo of the U.S. Embassy here were also present at the meeting. [Text] [SK120437 Seoul YONHAP in English 0331 GMT 12 Aug 81]

NO CHANGE EXPECTED IN CANADIAN IMPORT POLICY

SK080925 Seoul YONHAP in English 0858 GMT 8 Aug 81

[Text] Toronto, August 7 (YONHAP)--It appears highly unlikely that Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau's scheduled visit to Korea would in any way help ease Ottawa's restrictive policy against South Korean exports to this North American market.

Foremost on the agenda of the forthcoming Korea-Canada summit scheduled for September would be increased bilateral trade and economic cooperation, an informed source said Friday.

But he indicated this does not necessarily have to come at the price of a more liberal import policy on the part of Canada. He noted Ottawa's restrictive import policy applies to European and other Asian countries as well.

He was commenting on speculation that with the first visit to Korea by a Canadian prime minister, Ottawa might consider making some sort of import concessions, however minimal, as a gesture of goodwill if not as a means of bargaining for the sales of its high-cost technology items including Candu.

South Korea's leading exports to this North American nation include textiles, clothing, electronics and footwear. However, Canada limits Korean textile and clothing exports under bilateral quotas and electronic goods exports with discriminatory tariff rates.

Except for footwear, most of Korea's exports in these categories dropped off markedly in 1980. Textile exports--the single largest item--declined to 77.5 million U.S. dollars from about 97 million dollars in 1979.

Television and other electronics goods also fell substantially to about 56 million dollars from a previous 76 million dollars. Although the poor Korean export performance in Canada could not be blamed entirely for Ottawa's protectionist policy, it certainly has been a major irritant to Korea and is becoming more so as Ottawa appears determined to continue its protectionism.

Ottawa has recently announced its intention to maintain import quotas on textiles and clothing for another five years.

Seoul and Ottawa last month failed to reach a new bilateral textile agreement in their five days of negotiations in Seoul, due to a wide divergence of views on the scale of a new quota.

ROK COMPANIES TO EXPLORE ALASKAN COAL DEPOSITS

SK010300 Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 1 Aug 81 p 1

[Text] The government has authorized four Korean companies to explore massive coal deposits in Alaska in a joint venture with Alaskans. The four are Hyundai, Samsung, Samchok Consolidated Coal Mining Co. and Daesung Consolidated Coal Mining Co.

With the authorization, the four companies are scheduled to complete a test operation in the Bering River area by the end of September this year under a partnership agreement with Chugach Native Inc. (CNI) of the United States, industry sources said yesterday.

According to the sources, the Bering area east of Anchorage has reserves of an estimated 2-3 billion tons of anthracite and bituminous coal.

By the end of this year, the sources said, a consortium of the four Korean firms will analyze the results of the firstphase digging.

If the first digging fails to discover commercially exploitable coal, the sources said, the four companies will continue coal-search exploration until the end of 1985.

The government allowed the four local firms to participate in the overseas coal development project last week.

Apart from the four companies, the Suneel Shipping Co. of Korea plans to tap bituminous coal reserves in the central part of Alaska in a tie-up with the Usibelley Coal Co. of the United States. The two sides are negotiating on joint exploration.

With the government authoritization, the sources said, Korea's participation in the development of coal reserves in Alaska will be expedited.

The government is ready to provide financial assistance including exploration costs to help the four companies hunt the black mineral.

A few months ago, the four-member Korean business group and CNI agreed in principle to establish a tie-up firm in order to explore coal reserves.

Now, the four local companies' representatives including Samchok President Choi Hyong-sun are in Alaska to reach final agreement with CNI on joint exploration. The formal agreement is expected to be made soon, the sources said.

The bilateral agreement has been forged since March 30 in Seoul, when Hyundai and CNI signed a memorandum of understanding to develop coal reserves in the Bering River area.

INVISIBLE TRADE DEFICIT INCREASES--Seoul, Aug. 5 (YONHAP)--Korea's invisible trade deficit has kept getting worse due largely to heavy outflows of hard currencies for payments of interest on foreign loans, Finance Ministry sources said Wednesday. According to the source, the deficit in the non-trade account came to 964 million dollars in the first six months of this year, 308 million dollars more than the same period last year, with the outlays in the period amounting to 4.01 billion dollars as against the receipts that reached 3.05 billion dollars. Thus, the six-month deficit figure already outran the estimated current account invisible trade deficit of 500 million dollars for the whole of this year by 464 million dollars. TRADE DEFICIT WITH JAPAN--The adverse balance of trade between Korea and Japan is still deteriorating against Korea as imports of key industrial machine supplies and materials are heavily dependent on Japan. According to statistics compiled by the Ministry of Commerce and Industry, Korea's import excess with Japan during the first half of this year marked $1,575 million. Imports from Japan during the first six months of this year amounted to $3,118,260,000, whereas exports to Japan were $1,543,590,000. The adverse condition with Japan has been improved since 1979. However, the import dependence for capital goods and industrial facilities is unchanged due to Korea's industrial structure. In recent days, the depreciation of the Japanese yen currency in the wake of U.S. dollar rally has made it difficult for Korea to increase exports during the latter half of this year. It has been pointed out that a horizontal division of labor and strengthening technical training in the sectors of shipbuilding, electronics and machinery are necessary to cope with the growing import excess. [Text] [SK060656 Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 6 Aug 81 p 7]

INCREASE IN EXPORTS--Seoul, Aug. 6 (YONHAP)--Korea's 10 general trading companies exported some 4.9 billion U.S. dollars' worth of commodities during the first seven months this year, up 34.2 percent over the same period last year. According to a tally released Thursday by the Commerce-Industry Ministry, the combined exports by the major businesses account for 41.1 percent of the country's total exports of the period. The Daewoo Industrial Co. became the first firm to hit one billion-dollar export with 1.02 billion dollars, followed by Samsung Co. with 886 million dollars, and the Hyundai Corp. with 821 million dollars. The Ssangyong Corp., the Kukje Corp. and the Hyosung Corp. were among the businesses which exported over 400 million dollars in the period. HIGH-RISE HOUSING CONSTRUCTION REPORTED IN NAMP'O

[Text] Upholding the on-the-spot guidance given by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song on 22 and 23 May, Namp'o District Waudo Housing Area construction sites are forcefully whipping up the hot winds of revolutionary fervor and speed battle.

Our great leader, touring around Namp'o District's brand new Waudo Housing Area and the Waudo Recreation Center, commented that the Waudo area looked beautiful from the touring boat, and instructed that this place must be turned into a workers' cultural rest area through further construction of high rises of varied styles on the ridges around Waudo and through energetic beautification of the Waudo Recreation Center to make it the workers' cultural rest area.

Our great leader further remarked that, becoming this coastal city, we should construct nice looking residential high-rises on the ridges and surround them with parks and green areas, so as to enable the people to feel that they are living in a park. He thus explained the bright outlook and detailed plans for building Namp'o City into an even more magnificent and splendid city.

The warm love of our great leader and the great concern of our glorious party center shown toward the workers of Namp'o City has given rise to creative wisdom and flame-like zeal among the construction workers here, and has caused an outpouring of the guts and spirit of moving mountains and filling sea in one breath.

Our great leader comrade Kim Il-song instructed as follows:

"This year we must build urban and rural housing on a grand scale, thereby further improving housing conditions for workers."

Upholding our great leader's on-the-spot guidance regarding the construction of a more magnificent and splendorous City of Namp'o, the construction command under the guidance of the city party committee, drove forward, assault-fashion, with organizational and political work for the purpose of vigorously mobilizing all construction capacity.

The construction command informed the members of each department of step-by-step goals and struggle tasks, deeply impressed every functionary with the great leader's far-sighted plan and the party's aims, and responsibly worked without rest to see that operational guidance, technical guidance and material supply were meticulously handled.

Meanwhile, functionaries who went out to the factories and shops, while accurately presenting the great leader's on-the-spot instruction and step-by-step goals for accomplishing much more construction of many styles of beautiful high-rise housing, and while explaining and inculcating the masses far and wide with the glorious party center's aim of accelerating construction with spirit, exhorted the masses to new innovation and feats.

The construction workers and volunteers, who had mastered the party's intention thoroughly, said that now was certainly the time to embrace the enthusiasm and vigorous fighting spirit of youth, and that the time for valor was at hand, and spread the vigorous assault to every work site.

Command functionaries of the 9 August Youth Shock Brigade, on learning that they would build the Waudo bathhouse right after construction on the City People's Hospital, went right away to Pyongyang's Ch'anggwangwon and toured every modern piece of equipment and facility, and, with our party's sublime affection and high regard for the people in their hearts, led the shock brigade into fruitful struggle.

In particular the shock brigade members assigned to the 2nd Company, 2d Battalion and the 3d Company, 3d Battalion, of the 9 August Youth Shock Brigade, launching a ferocious assault which began the very day of the great leader's visit, are accomplishing more than double their daily quotas through compliance with new operational guidelines.

In the same vein, the Number 22 Metals Factory Construction Site construction personnel charged with the construction of a 30-story high-rise housing project, brought about unprecedented innovation in the foundation excavation work.

Construction personnel of the Yonggang Construction Brigade and the Taean City Construction Site, responsible for building a 10-story and an 18-story high-rise, are, as expected, bringing forth new successes in foundation construction day after day with redoubled courage, while absolutely refusing to yield first place in the struggle to fulfill the great leader's on-the-spot guidance.

At present, this city's construction workers and volunteers, including those at the Namp'o City Urban Construction Site, dedicate all their enthusiasm, thinking constantly about putting quality first and about how to build more beautifully, more splendidly, and more economically.

Because of the toiling struggle of this city's construction personnel and volunteers, who shine forth by their proud feats in these days of worthwhile struggle to fulfill the great leader's on-the-spot guidance, today the Waudo Housing Area construction sites display with vigor the chollima and speed battle spirit.

PRC OFFICIAL TO PHILIPPINES--Pyongyang, 13 Aug (KCNA)--Zhao Ziyang, premier of the State Council of the People's Republic of China, paid an official goodwill visit to the Philippines from August 6 to 9, according to a report. During the visit he had talks with Filipino President Ferdinand Marcos and discussed the question of developing bilateral relations and a series of international problems. He also met the prime minister of that country and was entertained at a banquet by him. [Text] [SK130356 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0336 GMT 13 Aug 81]

REUNIFICATION THROUGH DCRK ADVOCATED

SK051532 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1500 GMT 5 Aug 81

[Text] Pyongyang, 5 Aug (KCNA)--The Korean people will certainly accomplish the historic cause of national reunification by thwarting and frustrating the U.S. imperialists manoeuvres of domination and interference and founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo in great unity, declares NODONG SINMUN in its article Wednesday.

The article recalls that at the historic Sixth Congress of the Workers Party of Korea, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song put forward the proposal for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo on condition that the North and South of Korea recognize and tolerate each others ideas and social systems.

This proposal, the article goes on, represents the Korean people's unshakable will to solve the reunification question by the efforts of our nation itself without any foreign interference.

If the independent and peaceful reunification of Korea is to be achieved through the founding of a confederal state, the U.S. occupation of South Korea and its war policy must be ended, first of all.

Because the U.S. imperialists' occupation of South Korea and new war provocation manoeuvres are fraught with a constant danger of a war of northward invasion breaking out any moment, together with the danger of permanent division of our country.

The national desire of the Korean people to achieve the independent and peaceful reunification of the country by founding a confederal state cannot be realised with the aggressors left alone to occupy a half of our country.

Another important point in carrying into practice the proposal for founding the DCRK is to thwart and frustrate the "two Koreas" plot of the United States.

The proposal for founding the confederal state is a patriotic reunification proposal for determinedly rejecting "two Koreas" and "two nations" and accomplishing the historic cause of national reunification so that our people may live forever as one nation in one Korea. This proposal can be materialised only when the U.S. imperialists' "two Koreas" scheme is shattered.

What is required next to materialise the proposal for founding the DCRK is to put an end to the U.S. imperialists encouragement to the South Korean puppet clique and their interference in the internal affairs of Korea.

An independent and peaceful reunification of the country is unthinkable under the present condition in which a harsh military fascist rule has been established and democracy is totally obliterated in South Korea and the Korean peninsula is in a state of extreme tension due to U.S. imperialists' interference.

The U.S. imperialists must pull out of South Korea without delay, giving up their occupation policy in South Korea and all their interference in Korean internal affairs, must give up their "two Koreas" scheme, stop encouraging the puppet clique and wash their hands of Korea for good.

POLICY DIFFERENCES AT KDI REPORTED

Seoul TONGA ILBO in Korean 3 Aug 81 p 3 Seoul US Embassy translation

[Article by Reporter Chang Song-won: "Dispute Over Economic Management"]

[Summary] Recently, there was a verbal controversy at the Korea Development Institute over whether the nation should pursue an economic policy for stability or for growth. In the dispute, participated in by economists, bankers, businessmen, representatives of economic organizations, and journalists, a group of businessmen advocated an economic expansion policy.

But they were outnumbered by the group of professors, bankers, and journalists who insisted on giving emphasis to economic stabilization. Officials of the Economic Planning Board, who were in favor of stability, at heart, did not lose the chance and concluded the discussions by emphasizing that it is inevitable to continue to pursue the stabilization policy.

In fact, it was nothing but a foregone conclusion. It seems that the general opinion at present is that there can be no alternative but to pursue a policy for economic stability. And the policy pursued by the EPB is actually no exception from this line.

Those in favor of the stabilization policy maintain that the stabilization policy is desirable even for future economic growth. According to a survey conducted by the EPB, urban workers suffer hardships in this period of economic depression, while limiting their family budget to daily necessities.

Accordingly, there is an increasing need to indirectly help improve their household income by stabilizing prices. Stability in wages should be ensured by stabilizing prices first, rather than increasing wage only after prices have spiraled upwards. The officials concerned pointed out that the economic expansion policy should begin with stimulating the purchasing power and demand by improving the real income standards.

Even for improving business management and strengthening Korean industries' competitiveness on the world markets, the priority should go to stabilizing prices.

Why is the financial structure of our enterprises weak? Many hold the view that it is because quite a few enterprises are engrossed in real estate investment and tormented by the need to pay interest on their short-term borrowings from outside. Under the government action taken on 27 September last year, a total of 1,198 business corporations have declared their ownership of some 442.9 million p'yong (3.3 square meters) of land for other than their original business purposes.

Some point to the fact that businesses have benefited from inflation, rather than they have grown by demonstrating their own business ability. But businesses became enthusiastic about their real estate investments because of runaway inflation. Even for blocking this vicious circle, and in order to enable businesses to free themselves from the pressure of high interest, dividend and wage rates, efforts should be made to stabilize prices first, they said.

Moreover, the most pressing task ahead will be to defend the nation's balance of payments. It is inevitable to follow an export-led growth strategy, in this respect.

On the other hand, those advocating an expansion policy say that the economy has showed a recovery trend, though slow in pace, during the first half of this year, thanks to a favorable turn made in the ship and textile exports. During the latter half of this year, however, exports are expected to be inactive with a slow-down in the arrivals of L/C's since last May. Accordingly, the economy should be encouraged to recover from recession by boosting exports under a growth policy of raising the Won-Dollar exchange rate and bringing downwards current interest rates, they say.

However, during the April-June period this year, exports have grown by 25 to 34 percent over the same period last year. Yet, the trend in the domestic business recovery in the months from May has been unsatisfactory. This is ascribable to the fact that the foundation of domestic demand has turned very weak with a drastic decrease in the income standards in terms of real value. Accordingly, even when exports have grown to some extent, the increase could not be of any help to business recovery at home.

In our economic structure, imports are larger than exports. With this economic structure, any upward change of the Won-Dollar exchange rate will immediately push prices and foreign debt servicing burden upwards, thereby further worsening economic conditions for exports.

The nation's ship and textile exports have become unprecedentedly active these days. This fact tells us that exports are dependent not merely on the foreign exchange rate, but more largely on the export market conditions, product quality, prices, and an improvement of productivity.

Their argument over interest rates was no less serious. Even in this case, there is no mistake about that at present, the lowering of interest rates cannot be the only best way. Because there are too many difficulties involving such an interest rate change. How long should the present interest rate structure be maintained, then? This question should be left as a long-term task to resolve, by refraining from making any hasty conclusion.

At any rate, certainly the prevailing opinion is that all available policy means now should be employed comprehensively to stabilize prices. Fortunately, overseas factors involving prices for crude oil and raw materials are now kept stable. Business promotion should begin with a firm ground for stabilization.

FIGHTER PLANE PRODUCTION PLAN REPORTED

Seoul TONGA ILBO in Korean 4 Aug 81 p 7, Seoul US Embassy Translation

[Article by Reporter Yi Yong-su: "Efflorescence of Science and Technology: Aircraft Industry"]

[Summary] The domestic aircraft production plan (F-5E fighters) has come to the stage of finalization. Indications are that the first Korean-made fighter aircraft will debut next year. The Korean aircraft industry circles are now actively making contacts with subsidiaries of Northrop Corporation of the U.S. for technical tie-ups.

The nation's aircraft industry has now entered the aircraft assembly and production stage, having already gone through the stage of ground service and repairing. Moreover, the industry is now about to start the local production of aircraft parts. As of 4 August, a total of 16 Korean firms were negotiating with American aircraft parts manufacturers, to prepare for a full-fledged domestic manufacture of parts.

Korea began to accumulate aircraft industry technology with ground service furnished for military planes during the Korean war. Korean Air Lines (KAL) has long endeavored to increase its own maintenance technology. Now it has become capable of furnishing ground service for and repairing of all aircraft operated in Korea.

KAL and Samsung Precision are engaged not only in the ground service and repairing of foreign airliners arriving in Korea, but also entrusted with final-stage maintenance work (3rd-stage service) of U.S. military aircraft. Their ground service technology is now well accepted internationally.

Helicopters domestically assembled made their first appearance last year. Korean-made parts accounted for more than 40 percent of all equipment and parts. Aircraft engines and electronic parts still remain a technically difficult and problematical area. Even in this area, some parts may possibly be produced in Korea. Yet, because of the great difference in prices as compared with foreign-made parts, they could not be produced in Korea, according to Kong Sa-on, a laboratory chief of the Korea Aviation Technology Research Center.

Even in the case of F-5E aircraft, which Korea intends to produce, assembly and production costs about 20 to 30 percent more than their import prices. But the nation has decided to produce them domestically in view of the accumulation of technical know-how and spill-over effects.

In particular, seven to eight Northrop subsidiaries have already placed orders with Korean firms for aircraft parts. And also for strengthening our defense power, it is natural for Korea to produce F-5E aircraft locally.

At the beginning of the 1980's, subcontractors had to prolong their delivery period two to three times the length of time previously needed. This has made aircraft manufacturers look for other qualified suppliers of parts, providing a favorable chance for Korean business circles.

Important problems are how Korea will be able to meet the international price terms and manufacture high-quality products, and how strongly the Korean Government will be able to secure quid pro quo--favorable terms and conditions for Korea's supply of aircraft parts in return for the Korean purchase of foreign aircraft.

BIG BUSINESS GROUPS' INVESTMENT PLAN REPORTED

Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 16 Jul 81 p 7

[Text] Korean big business groups have formulated their five-year medium- and long-term programs for investment in the heavy and chemical industrial sectors.

The big business interests are concentrating on the inner strength of their management in order to raise their international competitiveness and to overcome the present business recession.

According to business sources, 10 business groups believe large-scale investment in the heavy and chemical industrial sector is indispensable to keep up the steady expansion of their enterprises.

For enlarging their enterprise scale to an international level, they have the five-year investment plans beginning this year or next year for the industries of automobiles, shipbuilding, precision, petrochemical and electronic products including semi-conductors.

While adopting the system of responsible management, the large firms are laying stress on technical renovation, manpower training and quality control campaigns.

Other highlights of the plans include overseas market diversification, export boost of light industrial products such as textile items, and the intensive fostering of some specific items into worldwide renowned commodities.

The Yyundai Group has three goals--large-scale investment for expanding the facility of automobile industry, a steady increase in overseas construction exports and the achievement of a 50 percent growth in the annual sales amount.

The Lucky Group plans to develop the Lucky Ltd. into one of worldwide general chemical makers, scaled at 1,000 billion won in its annual sales amount in 1989. Lucky also plans to foster an intensive semi-conductor industry.

The Daewoo Group is determined to bring up the shipbuilding and heavy industries, in parallel with the export promotion of light industrial goods, and the expansion of markets in Africa and other regions.

Sunkyong will center on the petrochemical industry and technical development, and Kukje is studying the expansion of footwear manufacturing facilities.

Samsung set up a five-year investment plan for heavy industries, and the Kolon Group plans to merge Kolon Nylon Inc and Kolon Polyester Inc in September in a policy to raise the international competiveness and to expand its chemical fiber facilities to an international level. The Korea Explosives Co plans to make a large-scale investment in one of three industries--heavy and chemical, electronic and defense.

The Hyosung Group will gradually expand investment in heavy and chemical, and machinery sectors, along with a considerable amount of investment in the production of non-garment textiles such as fishing nets and tires.

The Kumho Group will put emphasis on the petrochemical field, and on the exports of secondary products such as tires and steel items.

1960 KIM IL-SONG SPEECH TO PROVINCIAL PARTY PLENUM

SK071033 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2200 GMT 5 Aug 81

[Full text of "On Tasks of South Pyongan Provincial Party Organizations," a concluding speech made by Kim Il-song at a plenary meeting of the South Pyongan Provincial Party Committee on 7 January 1960; released by the editorial committee of NODONG SINMUN on the occasion of the 17th anniversary of Kim Il-song's guidance of the plenary meeting of the South Pyongan Provincial Party Committee on 6 August 1964--read by announcer]

[Text] Comrades: By the authority of the Standing Committee of the party Central Committee, I have given guidance to the plenary meeting of the South Pyongan provincial party. If the plenary meeting of the provincial party had been extended for 2 more days or so, I could have more thoroughly explained the spirit of the plenary session of the party Central Committee of December 1959. It is regrettable that the period for the meeting is short.

Though the meeting period has been short, I admit that the participants have correctly understood the defects revealed in the work of the provincial party and organizations in the past and the measures to rectify these defects.

Now, I am going to speak about my impressions of the plenary meeting of the South Pyongan provincial party and about some tasks laid before the provincial party organizations.

1. On improving the work method and work style of functionaries.

On hearing the report by the comrade chairman of the provincial party committee and the discussions by many comrades at this current plenary meeting of the South Pyongan provincial party, I have felt many things.

In particular, as a result of this plenary meeting of the party I feel that our functionaries consider the administrative method paramount in their work.

In the past, the Japanese imperialists ruled Korea by regarding their police as almighty and considered this the only way of ruling. They governed all things by administrative methods.

It has been 15 years since our country was liberated from the yoke of the Japanese imperialist rule. But, the work method considering administration paramount still exists among our functionaries. This is the biggest flaw in the work by our functionaries.

The administrative work method is to carry out work by ordering, punishing and handing down written decisions. In other words, the administrative work method is to govern with power.

The struggle for constructing socialism and communism is a revolutionary struggle. Our anti-Japanese armed struggle in the past was revolution; the establishment of the people's committee after liberation, land reform, nationalization of industry and the introduction of cooperative agriculture were also revolution. Our struggle against the U.S. imperialists today is also revolution.

For what do we wage the revolutionary struggle? We wage it for the well-being of the masses. In other words, we carry out the revolution to construct the paradise of socialism and communism in which all people can eat, dress and live equally well and where the status of being noble or mean does not exist.

Revolution cannot be carried out with one or two persons' power. Revolution is work for the masses and work of the masses themselves. Thus, if victory is to be won in the revolution, the broad masses of people should join in the revolutionary struggle and the popular masses should be organized and mobilized in it by a political method.

Of course, an administrative method is not completely useless in carrying out revolution. For example, if everyone wanted to stand in front and not to stand in the rear in making a formation, a formation could not be made. In this instance, an administrative method, ordering someone to stand in front and someone else to stand in the rear, is needed. Likewise, there could be someone who did not take orders well, no matter how many times he had been indoctrinated. Such people should be governed by the administrative method. Therefore, an administrative method is not completely unnecessary.

However, an administrative method is no more than a means, but can never be paramount. However, our functionaries have considered administrative method as paramount. This is totally wrong.

When many people carry out revolution, various kinds of persons may exist. It is necessary to awaken all of them. To awaken people means leading all people to march toward the one path of revolution. As we always say, political work should be given priority in awakening people. In any work, we should give precedence to the political work. Giving precedence to political work means informing the people clearly of the purpose, significance and work method of the revolutionary tasks for which they are mobilized so they will voluntarily participate.

For example, if we are to carry out the mechanization of farming in countryside this year, we should let the people know why the mechanization of farming is necessary, what results would be produced, how we should undertake the task and who should lead the mechanization. Thus, we should encourage the people to realize how important and necessary mechanization of the rural economy is and encourage them to actively participate in the struggle to achieve this without fail.

The purpose of this conference is to make the people realize what mistakes were made while we were implementing the national economic plan last year; how we can improve such mistakes and how we can successfully carry out this yea 's plan of national economy; how we should achieve the mechanization of rural economy and improve the tasks of the people's committees.

The conference we are holding is not for discussion of administrative matters but is a political meeting and political work to inspire all the people and to organize and mobilize them. It is not appropriate to hold many meetings just for giving priority to political work. Political work can be carried out by holding meetings and talks, as well as by various other methods such as holding lecture meetings, education through newspapers and so forth. Today, not a small number of our functionaries are carrying out their work in such a way which does not give precedence to political work but which is merely administrative in style. Even the party functionaries are performing their work and tasks of the party in an administrative method.

Some party functionaries are punishing party members for even minor faults, describing them as bad persons and inquiring into their socioeconomic class background, rather than educating them. This is a harmful working style which alienates the masses from the party.

The Korean people possess the remnants of the Japanese imperialists' ideology because they lived under the rule of the Japanese imperialists in the past. Some Koreans worked for the Japanese imperialists' organizations as office workers, some as teachers and some engaged in labor to eke out a livelihood. We organized the party with full knowledge of such a situation after liberation. Thus, we should unite all the people, except for a small number of pro-Japanese and anti-revolutionary elements who acted as stooges for the Japanese imperialists by opposing the revolution and slaughtering the people.

Needless to say, some party members are inferior to other party members. This is why we need to conduct education within the party. The education of party members is aimed at indoctrinating and remodeling them so as to carry out the revolution in unity. The tasks of the party should be carried out in such a way as to give precedence to indoctrination.

The party organizations are like mothers of the party members, and the party members are like children of the party organizations. Mothers do everything not to spoil their children. Among children, some have a radical personality, some are very naughty, while some are good. But mothers love and indoctrinate their children all alike. Mothers always look after them to see if they are hungry or cold and strive to bring them up properly. When their children make mistakes, mothers are saddened. A mother's love for her children is limitless and no child hates his mother. Our party functionaries should love the party members as a mother does her children.

The party functionaries' love for the party members also means education. Their love should not be separate from education. Chairmen of the county and ri committees should understand the party members well. They should know about the personality of each party member so that they can conduct education in accordance with their characteristic personalities, in such a way as to prevent mistakes by the party members.

Our experience shows that when the responsible functionaries know about their party members very well and lead them according to their individual personalities, successes can be registered in any work.

When we carried out the anti-Japanese armed struggle, all work was successful when a commander loved his troops and gave concrete guidance to them.

For example, when a commander gave detailed instructions to the members of a reconnaissance unit prior to their departure on what routes they should take, the number of possible Japanese ambushes, villages where spies were known to be deployed and how they should respond to questions from unidentified persons, they returned successfully from their mission. When the commander gave assignments for the mission without giving concrete guidance, they returned in failure.

Chairmen of the county and ri committees should give detailed instructions when they assign tasks to party members. This is a part of education. Education is not only conducted in schools. Some functionaries, without conducting education for the party members, punish them for minor mistakes. This is not right.

Our party members are revolutionary comrades who united in the arduous struggle to reform nature and society--which has lasted 15 years since liberation--and in bloody struggles against the enemies. Our party members joined the struggle to implement democratic reforms, including the founding of a popular government after liberation, land reform and nationalization of industry. They waged bloody fights against armed aggression by the U.S. imperialists during the fatherland liberation war and struggled to reconstruct plants, enterprises and homes on the ashes of war. They also organized agricultural cooperatives and struggled to establish a socialist system. The party functionaries should love revolutionary comrades and be able to unite them by conducting education work. A child may not like his mother if she keeps beating and cursing him. The mother who truly loves her children and warmly reasons with them will be respected and loved. Our party functionaries should enact party tasks with such a motherly love.

We should strengthen the party's unity and cohesion. The question of strengthening unity and cohesion was stressed during the plenary meeting of the party Central Committee in December 1959.

Only when we strengthen unity and cohesion can we successfully enact our enormous revolutionary tasks. We have done many things. However, much is still to be done.

The Korean communists are assigned a grave mission to consolidate the material and technical foundation of socialism by vigorously accelerating socialist construction in the northern half of the republic, to reunify the fatherland and to construct a socialist and communist society in Korea.

Our tasks are enormous. To enable us to achieve socialism and the fatherland's reunification, we should unite the 1 million party members and strengthen the party's unity and cohesion. I do not mean that we should abandon the class struggle or the ideological struggle within the party while strengthening unity and cohesion. If we do not wage an ideological struggle, bad ideologies, including capitalist ideology, could emerge in the party. We should vigorously struggle without making the slightest compromise with bad ideologies.

There are two different types of class struggle in socialist society. One is to conduct education; the other is to deal a blow. We should reform those who can be remodeled through education, and we should deal a blow against hostile elements who cannot be reformed through education.

We should drive out those elements who attempt to destroy the party with their hostile ideas. However, we should educate and reform those who make mistakes by accident in carrying out their work and those whose social and political backgrounds are complex [sahoe chongchi saenghwal kyongwiga pokchaphan] by trusting them.

As I stated to the party propaganda and agitation functionaries, we believed in unity when we engaged in the anti-Japanese armed struggle. We struggled by trusting the ideological unity and cohesion of the revolutionary ranks.

Had the anti-Japanese guerrillas been forced by others to join revolutionary struggles, they would have deserted the battlefield in a difficult situation. Being revolutionaries who, resolved to struggle against the Japanese imperialists, voluntarily joined the anti-Japanese guerrilla unit, they trusted and assisted each other and struggled at the risk of their life. If anyone among the anti-Japanese guerrilla units had not wanted to struggle with us, he would have deserted his guard duty. We firmly trusted all guerrilla unit members. They assisted each other and struggled against the enemy. Because we trusted revolutionary comrades and were firmly united, we won victory in our struggle against the Japanese imperialists.

The experiences of the anti-Japanese armed struggle shows that we can win victory if we trust and love our comrades and if we achieve unity. We have approved the party's program and regulations and voluntarily joined the party to build socialism and communism. If we had refused to accept this man and that man while founding the party after liberation, we would not have performed great tasks. If our party members had not trusted each other and achieved unity, they would not have founded the people's government and enacted comprehensive democratic reforms, such as land reform and industrial nationalization. They would not have performed the great task of rehabilitating the ravaged people's economy and of establishing the socialist system by repelling the U.S. imperialists' armed invasion.

Our party is most powerful, and it possesses a militant capability because its unity has been strengthened and all party members are united around the party Central Committee. The history of our party is one in which the unity of the party has been consolidated through struggle. Comrades, you should correctly understand the history of our party and the party's policy. We should strengthen its unity. Executive and party members may make errors while carrying out their work. When they do make errors, they should not be overlooked. They should be corrected through criticism. They should not be punished indiscreetly or banished from the party ranks. They should be tolerated to achieve unity.

Party work is indoctination and political work. Party organizations should indoctrinate and enlighten executive and party members. They should improve their political and practical capability to enable them to accomplish their assigned revolutionary tasks. Party functionaries and functionaries of administrative and economic agencies should not work with the idea that administration work is paramount. Instead, they should carry out political work. Political work is paramount. The idea among functionaries of administrative and economic agencies that only party functionaries are authorized to carry out political work and that administrative and economic functionaries are only authorized to carry out administrative and economic work is incorrect. Instead of adopting administrative methods, functionaries of administrative and economic agencies should mingle with the masses, explain party policies in detail and teach how to implement these policies. They should adopt the political method of organizing and mobilizing the masses to implement party policies.

When an army commander issues an order to his men, he describes the enemy, the reason for their combat assignment, the order of battle and combat strategy. Functionaries of administrative and economic agencies should emphasize political work in carrying out all work.

The responsible functionaries of administrative and economic agencies are members of the KWP. All party members should engage in political work. By adopting the method of political work, we can succeed in carrying out our economic work. Although the minister and vice minister of the metal industry frequently visited the Hwanghae Steel Mill to conduct guidance, the work there was not successful. To discover why, we visited the Hwanghae Steel Mill, convened a party conference and sought the opinions of party members. There were many excellent core elements among party members at the steel mill. At the meeting, core party members explained the reason for failures in production. Many interesting points were raised. To study our work, we held a 3-day meeting of the plant party committee. We then convened meetings of party workshop committees. I attended the meeting of the ironworks party committee. Many zealous party members went to the ironworks workshop. At the meeting, they pointed out several defects. They offered opinions on what should be changed to achieve success. We then took measures to correct defects. As a result, production has been increased at the Hwanghae Steel Mill. What does this indicate? Political work should be carried out in all work to gain success.

We discovered the reason for production failures at the Hwanghae Steel Mill thanks to our visit. However, the minister of the metal industry failed to uncover the reason because he met only with managers and chief engineers at the mill and did not carry out political work. Therefore, we should not regard administrative work as paramount in party and administrative and economic work. We should adopt the method of political work. This does not mean that the people's government agencies should not carry out administrative and economic work. Priority should be placed on political work over administrative work in organizing and mobilizing the masses.

I again stress that indoctrination is a foundation of party work. Accordingly, the method of administrative work cannot be tolerated in party work. We should enact a great upsurge in our party work by eliminating formalism, bureaucratism and the method of administrative work among party functionaries and by establishing party revolutionary work methods and a popular work style.

To help party organizations perform their tasks, we should enhance the role of party committees. This does not mean that chairmen and members of these committees should exercise undue influence. This means that all work should be collectively discussed at party committees and that work should be carried out by making assignments to chairmen and members of these committees and administrative functionaries. All party committees, including plant, county and provincial party committees, should enact their work in this way.

The party is a political organization rallying many people. Strengthening party leadership means that party organizations should resolve all questions by letting their party committees collectively discuss these questions. These organizations should collectively exercise their leadership and control. Therefore, party organizations should strengthen their collective consultative system and their collective leadership.

We should instill a sense of responsibility in functionaries. They should satisfactorily carry out their role for the revolution. If functionaries fail to accomplish their assigned tasks, they cannot perform their revolutionary duty. Functionaries should enhance their sense of responsibility, strive to carry out all tasks and correct failures in their work. Performing a duty if possible and giving up if it seems impossible is a good-for-nothing attitude. Our functionaries, striving to build communism, should not work in this way. Our functionaries should enhance their sense of responsibility and accomplish their assigned revolutionary duty.

2. On the task assigned the rural economic sector.

The most important task assigned the rural economic sector in South Pyongan Province is to enact a decisive change in farm work. South Pyongan Province is the leader in agricultural production in our country. South Pyongan Province is the home of the capital. During the past period, this province took the lead in implementing our party's agricultural policy. It successfully accomplished its work. When the party called for growing more corn and cultivating rice saplings on cold seedbeds, it responded to this call before all others. It launched an irrigation project for the first time in our country. The irrigation project was a very difficult task. Foreigners wondered how such a difficult and vast project could be carried out by us. They said Koreans were unable to carry out this project by themselves. However, we completed this irrigation project, overcoming many difficulties. Thus, we demonstrated the spirit of Koreans. We completed many irrigation projects. While having successfully completed its irrigation project and taken a leading role in all works, South Pyongan Province failed to carry out farming work last year. Last year South Pyongan Province arbitrarily reduced corn acreage and wasted manpower. The major reason for the failure in agricultural production in South Pyongan Province was the failure of management functionaries of the agricultural cooperative association to properly manage the work teams of this association, whose organizational structure had been expanded. This was due to lack of experience. Because the management functionaries of the agricultural cooperative association have now gained experience in managing a large-scale cooperative economy, they will gain success in farming if they correctly grasp and guide work teams.

The second reason for the failure is that guidance functionaries, flushed with victory, failed to correctly guide and assist the agricultural cooperative association. County party committees and county people's committees should have correctly guided agricultural cooperative associations when these agencies were expanded. However, these committees assigned tasks to them without correctly guiding and assisting them.

Failure is the mother of success. We have discovered the reason for farming failures. This will facilitate success in farming this year. South Pyongan Province should learn a lesson from last year's mistakes. It should correctly carry out farming work to overfulfill the grain production goal this year.

To increase grain production, South Pyongan Province should grow more corn. In 1956 we urged South Pyongan Province to grow large quantities of corn. South Pyongan Province should not forget this, by growing more corn, South Pyongan Province greatly helped solve food problems when our country suffered supply shortages. Corn flour is good to eat. It is good for digestion and nutritious. The mixture of wheat and corn flour is good for cake, bread and noodles. Corn starch is a good resource for export. Foreign countries have a great demand for corn starch. If we sell corn starch, we can buy rice and wheat flour.

Growing corn is easier than growing rice. Corn can withstand droughts and floods. It is less affected by harmful insects. It yields an abundant harvest. Corn is a good crop and perennially succesful plant. We can feed pigs and cows pulverized corn leaves and stalks. We can weave cloth with pulp from the bark of the corn plant. Therefore, we should expand corn acreage. This year South Pyongan Province should make corn cultivation a staple crop on farmfields other than paddyfields. Cultivation of castor oil and sunflower should not reduce corn acreage. If the corn acreage is reduced, this should be compensated by growing corn after harvesting wheat. Last year South Pyongan Province failed to harvest corn after harvesting wheat. As a result, the corn crop was of no use.

Silage is good for milk cows. Some of the corn planted after harvesting wheat should be cut down and made into silage for milk cows. The rest should yield grain. We should also produce more vegetables. It is one of the important tasks facing the rural economy to produce and supply vegetables in sufficient amounts to cities and workers' districts. We plan to supply 100 to 200 grams of vegetables a day to factory and office workers. Therefore, agricultural cooperatives near industrial sites, including the Nampo district, should grow and supply vegetables to factory and office workers.

We must successfully grow tobacco. This is important for farmers' incomes and in raising their living standards. Tobacco growing enhances the living standards of farmers in mountainous areas. A farmer now earns less than a worker. To boost the income of farmers, we hiked meat and vegetable prices last year. This, however, is not sufficient. We must mechanize farming to increase grain output and wage the struggle to increase farmers' income. Suppose three people tended an acre of land and were distributed 1,000 won each as income. Mechanization of farming, if enforced, could put two people on an acre of land--meaning that each would be distributed 1,500 won.

Farm mechanization can be done easily on flat fields. However, it poses difficulties in mountainous areas. Should farming in mountainous areas be done manually it is important to grow high-income plants. It is recommended that South Pyongan Province grow tobacco in Yangdok, Songchon, Sinyang and Maengsan counties. The people's income in these mountainous areas will increase.

People in Changsong County were so poor that the state exempted them from taxes and provided them sheep and goats. However, their living standards were not improved. We asked them to increase their income by growing hot pepper, a plant which grows well in the Changsong area. We asked people in Yanggang Province to grow flax and hop.

We must plant grain-yielding plants where such plants grow well. If we plant tobacco in areas where cereal crops grow well, we cannot solve food problems. However, it is fine to plant tobacco where it grows well. Growing tobacco is more beneficial than growing corn in such areas. We can trade tobacco for wheat. One ton of wheat costs 300 rubles. If tobacco is planted on an acre, its price is enough to buy 12 tons of wheat. However, if wheat is sown on an acre, the best we can expect is 2 tons of wheat. Tobacco growing is more profitable than gold mining. One ton of tobacco is the same as a kilogram of gold. This means that Songchon County, if it produces 1,000 tons of tobacco annually, might just as well produce a ton of gold.

Party committee chairmen and people's committee chairmen in the counties fail to use their brains in enhancing the living standards of farmers. They do not know how to manage the economy. It is not correct to ignore frugal management of the economy and try to maintain the status quo. Party committee chairmen and people's committee chairmen in the counties are not bread winners. They are engaged in the revolution to make the country and the people prosperous.

Counties in mountainous areas where tobacco grows well should increase tobacco growing fields, even at the expense of corn fields. Students should be mobilized to assist in planting and cutting tobacco. Technical guidance in tobacco growing should be conducted. Facilities to demoisturize tobacco leaves should be provided. When agricultural cooperatives are assigned production goals, they should be assigned production per chongbo goals. The amount produced in excess of the goals should be distributed to work teams. Work teams would then strive to produce more quality tobacco by tending and demoisturizing it. Production of top quality tobacco should be encouraged. Agricultural cooperatives which produce large volumes of top grade tobacco should be given prize money and goods such as wristwatches and sewing machines. In South Pyongan Province, we should strive to upgrade the living standard of peasants in mountainous areas, as well as in the plains area, to that of rich middle-class peasants by raising tobacco in counties where tobacco grows well.

We should increase fruit production. To do so, we should increase the production of fruit per chongbo goal by properly fertilizing existing fruit trees. I noted that only 16 barrels of fruit were produced from one chongbo at the Pyongon cooperative from last year. This was because fertilizing was not done on a timely basis and water supplies were low.

I learned that 1 ton and 300 kilograms of apples were picked from a tree at a certain cooperative farm in Pukchong County, South Hamgyong Province. It is wonderful to succeed in picking from a tree at a certain cooperative farm in Pukchong County, South Hamgyong Province. It is wonderful to succeed in picking such a large number of apples from a single tree. The people in Pukchong prune fruit trees in an advanced manner, not in an outdated manner. Fruit production in South Pyongan Province lags behind other provinces. The people of the South Pyongan Province should increase per-chongbo production by following the example of the people of Pukchong. To increase fruit production, we should raise many new orchards in addition to increasing per-chongbo production by properly fertilizing fruit trees.

We are struggling for the future. We should build a communist society and bequeath it to future generations. We inherited nothing from our ancestors. We have made everything in the present generation. Thus, we can have a rich and happy life and turn a wealthy country over to the next generation.

When we raise many orchards, our people will enjoy a happier life in 7 or 8 years. Orchards have many advantages. It would be great to pick 10 tons of apples from one chongbo 7 or 8 years after raising a new apple orchard. The export price of apples, even of second-grade, is 513 rubles per ton, while corn is only 218 rubles per ton. Therefore, production of 10 tons of the second-grade apples from a chongbo is the same as obtaining 20 tons of corn. It is difficult to produce 20 tons of corn from a chongbo. However, 10 tons of apples can easily be produced from a chongbo in many places.

We plan to raise 100,000 chongbo of orchards during the 5-year economic plan period. If we pick 10 tons of apples from a chongbo, 1 million tons of applies will be produced. This is the same as the production of 2 million tons of corn from 100,000 chongbo of orchards. I assume about 50,000 chongbo of apple fields can be raised in South Pyongan Province. If we raise even 30,000 chongbo of apple fields, 300,000 tons of apples will be produced after 7 or 8 years. This is the same as producing 600,000 tons of corn. Some 300,000 chongbo of fields are required to produce 600,000 tons of corn, assuming a production of 2 tons per chongbo.

The raising of 300,000 chongbo of new apple fields is the same as obtaining 150,000 chongbo of corn fields, even if we assume the per-chongbo production of applies to be 5 tons, only half of previously presumed production. It is not easy to acquire 150,000 chongbo of new corn fields. It is very difficult to reclaim 150,000 chongbo of land. This requires a large amount of funds and hard work by the people.

However, it is not so difficult to raise 30,000 chongbo of new apple fields. We should raise orchards in all areas of low mountains along the west coast of South Pyongan Province. South Pyongan Province has more favorable conditions for raising apple fields than Pukchong in South Hamgyong Province. In South Pyongan Province, the weather is not too cold, and there are many hillocks providing adequate land for raising and cultivating fruit trees. South Pyongan Province should manufacture machines needed to raise orchards and build new orchards by uprooting trees and leveling the land.

We should raise not only apple trees but also other fruit trees. If we raise different kinds of fruit trees, we can pick fruit every season and gain more income. Apricots can be an excellent food if we dry and boil them. Apricots can be canned, and almonds can be sold. Thus, we should plant apple trees and other fruit trees such as apricot trees, peach trees, strawberries, grape vines, jujube trees and chestnut trees. All cooperative farms producing fruits should properly process fruit. They should not throw away fallen apples or wormy apples. They should make jams or wine with them. Fruit jam is sold at a much higher price than corn. We should not only sell the fruits we produce but also supply them to our people. We should give fruit to children and supply them to the people by producing a large quantity of fruit. Thus, the people's living standard will be upgraded, and children will grow up to be healthy. When all rural communities raise many orchards and attain mechanization of the rural economy, the income of peasants will be greatly increased. Our country will become a paradise on earth. All the people can then enjoy good clothing and food and live in good houses. The reunification of the fatherland will also be accelerated.

We should develop stock breeding. Stock breeding has not been successful in our country. Individuals raise one or two pigs and a few chickens. We face difficulties in developing stock breeding because it has never been undertaken in our country. However, we must develop stock breeding. Only when we develop stock breeding can the people's needs be satisfied. We should be able to serve all the people meat. Once we were satisfied with giving corn to the people during the period of the fatherland liberation war. However, today is a different era. We should provide the people rice and meat soup. Promotion of stock breeding is important to increase crop production. We can accumulate vast amounts of manure when stock breeding is promoted. Solving the feed problem is also important. To solve this problem, we should raise two crops a year, as decided at the plenary meeting of the party Central Committee in June 1959. We should raise rye on a large scale this autumn. Rye can be raised anywhere, and it strikes deep roots. The soil need not be cultivated. This can also be used for feeding livestock.

We should plant oats to harvest before planting rice. We can feed it to livestock and use its roots for manure. Oats can be planted in the soil where autumn plowing was done. We should make the best use of hay fields to solve the feed problem. Many hay fields are no longer in use.

People say fodder crops have been cultivated on fodder fields. As a matter of fact, however, nothing has been cultivated on these fields. How can we leave fodder fields idle when we do not have an abundance of farm acreage? We should not let these fields go to waste. We should cultivate all of them. In the future we should harvest fodder as well as food from these fields. If we grow potatoes on fodder fields, we can produce potatoes and 45 tons of fodder--that is, leaves and stalks--per chongbo. If 5 tons of potato stalks are needed to raise a pig, we can raise nine pigs with the stalks from 1 chongbo.

If we cultivate pumpkins on fodder fields we can produce both food and fodder. With pumpkin seeds we can earn foreign currency. We should cultivate wild potatoes or grass on a fodder field which does not successfully yield grain so that we can feed domestic animals. Wild potatoes make good fodder. North Hamgyong Province has cultivated wild potatoes on fodder fields and produced more than 20 tons per chongbo.

In growing grass we should eliminate dogmatism. Some functionaries are eager to grow foreign Western grasses. They do not try to grow good varieties of grass available in our country. A long time ago I visited a university with agricultural functionaries and outlined a task to grow natural grass. However, this task has not been implemented. The agricultural cooperative association should correctly cultivate fodder fields and raise a large number of domestic animals such as rabbits, sheep, goats, dairy cows and pigs. In particular, mountainous regions should develop a livestock industry. Without developing a livestock industry in these regions we cannot increase the peasants' income or can we help them lead an affluent life. There is no problem in this respect because there is a lot of grass in mountainous regions. If mountainous regions correctly utilize this grass they can raise a large number of domestic animals. However, some mountainous regions have not made efforts to develop a livestock industry. They have only cultivated corn. As the residents of mountainous regions failed to correctly utilize grass in the mountains, they experienced poverty during the past period. In the future, mountainous counties should develop a livestock industry by cultivating fodder fields and by effectively utilizing grass in the mountains.

Along with developing a joint livestock industry, the agricultural cooperative association should successfully develop private livestock industry. Peasants cannot increase their income only by resorting to land. One chongbo of farmland can now be allotted to a peasant. This acreage can yield 2-3 tons of corn. We can sell 3 tons of corn for 900 won. After deductions for tax-in-kind and food, only a scanty share remains which is not enough for the peasants to lead an affluent life. To increase their income, therefore, peasants should raise a large number of domestic animals while cultivating farmland. Rabbits, sheep and goats are easy to raise because they only eat grass. Women can collect grass while weeding and feed it to their rabbits. School children can also cut grass and take it home returning from school.

The agricultural cooperative association should encourage each farm household to raise 20 to 30 rabbits by distributing young rabbits among its members.

We can earn a large income if we raise goats for milk. This milk is good for both domestic use and for sale. There is no reason for peasants in mountainous regions to decline this profitable business.

We should raise a large number of pigs. It will be difficult for peasants to raise two pigs at first. Accordingly, we should encourage peasants to raise one pig initially. After that we can let them sell it and raise another. We then can encourage peasants to annually raise two to three pigs. The agricultural cooperative association should improve pig breeds and distribute good young pigs among farm households.

We should strengthen guidance to state-run stock farms. Today South Pyongan Province has failed to successfully guide state-run stock farms. During the fatherland liberation war period, the party and the government imported duck eggs by plane to develop a livestock industry after the war. They began to build state-run stock farms. The Sunan and Yonggang duck farms were built during the fatherland liberation war period. Our functionaries are not correctly guiding these farms. We have already elucidated the method of improving and strengthening stock farms. However, this method has not been followed.

Raising ducks is better than raising pigs. Raising pigs takes a long time and requires great quantities of fodder. Pigs are easily attacked by disease. Ducks grow fast and are very disease-resistant. Ducks fully mature in 50 days, yield many eggs and less fodder is needed to raise them. Duch meat is delicious and nutritious and is highly regarded in foreign countries. However, factional elements opposing the party have devastated duck farms, saying duck meat smells fishy. As a result, we have been compelled to build duck farms anew. Had we continuously developed duck farms since the war period we would have been able to produce large quantities of duck meat based on a considerably improved technical foundation.

Our functionaries have paid little attention to raising rabbits even though the party has emphasized this activity. However, our functionaries have stopped raising rabbits. If functionaries work this way they will be unable to carry out the revolution. If they stop carrying out the revolution because they hate to do so, they will be unable to build communism. Functionaries now lack the spirit of patiently forging ahead with the task they started and of completing it. Our functionaries do not study the task assigned them by the party. They do not try to do their jobs. They have not abandoned the habit of giving up if they encounter small difficulties. Our functionaries should resolutely protect and unconditionally and thoroughly implement party policies to the end.

By improving guidance to state-run stock farms, we should make great changes in running these farms. State-run stock farms should reduce primary costs in producing meat. To reduce these costs state-run stock farms should mechanize all work. Thus, an individual worker should at least take charge of more than 6 chongbo of fodder fields. All tasks ranging from pulverizing the fodder to feeding domestic animals and cleaning pens should be mechanized.

We should establish a joint sales store in cities to sell livestock and agricultural goods produced by agricultural cooperative associations. The Yanggok agricultural cooperative association in Yongang County should establish a joint sales store in Nampo, produce more milk and sell it to workers in the city. The Nampo commercial management station and the Yanggok agricultural cooperative association should sign a contract. Then the former should offer a building and sales clerk for operation of the joint store, and the latter should daily supply milk in accordance with the contract and receive money for the supply of milk. Establishment of the joint sales store will facilitate not only the sale of milk produced by the agricultural cooperative association, but also that of eggs, vegetables and potatoes.

Wages for the clerks should be paid by the government. The aim of establishing the joint sales store is to more satisfactorily supply goods to workers, including office workers. Therefore, the government should unconditionally give all monies earned from selling goods from the agricultural cooperative association back to the association. The establishment of the joint sales store will eliminate the need for the agricultural cooperative association to employ sales agents for agricultural and livestock products. The agricultural cooperative association will sign a contract for the annual supply of milk, eggs, vegetables, potatoes and chickens. It will then carry out its production activities in line with this contract. The joint sales store will sell goods supplied by the agricultural cooperative association. The association will not have to supply manpower. The only thing it should do is pay for transportation.

All agricultural cooperative associations do not need to have their own joint sales store because this will require too much manpower. It will be good for Nampo to have three or four joint sales stores. If cities establish joint stores they will have a continuous supply of vegetables, eggs and milk from rural areas. Agricultural cooperative associations will then have favorable conditions for increasing production of agricultural and livestock goods, including vegetables.

We should more effectively utilize farmland. One of the major defects found in the rural economic sector is insufficient utilization of farmland. While striving to reclaim land the rural economic sector is leaving land idle. Last year South Pyongan Province left vast land areas idle. It should have developed a livestock industry by growing fodder crops on paddy land after failing to transplant rice due to the lack of rain. Some functionaries interpret adoption of the collective farming method as leaving barren land idle by increasing the production of grain per chongbo from fertile land. This is wrong. Adoption of the collective farming method does not mean that grain production should be increased only by cultivating fertile land. This means that grain production should be increased by fully utilizing available land. We should take good care of the land.

During the past period our peasants struggled to protect their land, shedding their blood. During the period of land reform they struggled against landowners. During the fatherland liberation war period they struggled under the slogan of preventing even a piece of land from being left idle. Why should we leave our land idle today when we are provided with favorable conditions? Today, when the rural economy has adopted the cooperative system, it is wrong for us to handle land in a sloppy manner and leave it idle. It is criminal for us to leave vast lands--the country's asset--idle.

South Pyongan Province lags behind Changang Province in utilizing land. Visiting Chosan County, Changang Province, I saw beans planted along farm roads. I saw sunflowers planted along the road from Chosan County to Nampo. This sight pleased me. Beans are not being satisfactorily planted along farm roads in South Pyongan Province. There are no sunflowers along roads in this province. Sunflowers are not only pleasing to the eye, they are good for beekeeping. We can extract edible oil from sunflower seeds. Therefore, we should plant lots of sunflowers along roads and on land left idle. If we plant sunflowers along roads and keep them weeded by mobilizing schoolchildren, they will grow well.

We should not build peasants' houses on farmland. Residential houses should be built in valley or on the slopes of mountains.

We should fully utilize farming tools. South Pyongan Province now has 700 tractors. However, they are not being fully utilized. We plan to supply more tractors to South Pyongan Province this year. They should be used effectively. To this end, timely inspection and maintenance should be conducted and spare parts and repair materials provided.

The trend of only [word indistinct] on large farming tools and of ignoring small tools, such as sickles and weeding hoes, now prevails in the rural economic sector. Agricultural cooperative associations do not manufacture carts. Guidance functionaries in the rural economic sector have taken no action to remedy this situation. Chairmen of county party committees say they have visited agricultural cooperative associations. However, they have failed to see these phenomena.

County party chairmen should not idly drive about in cars. They should wear work clothes and mingle with the farmers to work together with them. They should familiarize themselves with the rural situation. Agricultural cooperatives should produce farm implements including weeding hoes in large quantities and utilize them effectively. Labor organization and labor management should also be conducted properly. Since labor organization and labor management are poorly conducted in rural areas, waste is prevalent.

The state is mobilizing students to help in the rural areas. However, agricultural cooperatives conduct art troupe activities and other unnecessary activities in the busy farm season of May and June. Waste ensues. Sports and art troupe activities should be conducted after the harvest season. Agricultural cooperatives should not undertake construction projects in the busy farm season. An agricultural cooperative in Chongdang County, South Hwanghae Province, mobilized many labor forces to manufacture roof tiles in a busy rice transplanting season despite a labor shortage.

The construction of houses, school buildings and other construction work should be undertaken after weeding work is done or after the rice crop is ripe. Making pens for domestic animals should also be conducted prior to the farm preparations in spring or after autumn harvesting work. In the rice transplanting season and the weeding season, all labor forces should concentrate on farm work. In the plowing season and the rice transplanting season, all management committee chairmen should wear work clothes and work in the fields with farmers. In the plowing season and rice transplanting season, counties should not call up management functionaries to county offices.

Meetings and lectures should avoid the busy farm seasons if possible and should be held in the winter. County party committees should thoroughly exercise their control so that no meetings or lectures are held between May and July in rural areas. A firm principle should be established so that in the farm seasons rural labor forces should not be mobilized for work other than farm work.

The socialist distribution principle should be maintained. When the people's ideology and consciousness are reformed into communist ones and distinctions between heavy and light labor and between mental and manual labor disappear, no idlers will remain and all people will be willing to work. Production levels will reach a stage which can meet the material and cultural demands of the people. Consequently, the communist distribution principle under which people work according to their abilities and receive distribution according to their demands will be realized. However, we have not yet achieved such a communist society. We are establishing the material foundation by developing production capabilities. We are in the course of constructing socialism and communism. Therefore, old ideological remnants remain in the heads of the people, and the distinction between hard work and easy work remains.

In accordance with the principle of socialist distribution, those who do hard work should be better treated; those who do more work should be given greater rewards. The people's ideology and consciousness have not been reformed into communist ones. Thus, a thorough observance of the socialist distribution principle plays an important role in enhancing the people's production capabilities by giving them material incentives.

Some functionaries mistakenly think that a communist society has already been established. Consequently, they have a prejudiced view and fail to observe the principle of socialist distribution. Agricultural cooperatives have just recently been organized, and the consciousness of farmers and their living standards are still low. A prejudiced view hinders the development of agricultural cooperatives. Agricultural cooperatives should eliminate prejudiced views. They should properly assess the daily work of the members of agricultural cooperatives. Those who do hard work should be rewarded. Those who do easy work should be compensated in kind. This will help increase farm production and develop agriculture. Agricultural cooperatives should adopt the work team system. Per chongbo production quotas should be allocated to each work team. When a work team produces more than its assigned quota, the agricultural cooperatives should ensure that excess production is distributed among the members of the work team. Members of cooperatives will strive to increase production. The agricultural cooperatives should ensure that tractor operators heed farm production tasks they are assigned.

Tractor operators are provided basic wages by the state. When they have overfulfilled the state plan in their respective farm work team, they should be allowed to participate in the distribution of excess production along with other members of the farm work team. Tractor operators will carry out plowing better and will strive to attain farm mechanization.

The system of assigning an individual responsibility for cultivated fields should not be encouraged. If we adopt this system, the members of the cooperatives work on an individual basis. Individualism and liberalism may be revived.

Instead of adopting this system, we should encourage the system of assigning tasks to sub-work teams so that cooperative members may engage in collective life. Thus, they will help, compete and control one another. Farm work standards will be enhanced. The sub-work teams of farm work teams should not necessarily be large. They should consist of six or seven members.

Cooperatives set aside a large quantity of grain to maintain reserves to be used in promoting culture and aiding families of KPA soldiers. The cooperative members thus receive less.

Joint accumulation is aimed at systematically promoting the living standards of cooperative members through wage-system production. Even so, joint accumulation should not necessarily be made on a large-scale. Joint accumulation should be gradually enhanced in accordance with the degree of promotion of peasants' living standards and their ideological awareness.

3. On consolidation of the party guidance over central industry and improvement of the tasks of local industry.

Today, the provincial party committees are not properly conducting party guidance in central industry within the provinces. To correctly implement the decisions of the plenary meeting of the party Central Committee of December 1959, the provincial party committees should take full responsibility for the tasks in all sectors of the national economy. In other words, provincial party committees are responsible for rural economy, local industry, commerce, education, culture and public health. They are also responsible for management of the enterprises of central industry, which are being guided by the relevant ministries, and implementation of national economic plans.

The South Pyongan provincial party committee should assume responsibility for management at plants and enterprises in the province, such as the Taean electric appliances plant, the Kian machine plant, the Pukchong auto plant, the Kangson steel plant, the Nampo refinery, the Songun mine and the Nampo glass plant, as well as for implementation of the national economic plan.

The State Planning Committee should provide each province not only plans for agriculture and local industry but also regional plans for central industry.

In other words, the State Planning Committee should give each province the plans of enterprises in central industry, as well as to the relevant ministry. Each province will be considered as having accomplished the national economic plan only after it implements the plans of enterprises of central industry. Enterprises of central industry should seek the guidance of the provincial party committee as well as the relevant ministry. They should work under the guidance and control of the provincial party committee. In the past, a provincial party committee was not entitled to guide and control the enterprises of the central industry within the province. Only the relevant ministry engaged in administrative guidance and control over these enterprises. Thus, the provincial party committees were unable to establish proper measures even if the enterprises of central industry carried out assignments running counter to the party's policy and lines.

So that the provincial party committee correctly guides the tasks of all sectors in the province in a responsible manner, the functions and role of the provincial party committee and the execution committee of the provincial party should be enhanced. The provincial party committee and the execution committee of the provincial party should discuss and solve all problems in the province, including problems arising in the tasks of the enterprises of central industry. So that provincial party committee and the execution committee of the provincial party properly carry out their functions and role, able functionaries who can make the committees skillfully guide the tasks of the enterprises of central industry should be assigned to the provincial party committee and to the execution committee of the provincial party. The plans directed from the state planning committee should be discussed at the plenum of the provincial party or at the expanded meeting of the execution committee of the provincial party. Their guidance and control over the implementation of the plans should be strengthened.

The provincial party committee cannot change the state plans, although it is allowed to discuss the national economic plans. The provincial party committee should discuss the question of how the national economic plans can be better implemented.

The county party committees should discuss the national economic plans in such a manner. They can thus operate all the enterprises of central industry within the counties and local industry plants more properly.

Enhancing the functions and role of the plant party committee is important to guiding and controlling the enterprises of central industry by the provincial party committee. The plant party committee should be regarded as the supreme guidance organization for the plant. It should responsibly guide all the tasks of the plant. The plant party committee should take responsibility for the ideological work and economic work. The manager should carry out administrative and economic work in accordance with the decisions of the plant party committee, while the party chairman carries out party work. Managers were reluctant to follow party control in the past, adhering to a unitary management system. However, they should work under the party control in the future and enact the decisions of the plant party committee.

The guidance over the plant party committee should be conducted by the provincial party committee. Administrative guidance for the plant should be conducted by the ministry. The plant party committee should discuss the directives and decisions of the party Central Committee and the provincial party committee at a meeting of the party committee and execute them. The manager should report to the plant party committee on the tasks assigned by the ministry. The plant party committee should ensure that the manager issues orders in accordance with the decisions of the party after discussion of the tasks at a meeting of the party committee. By doing so, all tasks can be fulfilled under the guidance of the party. We plan to organize a provincial guidance committee for the national economy in each province.

The chairmanship of the provincial people's economic guidance committee can be assumed by the chairman of the provincial party committee. The minister- or higher-level representatives from the ministries, which have many enterprises in the concerned areas, scholars, engineers and some managers can be members of the committee.

The provincial people's economic guidance committee should play a role as a permanent plenipotentiary representative of the party and the state to the provinces. In other words, it should fulfill the same function as the control committee.

The provincial people's economic guidance committee should control and help manage the implementation of party policy by the provincial people's committee, plants and enterprises, and it should report provincial problems to the party Central Committee and the cabinet. In this way ministries can be prevented from indiscriminately handing down unnecessary ordinances, clerical work will be reduced, and bureaucratism and departmentalism will vanish.

The work for the local industry sector should be improved. Our party's insistent policy for developing local industry is, first of all, to utilize resources at hand, gradually accumulate funds and lay the proper foundations, and then to carry out basic construction based on this.

However, instead of expanding plants after accumulating funds from production, by exploiting and utilizing local resources with small and limited facilities Onchon County built a large silk mill by borrowing a large sum of money from a bank.

If we want to build a large plant with state funds, the project should be carried out through appropriations from the state budget. We need not have the local area build the plant by itself. If local enterprises ought to be built at all with state funds, it would be better for the state to collect funds allocated to various counties and build and run large factories, thus saving management costs and increasing profitability.

Building local factories at the county level is intended to develop central industry on the one hand and, on the other, to enhance the people's living standard by mobilizing and utilizing local raw materials and resources, thus producing more daily necessities without state investment. It would not help the state if the local areas were to build large factories with state loans. Of course, the local industrial factories can receive short-term loans from banks in order to supplement insufficient funds for raw materials' procurement. However, receiving long-term loans and building large factories is against the party policy for local industrial development.

As a result of the local industrial sector appropriating state funds to build local factories, which are not included in the state planning and budget, central industry and basic construction have been greatly affected and last year's farming was dealt a blow. Moreover, lack of experience in building factories and lack of plans have failed to guarantee quality construction. Such a weakness in the local industrial sector was partly due to functionaries' failure to study party policy on local industry. But, it was largely caused by lack of control of currency on the part of the banking institutions. If they had intensified currency control, large amounts of state funds would not have been inappropriately spent.

The work for developing local industry made a good start after the June 1958 plenum of the party Central Committee, but soon shortcomings began to emerge. The factories were largely built, but were not well run. In the local industrial sector, shortcomings which have been revealed should be rapidly rectified and work further improved.

In accord with the spirit of the decisions of the December 1959 plenum of the party Central Committee, the utilization rate of facilities and labor production efficiency should be raised and the waste of labor should be eradicated. Along with this, local factories should thoroughly accomplish the tasks put forth by the national activists' meeting of local industry and production cooperatives by increasing the quantity and quality of products.

4. On development of the fishing industry.

We have an old saying. In the mountains, we should get food from mountains. At the seashore, we should get food from the sea.

We can live well if only we effectively utilize the natural environment. We cannot live well if we are bound to limited lands and try to live on the harvest from them, like feudal peasants.

Thus, we can rapidly improve the people's living standard. To catch great quantities of fish we should correctly utilize trawler nets. Trawlers are good for fishing operations on the West Sea. Foreigners admire our trawlers, saying they could catch great quantities of fish if they had these boats. Trawlers net fish which follow currents. Due to frequent portcalls they have failed to catch a lot of fish. Trawlers do not need frequent portcalls. They should stay at sea for a long time. To compensate for this, the role of supply ships should be enhanced to transport fish to ports in a timely fashion. They should supply water, vegetables, food and fuel to the trawlers. As the supply ship is furnished with baths, barbershops and stores, crew members of trawlers can bathe and have their hair cut, thus solving problems in their daily life. Trawlers should be furnished with medical supplies for the fishermen. They should also have record players for entertainment so they can catch more fish, enjoying good health and a merry modern life.

To catch more fish we should improve fishing methods. Immediately after the war we rehabilitated ravaged shipyards and built fishing boats to develop our fishing industry. Our country now owns thousands of domestically-built fishing boats. However, no progress has been made in catching fish. We have failed to catch great quantities of fish with good fishing boats and nets because functionaries in the fishery sector, believing in mysticism and empiricism, are still using timeworn fishing methods. Some time ago the Sinpo fishery station complained that it could not catch a school of pollack in the daytime for lack of a proper net. We sent a functionary to help them use their nets. They then caught 6 tons of pollack in one haul. Had they set nets several times during the daytime they would have caught more pollack. By eliminating mysticism and empiricism, by which people believed pollack could only be caught at night, we caught pollack both at night and during the day. As a result, production of pollack has increased.

By strengthening ideological indoctrination among functionaries in the fishery sector we should thoroughly eliminate such timeworn ideas as mysticism and empiricism. Thus, we should help functionaries in the fishery sector improve fishing methods with an attitude worthy of masters.

It is important to make the fishery sector thoroughly abide by the principle of socialist distribution. As we alluded at the meeting of party activists in the fishery sector in Kangwon Province, we should not allow those who do not work to receive rewards. Everyone will work with enthusiasm if we allot a larger share to those who work hard, and a smaller share to those who work less.

Along with catching great quantities of fish at sea, we should successfully conduct fish breeding and aquatic production. South Pyongan Province has favorable conditions in this respect because it is a coastal area and also has an abundance of rivers, lakes and tideland. If we utilize ponds in salt fields we could harvest several tons of fish from a pond. If functionaries make a little more effort they can conduct fish breeding and aquatic farming everywhere. However, they do not successfully organize this work. Functionaries now say they are engaged in fish breeding and aquatic farming. They only talk a lot but do very little. Functionaries should steadily and patiently forge ahead with tasks already undertaken. They speak loudly at first but soon stop. This is a great defect.

We should engage in clam farming on shallow seabeds and tidelands. About 2-3 years after the commencement of clam farming, we can collect 3-4 tons of clams per chongbo.

If we raise clams on about 90,000 chongbo of reclaimed tideland available in South Pyongan Province, and assuming we can harvest 3 tons of clams from each chongbo, we could harvest 270,000 tons of clams and, if we pickle them, we could supply 30 kgs of pickled clams to every resident in South Pyongan Province.

If we are to supply 30 kgs of pork to every resident in South Pyongan Province we need vast manpower and a great deal of fodder. However, if we do well in organizing clam farming, we can produce tasty pickled clams with very little manpower.

We should raise a great deal of fish in ponds and reservoirs. Now many other countries engage in fish breeding. In one country every household has a small pond and raises fish. They say that the income from the pond is much more than that from the soil. They are said to be raising various kinds of fish--those which live at the bottom of the pond, those living in the middle and those living in the upper part of the pond. They say they provide food for the fish by breeding microorganisms from compost diluted in the water.

Fish breeding is by no means a difficult task. Anybody can do it if he exerts a little effort. The workers need only a little common sense about how to hatch fish eggs, how to breed microorganisms and how to feed the fish.

We should raise many fish which feed on grass. Such fish breed very rapidly and grow well. After a year in the pond a young grass fish weighs 0.5 to 1 kilogram. Since they live on grass, raising them is easy. Carp, crucian carp, goby minnows and trout are also good fish. We should breed these fish on the aquatic farms.

We should do more aquatic farming in rice paddies. Raising fish in rice paddies has many advantages. Since fish feed on harmful insect eggs, they keep blight away and since the fish stimulate the rice roots in seeking food, the rice grows well. All agricultural cooperative farms should raise carp and crucian carp in rice paddies.

We should also put many silverfish fry in the Chongchon and Taedong rivers. Once the fry are put into the river, they move to the sea and then return to the river to lay eggs. At that time we can catch them with nets. Originally, silverfish abounded in our country's rivers. Most were caught by the Japanese imperialists, but even after our liberation we neglected to put silverfish fry in the water. Therefore, their numbers have decreased. We should put a vast amount of hatched silverfish into rivers in the future.

If we are to breed aquatic products in a superb manner we should supply the necessary materials in timely fashion and we also should do well in spreading the necessary technology. Fish farms or aquatic areas, once they are well organized, can continue to produce a good quantity of marine products. Therefore, we should supply the necessary materials for fish breeding and aquatic farming in a timely manner and, at the same time, should spread the necessary technology.

We should intensify educating the workers so they do not catch immature fish. We should also ensure that people do not catch all the young fish by putting chemicals in the water or draining the ponds to catch even the immature fish.

Aquatic production is also revolutionary work aimed at improving the people's livelihood. Therefore, the chairmen of the management committees of the cooperative farms or the chairmen of the ri party committees should acquire the knowledge needed for aquatic production by reading many books or learning from scientists. They should do well in organizing this task based on such knowledge.

Thus, cooperative farms located near coastal areas should engage in aquatic production by utilizing the shallow seabeds or reclaimed tidelands, those cooperative farms located near rivers should utilize the rivers and those farms with water collection basins such as ponds and reservoirs should utilize these facilities. When agricultural cooperatives maintain good fish farms our farmers will have a plentiful fish supply.

We are now carrying out the revolution and communist construction to better the life of the people.

Whereas before we mainly studied and thought hard about how to capture even one more Japanese imperialist during the anti-Japanese armed struggle, now we should devote our studies to making the people live better by remolding nature. This is an important revolutionary task. All our functionaries should always think and act positively to improve the people's livelihood.

5. On strengthening the work of the planning committees of the county people's committees and on securing reserve materials.

For the county people's committees to do their work well they must strengthen the work of planning committees. Unless planning work is done correctly, the county people's committees cannot properly perform their organizational and guidance functions in economic construction.

The planning committees should play the role of general staff for the county people's committees. For the planning committees to play this role properly, they should first of all make correct plans. Plans should be based on actuality.

County plans should not be drawn up solely by the chairman of the county people's committee or the chairman of the planning committee. Functionaries of various sectors should also participate in planning. Plans should also be drafted in detail after thorough on-the-spot calculations of needed facilities, materials, funds, varieties, labor and other elements. Thus, we should draft realistic and scientific plans.

Once plans are drafted, the planning committees should supervise every sector to see whether they properly implement them. Planning committees should take necessary action by reporting without fail to the chairman of the county people's committee on the status of plan implementation. The chairman of the county people's committee should develop the work based on the facts reported by the planning committees, technicians and experts. If new problems arise during implementation of the plans, everybody concerned should again debate them and take proper action.

We have an old saying about a self-assertive man. No matter how clever he may be and no matter how well he may work, the chairman of the county people's committee cannot do all the work by himself.

Some chairmen of county people's committees, without thoroughly studying their work, just busily run about without ever knowing whether or not the plans are properly implemented or the lands are tilled. This should never happen. For the chairmen of county people's committees to work properly, they should alter their work methods and strengthen the work of the planning committees.

We should secure reserve materials.

Prior to the war we used to have about 300,000 tons of food reserves by annually saving 50,000 tons or more. But after the war we could not have reserves due to postwar rehabilitation. However, now our conditions have improved a great deal and it is time to go on living while securing food reserves.

Reunification of our country has not been achieved. Just as the Japanese imperialists, who forcibly occupied our country, were defeated, the U.S. imperialists will not be able to remain long in South Korea. Peaceful reunification will be achieved when the U.S. imperialists are ousted from South Korea. When the fatherland is reunified we should save the South Korean people from poverty and send them rice and other goods. To do so we must have plenty of materials in reserve.

Now our compatriots are returning to the northern half of the republic from Japan and we expect more of them to return. The fact that Japan-resident compatriots are returning to the northern half of the republic is a great victory for our country's socialist system and our party's policy. The world's people look upon the Japan-resident compatriots' return to the bosom of the republic as a collective racial migration from the capitalist world to the communist world, the first one in history. It is natural for the Japan-resident compatriots to return to the bosom of the republic because our country's socialist system is superior and we have resources.

With the Japan-resident compatriots' return to the bosom of the fatherland we should have more reserve materials, including rice and other goods. We also should be prepared for the worst. Unexpected natural disasters could occur in the future. If we have no food reserves we will be in trouble. We must provide ample food reserves. All sectors should strengthen the struggle to conserve food and, particularly in the rural areas, we should strengthen the struggle against the phenomenon of wasting rice. Together with food reserves we should also provide reserves of other goods and gold. If we have gold we can import rice and goods from other countries.

Party organizations and functionaries should make all the people singlemindedly join in the work to provide reserves by strenthening educational work among all the people.

6. On strengthening educational work and successfully carrying out the work of hygiene and culture.

Today, chairmen of the county party committees and county people's committees are negligent in giving guidance for the training and indoctrination of youth. In giving educational guidance they only check whether roofs leak in classrooms and assist teachers in preparations for the new semester. They should frequently visit schools and explain party policies. Even though teachers can give excellent lectures on party policies, they are less knowledgeable on these policies than chairmen of county party committees and county people's committees. The latter can give better lectures on the revolutionary tradition of our party and the history of our struggle. If the chairmen of county party committees and county people's committees frequently visit schools, they will be able to see whether teachers correctly explain party policies to students and whether they guide students in leading a hygienic life.

It seems that functionaries, mystically viewing schoolwork, do not frequently visit schools. Schoolwork is by no means mystical. Functionaries should visit schools to see whether the educational program is correctly executed and whether the indoctrination of students is conducted in accord with party policies. County-level guidance functionaries should frequently visit schools without fail and give concrete guidance on educational work.

One of the issues to which we should pay close attention in guiding schoolwork is sanitation. We should make teachers set examples for individual students in leading a hygienic life, thus correctly guiding them. Some teachers are now negligent in their hygiene. Without setting examples by their daily life, teachers cannot smoothly accomplish their role as those in charge of education. Before teaching and indoctrinating their students, teachers should set the example. They should encourage their students to correctly lead a hygienic life.

We should develop hygienic work into a nationwide movement. Today, the living standard of our people has been much improved compared with the past period. Our country has rapidly progressed. Since our people are building socialism as masters of the country, they should naturally lead a hygienic life. However, hygiene work has not been implemented successfully. The major reason for failure in hygiene work is the legacy of timeworn ideas in the people's minds.

The old habit of not repairing houses on time and not keeping them clean still remains in rural areas. Some peasants do not repair old roofs and walls. Women do not properly take care of their children. Fifteen years have elapsed since our country was liberated from the Japanese imperialists' colonial rule. It has been 7 years since the war. Now is the time when we should lead a hygienic life. Since a socialist society is more advanced than capitalist society, our hygienic work should naturally progress better than in capitalist countries.

To improve our hygienic work we should correct the timeworn habits of the people. During the anti-Japanese armed struggle period, anti-Japanese guerrillas bathed on time and frequently shaved even in difficult situations. During brief breaks while on a march, they built temporary latrines. When people lead a hygienic life they come to love their daily life and their minds become clean. Those who are negligent in cutting their hair and dress in a slovenly manner cannot have lively and clear minds.

Visiting O Ki-sop in his room one day soon after liberation, I saw him lounging slovenly with long and unkempt hair and a growth of beard. O was reading at a dirty desk which even had crumbs of bread on it. Citing remarks by Confucius and Mencius that those who are negligent in their habits cannot lead a family, I admonished him for his slovenly lifestyle, reminding him of his study of Marxism and Leninism. To this he replied that he was living this way because he tried to lead a proletarian lifestyle. I told him not to defile the working class. I told him that the working class was the most civilized in the world and that his remarks were typical of capitalists' criticism of the working class.

Our people should keep their bodies and houses clean. They should also keep railways and railway stations clean. We should steadily conduct indoctrination work among the people on hygiene and vigorously struggle against unhygienic practices. Hygiene work is an important revolutionary task which we should accomplish this year—a year of readjustment. The aim of today's convocation of a plenary meeting of the provincial party committee is to help the people lead a more affluent and civilized life. Therefore, we should reform our hygiene work.

In particular, we should enhance the role of democratic women's union organizations in hygiene work in rural areas. These organizations should struggle against negligence in periodically washing children's clothes and keeping them clean. It is important for these organizations to do this work well. In the future, the chairmen of the management committees of agricultural cooperative associations should encourage the members of these associations to pay close attention to their attire while attending meetings and to their hygienic life.

During the anti-Japanese armed struggle period we participated in morning and evening rollcall of our troops without fail. We told those who did not polish their shoes and have their hair cut to correct this misdemeanor. We told our men to wash their hands before meals. Our functionaries should follow this example and help everyone become accustomed to leading a hygienic life.

In conclusion, I would like to refer to some impending tasks:

All sectors of the people's economy, including the industrial and agricultural sectors, should correctly formulate this year's people's economic plan and let all party members and workers know about it. Today, our duty to build the economy is a revolutionary duty. Party organizations should correctly formulate this year's plan and let party members and workers know about it so they can do their jobs with clear knowledge of their duty. Agricultural cooperative associations should let their members know how much paddyfield acreage they should cultivate, how many rice saplings they should transplant per chongbo and how many small farming tools, such as weeding hoes, they should have. Plants and enterprises should let workers know how many machines they should produce this year and by how much primary costs should be reduced.

We should correctly make preparations for farming this year. Agricultural cooperative associations should sharpen weeding hoes and sickles, make straw ropes and prepare good crop breeds. In particular, they should produce great quantities of good-quality manure.

The important, impending task in rural areas is to quickly complete account settlement and income distribution. Those agricultural cooperative associations which have not finished this job should finish by the end of January. By fulfilling the grain purchase plan, agricultural cooperative associations will fulfill last year's plan for agricultural production. The peasants' duty is to produce and supply food and industrial raw materials for the country. All agricultural cooperative associations should quickly complete grain purchase work.

After this plenary meeting of the provincial party committee, all participants should successfully conduct organizational work so as to inform all party members and workers of the December 1959 decision of the party Central Committee. I hope that South Pyongan Province will lead the entire country in all sectors of socialist construction by further improving and strengthening party and administrative and economic work.

REVOLUTIONARY METTLE OF KWP HAILED

[Editorial article: "Our Party Is a Revolutionary Party Filled With a Revolutionary Mettle"]

[Text] Today our people are forcefully marching forward with a full-fledged fighting spirit to implement fully the revolutionary policies set forth by the historical Sixth Congress of the party. The whole country is energetically seething with the fresh massive march on which our party, the heart of the society, is leading the revolution and construction with mettle.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught us as follows:

"Today the posture and the workstyle of our party are reflected in the fact that the whole party is full of revolutionary mettle and all the work of the party is being ambitiously and vigorously launched" ("The Summation Report on the Work of the Central Committee Made at the Sixth Congress of the KWP," monograph, p 109).

Our party is now successfully shaping the future of the revolution with strong mettle and ambitious leadership. Precisely because this great party is in the vanguard, our fatherland is proceeding by unceasing leaps and bounds and innovations; our people are full of hope and optimism; and the endlessly bright future is being brought about along the road of our revolution. Being equipped with a revolutionary mettle is a unique characteristic of a party which is struggling to serve the cause of the working class and which is launching revolution.

The party is a militant unit organized to lead the revolution to victory under all circumstances. The revolution does not stand still and it may not always be launched under normal circumstances. Therefore, the party must launch all its activities vigorously and it must struggle actively. In particular, these requirements must be fulfilled more urgently when the revolution has advanced a long way and the party has a long history. A party which lacks mettle and forcefulness is not capable of energetically advancing the tremendous cause of remaking nature and society and the complicated struggle designed to repulse the schemes of the class enemies within the party.

The party of the working class is charged with the great mission of responsibly leading the destiny of the fatherland and the people. Therefore, whether or not the party leads the revolution with mettle represents a grave issue on which rests the destiny of the country and the future of the people. The mettle of the party is the very mettle of the country and the people. It represents the resource of the people who are called upon for heroic struggle and meritorious services. Only when the party is equipped with great mettle and successfully shapes the future destiny of the revolution can all the difficult and complicated revolutionary tasks be implemented smoothly and the party display the capability to responsibly lead the destiny of the fatherland and the people.

The KWP, which was founded and is being led by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, enjoyed at its outset the honor of a party fully equipped with revolutionary mettle.

Our party is a militant party which inherited the style of leadership of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, who is filled with ambition, and who, with the heavy responsibility of the era and the revolution, led millions of Japanese imperialist troops by the nose while dashing across the steep hills of Mount Paektu. Born of the stout spirit of Paektu, our party became a vigorous revolutionary party which is always advancing with unflagging energy and tremendous fighting spirit.

The revolutionary mettle of our party has become stronger and stronger and has been held high in the course of leading the struggle for the great creation and construction and, in particular, amid the valuable historical march for the chucheization of the whole party.

The chucheization of the whole party is a sublime slogan of struggle set forth for the purpose of strengthening and developing our party as a permanently chuche-oriented party by means of vigorously launching the works and activities of the party entirely in accordance with the will of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song. When a new transformation took place in the style and methods of the party work while launching an active struggle for implementing this slogan, our party came to be fully equipped with the revolutionary posture of a militant party in which the mettle of the era is being displayed energetically. This represents the most valuable success scored in the process of strengthening and developing our party.

The posture of our party, which is based on a vigorous revolutionary mettle, is forcefully displayed in the powerful struggle of a party which puts into practice whatever it has once decided to carry out under any circumstances.

The party of the working class, charged with the mission of a revolutionary transformation of nature and of the society in order to build up communism, must not only set forth correct guidelines and policies but must also implement them completely under all circumstances. To do so represents the militant force and mettle of a revolutionizing party.

Our party stubbornly carries through to the end what it has once decided to implement, no matter what conditions prevail. No matter what stupendous revolutionary tasks it may set forth while advancing and no matter what the complicated situation it may face, our party unhesitatingly undergoes difficulties, achieves a victorious breakthrough, and charges ahead forcefully--this is our party's unique principle of struggle. Thus, to our party, things may be difficult but not impossible.

All the conceptions and goals set forth by our party to advance the revolution and construction contain unprecedented far-reaching ideas and high demands. However, no tasks set forth by our party will be carried out half way or fail to bear great fruit. This forcefully displays the strong capability of our party for achieving goals.

While organizing and rendering general guidance for the stupendous tasks in all fields of the revolution and construction, our party is boldly carrying out without fail all programs planned and laid out. Thus a rapid pace has been set in economic construction; grand monumental edifices of creation have been erected everywhere in the country; and the grand work of remaking nature is being carried out like a blitzkrieg. Furthermore, great revolutionary transformations and miracles are taking place one after another to people's great astonishment.

The proud posture of our party, filled with vigorous revolutionary mettle, is to be seen in its creation of new things and innovations in revolution and construction.

Revolution is a continuous process of struggle in which old things are remade and new things are led to victory. Therefore, for the party to lead the revolution with mettle, it must set forth original ideas and create new things. Only when the party continuously conceives new plans and creates great realities can it victoriously shape an original road to communism.

In launching all its works, our party frees itself from old ruts and the experiences gained, sets forth new things from a progressive point of view, and realizes them. Thus, in our country, for every period of revolutionary development, new strategies and tactics which precisely fit the period are being set forth continuously, and innovations are being made unceasingly in the party work and the work in all fields, including that of economic cultural construction. The simple mechanical copying or repetition of old things and any other repetitions without new things have nothing to do with the creative plans and capabilities of our party.

The flames of creation and innovation rising under the leadership of our party are not limited to individual problems in some fields but are related to all problems in all fields of the revolution, construction, and social life, including politics, economy, culture, military affairs, and external affairs. Thus in our country, all works in all fields are being carried out efficiently without hitting snags, while a great number of precious ideological-theoretical and material-cultural riches, in which the pulse of the current era beats, are being created. Because our party is solving all problems creatively in our unique way, high honor is in store for our party, a great leadership under which the brand new future is to be shaped successfully.

Another proud posture of our party which is filled with revolutionary mettle is to be seen in the fact that our party is marching continuously toward a higher hill, allowing no decline or stagnation displaying full ambition and spirit to succeed.

For the party of the working class, it is an essential prerequisite for the achievement of final victory of the cause of communism that the party unceasingly struggle and march forward without marking time or causing stagnation. In order to fulfill the long-range, hardship-laden revolutionary cause, it is imperative for the party to hold high the banners of marching forward and struggle and to see to it that there is no marking time. Only when the party unceasingly, wholeheartedly and vigorously advances the revolution can it safeguard all the gains won through bloodshed and carry the march toward socialism and communism through to the end.

It is our party's firmly established and consistently held stand that it should achieve the future of communism as far ahead of schedule as possible by launching unceasing innovation and continuous movement forward with the mettle of speedy battle. Thus our party is continuously setting forth bold targets in its struggle and ambitiously advancing all its work by means of a blitzkrieg.

Our party's militant slogans, causing the whole party and the whole country to be seething with tremendous revolutionary passion, function as a forceful propellant power which provides a constant spur to our people's chollima march. Our people are finding the correct direction and method in their struggle and are marching forward filled with faith and hope because of the party slogans, which are providing a bright pricture not only of the near future but also of the distant future. Our party's guidance, which enables every one of us to enjoy the flourishing of the revolution to the end of our lives, is seeing to it that all our hearts will be filled with the vital force of youth and that the whole society will be seething with the mettle to march forward.

Thus our party has grown up and been strengthened as a revolutionary party fully equipped with the mettle to struggle and march forward; it has established a new posture and workstyle in an essentially fresh manner. This provides a firm guarantee for the chuche cause, which was established by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, to be achieved far ahead of schedule and for the cause of the reunification of the fatherland to be achieved in our era without fail.

Today's vitality and honor of our party, a militant party filled with revolutionary mettle, have not been acquired simply by accident or just in a day or two. Our party's revolutionary mettle has been tempered and tested while holding high the slogan of chucheization of the whole society and leading the Korean revolution along the road of victory.

An important reason for the fact that our party has been strengthened and developed as a militant party filled with revolutionary mettle is that it has an indefatigable revolutionary spirit of advancing the revolution and construction on its own, at any cost, by overcoming whatever adversities it may face.

The mettle of the party of the working class lies in the display of the strong spirit of revolution. Only when a revolutionary spirit fills the whole party can the party carry out its great mission of responsibly encountering the destiny of the fatherland and the people, no matter what difficult and complicated circumstances it may face. The revolutionary spirit is to be displayed in the posture and workstyle of the party.

The revolutionary spirit of our party is a firm spirit of independence in launching struggle exclusively by means of the resources of our people; it is a daring spirit of struggle defying all difficulties. Such an indefatigable revolutionary spirit was derived from the strong fighting spirit and mettle enunciated in the struggle slogans of the early days of the anti-Japanese movement, which were sung forcefully in the jungles of Mount Paektu to defeat the enemy even at the cost of killing oneself a million times, and it was further strengthened in the flames of severe struggle. The mettle of our party is based on such a strong spirit of revolution as this; therefore, our party has the vitality to overcome all difficulties and adversities and to attain any goals at one stroke, no matter how stupendous they may be.

Another reason for the fact that our party has been strengthened and developed as a militant party filled with revolutionary mettle is that the party reformed its work method thoroughly and firmly established the anti-Japanese guerrillas' work method and style throughout the party.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught us as follows:

"When the anti-Japanese guerrillas' work method was realized in all the work of the party, the posture of the party became new and the party's workstyle was fundamentally reformed." ("The Summation Report on the Work of the Central Committee Made at the Sixth Congress of the KWP," monograph, p 109.)

The posture and spirit of the party largely depend on the work method of the party. Only when the party thoroughly adopts a revolutionary work method will the work and activities of the party be carried out ambitiously and vigorously. By simply using a bureaucratic and formalistic work method, including that of meeting formalities and making a mere show, the party would not be able to call the people to struggle nor be able to establish the revolutionary style throughout the party.

In order to turn itself into a militant unit which operates with great vigor, our party decisively destroyed the old framework of formalism and saw to it that the overall party work would be transformed in the style of the anti-Japanese guerrillas. This was an epoch-making measure which strengthened the combat capability of our party, making it one hundred times as strong as it was before and greatly enhancing the leading role of the party.

The anti-Japanese guerrillas' work method, which was created by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song himself and demonstrated by him in his actual practices in the hardship-filled anti-Japanese revolution days, is a chuche-oriented work method of enhancing the status and role of the popular masses and thereby vigorously advancing the revolution and construction. It is a vital work method capable of boldly facing and overcoming all difficulties. This is an excellent model of the work method and spirit of a party that is engaged in revolution.

By establishing across the board the anti-Japanese guerrillas' work method, which was created in the flames of the anti-Japanese revolution and whose effectiveness and vitality were proved through a long struggle, our party saw to it that the overall party work would be carried out ambitiously and vigorously, and that a fresh mettle and spirit would fill the whole party.

In our party today, the propaganda and agitation work and the party guidance of the revolution and construction are being launched vigorously and substantively in the manner practiced by the anti-Japanese guerrillas in the Paektu mountain jungles in the early days, and all the work is being carried our ambitiously and in depth at an unprecedentedly high standard. History has never witnessed such an example as our party organizations, which are deeply rooted among the masses, which are acting vigorously, in which all the members are actively participating in the organizational and ideological life, and all of which is firmly governed by the spirit of learning and working.

Today's seething realities show that only when the traditional work method and spirit, which were established by the leader during the inception period of the revolutionary cause, are highly valued and carried out genuinely can the party's workstyle be improved and the party be strengthened and developed as an ever revolutionizing party. It is a really great achievement in the course of the construction of our party that the anti-Japanese guerrillas' work method has been realized and that the whole party has been filled with vigorous revolutionary mettle.

Furthermore, the firm establishment of an orderly work system in which the whole party acts as one and of a revolutionary discipline throughout the party represents another factor in enabling our party to display its power as a militant party filled with revolutionary mettle.

All the activities and work of the party must be launched under a certain work system and order. Only when the party is firmly organization oriented and governed by discipline to the effect that the whole party acts as one to meet the requirements of the party center's intentions and of the party regulations can the party become steel-like and capable of making the revolution and construction ever victorious.

The revolutionary mettle which fills our party today represents a precious fulfillment achieved by orientation toward high organization and effective discipline. Today our party is enjoying a revolutionary atmosphere in which the party's decisions and directives are to be unconditionally carried through to the end and a steel-like democratic centralization-oriented discipline in which the whole party acts as a simple organic body under the guidance of the party Central Committee.

While the party sets forth clearly the grand plan and the correct strategic and tactical policies designed to effect upsurges in the revolution and construction, all party organizations and party members are enjoying a strong organizational orientation and discipline in which they are advancing along the only road set by the party center; and they are thereby highly displaying the power of a militant party filled with energy and vitality. Our party's discipline was established on the basis of all the party members' loyalty toward the party, and it is oriented by self-consciousness and vitality. And the mettle of the party was derived from the firm unification and cohesion established on the basis of such a discipline as this. Therefore, our party's mettle is immortal like an ever-flowing spring, and no one can suppress it.

Today our party is indeed in a glorious period of its development. Inasmuch as our party has successfully solved fundamental problems which affect the future destiny of the revolutionary cause, never in its long history has there been such a period as today in which the organizational and ideological foundation of the party has been laid so firmly and the whole party has been filled with revolutionary mettle.

It is of great significance for victoriously advancing and fulfilling the revolution that our party has been strengthened and developed as a strong party filled with revolutionary mettle.

Above all, the significance lies in the fact that our society is filled with a wholesome revolutionary atmosphere and that the revolution and construction are being forcefully advanced along the road of victory without any deviation.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught us as follows:

"... The workers of our country are working in a revolutionary manner and leading a thrifty life. They are making continuous innovations and unceasing advances with revolutionary zeal and eagerness, while maintaining a firm belief in their revolutionary victory and a firm conviction about their future" ("The Summation Report on the Work of the Central Committee Made at the Sixth Congress of the KWP," monograph, pp 10-11).

To fill the entire society with a wholesome revolutionary atmosphere poses a very important problem in forcefully advancing and fulfilling the revolution. If in the socialist society the people are allowed to indulge in idleness and ease, the society will change in nature and the revolution will stop halfway. Today the imperialists and all the enemies of revolution are launching more and more viciously with each passing day their reactionary ideological and cultural invasion, their destructive sabotage activities in order to make the socialist countries disintegrate from within. Therefore, the party of the working class which enjoys sovereignty must see to it that all the people work in a revolutionary manner and lead a thrifty life, and that they do not forget the revolutionary principles and the class-oriented viewpoint of holding fast to the banner of socialism. In order to do so, the party itself must become healthy, have strong combat capability, and become a party filled with revolutionary mettle.

The party of the working class is the heart which provides the entire society with revolutionary nutrition; it is a propelling force to advance the revolution. The mettle of the party becomes the mettle of the society; and the revolutionary posture of the party provides a prerequisite for the establishment of a wholesome lifestyle in the society. In a society led by a revolutionary party, which is constantly filled with militant mettle and ambition and which enjoys a high leadership-oriented authority, the rotten bourgeois lifestyle cannot infiltrate, while the healthy and revolutionary spirit of struggle, which befits the essential nature of the socialist system, will invariably prevail.

Today in our country, all the people are bent on doing their best only to score victory in revolution; they are struggling forcefully, holding high the banner of anti-imperialism and independence--which befits people who are building socialism and people of the era of struggle. With a high self-awareness that they must continue revolution through to the end as long as imperialism and its rule and subordination persist in this world, our people cannot be allowed to indulge in even a bit if idleness and ease or to enjoy any fantasy about imperialism and class enemies. Exactly this kind of strong spirit of struggle, high class consciousness, and revolutionary lifestyle have been established by our party.

The mettle of our party provides a firm basis for determinedly advancing toward socialism and communism with the revolutionary banners held high; it provides a strong will to firmly hold to the cause of the working class. When such determination and will fill our entire society, any unhealthy phenomena or non-working-class-oriented factors, which are not compatible with the essential nature of the socialist society, cannot prevail there, while the cause of socialism is held firmly. This clearly proves the precious truth that only a party which is capable of launching uncompromising struggle against the enemies of the revolution and class enemies, no matter what the difficult and complicated circumstances, can successfully fulfill its leadership role as the headquarters of revolution.

It is of great significance for providing the entire people with firm faith and optimism regarding the brilliant future of our revolution that our party is filled with revolutionary mettle and is being strengthened and developed as a militant party.

The victory or defeat of the revolution as well as the future of the revolution largely depend on the ideological and mental state of the people. People who firmly believe in their future and their victory will carry on their fighting with high spirit without giving in, no matter how difficult the circumstances may be. This poses an even more urgent problem when the revolution becomes protracted and filled with hardship.

The firmness of the people's faith in the future depends on the resourcefulness and mettle of the party, which is successfully carrying out the cause of the leader. When the people are provided with the guidance of the party, which is equipped with an ambition capable of courageously overcoming difficulties, they will not lose their faith and will carry on the struggle constantly with abundant revolutionary optimism, no matter how heavy the tasks they face nor how complicated the revolutionary situation.

Our people's optimism about the brilliant future of the revolution is based on their absolute trust that, as long as our party stands in the vanguard, the revolutionary cause of chuche established by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song will be victorious without fail. This trust is an unchangeable belief conceived deep in the hearts of our people while sharing with the party the priceless course of struggle for the chucheization of the entire society.

The revolutionary mettle of our party is a sublime revolutionary spirit which will advance and fulfill the Korean revolution exclusively along the road of chuche; it is a decisiveness that will reject everything that does not conform to the chuche ideology. Thanks to the revolutionary mettle and energetic struggle of our party, which is endlessly loyal to the cause of the leader, the revolutionary ideology of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song and his immortal achievement are being staunchly protected and held fast, the revolutionary traditions of the anti-Japanese movement are being carried on and developed successfully, and the unification and cohesion based on the chuche ideology are being protected like one's eyeballs. Today our people are enjoying the firm prospect of the final victory of the Korean revolution thanks to the resourcefulness and posture of our party filled with revolutionary mettle and ambitions; they firmly believe that their everlasting happiness and the prosperity of their descendants are reliably guaranteed. This very belief is the most precious ideology, sentiment and iron-like faith provided by the revolutionary mettle of our party to the people. No force can block the future of a people who live and struggle with such a spirit and faith.

The historical Sixth Congress of the party set forth a great platform to effect a new decisive progress in the implementation of the revolutionary cause of chuche. Thanks to the bold and ambitious guidance of our party, struggles are being launched forcefully in all fields of revolution and construction to carry out the platform set forth by the party congress. Thus the victorious advance of our revolution and its future are being guaranteed more and more assuredly, and the future of our fatherland is brilliantly illumined with endless glory.

Today our party is a very promising party which is equipped with ever victorious power and which is successfully shaping the destiny of the revolution. It has gained fame as a reliable vanguard of the international working class which, upholding the banner of the great chuche ideology, is successfully carrying out the lofty histori-ical mission with which it has been charged for the causes of the era and of mankind. It is the highest pride and greatest happiness of our people that they live and struggle with the destiny of themselves and of their descendants totally entrusted to the great party.

Cherishing this great national pride deep in our hearts, we must uphold the guidance of the party and must staunchly protect and guard our party everywhere and at all times.

The future path of our people, who are marching forward along the line of guidance of the great KWP, which is filled with revolutionary mettle, will always be brilliant and our fatherland will be prosperous and flourishing forever and ever.

KIM IL-SONG THEORY ON MUSIC PRAISED

SK101133 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1056 GMT 10 Aug 81

[Text] Pyongyang August 10 (KCNA)--NODONG SINMUN and MINJU CHOSON dedicate articles to the 35th anniversary of the publication of "Musicians Should Make an Active Contribution To Building a New, Democratic Korea," a classic work of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, (August 8, 1946).

In its article headlined "Chuche-Based Musical Art Brilliantly Embodying National Characteristics," NODONG SINMUN August 9 says:

In the work the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song wisely defined the position of the building of national culture in the construction of a new, democratic fatherland and the revolutionary duty and role of the musicians, and expounded with his originality the character of a new music and the direction of its development and immediate fighting tasks for building a democratic national music.

It was the basic direction of the chuche-oriented development of musical art propounded in the historic work to develop music in compliance with the requirement of the revolution, preserving the national characteristics.

This original policy propounded by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song on the basis of the tradition of chuche-based literature and art personally established by him during the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle was a guiding principle which helped develop our music without slightest deviation from the first days of the building of a new state in our country.

The article goes on:

The outstanding idea, theory and policy expounded by the great leader in the work have been brilliantly embodied under the wise leadership of the glorious party centre. As a result, in the 1970s, our musical art greeted the heyday of socialist and communist musical art. And our music has become a model of revolutionary musical art and our country displayed its honour as "homeland of the revolutionary opera."

The great feat performed by our party in developing music in conformity with the requirement of revolution, preserving the national characteristics, is the creation of a new revolutionary and popular music of our own style meeting the demand of modelling the whole society on the chuche idea, a revolutionary music brilliantly embodying the chuche-based idea of literature and art.

With the successful accomplishment of the historic cause of putting on opera stage the immortal classics which had been created and performed during the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle, under the wise leadership of the glorious party centre, musical art could proudly carry out the honourable work of handing down through generations the precious wealth of the chuche-based literary and art tradition. In this course, there originated the "pibada"-style opera which brought about a revolutionary turn in the development of human opera art.

At the same time, such new forms of theatrical art as song and dance epic drama and music and dance tale were created to lift modern music and dance art to a high plane and open a bright prospect of its development.

Our party put forward the original policy of the creation of instrumental music and a new theory of orchestra in developing music in keeping with the requirement of revolution, preserving national characteristics to effect a radical change in the creation of instrumental music and its performance.

In particular, the chuche-oriented combined orchestra in which Western instruments are combined with the national instruments, the former subordinated to the latter, opened up a broader way of developing music in conformity with the requirement of revolution, preserving national characteristics.

Our party advanced the original theory and policy of making songs, basic to all musics, famous songs and wisely led the struggle for its realisation. As a result, beautiful and powerful famous songs congenial to the aspiration and sentiment of the people endlessly resound throughout the country.

Today our music has become a chuche-based music congenial to the emotion and sentiments of the Koreans which the people love to sing and a true weapon of revolution which encourages people to the struggle and exploits, stresses the article.

DEATH OF KANG PAN-SOK OBSERVED

SK311620 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1512 GMT 31 Jul 81

[Text] Pyongyang July 31 (KCNA)--NODONG SINMUN today dedicates an article headlined "Brilliant Life Adorning New Era of Korean Revolution With Precious Exploits" to the 49th anniversary of the death of Kang Pan-sok, an indomitable communist revolutionary fighter (July 31, 1932).

The article says:

Kang Pan-sok, born in a poor and patriotic family, spent her childhood in abject poverty and hardship, growing up under a revolutionary influence, as a dependable revolutionary comrade-in-arms of Kim Hyong-chik, an outstanding leader of the anti-Japanese national liberation movement in our country, she actively helped him in his work with might and main and brought up her sons into ardent patriots and indomitable communist revolutionary fighters to stand them on the glorious road of revolution.

At the same time, she waged a relentless struggle for a genuine development of the Korean women's emancipation movement under the banner of the immortal chuche idea.

Kang Pan-sok, an indomitable communist revolutionary fighter, is the mother of Korea who brought up the great sun, peerless in the history of our people spanning thousands of years. With all her might and sincerity she actively helped her son the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song in his revolutionary activities, brilliantly adorning with precious exploits the historic period of the Korean revolution vigorously advancing along the road of independence.

The article says: First of all, Kang Pan-sok actively backed the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song so that he might take the road of revolution with an ardent love for the country and the people and a burning hatred for the enemy from his early years.

She valued the distinguished intelligence and character of her son and cultivated them in every way, implanted in his young heart the high pride and patriotic idea of a revolutionary family which had undauntedly fought generation after generation against the foreign aggressors.

Under the warm sincerity and care of Kang Pan-sok to bring up her son as a son of the country who would liberate the country and make it shine, the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song nursed a lofty will for national liberation from his childhood and stoutly grew up to be a hero of the nation.

Kang Pan-sok, an indomitable communist revolutionary fighter and an outstanding leader of the women's emancipation movement in our country, organized the anti-Japanese women's association and energetically directed it under the great leader's guidance and with his help, powerfully rousing broad sections of women to the revolutionary struggle.

To awaken the women who account for a half of our population and lead them to the struggle was an important demand for dynamically pushing ahead with the revolutionary struggle of our people which began developing independently under the banner of the chuche idea at that time, the article says, and goes on:

This demand was brilliantly realized when Kang Pan-sok, guided and helped by the great leader, organised the anti-Japanese women's association on December 26, 1926.

The anti-Japanese women's association was the first revolutionary women's organisation of chuche type in our country and a new communistic women's organisation.

Through the association she actively conducted educational work to arm the women with the chuche idea and the anti-Japanese patriotic idea, while uniting them closely around the great leader.

In disregard of all difficulties and dangers to herself, Kang Pan-sok, an indomitable communist revolutionary fighter, actively helped the great leader in his revolutionary work.

She not only risked all difficulties and dangers to herself for her son, for the sake of revolution, but also waged an energetic struggle to implement the chuche-oriented revolutionary line and policy put forward by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song.

Kang Pan-sok is an indomitable communist revolutionary fighter and the great mother of Korea who dedicated her whole life to the struggle for the liberation of the country and the victory of the cause of chuche.

The liberation of the country and the victory of the revolution so ardently desired and convinced of by Kang Pan-sok, the mother of Korea, in her lifetime have been brilliantly realised by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the genius of revolution and the great sun of the people.

CONSUMER GOODS PRODUCTION URGED

SK050106 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2230 GMT [no day] Aug 81

[NODONG SINMUN 4 August editorial: "Functionaries Should Highly Display the Spirit of Dedicating Service for the People"]

[Excerpts] The entire country is now seething with lofty revolutionary enthusiasm of party members and functionaries who have risen to implement instructions given by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song at recent major meetings and during his on-the-spot guidance to many local areas. Thanks to the endeavor of our heroic working class and workers who are endlessly faithful to the party, continuous progress has been made in placing production on the right track on all fronts of the people's economy and in improving the people's living standard. All our functionaries are assigned the honorable and weighty task of developing our country into a more prosperous, wealthy, powerful and economically advanced country by brilliantly implementing the magnificent program of socialist construction unfolded by the sixth party congress, thus epochally improving the living standard of our people. To successfully fulfill this task, all functionaries, including economic guidance functionaries, should more highly display their party spirit, working class awareness and people-mindedness. Our functionaries should possess the noble trait of respecting the masses and devoting everything to the struggle to protect the interest and happiness of the working people.

Increasing the production of people's consumer goods and improving the quality and supply of commercial goods to the people is an important issue which our functionaries should firmly grasp in implementing the party's policy for improving the people's living standard. By highly displaying the spirit of self-reliance, all sectors and units should produce goods in short supply, search out shortages, independently overcome difficulties, enact a continuous production upsurge and prevent the practice of hoarding, misusing and wasting valuable materials which are useful in developing the national economy and in improving the people's living standard. The functionaries and workers of the sectors, plants and enterprises concerned should produce and supply good quality consumer goods to meet the people's demand and tastes. They should strengthen the struggle to produce durable and appealing goods.

All guidance functionaries should not regard the supply of goods as a secondary task. Instead, they should pay close attention to this work. They should correctly organize and guide this work to equally distribute goods among all people. Our state and social property is a pre[illegible] of the country and happiness of the people. It [illegible]rty of the people obtained with their blood and sweat. Those functi[illegible]o correctly and frugally run state affairs in a truly responsible ma[illegible] masters of the country and society, who value the country's assets and who enrich the people's life by producing more with less are the faithful functionaries of the party and truly loyal servants of the people.

The magnificent, militant task set forth by the historic sixth party congress is a worthwhile struggle program for the final victory of the revolution and a shining blueprint for the endless prosperity of the fatherland and the happiness of the people.

By vigorously struggling with endless loyalty to the party and the spirit of dedicated service for the people, all guidance functionaries should highly promote revolutionary enthusiasm and creative positiveness among party members and workers so as to brilliantly implement the magnificent program of socialist construction.

REPORT ON AGRICULTURAL GROWTH IN COUNTRY

SK041601 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1521 GMT 4 Aug 81

[Text] Pyongyang August 4 (KCNA)--Agricultural production is showing a fast growth in the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, with farming placed on a scientific and technical basis as required by the chuche-based farming methods.

Entering the 1970s a high rate of growth in grain production was registered in Korea, despite a serious effect of the cold front. A production growth of 36 per cent above the preceding year was recorded in 1973 and a growth of more than 30 per cent in 1974 above 1973. Consequently, 7 million-ton target of grain envisaged in the six year plan was hit two years earlier than the set time.

The grain output in 1946, the year next liberation, was 1.9 million tons. On the same soil 9 million tons were produced in 1979. A drive is under way for beating again a 9.5 million-ton target this year.

Our country owes this success in agriculture to the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song who created the chuche-based farming methods and wisely led the struggle for its thorough application.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught:

> "In order to increase the output of grain and other crops quickly, farming methods should be scientific and suit our climate, soil and crops, and agricultural production must be intensified by a full use of chuche-based farming methods."

The chuche-based farming methods created by the great leader comprehensively expound requirements for always reaping a high and stable harvest in farming, such as right crop to right soil and right crop in right season, close planting and plant-by-plant cultivation, a scientific system of soil control and manuring system, and water control system.

The chuche-based farming methods are advantageous and scientific methods for a most intensive utilisation of land and application of scientific and technical principles to all categories of farming.

A scientific soil control system meeting the demand of the chuche-based farming methods has been established and thoroughly implemented in our country to turn the lean land into fertile soil, and high-yielding strains have been obtained and the growth of crops has been accelerated through strengthened biological researches. At the same time, plant-by-plant cultivation has been introduced through the application of latest successes of agricultural science and technology and the per-unit output has been decisively lifted.

The per-hectare harvest of non-paddy crops in 1954 was as low as 700 kg. In 1974 the per-hectare harvest of paddy rice and maize, the main crops in our agriculture, jumped respectively to 5.9 and 5 tons. In 1979, five years after that, it climbed to 7.2 tons in paddy rice and 6.3 tons in maize, a fairly high level in the world.

Now our country fully satisfies the demand for food by home production.

Through the efforts for strictly applying the chuche-based farming methods, the level of scientific and technical knowledge of the agricultural working people has risen rapidly and the material and technical foundations of agriculture have been consolidated still further.

Our peasants who were far removed from modern technology in the past are now making a scientific farming, skillfully operating modern technical means on a high cultural and technical level.

Already in 1979, the number of the tractors serving agriculture reached 7 in the plain areas and 6 in the intermediate and mountain areas per 100 hectares of cultivated land and 1.5 tons of chemical fertilizers were applied to each hectare of paddy and non-paddy fields and highly efficient weed killers were produced and supplied in large quantities, with the result that weeding was done by chemical method in 97 per cent of the total paddy fields.

Now our agricultural working people are striving to carry out the industrialization of agriculture through the completion of comprehensive mechanisation and chemicalisation of farming.

Our country aims at producing 15 million tons of grain annually in the near future.

PREPARATIONS FOR WINTER FISHING SEASON DISCUSSED

SK101114 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1047 GMT 10 Aug 81

[Text] Pyongyang August 10 (KCNA)--Now energetic preparations for winter fishing are going on in Korea.

Winter fishing holds a decisive place in the nation's marine production. Our country hauls more than 30,000 tons of fish daily at maximum in winter.

Ship repair plants and fishery stations on the eastern and western coasts of the country are now hastening the repair of boats, preparations of fishing tackle and repair of freezing plants.

The factories and enterprises in the fishery domain in South and North Hamgyong and North Pyongan provinces have already repaired and readjusted many boats and markedly increased the output of fishing tackle.

Good freezing and cold-storage setups and processing facilities are under construction at fish production and consumption areas through a mass movement.

Korea, surrounded by sea on three sides, abounds in fish resources. In particular, over 600 species of fishes are found in the East Sea, part of one of the three major fishing grounds of the world.

Shoals of millions of tons of fishes 8 to 10 meters thick move into the East Sea in winter.

There are over 250 species of fishes in the West Sea of the country, of which more than 30 species are delicious fishes.

The state directs big efforts to the development of fisheries to utilize effectively the abundant fish resources for the improvement of peoples living.

Korea hit the height of 1.6 million tons of marine products in the Six-Year Plan period (1971-1976) one year seven months ahead of time.

Korea will produce 3.5 million tons of aquatic products in 1984, of which 2.7 million tons will be fishes.

KIM IL-SONG THANKS 18 SEPTEMBER RESERVOIR WORKERS

SK040642 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2200 GMT 2 Aug 81

[Text] The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song sent a letter of thanks to the 18 September reservoir construction workers. In his letter, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song said he extends warm thanks to the workers, technicians and office workers of the South Hwanghae provincial land reclamation office, the Kwangchan irrigation office, the Hwanghae irrigation office, the South Pyongyang provincial land reclamation office, the North Pyongyang provincial land reclamation office, to agricultural workers of South Hwanghae Province and to all supporters of the project.

He noted that they have successfully completed the construction of the 18 September reservoir, another monumental creation, at a time when all the people and agricultural workers of the nation are waging a vigorous struggle to reap 9.5 million tons of grain this year by joining a grand march to enact the decisions of the sixth party congress.

In his letter, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song notes that the builders, agricultural workers and supporters who participated in the construction work on the 18 September reservoir successfully completed the large project involving the building of several thousand meters of dikes damming off sea water and connecting islands and construction of scores of large lock gates which required a high degree of technology, by courageously overcoming all difficulties and hardships and cherishing deep loyalty to the party and the revolution. Thus, they performed brilliantly by completing the construction of the reservoir in a short time, displaying a self-reliant spirit.

In his letter, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song notes that with the construction of the 18 September reservoir, thousands of hectares of fields will be protected from heavy rains and tidal water, many hectares of new lands are being obtained and irrigation and water supply problems will be solved.

He expressed satisfaction with and praised the courageous struggle to construct the 18 September reservoir by the workers, technicians and office workers of the agricultural construction sector, as well as their supporters, and agricultural workers of South Hwanghae Province, upholding the party's policy to prevent heavy rain and drought damage by constructing many reservoirs during a persistent cold front.

He said that with the construction of the 18 September reservoir, we can now more rapidly develop agricultural production in South Hwanghae Province. This plays an important role in the rural economy.

In his letter, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song stressed that the builders and their supporters who joined in the construction of the 18 September reservoir should perfect the reservoir by making continuous renovations without indulging in self-admiration for what they have already achieved, build more reservoirs--important in developing the rural economy--and push ahead with land reclamation work on a large-scale.

He expressed the firm belief that they will accomplish the honorable revolutionary tasks assigned them by displaying loyalty to the party and arming themselves with the chuche idea. Thus, they will certainly meet the expectations of the party.

A ceremony marking completion of the reservoir was held on 2 August. Displayed at the ceremony site was a portrait of Comrade Kim Il-song, the great leader of our party and our people. Slogans reading "Long live the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song!" and "Long live the glorious KWP!" were displayed.

Comrade Yim Chun-chu, member of the Political Bureau of the KWP Central Committee and secretary of the Central People's Committee; Comrade So Kwan-hui, vice premier of the Administration Council, and personages concerned, including Paek Pom-su, Chang Yun-pil, and (Pal Hui-won), attended the ceremony together with the builders, their supporters and agricultural workers from neighboring cooperative farms.

A report was made at the ceremony noting that the builders and their supporters extend great honor, loyalty and warmest thanks to [word indistinct].

The reporter stressed that all builders and their supporters should brilliantly fulfill the militant tasks set forth by the great leader in his letter by vigorously waging the three revolutions of ideology, technology and culture and register brilliant labor exploits in constructing new projects by advancing along the road of innovation.

The reporter said that agricultural workers and functionaries in the rural sector should enact measures to prevent flood and drought damages through proper management of the new reservoir. He noted that they should effect a new upsurge in agricultural production by implementing the chuche-type agricultural method.

A letter of pledge to the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song was adopted at the ceremony.

DPRK SCORES GAINS IN CEMENT PRODUCTION

SK101540 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1526 GMT 10 Aug 81

[Text] Pyongyang August 10 (KCNA)--The cement workers of Korea registered signal successes to bring about a great upswing in cement production.

Through the endeavours to meet the party's demand for expediting the chuche-orientation, modernisation and scientisation of the national economy, the Chonnaeri cement factory, a leading cement production base of the nation, has completed work for the introduction of a new calcining method in the production.

As a result, the factory has reduced the fuel consumption norm by more than a half, while quadrupling the cement output per hour.

Scientists and technicians sent to the factory to introduce a new calcining method and workers of the factory reconditioned the existing main equipment on modern lines and, at the same time, replenished the factory with new equipment and solved many scientific and technical problems.

The introduction of a new calcining method will greatly help towards attaining ahead of the set time the target of 20 million tons of cement, one of the targets set for the end of the 1980s, with the existing material and technical foundations of the cement industry.

Meanwhile, the construction of a new cement factory which will produce cement by a new calcining method is nearing completion.

In 1970 Korea produced four million tons of cement, or 287 kilograms per capita.

In ten years after that the cement production capacity of the country increased 2.2 times.

Today Korea's cement industry not only meets with its production the growing demand of the national economy for cement but also exports a large quantity of cement.

EDUCATION PROGRESSES THANKS TO 'GLORIOUS PARTY CENTER'

SK051546 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1508 GMT 5 Aug 81

[Text] Pyongyang August 5 (KCNA)--It is 25 years ago (August 1, 1956) that a universal compulsory primary education system was instituted in the Democratic People's Republic of Korea.

This was a signal event that recorded a brilliant page in the history of the development of chuche-based education.

In the period of the anti-Japanese revolutionary war, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song planned the enforcement of a compulsory free education in the liberated fatherland, and he lost no time when the country was liberated in spreading a bright blueprint of the building of popular education for enforcing a universal compulsory education and wisely led our people to the struggle for its realisation.

In this course, all preparations were made in a short time for introducing a compulsory education in our country where illiterates accounted for more than 80 per cent of the population, consequent upon the Japanese imperialists policy of obscuration.

In September 1949, the fourth session of the Supreme People's Assembly proclaimed a historical law on instituting a universal compulsory primary education system as from September 1, 1950.

But it was temporarily put off owing to the war provoked by the U.S. imperialist aggressors.

The struggle for enforcing the universal compulsory primary education gathered strength in the postwar period.

Under the wise leadership of the respected and beloved leader who does everything to place education definitely before all other work, each ri came to have one or more primary schools in 1955, under the difficult conditions of post-war rehabilitation and construction and they could accommodate all the schoolage children.

On this basis, all the children of our country could receive free compulsory primary education from 1956.

Education has made a leaping progress over the last 25 years since the institution of the historic compulsory primary education system.

A universal compulsory secondary education was introduced in 1958, only two years after the enforcement of the universal compulsory primary education. Later, a step was taken for the complex abolition of the tuition fees at the schools of all levels.

The year 1967 witnessed the enforcement of a universal nine-year compulsory technical education and 1975 saw the full enforcement of a universal compulsory 11-year education, a proud success.

At present, in our country, all the students and pupils from the primary school children to the university students enjoy completely free education and the students of the higher special schools and colleges and universities receive stipends from the state.

Today our people are vigorously advancing towards the lofty height of the intellectualisation of the whole society, looking ahead to a bright vista of compulsory higher education spread by the sixth congress of the Workers Party of Korea.

Our education is now progressing at faster pace under the outstanding leadership of the glorious party centre bringing to shining realization the immortal chuche idea founded by the great leader.

REPORT ON HOUSING CONDITIONS IN DPRK

SK031618 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1522 GMT 3 Aug 81

[Text] Pyongyang August 3 (KCNA)--A great number of dwelling houses are built every year in the Democratic People's Republic of Korea.

The Munsu Street is taking shape at fast pace on a bank of the Taedong-gang River in Pyongyang. High-rise apartment houses for far more than ten thousand families and a host of public buildings will come into being.

In less than half a year several dozen grand buildings have already made their appearance.

Tall buildings are under construction in other parts of the city, rendering new looks to the streets.

Housing construction is progressing at full steam in Hamhung City, Nampo Municipality and other local cities and rural districts.

Thus the task to build modern houses for 200,000-300,000 families every year in towns and villages is being carried out successfully in the current Second Seven-Year Plan period.

Our working people have no worries about food, clothing and housing.

The factory and office workers are provided by the state modern houses and the peasants live in cosy houses built them by the state free.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song shows great care so that extensive housing construction could take place every year with a large state investment for a satisfactory solution of the housing problem for the people.

In our country which was left with debris due to indiscriminate bombing by the U.S. imperialists in the fatherland liberation war, the housing problem was solved in a short period of less than ten years after the cease-fire.

Later, in the 1961-1969 period houses for 800,000 families were built and urban flats for 414,000 families and rural houses for 472,000 families in the Six-Year Plan period.

The houses under construction will have more rooms and be furnished with good facilities and furniture.

Today our working people are leading a happy life in modern houses built them by the state free, with nothing more to desire.

TONGHAE TRADING COMPANY ANNIVERSARY NOTED

SK0 71538 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1522 GMT 7 Aug 81

[Text] Pyongyang August 7 (KCNA)--Papers here today dedicate editorial articles to the 20th anniversary of the founding of the Tonghae Trading Company, Ltd., a general trading corporation of Koreans in Japan.

In its editorial article NODONG SINMUN says: Ever since its founding the Tonghae Trading Company, Ltd., first of all, has energetically conducted a political and organisational work for thoroughly arming its functionaries with the great chuche idea of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and uniting them closely around the great leader and the glorious party centre.

The functionaries, proud of living and working under the guidance of the great leader whom they hold in high esteem, have given full play to their patriotic zeal and creative ingenuity and thereby developed the company into a foreign trade corporation of the DPRK which is powerful economically and deeply trusted externally.

It has registered big successes in carrying out the patriotic tasks of the General Association of Korean Residents in Japan (Chongnyon) and, especially, ensuring the business activities of Korean traders and manufacturers in Japan.

It is unthinkable apart from the wise leadership of the great leader and his great love that the company has developed today into a trading corporation which has a solid economic foundation and enjoys a high prestige externally under adversity in which the enemies within and without resorted to vicious obstructions.

We firmly believe that the functionaries of the Tonghae Trading Company, Ltd. will register fresh successes in its foreign trade under the banner of the great chuche idea.

CUBAN LECTURE MARKS DPRK'S ANTI-U.S. STRUGGLE MONTH

SK030440 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0332 GMT 3 Aug 81

[Text] Pyongyang August 3 (KCNA)--A lecture was recently given in Havana under the sponsorship of the Cuban Association for Friendship Among the People and the Cuban Committee for Supporting Koreas Reunification on the occasion of the month of anti-U.S. joint struggle, according to a report.

Present at the lecture were the chairman of the National Committee of the Cuban Movement for Peace and Sovereignty Among the People, the chairman of the Cuban Committee for Supporting Koreas Reunification, the chairman of the Cuban Association for Friendship Among the People and other personages concerned.

Invited there were the DPRK ambassador to Cuba and officials of his embassy.

The lecture was given by Candelaria Rodriguez, legal adviser to the centre of the Cuban working people, who had visited our country as a member of the international team for the investigation of atrocities of the U.S. imperialist aggression forces and the South Korean puppet army.

Saying that the great leader of the Korean people General Kim Il-song defeated the Japanese imperialists and liberated Korea by wisely organizing and leading the Korean communist movement and the anti-Japanese armed struggle, he pointed out that after liberation General Kim Il-song, the legendary hero and outstanding leader, carried out democratic reforms in the northern half and founded the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, a democratic, sovereign and independent state.

He noted that the U.S. imperialists and the Syngman Rhee puppet clique provoked a war of aggression on June 25, 1950.

Exposing the atrocities committed by the U.S. imperialists during the Korean war, he said:

Under the correct leadership of Comrade President Kim Il-song the heroic Korean people and peoples army defeated the U.S. imperialist aggressors for the first time in world history and started them on the downhill.

The main obstacle to the reunification of Korea is U.S. imperialism.

The cause of Korean reunification should be achieved independently and peacefully by the Korean people themselves free from foreign interference in accordance with the resolution of the 30th session of the U.N. General Assembly.

The Cuban people will always support the Korean people in their just struggle for national reunification.

'NODONG SINMUN' MARKS GUINEA-BISSAU ANNIVERSARY

SK031153 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1105 GMT 3 Aug 81

[Text] Pyongyang August 3 (KCNA)--NODONG SINMUN today dedicates an article to the 20th anniversary of the start of the armed struggle of the Guinea-Bissau people.

The author of the article says:

On August 3, 1961, the patriots and people of Guinea-Bissau rose in a sacred struggle for freedom and liberation holding arms in their hands. This was a historic event which marked a new turn in the anti-imperialist national-liberation struggle of the Guinea-Bissau people.

In the flames of the grim struggle for freedom and liberation, the Republic of Guinea-Bissau was proclaimed in September 1973 and the complete liberation of the country was achieved next year.

Since independence the Guinea-Bissau people have been striving for the consolidation of the national independence and the independent development of the country, liquidating the evil consequences of the colonial rule.

The Korean people hail all the successes registered by the Guinea-Bissau people since independence.

Today the friendly and cooperative relations between the peoples of Korea and Guinea-Bissau are daily developing excellently in the common struggle against imperialism and for independence.

We wish the Guinea-Bissau people greater success in the struggle for the development and prosperity of the country.

'NODONG SINMUN' ARTICLE MARKS NIGER ANNIVERSARY

SK031144 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1102 GMT 3 Aug 81

[Text] Pyongyang August 3 (KCNA)--NODONG SINMUN today in an article dedicated to the 21st anniversary of the independence of Niger says that the Korean people extend congratulations to her people on this day.

Pointing out that over the last 21 years the Niger people have registered many successes in consolidating the national independence, the author of the article says:

The Niger Government is struggling against imperialism, colonialism and racism, pursuing the foreign policy of non-alignment.

The Korean people hail the successes made by the Niger people in the building of a new society.

Korea and Niger are separated from each other by a long distance geographically, but they, as members of the non-aligned movement, forged the bonds of friendship and have developed them.

We will continue to make all efforts to further develop and strengthen the friendly and cooperative relations with the Niger people in the idea of the non-aligned movement.

The article notes that the Korean people wish the Niger people greater success in their struggle for progress and prosperity.

N. KOREA/INTERNATIONAL COMMENTARY

'NODONG SINMUN' COMMENTS ON WESTERN SAHARA ISSUE

SK070653 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0415 GMT 7 Aug 81

[Text] Pyongyang August 7 (KCNA)--The question of Western Sahara should be settled peacefully on the principles of sovereignty, decolonisation and national self-determination in conformity with the interests and ideas of the Organisation of African Unity and the non-aligned movement and with the national interests and desire of the Saharan people, says NODONG SINMUN today in a commentary titled "Question of Western Sahara Should Be Settled on Principle of National Self-Determination."

The author of the commentary points out that the peoples liberation struggle for retaking the lost territory and national sovereignty is going on vigorously in Western Sahara and at the recent 18th summit conference of the Organisation of African Unity adopted a resolution on the question of Western Sahara. This was a victory won by the Saharan people through a vigorous struggle to carry out their just cause, the commentary remarks.

It goes on: The Korean people always support the Saharan peoples just stand for a peaceful solution of the Western Saharan question on the principle of national self-determination and hope that it will be solved peacefully through negotiations between the parties concerned.

It is due to the interference of the imperialists and colonialists that this question has not yet been solved.

By using this question the imperialists and colonialists try to drive a wedge among the countries concerned and divide and alienate them from each other and thereby defeat the countries in this region one by one and realise their aggressive design on this region with ease. But their manoeuvres are bound to go awry in face of the united struggle of the African people.

Any interventionist and aggressive manoeuvres against Western Sahara must be discontinued and the national independence of the Saharan people and their right to self-determination be respected.

As in the past, our people will in the future, too, actively support the Saharan people in their just struggle for the decolonization and complete liberation of Africa and Western Sahara and for national independence.

LET US MORE ENERGETICALLY LAUNCH THE THREE REVOLUTIONS TEAMS MOVEMENT TO SUIT THE DEMANDS OF THE DEVELOPING REALITIES

Pyongyang KULLOJA in Korean No 5, May 81 pp 2-8

[Text] Loyally upholding the line set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song for the Three Revolutions--ideological, technological, and cultural--our party has scored great victories and prideful achievements in the tasks of remolding man, society, and nature. The great transformations brought about in the revolutionary struggle and construction tasks are the brilliant victory of the three revolutions line laid down by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the precious fruition of the sagacious leadership of our party.

Our party is the guiding force leading the whole party and the entire people to the bright future of communism with the banner of the three revolutions held high.

Our party, strictly adhereing to the three revolutions line from the first day it set out on the road of building a new society, has sagaciously led the struggle for the realization and taken positive measures aimed at deepening and developing the ideological, technological, and cultural revolutions to suit the demands of the developing revolution.

The Three Revolutions Teams movement, initiated by our party in accordance with the far-sighted plan of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song at a historic juncture when our revolution in the 1970's was in the period of a new turnaround, is a powerful revolutionary march movement deepened and developed under the sagacious leadership of the party. With the TRT movement pushed successfully, the ideological, technological, and cultural revolutions in our country have become more positive and organized, and it has become possible to achieve a ceaseless forward movement and innovation in all areas of socialist construction.

Experience clearly proves that the TRT movement is the invariable guidelines to which all party organizations and functionaries must strictly adhere and that the movement is a great driving force dynamically pushing the ideological, technological, and cultural revolutions.

Today our party and people are faced with the glorious, rewarding struggle task to hasten the cause for conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology by accelerating with the banner of the three revolutions held high the all-out march to realize the magnificent program laid down by the Sixth Party Congress.

Our party calls upon all party organizations, functionaries, and TRT members to go forward to bring about a great new turnaround in the prosecution of the ideological, technological, and cultural revolutions by further spurring the TRT movement to suit the demands of our developing revolution.

To more energetically launch the TRT movement, loyally upholding the plan and intent of the party is a lofty duty facing party organizations and functionaries at all levels and TRTs; and ceaselessly deepening and developing this movement is precisely where an important guarantee for hastening the historic cause for conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology is.

The TRT movement is a revolutionary and scientific guidance method for the revolution thoroughly realizing the leadership of the party for revolution and construction.

The leadership of the party for revolution and construction gets realized through the guidance method. The guidance method is a means of embodying the lines and policies of the party in the revolutionary struggle and construction tasks and one of the important forms linking the party and the masses. Only if a scientific and revolutionary guidance method is established, is it possible to energetically organize and mobilize the masses in the struggle for the realization of the plan and intent of the party and firmly insure the victory of the revolutionary struggle and construction tasks.

Correctly solving the question of the party's guidance method arises as an even more pressing question especially as the revolution moves forward and the society develops.

As revolution and construction deepen, more difficult and complex tasks come to arise before the party and so grow the extent of the masses participating in the revolutionary struggle and their consciousness level.

As, in step with deepening revolution and construction, revolutionary remaking and transformation become more incisive and the scope of the revolutionary struggle grows bigger, the party of the working class must further strengthen its leadership for them and ceaselessly improve its guidance method to suit the demands of the developing realities.

Our party, always directing keen attention to the question of the mass guidance method, has brilliantly solved it to suit the demands of each period, each stage of the developing revolution.

The TRT movement organized and being guided by our party is a revolutionary guidance method in new form that has emerged reflecting the demands of a higher stage of our developing revolution and as such, constitutes a brilliant exemplar of having most precisely solved the question of the mass guidance method.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"The Three Revolutions Teams movement is a revolutionary guidance method in new form which, combining politicoideological guidance and scientific and technological guidance, makes superiors help subordinates, and setting the masses of working people in motion, steps up the The Three Revolutions--ideological, technological, and cultural." (Booklet "Summing-Up Report on the Work of the Central Committee to the Sixth Congress of the Korean Workers Party," p 7)

The TRT movement comprehensively embodies the principled questions which must be tightly grasped in mass guidance and illuminates the precise way of admirably realizing the leadership of the party for the ideological, technological, and cultural revolutions.

The TRT movement is the most superior revolutionary guidance method which brilliantly realizes the leadership of the party for the ideological, technological, and cultural revolutions by correctly combining the politicoideological guidance and the scientific and technological guidance.

The Three Revolutions--ideological, technological, and cultural--are the basic strategic line to which our party must strictly adhere in socialist, communist construction.

Socialist, communist construction is a process of awesome transformation to firmly unite all people as a single political force, turning them into genuine communist revolutionaries, and provide an independent, creative life for the masses of people, remaking nature and society.

This historic cause can be successfully attained only when the party, which is general staff of the revolution, correctly combines the politicoideological guidance and the scientific and technological guidance for The Three Revolutions--ideological, technological, and cultural.

To say to correctly combine the politicoideological guidance and the scientific and technological guidance bespeaks to solve all questions arising in revolution and construction to suit the intent of the party and its policy-oriented demands, to suit scientific and technological principles.

The TRT movement, because of its characteristics in terms of composition, makes it possible to correctly combine the politicoideological guidance and the scientific and technological guidance for the ideological, technological, and cultural revolutions.

It constitutes an important guarantee which makes it possible to successfully insure the politicoideological guidance and the scientific and technological guidance for the ideological, technological, and cultural revolutions that the teams in direct charge of the TRT movement consist of core elements of the party who are politicoideologically prepared and of young intellectuals who are thoroughly armed with the chuche ideology and modern science and technology.

The TRTs, by making party organizations and functionaries go forward to solve all questions with a high policy-oriented eye and carry through the lines and policies of the party to the end in the spirit of absolutism and unconditionality, make it possible to realize the party's politicoideological guidance for the ideological, technological, and cultural revolutions.

The TRTs, by demonstrating to the functionaries through practice the might of modern science and technology and the superiority of an advanced economic management and operation method, also make it possible to develop national science and technology on the chuche stand and correctly insure the scientific and technological guidance for socialist construciton. Precisely herein lie the important characteristics of the TRT movement and the gorund that this movement is our party's powerful guidance method for the prosecution of the ideological, technological, and cultural revolutions.

Superiors helping subordinates is one of the important principled demands which the party of the working class must tightly maintain in mass leadership.

Because it admirably embodies this principled demand for superiors to help subordinates, the TRT movement is a positive revolutionary guidance method which makes it possible to most brilliantly realize the leadership of the party for the ideological, technological, and cultural revolutions.

The guidance method through the TRT movement, sending down to various branches of the people's economy a well-prepared guidance force on a large scale, not a couple of guidance members on the scale of a cottage industry, makes it possible to help party organizations and functionaries, and establish and implement correct guidance measures based on having concretely ascertained the state of affairs at the base level. Thus at all places where the TRTs are active, the lines and policies of the party come to be executed most precisely at all times, with guidance correctly conducted for the masses and better communications established between superiors and subordinates.

The guidance method through the TRT movement is becoming an energetic driving force especially for the cadres and guidance functionaries to ceaselessly move forward and achieve innovation, always filled to overflowing with vigor and enthusiasm, free from senility and standstill without falling behind the rapidly developing realities.

Thus bringing guidance closer to the masses and strengthening the kindred ties between the party and the masses, and positively helping party organizations and functionaries conduct work to suit the intent of the party is where the immense might of the TRT movement is, where an important guarantee for brilliantly realizing the leadership of the party for the ideological, technological, and cultural revolutions is.

The socialist, communist cause is a task of the masses of people themselves and can be successfully attained when the broad masses vigorously launch into it.

The essential nature of the leadership of the party of the working class lies in leading the masses of working people so that they may, as the master of revolution and construction, acquit themselves fully of their responsibility and role. Ably organizing and mobilizing the inexhaustible strength of the masses of people in the revolutionary struggle and construction tasks is precisely where the might and sagacity of leadership of the party of the working class are.

It is the invariable guidelines our party tightly maintains in mass leadership to energetically move revolution and construction forward, thoroughly relying on the masses of people and positively setting their inexhaustible strength and creative wisdom in motion.

The TRT movement, which is being guided by our party, is an energetic guidance method which, positively promoting the revolutionary fervor and initiative of the masses of working people, makes the lines and policies of the party admirably carried through.

The TRT movement, giving priority to political work in all tasks in accordance with the demands of the chuche ideology and the revolutionary mass line, ceaselessly enhances the awareness and sense of responsibility of the masses of working people as befits the master and makes them consciously launch into carrying out the three revolutions.

Again, with the struggle energetically launched through the TRT movement to overcome all kinds of outmoded ideological dregs such as conservatism, empiricism, and technological mysticism, the conscious enthusiasm and creative positiveness of the masses come to be highly promoted and a revolutionary upsurge brought about in the ideological, technological, and cultural areas.

Thus the TRT movement constitutes the most positive and revolutionary guidance method brilliantly realizing the leadership of the party for the ideological, technological, and cultural revolutions, and a powerful driving force energetically pushing for a ceaseless forward movement and innovation to be made in revolution and construction.

Our party has energetically organized and guided the struggle to deepen and develop the TRT movement to suit the demands of the developing revolution.

Our party, above all by graphically enunciating the duty and concrete task of the TRT movement and the way of the realization, has made this movement proceed to suit the intent of the party.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"Members of Three Revolutions Teams, even more deeply going in among the masses, must positively set their revolutionary fervor and creative wisdom in motion. In this way the TRT members, the guidance functionaries and all working people of factories, enterprises, and cooperative farms, joining forces, must more energetically launch the ideological revolution, technological revolution, and cultural revolution." ("Kim Il-song Selected Works," Vol 6, p 445)

Our party, defining it as the basic duty of TRT members to go down to the base level, substantively help the functionaries, and joining forces with party organizations, energetically push ahead with the three revolutions, has graphically enunciated the principled demands arising in pushing the ideological revolution, technological revolution, and cultural revolution simultaneously all together while giving a firm priority to the ideological revolution. All these principled questions set forth by the party have become a firm principle in the TRT task, and an important factor that has made it possible for the TRT movement to energetically move forward without any tilting.

Precisely defining the targets of guidance and correctly composing the guidance force has important significance in the leadership of our party for the TRT movement.

Only by precisely setting the targets of guidance and commendably composing the necessary guidance force is it possible to satisfactorily realize the guidance to suit the intrinsic demands of the TRT movement.

Our party, defining as the targets of guidance vairous branches of the people's economy such as factories, enterprises, and cooperative farms, has taken positive measures to organize and dispatch to the field TRTs composed of core elements of the party and young intellectuals thoroughly prepared in terms of political job performance. Thus the guidance of the party has come to filter down to all branches of the people's economy even better, and all party organizations and functionaries, gaining a greater strength and wisdom from the guiding hand of the party, have become able to positively launch into carrying out the three revolutions with fresh courage and faith.

Our party also has established an orderly work system so that the TRTs may correctly discharge their mission and duty.

The party has arranged for the TRTs, which have been dispatched to provinces, cities, counties, and factoris, enterprises, cooperative farms, while moving under a single orderly work system, to organize and conduct all tasks after discussing them with the party committees of their respective units, on the one hand, and correctly led them to rountinely sum up and ceaselessly deepen their work. Thus the guidance of the party for the TRT movement has come to be further strenghened, the linkage between party organizations and TRTs correctly insured, and a revolutionary discipline and order thoroughly established in the TRT work. With the guidance system for the TRT movement firmly firmly established, the plan and intent of the party have come to filter down to the base level without a hitch, and with the opinions of the masses reflected timely, it has become possible to successfully solve all questions arising in the prosecution of the three revolutions.

It is one of the important questions to which our party always pays keen attention, to have the work method and work style of functionaries improved to suit the developing realities.

Our party has always paid keen attention to having TRT members work and live with a thoroughly revolutionary work method and people-oriented work styel.

The party has led TRT members to solve all questions to suit the will and interests of the masses, going in deep among the masses of people and living together with them in accordance with the demands of the Ch'ongsan-ri spirit, the Ch'ongsan-ri method, with a correct stand and viewpoint toward the masses of people and to behave with humility and courtesy without throwing their weight around or standing on ceremony.

With the work method and work style of the TRTs ceaselessly improved under the sagacious leadership of the party, the leadership authority of the party has come to be firmly insured among the masses, and it has become possible for TRT members to admirably discharge their responsibility and role as the vanguard of the three revolutions.

With a view to deepening the TRT movement to suit the demands of the developing realities, our party has routinely summed up the TRT work and acquainted TRT members timely with the guidelines and intent of the party, and by widely generalizing the oustanding experiences and achievements scored among them, made the fire of the three revolutions blaze even more dynamically throughout the country.

The TRT movement has thus walked a road of brilliantly victory and ceaselessly deepened and developed under the energetic guidance of our party.

Truly, the leadership of our party has been a source of strength which, breathing vitality and spirit into the TRT movement, has made the movement display an invincible might.

Under the sagacious leadership of our party the TRT movement has demonstrated its correctness and vitality to the hilt on the historic march route toward conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology.

The great vitality of the TRT movement has been graphically proved above all by the brilliant achievements scored in the human remolding task, the technical improvement task, and the cultural construction task.

As a result of the ideological revolution energetically launched amid the flames of the TRT movement, all functionaries and working people have been thoroughly armed with our party's revolutionary thought, the chuche ideology, and the revolutionary spirit of unconditionally carrying through the decisions and directives of the party to the end has come to be firmly established partywide and societywide.

The trust of the masses of people in the party has been extraordinarily enhanced, and the unity and solidarity of the party and the masses strengthened more than ever. Today our party, absolutely supporting the lines and policies of the party, are highly displaying an incomparable sacrificial spirit in carrying them through.

Thus the mental and moral features of our people have changed beyond recognition, and the human remolding task in our country has come to advance onto a new higher level.

At the same time, with the technological revolution and cultural revolution energetically pushed, not only has a great advance been registered in the tasks of placing our socialist economy on the foundations of modern science and technology and of liberating working people from backbreaking labor, a great turnaround has been brought about in establishing the socialist cultured way of life societywide as well.

The TRT movement also has demonstrated its invincible vitality in enhancing the combat strength of party organizations and further strengthening the functions of state and economic organs.

As the party organizational sense of functionaries and party members has been enhanced and a new turnaround brought about in their work method and work habit in the course of the TRT movement deepening and developing, our party's base-level organizations have come to be further consolidated into vibrantly moving militant organizations.

Outmoded ideas and work methods such as bureaucratism, expedientialism, formalism have been markedly overcome among the functionaries of state and economic organs, a stand and attitude befitting the master of the revolution has been firmly established, and their positiveness and initiative have come to be displayed even more highly in all tasks. Thus state and economic organs have come to be able to perform their functions and roles more admirably as economic organizers, as cultural indoctrinators, and our state and social system further consolidated and developed.

That TRT members have grown up as reliable vanguard of the revolution is precious fruits brought by the TRT movement and graphically shows the immense vitality of this movement.

TRT members, experiencing with all their hearts the greatness of the party and the leader, the sagacity of their leadership, the correctness of party policies amid the awesome practice of the ideological, technological, and cultural revolutions, have always brilliantly carried through the plan and intent of the party in the revolutionary spirit of absolutism and unconditionality. They have learned amid practical struggle the faithfulness and stern will, the high organizational sense and collectivist spirit of the working people and have come to grow up into reliable functionaries of our revolution capable of ably organizing and launching all tasks. Thus our TRT members are becoming the fervent protectors, positive propagandists, thorough executors of party policies as a core force enjoying the high trust of our party.

Thus in the course of the TRT movement strengthening and developing the organizational and ideological cornerstones of our party have been more solidly consolidated, and precious successes and prideful achievements have been scored in bringing about a ceaseless upsurge in the revolutionary struggle and construction tasks.

Life clearly shows that the TRT movement our party leads is indeed a revolutionary guidance method most powerful with the greatest vitality which makes the three revolutions more organized and positive to suit the new developmental stage of our revolution.

All party organizations and functionaries and TRT members, based on the achievements already scored in the TRT movement, must continue to dynamically push ahead with this movement.

The TRT movement is not some kind of a temporary task but revolutionary guidelines which our party must perpetually grasp in order to successfully accomplish the task of the three revolutions.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"We should continue to develop the three-revolution team movement whose advantages and vitality have been confirmed in practice." (Booklet "Let Us Step Up Socialist Construction Under the Banner of Chuche Thought," p 19)

Most important in more energetically launching the TRT movement to suit the demands of the developing realities is for all party organizations and functionaries, deeply recognizing the importance of this movement, to positively strive for deepening and developing the TRT movement.

The TRT movement is a glorious movement initiated by our party and being conducted under the sagacious leadership of the party.

Through the TRT movement our party is brilliantly realizing the leadership of the party for the ideological, technological, and cultural revolutions, bringing about a ceaseless upsurge in the revolutionary struggle and construction tasks. In the guidelines of the party for energetically launching the TRT movement is brilliantly embodied the revolutionary stand to hasten the cause for conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology by bringing about a new turnaround in the guidance for the three revolutions.

Strengthening and developing the TRT movement is not some kind of a job performance task by any means but an important political task to realize the plan and intent of our party.

Party organizations and functionaries, deeply recognizing the intrinsic nature and correctness, the invincible might and vitality of the TRT movement, must hold a correct stand and viewpoint toward this movement, and put conscious, positive efforts into more energetically launching the TRT movement to suit the demands of our developng revolution.

Party organizations and functionaries at all levels, maintaining close relations with TRTs, must positively support and insure their work and activity, and must render commendable aid so that the constructive and creative opinions put forward by the teams may bear admirable fruits. At the same time, they must strive to widely introduce and timely generalize the precious achievements and experiences scored by the TRTs.

When party organizations and functionaries, tightly grasping the TRT movement as an important part of party work, always direct keen interest and attention to it, and joining forces with the teams, energetically push ahead with this movement, they can further deepen and develop on a new higher level The Three Revolutions--ideological, technological, and cultural.

Also important in more emergetically pushing ahead with the TRT movement to suit the demands of the developing realities is further enhancing the sense of responsibility and role of TRT members who are in direct charge of this movement.

The TRT members are the vanguard of the three revolutions and standard bearers of the struggle dispatched to the field with the high political trust of our party. When the team members in direct charge of the TRT movement, deeply aware of their glorious mission before the party and the revolution, struggle devoting all their wisdom and energy, they can score an even greater victory and advance in carrying out the ideological, technological, and cultural revolutions.

An important question in enhancing the sense of responsibility and role of TRT members is making them hold as their firm creed the immortal chuche ideology and the embodiment, the lines and policies of our party, and firmly maintain a high revolutionary spirit in carrying them through.

The chuche ideology and the embodiment, the lines and policies of our party, are the unitary criteria for the work and life of TRT members and the principle of their activity. Apart from the chuche ideology and the embodiment, the policies of the party, TRT members cannot take one step forward.

Only by holding the immortal chuche ideology as their firm creed and thoroguhly arming themselves with the policies of the party can they view, analyze, and judge all questions from the chuche stand and viewpoint and go forward to deal with them to suit the partywide principle and interests of the revolution. Accordingly, to hold the chuche ideology as their firm creed, thoroughly arm themselves with the policies of the party, and firmly maintain a high revolutionary spirit is a priority demand arising in TRT work and activity, and an important guarantee for energetically launching the TRT movement.

The basic duty TRT members must carry out is thoroughly carrying through the three revolutions line of our party. TRT members, by energetically pushing ahead with the technological revolution and cultural revolution in a unified process with priority to the ideological revolution, must make the fire of the three revolutions blaze more dynamically in all areas of socialist construction.

In the present period TRT members must direct keen attention especially to making party organizations and functionaries thoroughly carry through the demands of the Taean work system in factory management and operation, loyally upholding the decision of the third plenary meeting of the Sixth Party Central Committee.

One of the important questions arising in enhancing the sense of responsibility and role of TRT members is ceaselessly improving their work method and work style.

The TRT movement is a revolutionary guidance method in new form embodying the demands of the Ch'ongsan-ri spirit, the Ch'ongsan-ri method, and TRT members are personal guards, honor guards moving forward in the forefront of this movement, loyally upholding the plan and intent of the party. Only if TRT members ceaselessly improve their work method and work style, can they deepen and develop the TRT movement to suit the demands of the developing realities and display the immense might and invincible vitality of this movement to the hilt.

TRT members, going in deep among the masses in accordance with the demands of the Ch'ongsan-ri method and briskly launching political work, must even more energetically inspire them to carry through the policies of the party and lead the masses by personal examples.

TRT members absolutely must not allow themselves to be contaminated with outmoded ideas, and viewing all questions with a high policy-oriented eye, must ceaselessly move forward and achieve innovation without the slightest sloth and laxity, free from standstill and marking time.

The humble and frugal way of life is an important character TRT members must possess.

TRT members must work and live always becoming one with the masses, and be open-minded, unpretentious, and simple.

When TRT members thus go forward to ceaselessly improve their work method and work style, they can command the implicit trust and respect of the masses and satisfctorily perform their responsibility and role as the vanguard of the three revolutions.

Energetically launching the TRT movement, because it thoroguhly carries out the ideological, technological, and cultural revolutions, is a most responsible and glorious task to realize the magnificent plan and firm determination of our party to attain to the end the chuche revolutionary cause charted by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song.

All party organizations and functionaries and TRT members, by thoroughly defending, expanding and developing the precious successes and achievements scored in the TRT movement under the sagacious leadership of the party and by more energetically launching this movement, shall respond in loyalty to the high trust and expectations of the party and hasten along the historic march route toward conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology.

THE HISTORIC EVENT THAT OPENED UP A WIDE ROAD TO GREAT NATIONAL UNITY UNDER THE ANTI-JAPANESE BANNER

Pyongyang KULLOJA in Korean No 5, May 81 pp 9-14

[Article by Chon Mun-uk: "On the Occasion of the 45th Anniversary of the Founding of Fatherland Restoration Society"]

[Text] It is the 45th anniversary of the founding of Fatherland Restoration Society, the first anti-Japanese united national front organization of our country established by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song in the period of the glorious anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle.

The founding of Fatherland Restoration Society was the brilliant realization of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song's unique united front thoguht and far-sighted plan for expanding and developing the anti-Japanese united national front movement on a countrywide, nationwide basis, and a great event that brought about a great upsurge in the overall Korean revolution by opening up a wide road to great national unity under the anti-Japanese banner.

The precious achievements and experiences scored by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song in the course of founding and leading Fatherland Resotration Society during the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle are becoming priceless revolutionary heritages which even today energetically encourage and inspire our people's revolutionary struggle to brilliant victory.

It was an important demand that arose during the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle for expanding and developing the anti-Japanese united national front movement onto a new higher stage, to form a standing anti-Japanese united national front organization.

Realizing great national unity is one of the important questions that arises in order to strengthen the chuche revolutionary force and victoriosuly carry out the revolutionary struggle with a nation's own strength.

The revolutionary struggle is a struggle for the sake of the masses of people, and the masses of people are the decisive force for revolution and construction. The success or failure of the revolutionary struggle depends on how the masses of people are united, organized and mobilized. Therefore, in order that the communists may win victory in the revolutionary struggle, they must correctly launch the united front movement in each period, each stage of the developing revolution to unite all classes, all strata sharing the same interests.

The united front movement is a sociopolitical movement which, with the balance of forces between friend and foe taken into account, is aimed at insuring the decisive superiority of the revolutionary forces by maximally isolating and weakening the enemy and winning over to the side of the revolution all forces that could be won over.

In order to successfully launch the united front movement aimed at realizing great national unity, it is important to form an all-encompassing, monoaxial standing united front organization.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, setting forth the unique guidelines at the historic Nanhut'ou Conference for organizing a standing united front organization based on his scientific analysis of the position and role of the united front movement, of the achievements scored in this task, and of the developing anti-Japanese revolution, went forward to brilliantly realize them.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"In order to develop the anti-Japanese united national front movement onto a new level, it is imperative to form a standing united front organization." ("A Collection of Writings of Kim Il-song," Vol 1, p 121)

Forming a standing united front organization, because it insures unified guidance for the overall united front movement, has important significance in timely overcoming autogenesis and fragmentation that may surace in this movement and in inspiring the masses of people to struggle for realization of the common objectives.

Only by forming a standing united front organization that can embrace mass organizations by class, by stratum and the patriotic people of all strata all together is it possible to develop the united front movement in a more organized manner and firmly insure the guidance of the communists for this task and victoriously move the revolutionary struggle forward, correctly composing the revolutionary forces.

The task of forming such a standing united front organization is a complex and difficult one that cannot be conducted at any given time. If a standing united front organization is to be formed, there have to be the mature demands of the developing situation which would make it possible to realize the united front task on a countrywide, nationwide basis, as well as a guiding nuclear force and guiding program for the formation and in addition, various principled questions must be correctly solved.

In our country the demand for forming a standing united front organization aimed at realizing the solidarity of revolutionary forces and their unity of action on a nationwide basis arose as a more pressing question in the mid-1930's.

Inthis period the Japanese imperialists, while stepping up the expansion of their war of aggression against the continent, were viciously perpetrating unprecedentedly harsh fascist oppression and economic plunder against the Korean people. The whole country was immersed in a sea of blood, sea of fire, and our people were being forced to live a life of colonial slavery unparalleled in history amid an utter deprivation of political rights, amid poverty. Thus in our country the racial conflict and class conflict came to be intensified extremely and the revolutionary advance of the masses of people more strengthened.

In particular, under the sagacious leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song the Korean People's Revolutionary Army, the leading force of the anti-Japanese national liberation struggle, grew up and strengthened as an invincible revolutionary armed force amid the flames of the fierce revolutionary war. The rapidly developing anti-Japanese armed struggle called for still more material and manpower resources that could reliably guarantee its victorious forward movement.

The then existing situation presented it as a pressing question to insure the unitary guidance for the united front movement and achieve the solidarity of the whole nation and its unity of action in order to more quickly heighten the anti-Japanese mass struggle centered on the anti-Japanese armed struggle.

Forming a standing united front organization aimed at successfully realizing great national unity was an inevitable demand of our country's developing united front movement.

Under the sagacious leadershp of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song the united national front movement in our country had been energetically launched from the first days of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle and had scored great achievements.

With the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song setting forth the line of an anti-Japanese united national front at the historic Chialun Conference and sagaciously leading the struggle for the realization, a communist youth league organization and mass organizations such as peasant associations, peasant committees, anti-Japanese associations, mutual aid associations for the revolution, and women's associations were organized in a wide region along the Tumen River, and the masses of all strata embraced in the organizations became active. Also, with mass organizations in the nature of a united front such as the anti-imperialist union formed and taking action, a large force of anti-Japanese masses such as the workers and peasants was positively organized and mobilized in the great anti-Japanese war.

In the course of the anti-Japanese united national front movement being brisly launched in a wide region centered on the Tumen, worker-peasant alliance, the sociopolitical base of the united front was further strengthened, a guiding nuclear force created, and priceless experiences accumulated in this movement.

Such achievements scored in the anti-Japanese united national front movement became the reliable foundations that could expand and develop the united front movement on a nationwide basis.

But the united front movement in this period could not avoid a series of fragmentation because the movement was conducted by means of embracing the anti-Japanese masses of all strata in mass organiztions by class, by stratum and in mass organizations in the nature of a united front such as the anti-imperialist union.

Only by forming a standing united front organization was it possible to embrace the mass organizations of all kinds and the anti-Japanese patriotic elements of all strata all together in one organization on a countrywide, nationwide basis, overcoming on the basis of the achievements already scored the fragmentation that had surfaced in the united front movement and to develop the anti-Japanese united national front movement onto a new higher stage.

Forming a standing united front organization aimed at realizing great national unity also had to do with the circumstances that it was necessary to firmly insure the guidance of the communists for the united front task under conditions that there was no political party of the working class in our country at the time.

Thus, to form a standing united national front organization in our country most precisely reflected the demands of the laws of building a firm mass base for the anti-Japanese armed struggle and of the developing anti-Japanese united national front movement, and as such, arose as one of the basic questions that would make it possible to brilliantly realize great national unity and hasten the sacred cause of fatherland restoration.

Such demand for forming a monoaxial, all-encompassing standing anti-Japanese united national front organization was reserved for the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song to resolve by founding the Fatherland Restoration Society.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, ripening his plan for forming an all-nation united front organization on the arduous post-Nanhut'ou Conference march route and based on the Fatherland Restoration Society program, its founding proclamation, and its articles of association he had personally written, proclaimed before the whole world the founding of Fatherland Restoration Society at the Tungkand Conference on 5 May 1936.

The Fatherland Restoration Society was the first standing anti-Japanese united national front organization of our country with the immortal chuche ideology as its guiding principle, and a powerful underground revolutionary organization aimed at uniting all anti-Japanese forces as one and insuring unified guidance for them.

With the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song founding the Fatherland Restoration Society, our people's earnest aspirations to great national unity came to be brilliantly realized, and with the chuche forces of the Korean revolution further strengthened, the overall Korean revolution centered on the anti-Japanese armed struggle came to herald the period of a new turnaround.

It was a historic event which opened up a wide road to great national unity under the anti-Japanese banner that the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song founded the Fatherland Restoration Society in the period of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle.

By the founding of the Fatherland Restoration Society the most correct road to great national unity was opened up in our country and our people's anti-Japanese united national front movement came to develop onto a new higher stage.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"The founding on 5 May 1936 of the Fatherland Restoration Society, the first anti-Japanese united national front organization of our country, was an epochal event in the task of strengthening the mass base of the revolution. With the Fatherland Restoration Society founded, the anti-Japanese united national front movement, in close combination with the anti-Japanese armed struggle, came to quickly develop in a more organized and systematic manner on a nationwide scale and it became possible to energetically organize and mobilize all anti-Japanese forces in the struggle to liberate the country." ("Answers to Questions Posed by Foreign Journalists," 1973 edition, 0 147)

The founding of the Fatherland Restoration Society above all was a crucial event of epochal significance in firmly realizing the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's unitary leadership for the anti-Japanese united national front movement.

An outstanding leader of the working class is the brain behind revolution who illuminates the correct road to victory of the revolution and energetically organizes and mobilizes the masses of people in revolution and construction. Revolutionary movements in all forms including the united front movement which widely embraces social classes and strata in realizing great national unity can be successfully carried out only under the leadership of an outstanding leader.

With the Fatherland Restoration Society formed with the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song as its chairman, the fervent aim and creed of our people solely to revere the respected and beloved leader as the salvation star of liberation and loyally uphold the leader's leadership, the whole nation acting in concert, were even more solidified and our people came to dynamically launch into the sacred fatherland restoration war under the sagacious leadership of the leader.

The Fatherland Restoration Society, by thoroughly establishing its independent organizational system, made it possible to firmly realize the unified leadership of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song for the anti-Japanese united national front movement.

The Fatherland Restoration Society as a powerful underground revolutionary organization was the overall leadership organ uniting all the anti-Japanese forces as one under conditions that there was no political party of the working class at the time and insuring the unitary leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song for them.

The Fatherland Restoration Society precisely through its own strong organizational line complete with an orderly system went forward to brilliantly embody the revolutionary line and struggle guidelines set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and all the matters planned and intended by the leader. Thus the Fatherland Restoration Society, by firmly insuring the unitary leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song for the anti-Japanese united national front movement, went forward to admirably carry out the task of solidly uniting the whole nation in the anti-Japanese fatherland restoration front.

The founding of the Fatherland Restoration Society also provided organizational and ideological cornerstones capable of making the entire nation achieve unity and solidarity.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"The political line which the Fatherland Restoration Society had proclaimed and executed tied in with the basic national interests of the Korean people. That is why the influencing power which the Fatherland Restoration Society had exerted on the masses of people was great indeed." ("A Collection of Writings of Kim Il-song," Vol 9, p 322)

The success or failure of the struggle to realize national unity depends in large measure on precisely solving principled questions arising in composing all national patriotic forces into an organized force such as a most fair and just political program and unified standards of organizational activity. How the communists and revolutionaries solve such rpincipled questions constitutes a basic question determining whether or not all classes, all strata with interests at stake in the revolution can be united into a single political force.

"The 10-Point Program of Fatherland Restoration Society," "The Founding Proclamation of Fatherland Restoration Society," and its articles of association personally drawn up by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song became the guiding principle that illuminated a wide road to great national unity.

In particular, "The 10-Point Program of Fatherland Restoration Society" which brilliantly emobdied the immortal chuche ideology, comprehensively reflected the earnest aims and aspirations of our nation and as such, was an immortal banner that energetically inspired our nation to the sacred anti-Japanese war, brightly illuminating the road ahead for the anti-imperialist, antifeudalistic democratic revolution.

The program of the Fatherland Restoration Society, because it most precisely reflected the basic demands of the working class and the interests of the masses of people of all strata in the stage of the anti-imperialist antifeudalistic democratic revolution, became a fair and just common program firmly insuring the sovereign rights of the broad anti-Japanese forces from the workers, peasants, the youth and students, intellectuals to conscientious national capitalists and patriotic religious personalities. With the announcement of the 10-point program of the Fatherland Restoration Society the Korean communists and our people, holding aloft banner of the great struggle, the revolutionary banner, came to more dynamically fight against imperialism such as Japanese imperialism and fascism.

And "The Founding Proclamation of Fatherland Restoration Society" containing the fervent patriotic thought and independence spirit of the Korean nation was a great national charter that energetically inspired our people to the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle, and the articles of association enunciating the organization and standards of activity of the Fatherland Restoration Society were an organizational cornerstone that made it possible to unite the whole nation in one common idea and ideology and quickly bring up and strengthen the revolutionary forces, whatever the storm.

The 10-point program and founding proclamation and articles of association of the Fatherland Restoration Society were indeed a great revolutionary program that opened up a wide road to great national unity, a revolutionary banner that made it possible to brilliantly realize the unity of the whole nation under the anti-Japanese banner centered on the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song.

The Fatherland Restoration Society, because of its invincible vitality, quickly expanded and developed on a countrywide, nationwide scale.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"The Fatherland Restoration Society grew and developed into a powerful underground revolutionary organization, into the broadest mass organization that embraced under its umbrella a large force of the anti-Japanese masses within a very short period of time following its founding." ("A Collection of Writings of Kim Il-song," Vol 1, p 169)

After founding the Fatherland Restoration Society the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song went forward to expand and develop on a countrywide scale the awesome united front movement aimed at brilliantly realizing great national unity.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, in accordance with the guidelines of the Nanhut'ou Conference and Tungkang Conference, sent units of the Korean People's Revolutionary Army into the northern border area of our country, dealt powerful military and political blows to the enemy and enhanced the people's revolutionary spirit, on the one hand, and establishing the Paektu Mountain base and acting from it, sagaciously led the way to quickly expand the organizational network of the Fahterland Restoration Society on a countrywide scale. And, dispatching outstanding political operatives to various areas and personally guiding the communists within the country, he led the way to widely expand the organizational network of the Fatherland Restoration Society.

The political operatives dispatched to various areas, loyally upholding the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's united front thought and guidelines and solidly uniting the broad anti-Japanese masses into organizations of the Fatherland Restoration Society, led them to focus their major efforts on the task of aiding the Korean People's Revolutionary Army amid practical struggle.

It was no easy task to conduct such enormous organizational political activities targeted on the masses of all strata with different preparedness levels, with different inclinations in thought and action under conditions that the fascist rule and "punitive" offensives of robber Japanese imperialism were being unprecedentedly intensified.

But the political operatives forever faithful to the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song correctly combined unity and struggle, tightly maintaining the revolutionary mass line and class line, on the one hand, and ably applying legal and illegal activities, went forward to unite the masses in organizations of the Fatherland Restoration Society to suit the specific local conditions, the characteristics by stratum, and their preparedness levels.

The activity launched by the indomitable communist revolutionary fighter Comrqde Kim Chong-suk in forming the organizational network of the Fatherland Restoration Society aimed at realizing great national unity under the anti-Japanese banner was a brilliant mirror of members of the Korean People's Revolutionary Army and political operatives.

Comrade Kim Chong-suk forever loyal to the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song went forward to ably conduct her organizational activity, making the Changpai and Singalp'a areas her underground action bases in defiance of the stringent enemy surveillance and implanting in village people's hearts the leader's united front thought such as the "10-Point Porgram of Fatherland Restoration Society." Thus the indomitable revolutionary fighter Comrade Kim Chong-suk, forming base-level organizations of the Fatherland Restoration Society and anti-Japanese youth league, women's associations, production geurrillas and solidly uniting the broad masses behind them, organized the villages into revolutionary villages and went forward to rapidly widen the revolutionary influence of the Fathelrand Restoration Society in a broad region penetrating deep into the center of the country.

Under the sagacious leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song the Korean National Liberation Union was formed as an organization of the Fatherland Restoration Society inside the country, and the network of base-level organizations of the Fatherland Restoration Society was expanded to everywhere inside the country such as North and South Hamgyong provinces, North and South P'yongan provinces, and Kangwon Province and to a broad region of Manchuria. Thus within a period of no more than a few months after the formation of the Fatherland Restoration Society the country-loving, nation-loving masses of all strata hundreds of thousands strong, uniting under its umbrella, joined the struggle.

The broad masses of people of all strata, seeing the bright dawning of national liberation through the Fatherland Restoration Society movement led by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, courageously launched into the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle, people with money contributing their money, people with food contributing their food, and people with skills and expertise offering their skills and expertise.

Truly the founding of the Fatherland Restoration Society was a great event that provided a turning point for a new turnaround in brilliantly realizing great national unity centered on the respected and beloved leader Comrade KimIl-song and dynamically launching the anti-Japanese national liberation struggle with an all-out mobilization of the nation.

Under the sagacious leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song the Fatherland Restoration Society compiled, in the course of brilliantly realizing great national unity, immortal achievements which have taken their permanent place in our country's national liberation struggle history.

The founding of the Fatherland Restoration Society was the birth of an anti-Japanese united national front organization, the first ever in the Korean people's revolutionary struggle history, and as such, performed a great role in the task to expand and develop the anti-Japanese armed struggle and make organizational and ideological preparations for the founding of the party and opened up the wide road of leading the overall Korean revolution to a great upsurge.

The Fatherland Restoration Society, by making it possible to thoroughly provide a mass base for the anti-Japanese armed struggle and insure the support of the masses of people for the armed struggle in a more organized, systematic manner, made great contributions to making the Korean People's Revolutionary Army grow up and strengthen into an invincible revolutionary armed force.

Base-level organizations of the Fatherland Restoration Society, tempering a large number of patriotic youths in organizational life and practical struggle, dispatched them to the Anti-Japanese Guerrillas and extended positive material and moral support to units of the Korean People's Revolutionary Army defying the stringent enemy surveillance. The Fatherland Restoration Society organizations and members, detecting Japanese imperialist military secrets and enemy moves, swiftly passed on the information and admirably insured the military and political activities of the Korean People's Revolutionary Army. And, by making the revolutionary influence of the anti-Japanese armed struggle exterted in an organized manner among the broad masses of people, they further enhanced the anti-Japanese spirit of the people and dynamically inspired the mass struggle in various forms. Precisely herein lay the source of might of the Korean People's Revolutionary Army, and because of the presence of this might, the victory of the fatherland restoration had been solidly guaranteed.

Again, with the preparatory task for the founding of the party and the anti-Japanese united national front task conducted in close combination with the Fatherland Restoration Society as the base, outstanding sons and daughters of working people such as the workers and peasants were thoroughly prepared as the organizational backbone for the founding of the party, and the unity and solidarity of ideological will of the revolutionary ranks centered on the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song came to be firmly achieved. With the task for great national unity conducted on a nationwide scale by the founding of the Fatherland Restoration Society and its immense role, the mass base for the founding of the party came to be firmly built on a countrywide scale.

The Fatherland Restoration Society left behind great achievments indeed in attaining the historic cause of fatherland liberation and uplifting the Korean revolution to a great upsurge.

This great achievement scored by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song in the united national front movement during the glorious anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle is becoming an infinitely precious revolutionary heritage in the struggle of our people for the independent reunification of the fatherland, putting an end to the tragedy of national division.

Jus as our people, achieving solid unity and solidarity as one under the banner of fatherland restoration, won victory in the fight against the Japanese imperialist aggressors in bygone days, if all the patriotic forces of the North and South today go forward solidly united under the banner of great national unity, they can brilliantly realize the historically long-cherished aspirations to fatherland reunification. Those who love the country and the nation and want the reunification of the fatherland, whoever they may be, must solidly unite transcending differences in ideology and idea, system and religious faith, and crushing the "two-Korea" policy of internal and external splittists, shall more dynamically launch into the sacred struggle for fatherland reunification.

By bringing to life the precious achievements and experiences scored in attaining the historic cause of fatherland restoration solidly united under the anti-Japanese banner and realizing the great unity of the whole nation, our people shall stop at nothing until brilliantly accomplsihing the independent reunification of the fatherland.

BRINGING UP COMMUNIST SOCIAL BEINGS IS THE BASIC DUTY OF PARTY IDEOLOGICAL INDOCTRINATION WORK

Pyongyang KULLOJA in Korean No 5, May 81 pp 15-21

[Article by Yi Ch'an-son]

[Text] At present the entire party members and working people, loyally upholding the magnificent program unfurled by the Sixth Party Congress and brimming with hope and faith, are accelerating the new all-out march, and the whole country is filled to overflowing with revolutionary enthusiasm and militant vigor.

Today when the fire of a great revolutionary upswing dynamically blazes on all fronts of socialist construciton and an epochal turnaround is occurring in the attainment of the historic cause for conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology, the heavy revolutionary task facing our party calls upon party organizations to strengthen ideological indoctrination work more than at any time and bring up all members of society still better as chuche-oritned communist revolutionaries.

Our party, setting forth the revolutionary guidelines for tightly grasping it as the basic duty of party ideological indoctrination work to bring up all members of society as communist social beings to suit the demands of the new stage of the developing revolution, has comprehensively enunciated the principled demands and concrete tasks arising in improving and strengthening ideological work.

In the guidelines of our party for tightly grasping it as the basic duty of ideological work to bring up all members of society as chuche-oriented communist revolutionaries is reflected the rock-hard will to attain the chuche revolutionary cause to the end, hastening the conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology.

All party organizations, by loyally upholding the guidelines of the party and bringing about a new change in party ideological indoctrination work aimed at indoctrinating and remolding all members of society into chuche-oriented communist revolutionaries, must brilliantly attain the historic cause for conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology.

To indoctrinate and bring up people as communist social beings is a basic question which the party of the working class must solve in socialist, communist construction.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"... without remolding all people the communist way it is impossible to win the complete victory of socialism nor is it possible to build the communist society." ("Kim Il-song Selected Works," Vol 2, 2d impression, p 583)

The communist society is a society where the masses of working people will be comprehensively enjoying an independent, creative life in all realms of social life as the genuine master of nature and society, freed from all kinds of constraints.

If we are to build the communist society, we must above all remold all members of society into communist social beings. Only then can we successfully occupy the ideological fortress, the strategic goal of communist construction and correctly occupy the material fortress of communism as well, relying on their revolutionary fervor and creative positiveness.

The success or failure of communist construction hinges, in the final analysis, on how people are indoctrinated and remolded. The task of indoctrinating and remolding people the communist way is the prerequisite, decisive condition for socialist, communist construction.

The masses of working people are the master of society and the basic factor in reshaping and developing society. Unless the masses of working people are revolutionarily indoctrinated and remolded, it is impossible to successfully carry out all the tasks arising in revolution and construction nor is it possible to realize the communist society.

The basics of indoctrinating and bringing up people as communist social beings are remolding their thought the communist way.

Ideological consciousness determines the value of people and governs all their actions. High revolutionary fervor and initiative which people come to display in the revolutionary struggle and construction tasks have their source in the communistic ideological consciousness they possess. The role played by ideological consciousness grows bigger as socialist, communist construction progresses and the ideological consciousness standards of the masses of working people grow higher.

Most important in bringing up people as communist social beings is strengthening indoctrination work aimed at revolutionarily remolding their thought.

Ideological indoctrination constitutes an important means of human remolding to arm people with the communist thought and estalbish a revolutionary ideological viewpoint and mode of thinking, a revolutionary work attitude and work habit for them.

Therefore, the party of the working class, always paying priority attention to ideological indoctrination work, must go forward tightly grasping the task of bringing up communist social beings as the basics of ideological work. Only then is it possible to turn people into genuine communist social beings and energetically step up revolution and construction, highly promoting their revolutionary fervor and creativity.

To strengthen ideological indoctrination work aimed at bringing up communist social beings is a pressing demand of our revolution which has entered a new higher developmental stage today.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"Today our party and people are faced with the crucial task to realize conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology, more energetically stepping up the revolutionary struggle and construction tasks. Converting the whole society to the chuche ideology is the overall task of our revolution." (Booklet "Summing-Up Report on the Work of the Central Committee to the Sixth Congress of the Korean Workers Party," p 30)

Converting the whole society to the chuche ideology is our party's militant program and our revolution's overall task.

Converting the whole society to the chuche ideology is the revolutionary struggle on a new higher stage to attain the chuche revolutionary cause which was early on charted and has been ceaselessly moving forward under the banner of the chuche ideology.

This is a task to move our revolution forward with the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's revolutionary thought, the chuche ideology held as the unitary guiding principle and to build the communist society based on the chuche ideology.

What constitutes the most important part of the content of conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology is turning all members of society into genuine chuche-oriented communist revolutionaries. Apart from the task of remolding people the communist way the reshaping of society is unthinkable.

The society where every part of it has been dyed one color with the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's revolutionary thought, the accomplished communist society, is a society where all of its members will have been remolded into chuche-oriented communist revolutionaries, a society maintained, consolidated, and developed precisely by such social beings.

Consequently, in order to convert the whole society to the chuche ideology, it is imperative above all to admirably carry out the task of bringing up all members of society as genuine chuche-oriented communist revolutionaries.

The task of ideological indoctrination work on the new higher stage of converting the whole society to the chuche ideology is turning all members of society into fervent chuche-oriented communist revolutionaries who hold faithfulness to the party and the leader as their first and foremost life with the chuche ideology as their firm creed.

The chuche-oriented revolutionaries are genuine revolutionaries personifying on the highest standard all the features and qualifications the communists must possess. Today our party's ideological indoctrination work must be conducted with primary emphasis on uplifting the ideomental features of all party members and working people onto such a high plane.

Turning all members of society into chuche-oriented communist revolutionaries constitutes not only the basic content of realizing in the human remolding area the intrinsic demands of building the communist society which will have been dyed one color with the chuche ideology but also the basic key which makes it possible to successfully carry out the overall task of converting the whole society to the chuche ideology.

The task of reshaping all aspects of social life such as the economic and cultural aspects to suit the demands of the chuche ideology, too, can be admirably carried out only when, instead of launching it as a simple economic job performance measure, the task of ideological indoctrination is energetically launched, making people thoroughly revolutionized and communized, and their revolutionary fervor and creativity high inspired.

Therefore, to turn all members of society into chuche-oriented communist revolutionaries, remolding their ideological consciousness, constitutes the question that must be solved with priority to convert the whole society to the chuche ideology, and the basic duty of party ideological work that must thoroughly serve the cause for conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology.

To strengthen party ideological work aimed at bringing up all party members and working people as communist social beings more immediately constitutes an important guarantee for successfully realizing the magnificent programmatic task of socialist construction set forth by the Sixth Party Congress.

The magnificent program set forth by the Sixth Party Congress is a milestone in great strides, a splendid blueprint for achieving a decisive advance in the attainment of the chuche cause by bringing about a great revolutionary upswing in socialist construction.

In order to successfully occupy the enormous prospective targets of socialist construction, the whole party and the entire people must vigorously launch into an intense struggle and bring about a ceaseless innovation and upsurge in all areas of economic and cultural construction.

This difficult and enormous task can be admirably carried out only when the task of indoctrinating and remolding party members and working people is energetically stepped up and their role on all fronts of socialist construction is ceaselessly enhanced.

Thus strengthening ideological indoctrination work aimed at remolding people the communist way is a basic demand for successfully carrying out socialist, communist construciton, and a firm guarantee for energetically hastening the conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology.

Today in our country the question of bringing up people as communist revolutionaries is being brilliantly solved under the sagacious leadership of our party, and a basic turnaround is occurring in the ideomental features, work habit, and life-style of party members and working people.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"That today the whole society is filled to overflowing with boundless loyalty to the party and the revolution and revolutionary enthusiasm and that miracles astounding the people of the world are happening one after another in revolution and construction is the result of ideological work energetically launched by our party to suit the demands of the developing realities." (Ibid., p 109)

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, genius of the revolution, the great ideotheoretician, by setting forth a unique human remolding theory starting from the basic principle of the chuche ideology that man is the master of everything and resolves everything and by brilliantly embodying it throughout the period of leading revolution and construction, has compiled immortal achievements and precious experiences in the task of bringing up chuche-oriented communist social beings.

The human remolding theory set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song such as the theory for revolutionization, working classization of the whole society is a consummate human remolding theory comprehensively and flawlessly enunciating all questions from the intrinsic nature and inevitability of human remolding to the principle of bringing up communist social beings and the way of the realization, and a powerful theoretical and practical weapon whose correctness and invincible vitality have been tested and proved to the hilt amid the practical struggle of our revolution.

By going forward tightly grasping the human remolding theory enunciated by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song our party has been able to successfully carry out the task of indoctrinating and remolding people the communist way without any tilting and win a prideful victory in the task of remolding man as well as nature and society in accordance with the demands of the chuche ideology.

Our party has further developed and enriched the great leader's human remolding theory to suit the demands of the historic cause for conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology and is sagaciously organizing and leading the awesome struggle aimed at bringing up all members of society as chuche-oriented communist revolutionaries.

Our party, brilliantly embodying the philosophical principle of the chuche ideology elucidated by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, has put forward the ideological proposition that the basics of revolution and construction are people's thought, that everything is resolved by people's thought, and enunciating the ideomental features and qualifications which chuche-oriented communist revolutionaries forever loyal to the great leader must possess, comprehensively set the direction and way of preparing the entire people as chuche-oriented communist revolutionaries.

This unique thought and theory set forth by our party is the great leader's human remolding thought further deepened and developed to suit the new demands of our developing revolution, and as such, constitutes immortal contributions that have brilliantly solved all questions arising in the task of bringing up genuine chuche-oriented communist revolutionaries.

Our party, starting from that ideological remolding is essentially thought remolding, has sought in party ideological indoctrination work an important key to bringing up party members and working people as communist social beings and ceaselessly strengthened ideological indoctrination among party members and working people to suit the deepening and developing revolution.

By the unique human remolding thought of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the sagacious leadership of the party a great advance has been registered in the task of indoctrinating and remolding people the communist way.

As a result of party ideological work energetically launched for human remolding, a basic turnaround has occurred in the ideomental features, work habit, and life-style of our people.

All party members and working people have thoroughly armed themselves with our party's revolutionary thought, the chuche ideology, and the whole society has come to brim with the chuche ideology. This is the greatest change that has occurred in the ideomental features of our people and constitutes the decisive factor in bringing about a great leap forward in the revolutionary struggle and construction tasks.

It is becoming our people's firm article of faith in life that apart from our party's revolutionary thought, the chuche ideology, they can neither live nor fight revolution, and party members and working people hold only the chuche ideology as their immutable principle for all thinking and practice, work and life.

It is the most precious achievement scored through party ideological work that the trust of the masses of people in our party has grown extracrdinarily high and the unity and solidarity of the party and the masses of people strengthened further.

The purest and cleanest of loyalty to the party and the leader--this is the loftiest ideological feeling deeply engraved in all of our people's hearts.

Today our party members and working people are being reliably prepared as the loftiest communist revolutionaries possessing fiery loyalty to believe and follow none but the party and the leader and uphold them to the end without wavering in the least, whatever the storm and trial.

Our people, who have walked together with the party the arduous yet rewarding road of revolution and construction, are infinitely trusting and following our party with an indeflectible creed solidified through their living experience, completely entrusting all their destiny to the party. All of our party members and working people, absolutely supporting and protecting the lines and policies of the party, are resolutely struggling for the realization, devoting their all. Today our people are filled to overflowing with the fiery resolve to protect and defend the party and the leader politicoideologically and at the risk of their lives, whatever the storm and trial and share destiny with the party to the end.

The pure loyalty of our people to the party and the leader, and the unity and solidarity of the masses of people solidly united around the party and the leader in one mind, in one will, have become the most solid with the greatest vitality that nothing can break.

A basic turnaround has occurred in the work habit and life-style of party members and working people, too.

All party members and working people under the communist slogan "one for all, all for one" are faithfully working and struggling for the sake of the fatherland and the people, for the sake of society and collective.

Our working people, whatever they may be doing at whatever post of socialist construction and whether or not anyone looks, are steadfastly working, devoting their all, not for their personal honor or reward but solely for the sake of the party and the leader, for the sake of the fatherland and the people, and are displaying their revolutionary fervor and creative positiveness to the hilt in the struggle to carry through the policies of the party.

Today our working people are revolutionarily working and frugally living as befits the people of a country fighting revolution and of the era of struggle, and one and all with a firm faith in the victory of the revolution are dynamically moving forward filled to overflowing with revolutionary enthusiasm and vigor.

Thus our people's ideomental features are reaching a very lofty plane, and our party and the revolutionary ranks are being consolidated airtight into a body of unity of ideological will that no force can break.

The basic changes that have occurred in people's ideomental features, work habits, and life-style are the precious achievements and prideful fruits brought by the sagacious leadership and energetic struggle of our party which, giving a firm priority to ideological work over all other tasks, has put great efforts into it.

Today our party calls upon party organizations and functionaries to launch more in depth, more substantively ideological indoctrination work for bringing up party members and working people as genuine chuche-oriented communist social beings to suit the demands of the realities wherein the historic cause for conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology is deepening and developing onto a new higher level.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"To thoroughly revolutionize, working classize party members and working people, firmly establishing the unitary ideology system of the party among them; to energetically step up conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology, positively arousing the revolutionary fervor of the masses--this is the basic task the department of party ideological work must tightly grasp today." (Ibid., p 117)

Most important in indoctrinating and remolding party members and working people into chuche-oriented communist revolutionaries is thoroughly carrying through our party's ideological indoctrination guidelines for energetically pushing ahead with revolutionary indocgrination and communism indoctrination all togther with primary emphasis on unitary ideology indoctrination and faithfulness indoctrination.

If people are to be turned into chuche-oriented communist revolutionaries, it is imperative to give prominence to unitary ideology indoctrination and faithfulness indoctrination as the first and foremost task and subordinate all parts of the content of ideological indoctrination work to it.

Party organizations must ceaselessly deepen ideological indoctrination work so that party members and working people may hold the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's revolutionary thought as their firm world view.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's revolutionary thought is a system of thought, theory, and method of chuche, and indoctrination work to arm them with the respected and beloved leader's revolutionary thought is aimed at making them deeply experience and understand the chuche ideology, the chuche revolutionary theory, and the chuche leadership method.

Party organizations, by conducting ideological indoctrination work in depth in terms of principle for arming them with the revolutionary thought of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the unitary ideology of our party, must make functionaries and working people firmly hold the chuche viewpoint and stand of solving all questions arising in revolution and construction to suit the demands of our revolution and the specific conditions of our country. At the same time, party organizations must make them solidly arm themselves with the chuche revolutionary theory, especially the theory regarding socialist and communist construction, thoroughly embody the lines and guidelines of the party, and work in accordance with the great-leader-style work method.

The classical works of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and documents of the party are an immortal library, text of the revolution where the revolutionary thought of the leader and the intent of the party are synthesized. All party organizations must make party members and working people systematically study "A Collection of Writings of Kim Il-song" and "Kim Il-song Selected Works," and more immediately, study in depth the great leader's report to the Sixth Party Congress. In particular, party organizations must make them deeply study and master the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's works and party documents relating to the work of their branches and absorb the great leader's revolutionary thought as precious food for their ideological training, as an energetic weapon in their revolutionary practice. In this way they must strive to make all party members and working people thoroughly prepare themselves politicoideologically and carry out their assigned revolutionary duties still better.

If party members and working people are to be brought up as chuche-oriented communist revolutionaries, it is imperative to strengthen indoctrination in faithfulness to the party and the leader among them.

The question of faithfulness to the party and the leader is a basic one influencing the destiny of the working class in its revolutionary struggle, and conducting faithfulness indoctrination is an important duty which must be tightly grasped at all times in ideological work of the party of the working class.

Party organizations, by further strengthening faithfulness indoctrination to suit the demands of conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology, must go forward to consolidate the party organizatinally and ideologically and more solidly organize the entire party and the whole society as the ranks of loyalty breathing and moving in accordance with the ideological will of the party and the leader.

Important in strengthening indoctrination in faithfulness to the party and the leader is making them engrave faithfulness in their hearts as a revolutionary creed.

Party organizations must first of all make party members and working people recognize the truth about the decisive role of the leader in the revolutionary struggle of the working class in terms of principle and in combination with historical experience, and deeply experience and understand especially the greatness of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song who has compiled immortal achievements before history and mankind. At the same time, they must conduct in depth indoctrination in the benevolence of the great leader who, personally shouldering the destiny of the fatherland and the nation, has been devoting his whole life to bestowing this today's happiness, this glory on our people.

In this way they must make all party members and working people, engraving in their hearts faithfulness to the party and the leader as their firm revolutionary creed, as their revolutionary ethics, completely entrust their destiny to the party and the leader and unswervingly uphold the great leader and our party, whatever the adversity.

Chuche-oriented communist revolutionaries must fight to attain to the end the revolutionary cause charted by the leader, and to this end, must arm themselves with the revolutionary tradition established by the leader and carry forward and develop it generation after generation.

Today when members of the younger generation who have not experienced trials of the revolution are entering the stage as the basic force of our revolution, all party organizations and functionaries must keep it in mind and pay keen attention to it that it arises as an even more pressing and important question to strengthen revolutionary tradition indoctrination among working people and the younger generation.

Party organizations and functionaries, preserving the purity of the revolutionary tradition and conducting revolutionary tradition indoctrination in breadth, must strive to make party members and working people loyally uphold the precious achievements of the great leader and of our party generation after generation and resolutely fight to the end to carry forward and attain the chuche revolutionary cause.

Again, they must conduct revolutionary tradition indoctrination in close combination with practical activity and substantively utilize materials for revolutionary tradition indoctrination and works of literary art with the revolutionary tradition as the theme and at the same time, commendably conduct indoctrination through revolutionary sites. In this way they must make all party members and working people ceaselessly add luster to our party's glorious revolutionary tradition and go forward to fight stoutly in the anti-Japanese revolutionary spirit.

In order to bring up party members and working people as genuine communists thoroguhly armed with the class consciousness of the working class, it is imperative to strengthen revolutionary indoctrination, communism indoctrination among them.

Party organizations, by strengthening indoctrination in socialist patriotism, indoctrination in the spirit of loving work, and indoctrination in communist morality and law-abiding indoctrination while putting primary emphasis on class indoctrination, must energetically push ahead with the task of bringing up party members and working people as genuine communist social beings.

Ceaselessly improving the form and method of party ideological work is an indispensable requirement of our revolution which has entrered a new developmental stage and of the developing party work, and one of the important conditions for bringing about a turnaround in ideological indoctrination work to bring up communist social beings.

In order to score success in ideological work, it is imperative that not only the content but also the method be good.

Party organizations must organize and operate a network of indoctrination, lecture, and agitation to suit the specific conditions; in organizing a study, they must heuristically teach party members and working people commendably in terms of principle and make them clearly understand everything under study and substantively learn, briskly conducting discussions and debates; in delivering a lecture on any subject, it must be done in such a way as to strike deep chords among them.

Again, by making the content of ideological indoctrination suitable to the standards of the targets and conducting indoctrination in diverse forms and by diverse methods by effectively utilizing various means and methods of propaganda and agitation, they must make it acceptable and receptible in terms of principle so that working people may experience and absorb it as their own thought and creed.

In this way, completely uprooting formalism from party ideological work, they must make our ideological indoctrination work become revolutionary yet fresh, popular yet substantive living indoctrination that genuinely serves in bringing up communist social beings.

If a new turnaround is to be brought about in ideological indoctrination work to indoctrinate and bring up party members and working people as chuche-oritented communist social beings, it is imperative to enhance the role and sense of responsibility of party organizations.

Party organizations must go forward to ceaselessly deepen their guidance for ideological work by means of discussing important questions arising in ideological work collectively at party committees, working out correct measures, regularly summing up the progress in the execution, and making rearrangements.

At the same time, it is imperative to correctly give ideological work assignments to departments within the party and make them launch interdepartmental joint operations and cooperative operations and to thoroughly plan and coordinate the task of positively bringing cadres and party members into ideological work.

Party organizations, also by energetically pushing ahead with the movement to capture the red flag of three revolutions and the movement to learn from the examples of unsung heroes initiated and still being guided by our party, with a tight grip on them, must make all working people grow up into resolute communist revolutionaries who know to resolutely protect and carry through the policies of the party through their practical activity and fight, devoting their all, for the sake of the party and the leader, for the sake of the fatherland and the people.

Today the department of party ideological work is faced with a truly responsible and heavy duty to bring up party members and working people as chuche-oriented communist revolutionaries and hasten the conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology.

All party organizations and functioanries, by upholding with all their hearts the intent and guidelines of our party and bringing about a new turnaround in ideological work, shall more energetically step up the task of bringing up communist social beings to suit the demands of the cause for conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology.

ECONOMIC AGITATION IS ENERGETIC POLITICAL WORK INSPIRING THE MASSES TO CARRY THROUGH THE ECONOMIC POLICY OF THE PARTY

Pyongyang KULLOJA in Korean No 5, May 81 pp 22-28

[Article by Hwang Pyong-ch'ol]

[Text] Today the entire party members and working people are energetically launching an all-out march movement along the march route enunciated by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song at the Sixth Party Congress for occupying the magnificent prospective targets of socialist construction. Amid this majestic march people's mental and moral features are changing beyond recognition, and ceaseless miracles and innovations are happening on all fronts of socialist construction.

The developing realities and the enormous revolutionary tasks facing us call for launching political work among the masses more energetically than at any time and inspire their revolutionary fervor more highly. Important in strenghening mass political work and inspiring party members and working people to struggle for realization of the economic policy of the party is energetically launching economic agitation.

Energetically launching economic agitation is the invariable guidelines our party tightly maintains in mass political work.

By energetically launching political work with a tight grip on the powerful weapon of economic agitation whose superiority and vitality have been displayed to the hilt through practice, we must go forward to bring about ceaseless miracles and innovations on all fronts of socialist construction.

Economic agitation is a powerful method of political work energetically inspiring the masses to carry through the economic policy of the party and one of the important forms of ideological work of our party.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"An important objective of party ideological work lies in arousing the revolutionary fervor and creative positivity of party members and working people and commendably carrying out socialist construction." (Booklet "Summing-Up Report on the Work of the Central Committee to the Sixth Congress of the Korean Workers Party," p 108) to bring about a ceaseless upsurge in socialist economic construction, inspiring the revolutionary fervor of the masses is one of the important duties of party ideological work.

Economic construction is an important revolutionary task arising before the party of the working class which has come to power, and party ideological work must positively serve in successfully insuring socailist economic construction. Apart from ideological work the successful prosecution of economic construction is unthinkable, and the success of ideological work must necessarily be manifested in the success of economic construction.

Important in energetically inspiring people to socialist eocnomic construction is briskly launching economic agitation along with propaganda of the economic policy of the party.

If propaganda of the economic policy of the party is a form of ideological work making the line and policies of the party explained in terms of principle and deeply grasped among party members and working people, economic agitation is a form of ideological work enhancing the spirit of the masses and directly inspiring them to carry through the economic policy of the party.

What makes economic agitation powerful political work inspiring the masses to carry through the economic policy of the party lies above all in that it highly inspires people's revolutionary fervor with a vivid content striking deep chords among them.

The revolutionary fervor of the masses is a source of strength which makes party members and working people display an infinite sacrifical spirit and mass heroism in carrying through the economic policy of the party, and the decisive factor which makes a ceaseless upsurge brought about in socialist economic construction. How highly the revolutionary fervor of the masses is promoted has in large measure to do with the content of political work.

Only if the direction and goal of political work are clearly set and its content is good, is it possible to launch the task with goal-consciousness, and striking deep chords among them, energetically inspire them to carry through the policy of the party.

Party members and working people come to display high revolutionary fervor when they deeply experience, understand and absorb the intent of the party with all their hearts.

Economic agitation, by focusing the firepower of political work on solving precisely those pressing questions the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song wishes and the party intends to solve, operates to make the masses dynamically launch into the struggle for the solution.

Again, economic agitation, by timely generalizing the prideful achievements and priceless experiences scored in carrying through the economic policy of the party and the positive examples being set among the masses, energetically encourages and inspires party members and working people to ceaseless struggle and victory.

Thus economic agitation, by making the hearts of party members and working people always burn with the infinite enthusiasm of loyalty to the party and the leader, constitutes energetic political work which makes them keep performing brilliant feats in carrying through the economic policy of the party.

What makes economic agitation energetic political work inspiring the masses to carry through the economic policy of the party also lies in that it inspires people in diverse forms to ceaseless struggle and innovation.

Political work is a creative task which is conducted in different environments under different conditions for people as the target who have different preparedness levels and different psychological inclinations. Therefore, political work absolutely cannot be conducted within any fixed formalized framework, and it can score success only if launched in various forms to suit the characteristics of the target.

The unprecedentedly awesome and enormous socialist economic construction struggle our people are launching today calls for conducting economic agitation in various forms with a touch of freshness.

Oral agitation, visual agitation, and artistic agitation are superior forms of agitation possessing strong militancy, appeal, and great influencing power.

Oral agitation strikes deep chords among people with earnest appeal; visual agitation gives people intuitive stimulation and impact; and artistic agitation tugs at people's heartstrings through artistic imageries.

Because economic agitation, with comprehensive utilization of such forms of agitation, is conducted in diverse ways to suit existing situation and opportunity, characteristics and specific condtiions of the target, it operates to optimally enhance the effect of political work and highly inspire the revolutionary fervor of the masses.

Thus economic agitation, by making political work energetically launched among the masses with comprehensive utilization of various means and forms of agitation, makes revolutionary optimism and militant vigor prevail on every battlefield of socialist construction and miracles and innovations happen everywhere.

What makes economic agitation energetic political work inspiring the masses to carry through the economic policy of the party also lies in that, acting from production sites as the base and using aggressive, positive methods, it energetically encourages and inspires the masses to carry out the economic task.

The objective of political work lies in satisfactorily carrying out the economic task at hand and commendably conducting socialist economic construction. Political work must of necessity be closely linked to economic work, and the result of political work must be manifested in the concrete success of economic construction.

How the result of political work will be manifested in the success of economic construction depends in large measure on the method by which political work is launched. Even though the content and form of political work are correctly defined and the strength and means capable of the realization are provided, if the method is not satisfactory, political work cannot serve substantively in insuring the successful prosecution of economic construction.

Economic agitation makes agitation work launched lightning-quick by the method of annihilation battle, mobilizing all the forces and means of propaganda and agitation and aiming aggressive agitation offensives at the major economic targets.

At the same time, because economic agitation is launched from production sites as the base militantly with mobility in direct linkage to production activities, it inspires the revolutionary vigor of the producer masses and makes a produtive upsurge generated everywhere.

Truly, economic agitation is an energetic method of political work dramatically moving the masses and extraordinarily enhancing their revolutionary fervor, and a powerful means of mass mobilization positively setting the masses in motion for carrying out economic work work and proving its worth greatly in production.

Our party's economic agitation guidelines are revolutionary and scientific guidelines thoroughly embodying the demands of the ideological theory of chuche.

In the revolutionary struggle and construction tasks the basics are people's thought and everything is resolved by thought. Therefore, in order to move people, it is imperative to set their thought in motion. Only if their thought is set in motion, can people maximally display all their mental and physical potentials and successfully solve any question, however difficult and complex.

Making it possible to maximally step up socialist economic construction, enhancing the role of the masses of people, the master of revolution and construction, by means of setting their thought in motion and mobilizing their inexhaustible strength and creativity to the hilt is precisely where the invincible might and vitality of our party's economic agitation guidelines are.

Our party's economic agitation guidelines are also a superior method of political work comprehensively embodying the demands of speed battle.

Our party's economic agitation guidelines, by launching political work lightning-quick by the method of annihilation battle to suit the demands of speed battle, very highly inspire the revolutionary fervor and creativity of the masses and make it possible to score the highest success in socialist economic construction. Precisely herein also lie the might and superiority of our party's economic agitation guidelines.

Our party's economic agitation guidelines are unique guidelines which have brilliantly carried forward and developed, to suit the realistic demands of socialist construction, the theory and experience of mass political work personally established by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, embodying the immortal chuche ideology early on during the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle, has created the precious tradition of mass political work.

Our party, brilliantly embodying, carrying forward and developing the achievements and experiences scored in mass political work during the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle, to suit the developing realities wherein the cause for conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology has come to the fore, has laid down afresh the economic agitation guidelines.

Truly, our party's economic agitation guidelines are chuche-oriented, unique guidelines which make it possible to bring about a ceaseless upsurge in socialist economic construction, energetically inspiring the revolutionary fervor and creative positiveness of the masses to carry through the economic policy of the party.

The economic agitation guidelines enunciated by the glorious Party Center constitute an energetic weapon which our party must continue to tightly grasp in the struggle for socailist, communist construction.

Our party, setting forth the guidelines for vigorously launching economic agitation in all areas of socialist construction, has energetically organized and led the task for the embodiment.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"Party organizations, by briskly launching party economic policy propaganda and economic agitation, have energetically inspired party members and working people to realize the party economic policy, and positively served to insure the victory of the great socialist construction battle." (Ibid., p 108)

Energetically launching economic agitation is the guidelines our party invariably maintains in inspiring the masses to carry through the economic policy of the party.

Our party, graphically enunciating principled questions arising in launching economic agitation to suit the realistic demands of our developing revolution, has led the way to launch economic agitation aggressively on all battlefields of socialist construction.

Our party has paid keen attention above all to correctly setting the target in launching economic agitation and focusing all agitation forces on it.

Correctly setting the target of economic agitation and focusing agitation forces on it is an important demand for insuring the success of mass political work. Only by correctly setting the target of economic agitation and focusing agitation forces on it is it possible to launch mass political work with goal-consciousness and bring about a revolutionary upsurge in economic construction as intended by the party.

Our party, by leading all forces to energetically launch economic agitation work with primary efforts put into solving the questions the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song was concerned with, has energetically inspired party members and working people to struggle for the realization of the great leader's far-sighted plan.

Our party, providing strong agitatin forces and means and establishing an agitation work system, also has had measures taken for all branches, all units of socialist construction to briskly launch economic agitation work.

Strong agitation forces and an orderly agitation work system are one of the important questions in guaranteeing the success of economic agitation.

Only by correctly composing the agitation forces and establishing a positive agitation work system is it possible to mount economic agitation with mobility without being constrained by place and time and energetically organize and mobilize the masses in carrying through the economic policy of the party.

Our party, forming artistic propaganda teams in the capital and provinces and organizing mobile artistic agitation teams at large factories and enterprises, has made them regularly conduct their activity, and amply provided the necessary material and technical means for economic agitation.

At the same time, laying down the slogan "let the whole party be propagandists, agitators" our party has led all functionaries to positively launch economic agitation, going in deep among the producer masses as did the commanding personnel of the Anti-Japanese Guerrillas.

Thus has come to be dynamically launched economic agitation aimed at inspiring all party members and working people to struggle for the realization of the teachings of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the embodiment, the economic policy of the party.

To lead the way to energetically launch economic agitation by the method of setting an example at a unit and generalizing it is an important part of the content of the leadership of our party which shows its sagacity.

Our party, mobilizing a large force and means of agitation and channeling intensive agitation offensives in various forms and by various methods at the Sungni Automotive Complex and Kumsong Tractor Plant, has set brilliant examples of economic agitation. In the process, a vivid model has been created for inspiring the masses to carry through the economic policy of the party and priceless experiences gained.

With the nationwide generalization of the experiences gained at the Sungni Automotive Complex and Kumsong Tractor Plant under the sagacious leadership of the party, economic agitation has come to be launched energetically everywhere in the country and a ceaseless revolutionary upsurge generated in production and construction.

Under the sagacious leadership of our party the might and invincible vitality of economic agitation have been clearly proved in the practical struggle for socialist economic construction.

As a result of economic agitation energetically launched on all fronts of socialist construction under the leadership of our party, the revolutionary fervor of the masses of people has been displayed very highly and a ceaseless upsurge has come to be generated in production and construction.

The might and vitality of economic agitation were displayed to the hilt in the "70-day battle" of 1974 to fulfill the Six-Year Plan ahead of schedule, in the "100-day battle" of 1975 to celebrate the 30th anniversary of the founding of the party as the festival of a victor, in the "100-day battle" of last year to greet the Sixth Party Congress with high political fervor and brilliant labor achievements.

With economic agitation energetically launched on all fronts of socialist construction, the revolutionary fervor of the masses has been enhanced further and a high developmental speed has been registered, and in the process, astounding miracles have happened one after another that enormous economic construction tasks which would normally require several years, several score years, have been carried out in a mere few days, in a mere few years.

Again, through economic agitation party ideological work has come to be launched spiritedly with a touch of freshness in manner of the Anti-Japanese Guerrillas, freed from its old framework.

With the functionaries directly going into production sites and energetically launching economic agitation, deeply aware of their mission and duty as the indoctrinator, organizer, and mobilizer of the masses, the teachings of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the intent of the party have been been driven home to the broad masses, and all working people have come to breathe in unison with the party and positively launch into carrying through the economic policy of the party. Thus today our people are maintaining continuing innovation, continuing forward movement always filled to overflowing with revolutionary enthusiasm and vigor as befits the people of a country fighting revolution, of the era of struggle.

Experience shows that economic agitation is energetic political work inspiring the masses to carry through the economic policy of the party and that a revolutionary upsurge is generated without exception at units where economic agitation is launched lightning-quick.

Today's realities wherein a majestic battle is being energetically mounted to carry through the decisions of the Sixth Party Congress call more than at any time for more energetically launching the kind of economic agitation that tugs at the heartstrings of the masses.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"Party organizations, launching with mobility agitation work at socialist construction sites, at all revolutionary outposts, must positively arouse the revolutionary fervor of party members and working people and energetically inspire them to creation and innovation." (Ibid., p 117)

Party organizations, energetically launching economic agitation, must vigorously inspire party members and working people to mass heroism and collective innovation, make new upsurges and innovations happen one after another everywhere and the whole country filled to overflowing with revolutionary enthusiasm and militant vigor.

Most important in energetically launching economic agitation is focusing the firepower of agitation on solving those questions which the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song wishes and the party intends to solve.

The questions which the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song wishes and the party intends to solve in the economic construction area scientifically reflect the overall national economic situation and constitute the central key to energetically uplifting overall economic construction. Only by resolving the question of this important key on time is it possible to satisfactorily solve other questions of economic work as well.

Party organizations, by timely seizing upon the questions planned by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and intended by the party for a solution and focusing the firepower of economic agitation on them, must score an even bigger victory and success in socialist construction.

Solving the questions planned by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and intended by the party is the revolutionary duty of the chuche-oriented communists forever faithful to the party and the leader.

Apart from faithfulness to the party and the leader the success and victory of the struggle for the realization of the economic policy of the party is unthinkable.

Faithfulness to the party and the leader must be manifested not in words but in the practical struggle to carry through the economic policy of the party. It may be said that only faithfulness expressed in the practical struggle is the genuine faithfulness, faithfulness engraved in the heart as a creed. Only people who have engraved faithfulness to the party and the leader in their hearts as a creed can display high revolutionary fervor initiative to the hilt in carrying through the economic policy of the party. Therefore, economic agitation, which is one of the important forms of party ideological work, must of necessity be conducted with extraordinary efforts put into solving the questions which the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song intends and wishes to solve, in such a way as to make faithfulness displayed to the hilt in the course of carrying through the line and policies of the party.

To conduct political work in such a way as to make all functionaries and working people highly display the revolutionary spirit of self-reliance and fortitude is also one of the important demands arising in energetically launching economic agitation.

Today we are faced with the difficult task to occupy the 10 major prospective targets of socialist economic construction in the 1980's envisioning an unprecedentedly enormous production scope and a high rate of speed, with our strength, with our technology, and with our country's resources. The more enormous task and the more difficult struggle face us, the more highly party members and working people must display the revolutionary spirit of self-reliance and fortitude in economic construction. Party organizations and functionaries must energetically channel economic agitation, paying deserved attention to making all party members and working people maximally seek out and mobilize inner reserves and possibilities for production and construction highly displaying the revolutionary spirit of self-reliance and fortitude and break through bottlenecks and barriers with their own strength.

Also important in energetically launching economic agitation in the present period is substantively launching agitation work among the youth and making them take the lead in carrying through the economic policy of the party.

The youth are the main force of our revolution and the shock brigade of socialist construction.

Inexhaustible is the strength of the youth sensitive to the new, progressive, full of vigor and enthusiasm. Once the enthusiasm of the vigorous and courageous youth is aroused, they can get done at a stroke any revolutionary work, however difficult and enormous. The success of socialist economic construction depends in large measure on how the youth are organized and mobilized.

Party organizations and functionaries, strengthening economic agitation among the youth, the main force of socialist construction, must energetically encourage and inspire them to take the lead in the struggle for the realization of the economic policy of the party, highly display mass heroism jumping into difficult and backbreaking sectors full of youthful vigor and enthusiasm and bring about colelctive innovations.

Important in energetically launching economic agitation is correctly utilizing various means and forms of agitation.

Only by channeling economic agitation by diverse methods in coorect combination with various means and forms of agitation is it possible to make every battlefield of socialist construction blaze with the enthusiasm of loyalty and successfully carry through the economic policy of the party.

Widely utilizing diverse forms of agitation such as oral agitation, visual agitation and artistic agitation, we must mount oral agitation in a moving manner when agitation speeches or explanatory talks are necessary, and launch visual agitation in an impressive manner with slogans or battle bulletins when there arises the necessity for inspiring a production desire.

It is particularly effective to widely utilize artistic agitation in launching economic agitation in a diverse manner. Artistic agitation is a powerful form of agitation which makes every battlefield of socialist construction filled to overflowing with revolutionary optimism and militant vigor.

Energetically channeling artistic agitation where the political and artistic characters are commendably combined and mobility and popularity are correctly insured, we must vigorously inspire the masses to carry through the conomic policy of the party.

Essentially, agitation has to be militant, appealing, mobile, and thus does not need formality or window dressing. The simper the form of economic agitation easy to mount with mobility without restraints on place, time, and conditions, the better.

In order to energetically launch economic agitation, it is imperative to do away with the old framework of formalism and conduct it in manner of the Anti-Japanese Guerrillas.

The Anti-Japanese Guerrillas method calls for launching mass political work without standing on formality or ceremony to suit the characteristics of the target and the specific environment.

All functionaries and agitators, going in among the masses in manner of the Anti-Japanese Guerrillas, must aggressively launch economic agitation to suit the specific conditions of the target.

To give prominence to positive examples and make people emulate them is a superior ideological indoctrination method and at the same time a powerful agitation method.

Only by widely propagandizing positive examples societywide through economic agitation is it possible to encourage and inspire all people movingly to live and struggle, emulating the examples.

To widely propagandize the lofty mental world and struggle spirit of unsung heroes in economic agitation, to timely seek out and generalize the positive examples beint set in their branches, at their units, is an important task to make party members and working people highly display their revolutionary fervor and creative positiveness.

Party organizations and functionaries, by energetically launching economic agitation aimed at giving prominence to positive examples and having them emulated, must make all people dynamically launch into carrying through the economic policy of the party following the examples, and in this rewarding struggle, must make still more new heroes emerge and the whole collective become innovators.

It is an important demand for successfully carrying through the economic policy of the party that cadres, going in among the masses and setting personal examples, should widely launch economic agitation.

The cadres are indoctrinators of the masses, and political work is the duty of the cadres. The cadres must always take the lead in propaganda and agitation work to indoctrinate and mobilize the masses, and set their personal examples in all tasks.

Personal examples of the cadres carry an influencing power and appealing force stronger than hundreds of words in indoctrinating and leading the masses. Personal examples are none other than an energetic agitation.

All functionaries, strapping on knapsacks and jumping into the seething battlefields as did the commanding officers of the Anto-Japanese Guerrillas, must set their practical example of scoring a breakthrough in the forefront of difficult and backbreaking tasks and energetically launch political propaganda and economic agitation that strike deep chords among the masses.

If the might of economic agitation is to be highly displayed, it must be underpinned by thorough economic organizational work. No matter how high the revolutionary fervor and creative positiveness of the masses are, unless organizational work is planned and coordinated, a great success cannot be scored in the prosecution of economic work. Only by planning and coordinating economic organizational work is it possible to make the revolutionary fervor and creative positiveness of the masses turned into a material force and manifested in a practical production success.

The economic agitation guidelines set forth by our Party Center are a firm principle to which all party organizations and functionaries must adhere invariably in the practical struggle for socialist economic construciton, and a powerful weapon energetically inspiring party members and working people to carry through the economic policty of the party.

All party organizations and functionaries, by more positively launching economic agitation whose superiority, correctness, and invincible vitality have already been positively proved through practice, shall make the whole country filled to overflowing with fiery loyalty to the party and the leader, with the militant vigor of achieving ceaseless forward movement and innovation, and more dynamically step up the struggle to occupy the magnificent 10 major prospective targets of socialist economic construction ahead of schedule.

ENHANCING POLITICAL INSIGHTS AND CREATIVE SKILLS IS A PRIORITY DEMAND FOR THE PRODUCTION OF REVOLUTIONARY LITERARY ART WORKS

Pyongyang KULLOJA in Korean No 5, May 81, May 81 pp 29-34

[Article by Pak Ho-yun]

[Text] Today our party is setting it forth as one of the important literary art guidelines to decisively enhance the political insights and creative skills of the writers to suit the demands of the developing realities. This guideline of our party is a unique one that has graphically enunciated the ways to place on a high plane of the chuche communist anthropology our literature and arts which are a powerful ideological weapon for attaining the cause for conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology, and a guiding principle which must be adhered to invariably in the construction of communist literature and arts.

To enhance their political insights and creative skills is a priority demand and the most important task arising before our creative staffers who serve revolution and construction through their works of revolutionary literary art. This is above all an indispensable requirement arising from the lofty objective and mission of revolutionary literature and arts.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"... our educational work and literature and arts must put it forward as their basic task to establish a revolutionary world view for working people and the youth and juveniles, and to this end, must positively serve." ("On Socialist Literature and Arts," p 504)

The objective and mission of genuine literature and arts lie in making people correctly discern the world and giving them a revolutionary world view which is a practical weapon for remaking nature and society. In order to discharge such objective and mission, revolutionary literature and arts must put forward significant human questions in their works and portray in breadth, in depth, the process of formation of people's revolutionary world view and richly show the diverse dimensions of human life. This calls for the high political insights and creative skills of creative staffers.

As enunciated by the chuche literary art theory, the creative staffer sees, hears, feels and absorbs no more than he can grasp, and can express no more than he knows.

In what breadth, in what depth a creative staffer knows about nature and society, about human beings and their lives is reflected in his work as he knows them. Only when a creative staffer has an abundant knowledge and experience about life, can the human beings and their lives he portrays be as diverse, rich, and vivid as seen in the realities.

A creative staffer's political insights and artistic skills are literally reflected in any work he produces. Reality is a source of creative works, the framework of portrayal. But this is not to say that all realities become the target of arts and moreover, that they are literally transferred onto creative works.

The human beings and their lives reflected in a work are those that have been analyzed and assessed by the creative staffer's ideoaesthetic insights. The form of a work, too, is one that has been molded by the creative staffer to suit the demands of the content. Thus there is nothing in a work that has not gone through the creative staffer's subjectivism. The same target, the same life comes to be portrayed in various ways depending on the ideoaesthetic standards of the creative staffers reflecting it. From this comes to arise the demand before the creative staffers that they should have high political insights and creative skills which enable them to precisely see the intrinsic nature of the times, seize seeds profound in sociopolitical significance and make them blossom into portrayal.

What makes it arise as a priority demand to enhance the political insights and creative skills of creative staffers who are engaged in producing revolutionary works is also the neeed for thoroughly protecting and preserving the ideological purity of our literature and arts, the chuche anthropology.

The revolutionary literature and arts of the working class have been developing, preserving the ideological purity, amid a steadfast struggle against all kinds of subversive, reactionary ideological currents of literary art running counter to them.

Today what is important in preserving the ideological purity of socialist, communist literature and arts is struggling against the naturalist tendencies. As the chuche literary art theory teaches, naturalism is an ideological current of bourgeois literature and arts which portrays the realities mechanically in terms of phenomena and distorts the intrinsic nature and truth of life.

Under the sgacious leadership of our party naturalism as an ideological current was overcome and liquidated long ago in our revolutionary literature and arts. But it must be kept in mind that naturalist elements still could surface here and there, and vigilance must not be relaxed for a moment.

The basic way to completely overcome the naturalist tendencies is enhancing the political insights and eyes of the creative staffers. Only if the creative stafers are thoroughly prepared politicoideologically and their standards of job performance are high, can they clearly see the intrinsic nature of the forward movement of our people racing forward with gale force in the spirit of the speed battle joined to the chollima loyally revering the great leder Comrade Kim Il-song and following the leadership of the party, timely and correctly reflect their lofty mental and moral features in the works of literature and arts, and delineate the policy of the party in the works. This bespeaks that enhancing the political insights and creative skills of the creative staffers is precisely where a firm guarantee for preserving the ideological purity of chuche literature and arts and making it brilliantly blossom and develop is.

Enhancing the political insights and creative artistic skills of the creative staffers is a pressing task arising for satisfying the demands of the realities of our country which is making great strides and the daily growing ideoaesthetic needs of the people.

Today our country's revolution and construction have advanced onto a new higher stage. Under the banner of The Three Revolutions--ideological, technological, and cultural--a ceaseless leap forward and innovation are happening in all areas of revolution and construction and the cause for conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology is being more energetically hastened.

In our people's ideomental features, too, a great change is taking place.

Our people, who firmly believe through revolutionary practice the correctness and victory of the chuche cause, are more than at any time united airtight around the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the glorious Party Center. In particular, through the movement to learn from the examples of unsung heroes being energetically launched under the sagacious leadership of the party the entire party members and working people are bursting with fiery loyalty to devotedly struggle like the unsung heroes for the sake of the party and the leader, for the sake of the fatherland and the people.

Never before has there been an era, reality like ours which offers politically significant and philosophically profound seeds to creative staffers. If the creative staffers are to seize significant seeds and make them blossom into the portrayal on a high ideoartistic standard of a new chuche-oriented human character personifying a lofty mental world, they must decisively enhance thir political insights and creative artistic skills.

Today chuche literature and arts, be it in terms of profundity of the ideological content or in terms of the artistic character, have attained a lofty plane never reached in any prior period. This is a great achievement scored by our party.

Our people, who are enjoying to the heart's content the quintessence of the lush flower garden of literature and arts which have ushered in their heyday under the sagacious leadership of the party, are not interested in any work with a shallow ideological content which conventionally, tediously unfolds a monotonous, dry, conceptualized ordinary life.

Only such works that because of the profundity of their ideological contents give people room for some muse with a strong lingering effect can touch people and enjoy their love. In order to produce such works, the creative staffers must thoroughly prepare themselves politicoideologically with profound disquisitions about their creative works.

The guidelines of our party for enhancing the political insights and creative skills of the creative staffers, by making them produce precisely such revolutionary literary art works that are philosophcially deep, illuminate a clear road to satisfying the high ideoaesthetic demands of the masses of people.

As enunciated by the chuche literary art theory, what is called the philosophical depth of a literary work bespeaks the whole of the process of production which will be insured by the philosophical weight of the seed, the philosophical profundity of the thought, the sharpness of the social question, a new search for life, a deep, analytical, detailed depiction, and a good command of the vocabulary. The philosophical depth determines the politicoideological character and artistic value of a work.

Only a work insured of philosophical depth can serve in establishing people's revolutionary world view and satisfy people's ideoaesthetic demands. A work without philosophical depth cannot truthfully reflect our people's ideomental features which have attained to a lofty plane and our prideful realities wherein miracles and leaps forward are happening in all areas of economic and cultural construction.

The philosophical depth which governs the character and value of a work is determined by the preparedness level of the creative staffer and his political insights and creative skills. A writer with high political insights and creative skills alone can seize a politically significant and philosophically profound seed, make it blossom into beautiful portrayal, create a typical chuche-oriented social being boundlessly loyal to the party and the leader, and satisfactorily fill the needs of our time and our people. Therefore, the creative staffers must of necessity put priority efforts into enhancing their own political insights and creative skills.

Truly, the guidelines of our party for enhancing political insights and creative skills are the most correct guidelines which, by making the creative staffers produce revolutionary literary art works insured of the philosophical character, make it possible to place our literature and arts on the lofty plane of the communist anthropology and positively serve revolution and construction.

Our party, by giving a scientific elucidation as well of the way of enhancing the political insights and creative skills of the creative staffers, has provided a firm guarantee that enables the creative staffers to bring about a new upsurge in producing revolutionary literary art works.

The chuche literary art theory has enunciated that in order to enhance the political insights and creative skills of the creative staffers, it is imperative first of all to make them commendably conduct their political study.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"In order to develop our arts onto an even higher level, it is important above all that the art functionaries improve their politicoideological standards."
("A Collection of Writings of Kim Il-song," Vol 6, p 523)

What plays the decisive role in producing literary art works is the ideological consciousness, political insights of the creative staffers.

What is called political insights bespeaks a party-oriented eye that knows to correctly see and sharply judge all objects and phenomena from a revolutionary viewpoint. Only if the creative staffers possess such party-oriented eye, political insights, can they unmistakably seek out and clearly analyze the intrinsic nature of a question in the realities entangled in complex and diverse phenomena, and deal with it to suit the demands of the party and the interests of the revolution. Should a creative staffer fail to hold a revolutionary viewpoint in experiencing the realities and producing a work, not only will he be unable to precisely illuminate the intrinsic nature and significance of revolutionary events, he will end up in distorting the realities.

The political insights of a creative staffer constitute the decisive factor determining the politicoideological character of his work and at the same time an important condition for guaranteeing the artistry. Only if his political insights are high, can he go forward to precisely maintain the principle of the party for truthfully reflecting life and always successfully produce his work, taking timely action to judge whether or not his portrayal is correct.

Thus the ideological consciousness, political insights of a creative staffer constitutes the decisive factor in his production of a revolutionary work and as such, performs great functions throughout the process of his production from selecting the seed to making it blossom into portrayal.

The chuche literary art theory teaches the creative staffers that in order to enhance their political insights, they must thoroughly arm themselves with our party's chuche ideology.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's revolutionary thought, the chuche ideology, is the most scientific and revolutionary world view of the working class of our era, the chuche era. Only if thoroughly armed with the great chuche ideology, can they go forward to establish the unitarily correct revolutionary world view and launch their creative activities in accordance with the demands of the chuche ideology.

At the same time, deeply studying and mastering in terms of principle the chuche literary art thought of our party, they must assimilate it into their own flesh and bone, into their own firm creed. In our party's chuche literary art thought, theory, and guidelines are all enunciated comprehensively, profoundly the principles and ways that must be tightly maintained in the construction of chuche literature and arts and all the questions arising in creative practice. They are a library of the construction of chuche literature and arts, communist literature and arts.

Therefore, if the creative staffers thoroughly arm themselves with the chuche ideology and deeply master the party's literary art theory and guidelines, they can precisely analyze and evaluate the complex questions arising in nature, society, and human life, and always score an admirable success in producing literary works.

To establish a revolutionary reading habit and acquire a manysided knowledge is an important demand our party puts forward to the creative staffers.

Our revolutionary literature and arts, portraying in breadth the demands and aims of social beings of the chuche era and their life features, must thoroughly arm the masses of people with our party's revolutionary thought and give them a diverse and rich knowledge about social life.

Literature and arts do not deal with any one aspect of human life. Comprehensively, monoaxially they reflect living human beings and their lives in all aspects of social life such as the political, economic, cultural, scientific, military and moral aspects. People absolutely do not read literature and arts merely as something to kill time with but through them to learn from the mental world of the leading characters toward the party and the leader, toward the fatherland and the people, devotedly struggle like them for revolution and construction, and more deeply experience and understand such questions that can be a lesson, a mirror of work and life.

Such portrayal characteristics and indoctrinating significance of literature and arts call upon the creative staffers to possess a profound, diverse knowledge about nature and society. Therefore, the creative staffers must know social beings and their lives in breadth, in depth and have a rich and manysided knowledge about the world. Only then can they go forward to successfully resolve any portrayal task without a hitch.

If they are to acquire a manysided knowledge, the creative staffers must become devoted scholars, enthusiasts, and ceaselessly read books of various kinds.

Books are a rich storehouse of knowledge saturated with the spiritual culture of mankind. Through books the creative staffers can acquire a diverse and rich knowledge about society and nature such as the political, economic, scientific, cultural, military, and moral knowledge. Therefore, the creative staffers must learn and learn again, setting clear prospective goals and utilizing all the means and methods, all the conditions and opprtunities. The creative staffers, firmly on the chuche stand and viewpoint, must read not only the classical works of our country but also the classical works of the world. In this way they must build a high tower of knowledge.

The creative staffers must possess high creative skills along with high political insights. Inasmuch as the creative staffers are revolutionaries serving the party and the revolution with their literary art works, their creative artistic skills must be high.

As enunciated by the chuche literary art theory, to the writers, creative skills are as precious as their lives and constitute the basic stamp determining their qualifications as writers.

The skills of a creative staffer constitute an important condition that makes it possible to combine a high ideological character and lofty artistry in producing his literary art work. Only if the creative staffers possess high artistic skills, can they precisely realize their portrayal intentions. Even though a creative staffer has seized a politically significant seed and has a burning creative enthusiasm, if he is deficient in his artistic portrayal abilities, then he cannot come up with a deeply moving portrayal.

The task of enhancing the skills of the creative staffers, only if it is closely combined with the task of carrying out the creative tasks at hand, can be resolved most substantively. A creative staffer through his creative production practice can further concretize and consolidate his method of generalization transferring life onto an artistic canvas, his diverse portrayal techniques that can be ripened into a living experience, and what he understands in terms of theory. Again, in the process, the creative staffers can test and prove the correctness of their knowledge and draw a knew knowledge and creative experience.

At the same time, they must learn, with an open mind and sincerity, from the creative experiences of other artists. Only then can they go forward to accumulate the necessary knowledge and creative experiences richly in a manysided way.

In the present period one of the important questions in enhancing the skills of the creative staffers is commendable training in the vocabulary. Only if a writer knows a lot of vocabulary and searches for a new writing style and techniques of expression, can he become a master of the vocabulary, display his uniqueness and individuality in his work, and become a standard bearer of the vocabulary revolution. Therefore, the writers must devote their energy to commendably utilizing things such as a vocabulary notebook and to enhancing their writing skills one grade higher.

It will not do for them to overemphasize techniques alone in improving their creative skills. If they give prominence to techniques alone, they could fall victim to art for the sake of art. Through and through paying priority attention to their politicoideological preparations, it is important for them to properly combine them with the task of improving their creative skills. Only then can the creative staffers do their creative disquisitions even more deeply. What is called the creative disquisition is not some kind of "inspiration" that spontaneously appear but the writers' steadfast, patient process of search, a reflection of their political insights and creative skills.

Experience in the realities has very important significance in enhancing the political insights and creative skills of the creative staffers. From this, our party is giving prominence to experience in the realities as another important way to enhance the ideoartistic qualifications of the creative staffers.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"Our writers and artists must courageously jump into the fire of struggle of the workers and peasants and be able to see life in the realities with the same feeling as the workers and peasants. Only then can they be said to be writers and artists who have personally experienced the life of our people and produce works which enjoy the love of the masses of people and serve the masses of people." ("Kim Il-song Selected Works," Vol 2, 2d impression, p 580)

To the creative staffers, experience in the realities is a powerful way of their revolutionization. Only if the creative staffers go deep into the realities, can they more deeply experience and understand the degree of our people's fiery loyalty to the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song and our Party Center and go forward to completely attain their own revolutionary world view.

The realities are an inexhaustible source of knowledge and are like fertile soil that makes it possible for their creative talents to blossom. Only if the writers go into the realities can they acquire a manysided, rich knowledge which they can neither learn nor ripen at the desk, and depict life on a high ideoartistic standard with an artistic vocabulary that suits the palate and feeling of the masses of people.

Conversely, if they practice table literature, deskbound and divorced from the realities, their creative senility will come prematurely, their enthusiasm will cool off, their imagination will lose its wings, and their talents will become blunt as well.

Thus, to the creative staffers, experience in the realities becomes a powerful way of enhancing both their political insights and creative skills.

Most important in strengthening their experience in the realities is for them to go into the relities, thoroughly arming themselves with the teachings of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the guidelines of the party. Even if they went into the realities, unless they properly understand the intent of the party, they could not precisely see the realities nor could they correctly grasp the great gorward movement of our people. Therefore, the creative staffers, holding it as the first process of work to thoroughly arm themselves with the teachings of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the guidelines of the party, must deeply experience and understand the stand and viewpoint, attitude and method of our party toward the realities.

Also important in strengthening experience in the realities is not taking the realities themselves as materials for portrayal but is establishing the revolutionary creative habit of personally experiencing the realities with warm enthusiasm and clear goals, and plan and complete works right in the realities. The daily life of our people who move forward, dynamically fueling the fire storm of speed battle, is not a mere repetition of the same life but a continuing process of a new life brimming with a new content. The creative staffers, going into the realities and sharing joys and sorrows, life and death alike with the workers and peasants, and with the same feeling as theirs, must grapple with the task with persistence and perseverance to carry through the policies of the party, and experiencing life in breadth, in depth, with warmth and sincerity, must turn the ideological feeling and life feeling of the people into their own. Precisely when they have done so the creative staffers will be feeling with all their hearts an enthusiasm and impulse impossible to hold back until they write, and ripening their thinking, will be able to write admirable works truthfully portraying real life.

Our party, as an important way to enhance the political insights and creative skills of the creative staffers, is also invariably maintaining the guideline for turning the process of creative production into a process of revolutionization. If this guideline of the party is to be admirably carried out, it is imperative to make the creative staffers turn all tasks such as experiencing the realities and producing works into a rewarding process of remolding their own ideological consciousness and turning themselves into chuche-oriented communist revolutionaries. The creative staffers, especially systematizing and habituating their revolutionary organizational life and sincerely receving the guidance and control of the organization, must voluntarily strive to receive the guidance of the party.

The guidelines of our party for enhancing the political insights and creative skills of the creative staffers to suit the demands of the devevloping realities thus provide a firm guarantee that enables the creative staffers to discharge their glorious duties even better for manning the front line of party ideological work.

When our creative staffers, brimming with vigor and enthusiasm, stoutly go forward along the road illuminated by the literary art guidelines of the party, an even greater success will be scored in the production of revolutionary works. All creative staffers, by decisively enhancing their political insights and creative skills with the high awareness of being builders of chuche literature and arts, the engineers of genuine social beings, shall produce still more revolutionary literary art works demanded by the times and the people and energetically serve in the attainment of the cause for conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology.

ECONOMIC SELF-SUFFICIENCY IS THE MATERIAL CORNERSTONE OF INDEPENDENT STAND AND ATTITUDE

Pyongyang KULLOJA in Korean No 5, May 81 pp 35-41

[Article by Hong Sung-un]

[Text] Today the people of even more countries of the world, demanding independent stand and attitude, are dynamically moving forward along the road of sovereignty.

The revolutionary peoples of the world aiming for independent stand and attitude are positively struggling against the aggression and enslavement of outside imperialism, and as they consolidate their national political independence, are taking to the road of building their own sound national economy. The struggle of the masses of people to build a new society politically independent and economically self-reliant is becoming an awesome current of the times that nothing can hold in check.

In order to tightly maintain political independence and independent stand and attitude, it is imperative to become economically self-reliant, and in order to become economically self-reliant, it is imperative to necessarily build a self-reliant national economy developed in a manysided way with its own sound raw materials base and equipped with modern technical provisions.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, early on setting forth a self-reliant national economic construction line embodying the immortal chuche ideology, has illuminated the straight road to brilliantly realizing the aims and demands of our people and revolutionary peoples of the world for achieving national economic self-sufficiency.

Under the sagacious leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song our party and people, by thoroughly carrying through the self-reliant national economic construction line, have laid sound economic foundations for the enrichment, strengthening and development of the country and national prosperity, and successfully realized economic self-sufficiency.

Today our socialist self-reliant national economy is becoming powerful material foundations which solidly insure the politically independent stand and attitude of the country, ceaselessly step up revolution and construction, and provide an independent, creative life for working people.

The glory-filled struggle journey of our party and people for independence, sovereignty, and socialist construction clearly shows that only by building a self-reliant national economy is it possible to brilliantly realize the independent stand and attitude of the country and the nation, energetically step up revolution and construction on the chuche stand, and ceaselessly promote the well-being of the people.

To realize independent stand and attitude is the common aim and aspiration of all nations and the masses of people.

No nation wants to permit either its enslavement to others or the trampling of its national dignity, and every nation is struggling to protect and realize its independent stand and attitude.

Too, that the masses of working people are struggling to overturn the old social system and build a new society is, in the final analysis, for enjoying an independent, creative life as the master of nature and society, casting off all kinds of domination, enslavement, and inequality.

In order to realize the independent aims and demands of the masses of working people, it is imperative to establish an independent administration and at the same time achieve economic self-sufficiency to the extent of running the nation's economy and people's housekeeping on their own.

The economic self-sufficiency of a country is the sound material cornerstone of its political independence and independent stand and attitude. Under conditions that national distinctions remain, international borders exist, and each country has different kinds of revolutionary tasks to perform, only if a country achieves economic self-sufficiency can it consolidate its national political independence and independent stand and attitude and satisfactorily insure an independent, creative life for its people.

To say to achieve economic sel-sufficiency means to build a sound self-reliant national economy and make it possible to produce and secure on its own the material needs necessary for its national development and for its people's life without relying on others.

It may be said that economic self-sufficiency is achieved when a country has established a comprehensive economic system equipped with the latest technical provisions and resting on its own national cadres and its own domestic raw materials and developed to the extent of satisfactorily filling with its own production the materials necessary for its economic construction, national defense construction, and its people's life.

Economic self-sufficiency is above all a powerful material cornerstone that makes it possible to thoroughly defend national sovereign rights.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"The building of an independent national economy is essential for consolidating national independence, exercising sovereign rights and providing a bountiful material life to the people." (Booklet "Let Us Step Up Socialist Construction Under the Banner of Chuche Thought," p 6)

National sovereign rights are sacrosanct rights innate in each nation, and firmly establishing them is a basic question arising in realizing independent stand and attitude. National sovereign rights are the rights of each nation to independently live and work out its destiny on its own without any restraint whatever.

Just as people deprived of their rights to independently live come to lose their value and dignity as social beings, a country and nation bereft of their sovereign rights can expect no genuine independence and prosperity.

A country bereft of its sovereign rights cannot be said to be a genuinely independent sovereign state and the people of such a country cannot escape the fate of colonial slavery nor can they avoid being subjected to the unbearable misfortune and suffering of a ruined country.

That is why many countries and nations, opposing infringement and intervention against their sovereign rights by the imperialists and colonialists, are stoutly fighting to independently work out their own destinies, the destinies of of their countries and peoples.

Today the imperialists headed by the U.S. imperialists, taking advantage of the fact that the newly emerging countries are economically and technologically backward on account of the aftereffects of colonialism and have yet to achieve economic self-sufficiency, are viciously plotting to once again ensnare these countries in a net of neocolonialism.

Under such conditions it arises as an important question before the newly emerging countries to thoroughly defend their national sovereign rights in all aspects of social life.

If they are to thoroughly defend their national sovereign rights, they must have a sound economic might capable of materially guaranteeing their independent stand and attitude.

A country possessing a sound self-reliant economic might can self-dependently establish all lines and policies according to their own political convictions and carry them through with their own strength but for countries with no such economic strength, it will be very difficult to defend their politically independent stand and attitude.

The political independence of a country which is not guaranteed by economic self-sufficiency is in fact no more than independence in form with no material basis. Failing to achieve economic self-sufficiency, a country cannot help being tied to another country and having no alternative but to follow another country's stand, will be unable to say or do what it wants to. In the final analysis, a nation economically tied to another country will be unable to completely cast off its political dependence on the host country. Economic dependence and enslavement inevitably brings political dependence and enslavement.

Therefore, in order to cast off imperialist economic enslavement and thoroughly defend national sovereign rights, the newly emerging countries must build an independent, self-reliant economy capable of running on its own their nation's economy and their people's housekeeping. Only then can they repudiate the "aid" of the imperialists, successfully beat back economic aggression and political intervention in all forms and firmly insure their independent national development.

Too, the matter of building self-reliant national defense which arises as a basic question in defending national sovereign rights can be successfully resolved only by the achievement of economic self-sufficiency.

As it is the inherent nature of man to protect and defend himself, a country also must have a sound self-defense power capable of defending itself. A state without self-defense power cannot be said to be a completely independent sovereign state in fact, and such a country cannot firmly defend its sovereign rights.

If self-reliant national defense power is to be soundly created, it is imperative of necessity to build a strong heavy industry with the machine building industry as the core and based on it, a powerful self-reliant national economy. Only then will it be possible to produce and secure on its own the material and technical means needed in defending the country and thoroughly defend national political independence and sovereign rights with revolutionary armed forces.

Economic self-sufficiency is also a firm guarantee for materially insuring the stand of the people as the master of the state and society.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"Without economic self-sufficiency it is impossible to satisfy the growing material needs of the people nor is it possible to materially insure their stand as the master of the state and society." ("Kim Il-song Selected Works," Vol 6, p 274)

Realizing independent stand and attitude in the area of sociopolitical life constitutes a basic turnaround in the struggle for the independent stand and attitude of the masses of working people. But if the independent stand and attitude of the masses of working people is to be comprehensively realized, it is imperative to completely cast off even the constraints of outmoded ideas and nature along with the realization of sociopolitically independent stand and attitude.

The struggle to cast off the constraints of outmoded ideas and nature is a strategic task that the party of the working class which has come to power must tightly grasp from the first day of building a new society. This struggle comes to be launched with the human remolding task and socialist economic and cultural construction as its basic content--a task and construction aimed at eliminating the backwardness in terms of ideology, technology, and culture, left behind by the old society.

If the independent stand and attitude of the masses of working people who have become the master of the state and society, is to be completely realized, they must be in a position to enjoy an independent, creative labor life, material and cultural life. As long as the masses of working people are not liberated from difficult and backbreaking labor and are not enjoying an affluent, civilized material and cultural life to the heart's content, it cannot be said that their independent stand and attitude has been completely realized. Put another way, to say that economic and technological backwardness still remains means that the productive forces, which constitute the strength to conquer nature, and the developmental standard of the economy, which constitutes the material cornerstone of social life, have not yet reached such a high level as to be capable of completely insuring an independent, creative life for the masses of working people.

The question of materially insuring the stand of the people who have become the master of the state and society boils down, in the final analysis, to the question of freeing them from all kinds of constraints in the realms of labor life and material and cultural life. In order to satisfactorily resolve this historic task, it is imperative to develop productive forces and technology and build a self-reliant economy on a nation-state basis.

Only by building a comprehensive, self-reliant economy on a nation-state basis is it possible to maximally mobilize and utilize domestic natural resources and insure a high rate of speed in the growth of production while actively maintaining a precise balance of all branches of the people's economy. Again, only then is it possible to quickly develop science and technology and culture and ceaselessly improve working people's technical and cultural standards and soundly lay the material and technical foundations of socialism and communism.

To enhance the strength that can conquer nature, developing productive forces and technology on a nation-state basis, to build and develop a sound self-reliant economy is where a firm guarantee for insuring an independent, creative material and cultural life for working people is.

Economic self-sufficiency is also a basic guarantee for insuring the free development of nations, eliminating the practical basis of national inequalities.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"Building a self-reliant national economy is also a basic guarantee that makes it possible to eliminate economic backwardness which constitutes the practical basis of inequalities between nations, achieve national prosperity, and successfully build the socialist, communist society." ("Kim Il-song Selected Works," Vol 4, 2d impression, p 538)

All nations are sovereign and equal. All nations positively struggle to defend and realize independent stand and attitude, unwilling to permit their independent stand and attitude to be violated.

An important reason why many countries of the world had come to be chained to the humiliating imperialist colonial system in bygone days was that these countries dependent on the old sociopolitical system, did not have the practical strength capable of preventing the aggression and plunder of the outside imperialists.

Today many countries of the world have achieved political independence, casting off imperialist colonial enslavement, but with that alone it cannot be said that they have attained their national liberation cause once and for all and completely realized national equality.

The solution to the national liberation cause and the question of nations comes to be achieved ultimately when the root cause of racial oppression and inequality is eliminated and the independent stand and attitude of nations is completely realized.

An important source of racial oppression and inequality lies in economic backwardness.

Those nations who have achieved political independence, casting off imperialist colonial enslavement, only if they eliminate exploitation and oppression of man by man and build a developed self-reliant national economy, can successfully eliminate the practical basis of national inequality.

National inequality cannot be eliminated by the liquidation of class exploitation alone nor can it be eliminated by a union of nations by this or that means. National inequality will come to be eliminated only if each nation maximally, freely, comprehensively blossoms and develops, free from any constraint whatever.

National equality and free development are practically guaranteed by a sound material cornerstone, and such practical guarantee is provided by a self-reliant national economy.

A self-reliant economy, by enabling each nation to free itself from economic enslavement to another nation and insure its self-dependence in economic life, makes it possible for each nation to strengthen its chuche character and achieve a free national development to suit its will and demands. It also enables a nation to satisfactorily fill on its own the material needs for its independent development and quickly develop all aspects of social life such as the economy and culture, science and technology.

A self-reliant national economy constitutes a material guarantee as well which makes it possible to firmly insure equality in its relations with other nations. Only by building and leveloping a sound self-reliant national economy can a nation firmly exercise its sovereign rights, participate on an equal footing with other nations in solving international questions and have a practical say. The more sound the self-reliant national economy of the developing countries which used to be in a backward position in bygone days, the sooner the inequitable old international economic order one-sidedly created by the imperialists will come to disintegrate.

All this shows that building a self-reliant national economy constitutes a reliable guarantee which makes it possible to realize the independent stand and attitude of a country and a nation, cut the imperialist lifeline which spawned the question of nations, and achieve the growth and prosperity of a country and a nation.

In order to completely realize independent stand and attitude, every country and every nation must firmly insure economic self-sufficiency.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"Economic self-sufficiency is an indispensable condition for building a rich, strong, civilized independent state." (Ibid., p 223)

Most important in achieving economic self-sufficiency is developing the economy in a manysided way to the extent of being able to insure with domestic production various kinds of goods necessary for economic construction and people's life.

Only by insuring the manysidedness and comprehensiveness of production structure complete with all branches of the people's economy such as the heavy industry, light industry, and agriculture will it be possible to self-dependently conduct expanded reproduction and satisfactorily fill with its own production the needs of the people.

Of course it is difficult for the developing countries which used to be imperialist colonies in bygone days to establish a manysided economic structure such as building a heavy industry base but only by doing so can they realize economic self-sufficiency and achieve national prosperity.

If they fail to launch the struggle to build a self-reliant economic structure, hesitating and vacillating in the face of barriers, then they will never be able to build a self-reliant economy developed in a manysided way.

Experience shows that if the party of the working class, setting forth a correct economic construction line and policy, energetically leads the masses of working people to thoroughly carry through them displaying the revolutionary spirit of self-reliance, it is possible to build an economy developed in a manysided way, however difficult the environment.

In the past period our party, tightly grasping the development of a machine building industry as the central key to building a self-reliant national economy, established a machine building industry base during the difficult period of the Fatherland Liberation War and has ceaselessly expanded and developed it to suit the task of each postwar stage of socialist economic construction.

In order to develop in a manysided way the machine industry and other key branches of the heavy industry such as the power, extractive, metal, chemical, and building materials industries, our party correctly combined rehabilitation, reconstruction, and new construction on the one hand, and organizing the backbone of the heavy industry as the first order of business, completed its branch structures and production processes and led the way to build the heavy industry not as a heavy for the sake of heavy industry but as a heavy industry that could effectively serve the light industry and agriculture.

At the same time, developing large-scale central industries and medium, small local industries all together, the party has created a sound light industry base operating on its own and laid strong foundations for agricultural production capable of satisfying on its own the domestic needs of agricultural raw materials and food.

That today our country has come to be able to produce and secure on its own the material needs necessary for economic development and people's life is an achievement scored as a result of the struggle energetically launched to establish a manysided economic structure, overcoming all kinds of barriers and trials and eliminating the colonial backwardness of the economy.

Through their struggle and life experience in bygone days our people firmly believe that once everyone sets his mind to it and grapples with the task, it is possible to establish a manysided and comprehensive production structure of the economy, building strong heavy industry and light industry bases with the machine industry as the core and creating a developed rural economy. In order to achieve economic self-sufficiency, it is also very important to organize sound raw material bases.

Without organizing one's own raw material bases it is impossible to positively tap and utilize abundant domestic resources nor is it possible to insure the normalization of industrial production and its manysided development.

In light of the fact that today the demands for raw materials and fuel are dramatically growing in all countries, organizing one's own raw material bases is an important question relating to the future of economic development. Moreover, under conditions that the whole world is experiencing raw material shortages, fuel shortages, unless each country organizes its own raw material bases, it cannot develop its economy on a secure basis.

Our party, in the past period setting it forth as a principled requirement for all industrial branches to produce and secure on their own 70 percent or more of their raw materials, put great efforts into establishing new production bases for semi-processed materials and chemical materials along with continuing to develp the extractive industry producing crude materials. Thus it became possible to produce and secure basically on our own the demands for raw materials, discovering new mineral resources and decisively increasing the production of semi-processed materials and synthetic materials. Through and through producing and securing on our own what is the primary, what is demanded in large quantities, we are resolving what is less demanded or what is not yet produced in our country through trade with other countries on the principle of satisfying each other's needs.

Life clearly shows that even a small country can produce and secure bascially on its own the growing demands for raw materials if it, practicing self-reliance, develps science and technology and positively develops and effectively utilizes its own domestic resources.

It is an urgent requirement in achieving economic self-sufficiency to equip various branches of the people's economy with modern technical provisions and solidly organize one's own national cadre ranks capable of ably managing and operating them.

A developed self-reliant economy presupposes equipping all branches of the people's economy with modern technical provisions. In order that backward agricultural states,which have not normally gone through the capitalist developmental stages, may build a self-reliant national economy, it arises as an especially important task to thoroughly carry out the technological revolution.

Only by energetically pushing ahead with the technological revolution and at the same time thoroughly organizing one's own national cadre ranks is it possible to go forward to solve questions in terms of science and technology arising in achieving economic self-sufficiency with one's own strength to suit one's specific national conditions and manage and operate with one's own strength the factories and enterprises equipped with modern technical provisions.

Our party, by firmly establishing chuche and carrying through the mass line in developing science and technology, has successfully realized comprehensive technical improvements of the people's economy in a short period, and deepening and developing the technological revolution onto a new higher level, made it possible for all branches of the people's economy to be equipped with the latest technical provisions.

Today in our country all tasks to develop science and technology, adopt the achievements in production, and solve complex scientific and technological questions arising in various branches of the people's economy are being admirably carried out by our own national cadres.

By going forward to solve all the difficult and complex questions arising in achieving economic self-sufficiency with our own strength, with our own technology, with our own resources, we have been able to build a sound self-reliant national economy in a short period.

As a result of the self-reliant national economy soundly built, in our country the products of heavy and light industries and agricultural products necessary for national development and people's life are being satisfactorily insured with our own production, and it has become possible to develop all areas of socialist construction extraordinarily fast to suit our specific national conditions and our people's demands.

In our country, because of the presence of our party's chuche-oriented lines and policies and of our socialist self-reliant national economy capable of materially guaranteeing them, the awesome historic cause for remaking nature and society in accordance with the demands of the chuche ideology is being energetically expedited, our people's well-being is being ceaselessly promoted, and the unending propserity of the nation is being firmly guaranteed.

By thoroughly establishing chuche in revolution and construction and building a self-reliant national economy, our party has become able to formulate all lines and policies based on its own independent convictions and judgments and carry them through with its own strength, and independently work out its destiny.

As a result of having built a sound self-reliant national economy equipped with modern technical provisions, our people, casting off the past plight of humiliation and contempt of all kinds only because of economic and technical backwardness, have become an energetic and dignified people advancing in their own right into the international arena with the same rights on an equal footing with nations large and small, and have become able to positvely serve in solving international questions with a great traction force and influencing power.

Truly, the sound self-reliant national economy our people have built through arduous strugle is powerful material foundations guaranteeing today's happy life and a brighter future of our people and as such, is displaying its tremendous vitality to the hilt with each passing day.

The prideful struggle journey of our party and people in building the self-reliant national economy and the historical experience gained in the process show that only if a nation builds its own sound self-reliant national economy, can it successfully realize the independent stand and attitude of the country and the people and go forward to bring about national growth and prosperity and the ultimate victory of its revolutionary cause.

This also positively proves that if chuche is firmly established and self-reliance practiced in economic construction under the leadership of an outstanding leader, even a small, backward country is quite capable of building a powerful self-reliant national economy with its own strength.

We had inherited a backward, deformed economy stemming from the long Japanese imperialist colonial rule and even that was destroyed by the three-year war of aggression unleashed by the U.S. imperialists. In the past period our party and people had to launch the struggle to build a self-reliant national economy, clearing the ashes.

It is altogether the brilliant fruition of the sagacious leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song that we have been able to transform our country into a socialist power of self-dependence, self-support, and self-defense, brilliantly accomplishing the historic task of socialist industrialization in a very short period after beginning to lay foundations for a self-reliant national economy, clearing the ruins where not one brick had remained intact.

The prideful victory in socialist economic construction is also one our people have been able to score by highly displaying the revolutionary spirit of self-reliance.

As a result of tightly maintaining the revolutionary principle and stand of practicing self-reliance our people have been able to continue their struggle without compromising their revolutionary integrity, however complex and difficult the situation, and insure victory in the revolutionary struggle and success in construction tasks, courageously overcoming the barriers and bottlenecks encountered on the road of forward movement.

Today we are faced with the heavy revolutionary task to further strengthen the self-reliant national economic foundations of the country while consolidating the achievements already scored in socialist economic construction.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, enunciating at the historic Sixth Party Congress the economic construction tasks aimed at converting the whole society to the chuche ideology, kindly taught for energetically launching the struggle to step up the chucheization, modernization, and scientization of the people's economy and occupy the magnificent 10 major prospective targets of socialist economic construction.

To chucheize, moddernize, and scientize the people's economy and occupy the 10 major prospective targets is a glorious and rewarding struggle to create a sound material guarantee that makes it possible to win the complete victory of socialism and successfully attain the cause for conversion of the whole society to the chuche ideology.

By uniting airtight around the Party Central Committee headed by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and brilliantly realizing the magnificent socialist economic construction program set forth by the Sixth Party Congress we shall firmly insure the independent stand and attitude of the country and the nation and further hasten the ultimate victory of our revolutionary cause.

THE REVOLUTIONARY FERVOR OF WORKING PEOPLE IS THE DECISIVE FACTOR IN THE DEVELOPMENT OF SOCIALIST PRODUCTION

Pyongyang KULLOJA in Korean No 5, May 81 pp 42-47

[Article by Chon Chong-hyok]

[Text] Today our party members and working people are launching a majestic all-out march movement to realize the magnificent program of socialist economic construction unfurled by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song at the historic Sixth Congress of the Korean Workers Party. By the dynamic labor struggle of the entire party members and working people new leaps forward and innovations are happening on every battlefield of socialist construction and our socialist self-reliant national economy is developing at a ceaseless high rate of speed.

We must continue to spur the majestic all-out march movement for socialist construction and more dynamically move forward to fulfill the new prospective tasks ahead of schedule. One of the important questions arising here is more highly promoting the revolutionary fervor of party members and working people.

As enunciated by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, it is the intrinsic superiority of the socialist system that working people highly display their revolutionary fervor in work, and continuing to highly promote the revolutionary fervor of working people is precisely where a firm guarantee for sustaining a ceaseless high rate of speed in socialist economic construction is.

The socialist society is a society where the masses of working people have become the master of the power of the state and the means of production, a most superior society where everything of the society serves the masses of working people.

In the capitalist society where the means of production belong to private ownership, the objectives of production are geared to the pursuit of profits by an extreme minority of capitalists, but in the socialist society, the objectives of production lie in ceaselessly improving the material and cultural standards of living for the masses of working people. Therefore, in the capitalist society the broad producer masses have no interests whatever in the development of production and have no alternatives but to work simply for survival, but in the socialist society all working people, helping each other and leading each other on, devotedly work in the interest of society and collective. In the socialist society individual's interests and society's interests are completely congruent with each other and material wealth created is totally channeled into promoting the well-being of the masses of working people. Accordingly, the more production develops and the more material wealth is created, the more independent and creative happy life the masses of people come to enjoy. This makes the working people have an earnest interest in the development of production and display their revolutionary fervor in work for the development. With the entire working people displaying revolutionary fervor in work, socialist production develops at a ceaseless high rate of speed.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, based on his comprehensive enunciation of such intrinsic superiority of the socialist society, has set forth the unique thought that the revolutionary fervor of working people constitutes the decisive factor in socialist economic development.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"In the socialist society the decisive factor energetically pushing the development of productive forces is people's high revolutionary fervor." ("Kim Il-song Selected Works," Vol 5, 2d impression, p 301)

To say that people's revolutionary fervor constitutes the decisive factor in the development of socialist production means that it constitutes the most basic factor determining success in socialist economic construction and plays a controlling role in its relations with other factors pushing economic development.

What makes people's revolutionary fervor the decisive factor in the development of socialist production has to do above all with the fact that it is people who play an active, positive role in the development of production and that all their activities are governed by their ideological consciousness.

As the immortal chuche ideology enunciates, the master of production is man and it is also man who plays the most positive, active role in the development of production. What is called the production process is a process in which man, with the means of labor, processes the objects of labor and creates material wealth. The means of labor and the objects of labor which constitute the component elements of productive forces are centered on people and by people's role alone can each of the elements fully perform its functions. This bespeaks that it is indeed man who is the master of production and plays the decisive role in the development of production.

But this is not to say that just because man is the master of production, his role gets enhanced spontaneously. If it is man who plays the decisive role in the development of production, it is his ideological consciousness which governs his role. Ideological consciousness is an attribute native to man. Man's value is determined not by money or things but by his thought, and precisely because man has ideological consciousness, he becomes the most energetic being in the world.

Ideological consciousness contains man's aim to realize his interests. Ideological consciousness inspires all of man's actions and governs the objective and direction of his action. Man's revolutionary fervor is governed by his ideological consciousness level and comes to influence success in production and construction.

As people's ideological consciousness level, revolutionary fervor, grows, they will come to consciously, faithfully participate in the creative labor to step up socialist construction and positively strive to acquire a deep knowledge about nature and society and a high technical skill level and widely absorb advanced production experiences. Thus people with a higher ideological consciousness level will come to play a bigger role in socialist economic construction and produce even more with the same facilities in the same time frame.

Because in this way people's revolutionary fervor highly promotes their creative abilities, it makes them play the decisive role in the development of production.

What makes working people's revolutionary fervor the decisive factor in the development of socialist production also has to do with the fact that it plays the decisive role in ceaselessly innovating and developing technology.

In order to quickly develop production in the socialist society, it is imperative to ceaselessly innovate technology. People's production activity to conquer nature is conducted with the utilization of tools of labor, machinery, and as machinery develops, people come to conquer nature even more quickly.

Meanwhile, in the socialist society the old technology is replaced with a new one, the new technology is replaced with a still newer one, manual labor is mechanized, mechanization is developed into semi-automation, and semi-automation is ceaselessly developed into automation. This is the process of the law of socialsit economic construction.

But it is the producer masses who manufacture machines, start up and operate them, and it is also the masses of working people who ceaselessly innovate and develop technology. Machinery and equipment play an important role in reproduction but apart from people, they cannot show their worth. In order to innovate technology and effectively utilize it, it is imperative to ceaselessly improve the ideological consciousness level and positively promote the revolutionary fervor of the producer nasses who are the master of technology and in direct charge of the dev elopment of technology.

When the revolutionary fervor of working people is higher, they will come to positively particiapte in the development of technology with a deeper interest and a greater faith and devote all their strength, wisdom, and talents in order to develop the productive forces of the country and eliminate difficult and backbreaking labor, successfully carrying out the tasks of technological revolution. People with higher revolutionary fervor will come to positively strive to boldly create new technologies, uprooting old ideological dregs such as passsivity, conservatism, and technological mysticism obstructing the development of technology, and seek out a new work method and an efficient production process. Again, working people's higher revolutionary fervor, positively promoting collectivism and strengthening creative cooperation among the producers, between the workers and scientists, tdchnical personnel, makes the technological revolution energetically launched on a mass basis.

This shows that when working people's revolutionary fervor is highly promoted, it is possible to ceaselessly innovate technology and based thereon quickly raise labor productivity and make production and construction continue to grow at a high rate of speed.

What makes working people's revolutionary fervor the decisive factor in the development of socialist production has significantly to do as well with the fact that it makes it possible to ceaselessly improve economic management and the organization of production and labor.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"As the proletarian party and state, in pursuance of their basic functions, strengthen the ideological revolution among working people and gradually eliminate more and more of the old ideological dregs still remaining in their heads, they will come to work, devoting all their talents and energy, for the development of socialist production. In this way there will be brought about a ceaseless improvement and innovation in economic management work and in the organization of production, in the organization of labor, and in all areas of technological development." (Ibid., p 301)

Improving economic management work and the organization of production and labor is an important condition for stepping up socialist economic construction.

A modern large-scale socialist economy calls for further strengthening the organization and command of production. Economic management is none other than the organization and command of production, and the organization of production and the organization of albor, which constitute its important component elements, are a task to correctly combine and rationally utilize labor force and the means of labor and the objects of labor. Depending on how economic management and the organization of production, the organization of labor are conducted, national manpower resources and material resources may or may not be effectively utilized, and ultimately, it will significantly determine the pace of economic development.

In the socialist society, what plays the decisive role in improving economic management work and the organization of production and labor is the revolutionary fervor of the masses of working people who are the master of production and management. Inasmuch as it is the masses of working people who directly conduct production and so are the producer masses who know best all the factors and elements in production, it is imperative above all to enhance their roles and sense of responsibility in order to improve the organization of production and the organization of labor. Moreover, under conditions that as socialist construction progresses, the economy grows in scope and the interbranch and intrabranch production-consumption linkages of the people's economy become complex and close, it will be impossible to improve economic management work and the organization of production, the organization of labor to suit the demands of the developing realities unless the revolutionary fervor of working people is highly promoted.

Only if working people are made to enhance their ideological consciousness level, revolutionary fervor, will they come to exert themselves to maximally, effectively utilize the facilities, materials, and labor. Working people with higher revolutionary fervor will more strictly observe labor discipline, more devotedly participate in labor, and more highly display the spirit of comradely cooperation in production and construction. In this way it will become possible to timely correct what is irrational in economic management work, in the orgnization of production, in the organization of labor, maximally and effectively utilize all the manpower and material resources of the country, and ultimately, develop production at a ceaseless high rate of speed.

All this shows that working people's revolutionary fervor constitutes the decisive factor in pushing the development of socialist production, and bespeaks that only by ceaselessly enhancing people's revolutionary fervor is it possible to energetically step up socialist economic construction.

It is a great truth positively proved through practical experience in our country's socialist economic construction that when working people's revolutionary fervor is enhanced, it is possible to bring about ceaseless leaps forward and innovations in production and construction.

Our party, by always giving a firm priority to the ideological revolution based on its scientific analysis of the controlling role ideological consciousness plays in people's action and the importance of ideological work in the revolutionary struggle and by highly promoting the revolutionary fervor of the masses of working people, has been able to bring about a ceaseless upsurge in socialist construction.

Our people's struggle for postwar socialist construction was conducted under arduous conditions indeed. We had to step up basic socialist construction in the difficult situation that internal and external class enemies and betrayers of the revolution were unprecedentedly intensifying their machinations and that materials and funds were also in short supply.

In precisely such a period the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, by personally going in among the working class and highly inspiring its revoutionary fervor, brought about a great upswing in socialist construction and marked the great beginning of the chollima movement.

The working class of Kangson infinitely loyal to the great leader, with the high awareness of being the master of revolution, worked the miracle of producing 120,000 tons of steel materials from a blooming mill with the nominal capacity of 60,000 tons, and the working class of the Kim Ch'aek Iron Complex scored the prideful achievement of producing 270,000 tons of pig iron from a blast furnace with the nominal capacity of 190,000 tons. With the fire of the chollima movement dynamically blazing everywhere throughout the country, great leaps forward and innovations were made one after another in all branches, at all units of the people's economy, and our people scored the brilliant victory of fulfilling the enormous Five-Year Plan in two and a half years in terms of total volume of industrial production.

As working people's revolutionary fervor was highly promoted under the sagacious leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the historic task of socialist industrialization was accomplished in a mere 14 postwar years in our country, a task which others had taken a century, nay, several centuries to complete, and a powerful socialist self-reliant national economy came to be built.

The "70-day battle" in 1974 and the "100-day battle" mounted with the Sixth Party Congress close at hand, which have taken their shining places in the history of our country's socialist economic construction, clearly show once again that even under conditions that the economy has grown in scope and the interbranch production-consumption linkages have become unprecedentedly complex, it is possible to bring about a great leap forward in production and construction if working people's revolutionary fervor is highly promoted.

Our party, by directly initiating the "70-day battle" in 1974 and sagaciously leading the entire party members and working people to step up production and construction brimming with fiery enthusiasm and creative vigor, scored the miraculous achievement of making industrial production grow 1.7 fold at a bound compared with the same period of preceding year. Again, our party, energetically leading all party members and working people to dynamically move forward in the spirit of the speed battle joined to the chollima with fiery loyalty to the party and the leader and increasing industrial production to 142 percentduring last year's "100-day battle" compared with the same period of preceding year, glorified the historic Six KWP Congress as the great festival of a prideful victor.

All these victories and achievements scored under the sagacious leadership of the party constitute energetic proof of the correctness and tremendous vitality of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's thought and theory on the decisive factor in the development of the socialist economy.

The thought and theory enunciated by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song that working people's revolutionary fervor constitutes the decisive factor in the development of socialist production has tremendous theoretical and practical significance.

By this thought and theory enunciated by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has been clearly illuminated the road to achieving a ceaseless high rate of speed in socialist economic construction and a guiding principle provided which must be tightly maintained in economic guidance and enterprise management. Again, a sound guarantee has been provided for energetically demonstrating with practical achievements the superiority of socialism over capitalism and strengthening the traction force and influencing power of socialism.

The thought and theory scientifically enunciated and the correctness positively proved through practice that working people's revolutionary fervor constitutes the decisive factor in the development of socialist production--this has more clearly shown up the fallacy of the opportunist theory that as the economy grows in scope, the pace of growth of production slows down, and the revolutionary theory of the working class on socialist, communist construction has been further developed and enriched.

Truly, the thought and theory set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song on the decisive factor in the development of socialist production is becoming a powerful weapon for socialist economic construction and a common heritage for the revolutionary peoples struggling for socialism and communism.

Today we are faced with the glorious and rewarding task to energetically launch the struggle to realize the magnificent program of socialist construction set forth by the historic Sixth KWP Congress. In order to successfully carry out this enormous task, it is imperative to even more highly promote the revolutionary fervor of working people.

In order to develop production at a ceaseless high rate of speed, highly promoting working people's revolutionary fervor, it is imperative above all to strengthen political work among them.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"Party organizations, giving priority to political work, must organize and mobilize the broad masses in the fulfillment of revolutionary tasks, and move and set in motion all party members and working people by the method of one moving ten, the ten in turn moving a hundred, the hundred in turn moving a thousand." (Booklet "Summing-Up Report on the Work of the Central Committee to the Sixth Congress of the Korean Workers Party," p 124)

Working people's revolutionary fervor can be highly promoted only if with the strengthening of political work their ideological consciousness level is raised and all of them are made to have the awareness of being the master of revolution.

All guidance functionaries, holding it as the first process of work to indoctrinate and remold people in accordance with the demands of the Ch'ongsan-ri spirit, the Ch'ongsan-ri method, and the Taean work system created by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, must organize and conduct all tasks, and setting the fervor and initiative of the masses in motion, more thoroughly establish the trait of carrying out the revolutionary tasks at hand. In particular, the guidance functionaries, going down to the base level and living together with the masses, must teach them, positively lead them, and inspiring party members and working people by the method of moving one who in turn moves ten who in turn move a hundred who in turn move a thousand, ceaselessly bring about new leaps forward and innovations in production and construction.

Important in highly promoting working people's revolutionary fervor is substantively conducting political work in close combination with practical struggle to carry through the teachings of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the guidelines of the party.

Political work is work with people and its objective is to energetically step up socialist construction, thoroughly carrying through the teachings of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the embodiment, the policies of the party.

Party organizations and functionaries, letting party members and working people know the concrete ways to carry through the teachings of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the embodiment, the policies of the party, must aim political work at solving the questions pending at production sites. In this way they must make all party members and working people clearly understand the intent of the great leader and the party so that they may successfully carry out their assigned revolutionary tasks, highly displaying an attitude befitting the master of revolution and the revolutionary spirit of self-reliance.

Important in highly promoting the fervor and positiveness of working people is commendably conducting daily necessities supply work for them.

Daily necessities supply work for working people is not a simple administrative job performance task but an energetic political work inspiring their labor enthusiasm. When working people's living conditions are insured even better with daily necessities supply work commendably conducted, they will come to more deeply recognize the correctness of the policies of the party and the superiority of our country's socialist system and highly display their revolutionary fervor and creative positiveness in all tasks.

Therefore, all functionaries, by paying keen attention to daily necessities supply work and satisfactorily insuring the material and cultural living conditions of working people, must strive to make one and all energetically step up production and construction without feeling inconvenience in life in the least.

One of the important ways to step up socialist economic construction, positively promoting working people's revolutionary fervor lies in planning and coordinating organizational guidance work.

The socialist society is a highly organized society, a society where everything is organically meshed. Consequently, apart from organizational guidance work no eonomic work can be carried out nor is it possible to translate the revolutionary fervor of the masses into a substantive production achievement. Only when underlined with organizational guidance work is it possible to thoroughly mesh the linkages between branches of the people's economy, between production units, insure conditions capable of making working people work to the heart's content, continue to heighten their revolutionary fervor, and energetically step up production and construction.

All functionaries, thoroughly carrying through the demands of the great Taean work system and of the guidelines for unified, detailed planning, must formulate a realistic, dynamic plan and amply deliver raw materials and supplies so that the masses may display their strength and wisdom to the utmost in production and construction, and by conducting production command with mobility and timely unlocking locked-in links, must continue to highly promote their revolutionary fervor.

Also important in stepping up production and construction by enhancing working people's revolutionary fervor is commendably conducting the work of evaluating labor.

In the socialist society, as the masses of working people become the master of the society, an altogether new interest in labor, a politicomoral interest emerges and develops but at the same time, relative to the transitional character of the society, a material interest in labor still remains. Therefore, only if the work of evaluating the results of labor is commendably conducted is it possible to make the working people have pride and self-esteem in the work they have done and more positively work with initiative.

The basics of the work of evaluating working people's labor are the sociopolitical evaluation to determine how they have worked for the sake of society and collective. All guidance functionaries, positively seeking out positive examples set in production and construction, must widely introduce and propagandize them and give socially positive prominence to the working people devotedly working for the sake of collective and society. At the same time, under conditions that a material interest in labor still exists, they must also direct attention to precisely implementing the socialist principle of distribution, the socialist system of labor remuneration.

Particularly important in commendably evaluating labor is thoroughly carrying through the system of summing up daily production and finance.

The system created by our party for summing up daily production and finance is a unique form of economic management correctly combining politicomoral and material incentives and evaluation. This system, with data obtained from daily fulfillment of revolutionary duties, makes the summation conducted by the political method of keeping alive what is good and of timely correcting deficiencies, and new measures formulated. Again, it makes a precise administrative economic way sought out to maintain continuing innovation, continuing forward movement, analyszing what is good and what is bad in the daily activities of production and finance in terms of logic to suit the principle of science and technology.

The functionaries, deeply recognizing the intrinsic nature and superiority of the system of summing up daily production and finance, must amply provide conditions for production units to regualrly conduct summing-up work and lead them to continue to deepen and substantively carry through the system. When precisely doing so, the producer masses, with an attitude befitting the master toward production and management, will come to more assiduously, earnestly run the naton's economy and positively step up production and construction, highly displaying their revolutionary fervor and creative initiative.

All of our functionaries, by continuing to highly promote the revolutionary fervor of party members and working people and accelerating the all-out march movement to carry through the decisions of the historic Sixth Party Congress, shall positively serve in fulfilling the second Seven-Year Plan ahead of schedule and brilliantly occupying the magnificent targets of the new prospective tasks.

NATURE REMAKING PROJECTS ARE A REWARDING STRUGGLE TO PROVIDE AN INDEPENDENT, CREATIVE LIFE FOR THE MASSES OF WORKING PEOPLE

Pyongyang KULLOJA in Korean No 5, May 81 pp 48-53

[Article by Nam Il-yong]

[Text] It is the 35th anniversary since the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, initiating the historic Pot'ong River Embankment Reinforcement Project, personally broke the ground.

The Pot'ong River Embankment Reinforcement Project, which was brilliantly accomplished under the sagacious leadership of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, was an awesome Mother Nature remaking project carried out by our people for the first time on the road of building a new society, a new life, and a great beacon fire which energetically inspired the whole party and the entire people to the rewarding struggle of conquering nature. With the Pot'ong River Embankment Reinforcement Project as a turning point, the history of a majestic struggle to remake Mother Nature began in our country and amid this formidable struggle our land has been transformed into a people's paradise guaranteeing a happy life for the people. With nature remaking projects energetically pushed, our people have come to be able to enjoy to the heart's content an independent, creative life in this beautiful land of ours, a good place to live, and go forward to consolidate a reliable base of life for the prosperity of posterity.

The prideful victories and achievements scored in Mother Nature remaking projects give our people a great sense of pride and self-esteem and energetically encourage and inspire the entire party members and working people to further step up the struggle to remake and conquer nature.

Nature remaking projects are a rewarding struggle to completely liberate the masses of working people even from the constraints of nature and provide them with an independent, creative life, and a sacred task to hand down prosperity to posterity.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"... after the establishment of the socialist system, it is necessary to consolidate and develop this system without letup and, at the same time, to step up the work of remoulding people and remaking nature in an allround way, through the vigorous promotion of the three revolutions. This alone will make it possible to achieve the full independence of the working masses." (Booklet "Let Us Step Up Socialist Construction Under the Banner of C-uche Thought," p 9)

To say to remake nature means to transform the natural environment to suit the independent demands and aims of people. To put it another way, it is none other nature remaking projects which transform with goal-consciousness natural conditions such as the mountains, rivers, and land so that they may more admirably serve people. Through the struggle to remake and conquer nature the masses of working people will come to quickly cast off the constraints of nature and lay the groundwork for enjoying an affluent, civilized life as the genuine master of nature.

Energetically launching nature remaking projects is one of the important tasks facing the party and state of the working class which have come to power.

The party and state of the working class struggle to provide a more independent, creative life for the masses of working people. In order to successfully discharge this sacred duty, it is imperative to completely liberate the masses of working people not only from exploitation and oppression of all kinds but even from the constraints of outmoded ideas and nature. An important way of liberating the masses of working people from the constraints of nature and providing them with an affluent, civilized life is energetically launching precisely the struggle to remake and conquer nature.

Nature remaking projects, as above all they change unfavorable natural conditions favorable to people, constitute an important guarantee for insuring an independent, creative life for the masses of working people, freeing them from the constraints of nature.

Nature constitutes an important life environment for people. People live in a certain natural environment, process primary raw materials extracted from nature into tools of labor, and obtain various means of life from nature. There can be no life of people divorced from nature.

In the natural environment there are things that help human life but on the other hand, there are things in no small measure that obstruct human life. Natural phenomena such as floods, droughts, and tidal waves inflict great harm on people unless timely steps are taken to overcome them.

Therefore, in order to liberate the masses of working people from the constraints of nature, it is imperative to positively struggle to prevent the hazards of nature beforehand, stepping up nature remaking projects and turning unfavorable conditions favorable. Only by energetically launching the struggle to remake and conquer nature is it posible to prevent the hazards of nature beforehand and transform the natural environment to the advantage of human life. Apart from nature remaking projects it is impossible to successfully overcome unfavorable conditions nor is it possible to brilliantly attain the historic cause for liberating working people from the constraints of nature.

Thus nature remaking projects have important significance in guaranteeing favorable living conditions for the masses of working people through transformation of the natural environment and enabling all working people to enjoy an independent, creative life, liberated from the constraints of nature.

Again, nature remaking projects, by providing favorable conditions for rationally tapping our land and resources and stepping up economic and cultural construction, guarantee an independent, creative material and cultural life for the masses of working people.

In order to provide an independent, creative life for the masses of working people, it is imperative to ceaselessly strengthen the economic foundations of the country, positively tapping and utilizing land and resources, and quickly increase production. Effectively tapping and utilizing our fertile land and abundant resources constitutes an indispensable requirement for stepping up economic construction and improving the standard of living for the people. Only by establishing measures for rationally utilizing in an integrated way our land and natural resources of various kinds such as the forest resource, water resource and underground resources, is it possible to soundly consolidate our national economic foundations, positively increase the production of material wealth and guarantee an affluent, civilized life for the working people.

In order to increase grain production under conditions that we have yet to produce rice by an industrial method, it is imperative to positively push ahead with the task to increase its production, protecting and improving land and at the same time increase the cultivated area, building terraced fields and reclaiming tidelands. Various tasks arising in increasing grain production can be brilliantly carried out precisely through the struggle to remake nature. Again, if we step up nature remaking projects and turn all wet and dry fields into regulation fields adaptable to comprehensive mechanization, we can successfully realize the mechanization of agriculture and quickly liberate the peasants from difficult and backbreaking labor.

At the same time, if we step up nature remaking projects and comprehensively tap and utilize all the mountains, planting various kinds of trees, we can positively develop the fruit industry, sericulture, and livestock industry and satisfactorily fill the daily growing demands for industrial raw materials and lumber as well. When the nature remaking task is energetically launched, it will be possible to effectively utilize the forces of nature such as the rivers and tide and quickly develop the power industry and other branches of the people's economy such as communications and transportation.

All this bespeaks that nature remaking projects are indeed a rewarding task that makes it possible to overcome unfavorable natural conditions and maximally, effectively tap the natural resources and even the forces of nature which were previously beyond human reach to utilize, and provide a more independent, creative life for the working people.

Nature remaking projects are a sacred task to provide a happy life not only for our generation but also for our future generations to come.

This beautiful land of ours is the base of life for our people. Our people have lived in this beautiful land of ours generation after generation and our future generations will also be living in this land. Therefore, when we positively launch the struggle to remake nature, comprehensively tap the mountains and rivers, and erect structures for the ages, they will be used as precious heritages for the prosperity of tens of thousands of generations to come. Although much labor, materials, and time are needed in remaking and conquering nature, once we commendably remake our mountains and rivers, we will be by that much lessening the burden of our future generations and handing down a more favorable life environment to them.

Thus nature remaking projects are not a simple economic job performance task but a rewarding and lofty task to realize the independent stand and attitude of working people and hand down prosperity to posterity.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, by unfurling early on a magnificent plan for remaking Mother Nature with his deep insights into the importance of nature remaking projects in realizing the independent stand and attitude of the masses of working people, has energetically inspired the whole party and the entire people to the majestic struggle for remaking and conquering nature.

In the plan unfurled by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song for remaking Mother Nature are clearly enunciated the ways to completely change the face of our land, carrying out the introduction of irrigation to the rural economy and comprehensive utilization of the water resource, the creation of economic forests and comprehensive utilization of the mounts, the readjustment and improvement of land, the reclamation of tideland, and provide a happier life for the working people and achieve an unending national prosperity, strengthening the national economic foundations.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, by comprehensively enunciating the principled questions in successfully carrying out the nature remaking task, has provided a programmatic principle which makes it possible to energetically launch nature remaking projects.

One of the important questrions arising in remaking and conquering nature is energetically launching nature remaking projects as an all-people movement. The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"Party organizations must energetically organize and launch nature remaking projects as an all-people movement." ("Kim Il-song Selected Works," Vol 7, p 326)

Nature remaking projects are a task for the ages to bring about the enrichment, strengthening and development of the country, an awesome task that can be successfully carried out only if enormous labor, facilities, and materials are mobilized. Therefore, the Mother Nature remaking task can be successfully carried out only through an all-people movement. The strength and wisdom of the masses of working people are inexhaustible and when these are maximally promoted, there is no task that cannot be done.

If nature remaking projects are launched as an all-people movement with the broad masses of working people set in motion, it will be possible to successfully solve all questions that arise, maximally mobilizing reserves and possibilities, and brilliantly carry out any nature remaking project, however enormous, in a short period.

In the past period our party and people, by energetically launching an all-out mass movement, brilliantly accomplished the introduction of irrigation and created economic foredsts and orchards on an enormous scale and performed the great miracle of creating in a mere 20 days a water resource to irrigate 100,000 chongbo. This bespeaks that nature remaking projects are precisely an enormous, awesome task that can be admirably carried out only with the participation of the broad masses of people.

In order to successfully insure the nature remaking task, it is also imperative to formulate a general land development plan and based thereon rationally tap and utilize land and resources.

One of the major objectives of remaking nature lies in maximally, effectively tapping and utilizing land and resources. In order to rationally tap and utilize land and resources, it is imperative to formulate a general land development plan and based thereon step up land development and nature remaking projects. Under conditions that the demands of various branches of the people's economy for land and resources are diverse and the questions arising in tapping resources are intricately related to one another, it is impossible to rationally tap and utilize land and resources unless nature remaking projects are launched based on a general land development plan.

As the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught, a general land development plan is a unified, comprehensive long- erm plan to rationally tap and utilize resources, readjust and beautify land to suit the development of the people's economy and the promotion of people's well-being and run the nation's overall economy foreisghtedly on a planned basis.

Only by formulating a general land development plan and launching nature remaking projects based thereon is it possible to tap and utilize land and resources to meet not only the immediate demands but also the prospective demands of the developing people's economy. Again, only then will it be possible to prevent beforehand return work on original projects and save material and money and more assiduously run the nation's economy.

Therefore, to formulate a general land development plan and tap land and resources based thereon constitutes one of the most important principles that must be strictly adhered to in nature remaking projects and a firm guarantee that makes it possible to step up socialist economic construction and quickly improve the standard of living for the people.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, also enunciating the targets into which the major efforts must be put for carrying out nature remaking projects and personally leading the whole party and the entire people sagaciously, has led our people's struggle for remaking and conquering nature to brilliant victory.

Our country abounds in rivers but in bygone days they used to inflict great harm on our people's life. Up to their ears in plundering our country's abundant resources, the Japanese imperialist aggressors had neglected flood control and water conservancy, with the result that every year landslides and floods destroyed farmlands and dwellings and many people were subjected to horrible misfortune and suffering. Therefore, following liberation it arose in our country as an urgent task that could no longer be put off, to remake the mountains and rivers.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, with his deep insight into this urgent question in the first days of building a new fatherland, personally initiated the Pot'ong River Embankment Reinforcement Project in May 1946, scooped up the first shovelful of dirt, and sagaciously led the way to complete this project in a short period as an all-people movement. Under the sagacious leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, following the Pot'ong project all the other rivers large and small in the country have been transformed into rivers of scenic beauty and happiness powerful enough to withstand any major flood and capable of serving national economic development and people's life even better.

After the Pot'ong project the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, with a magnificent plan for greening the mountains of the fatherland which had been laid waste, climbed Munsubong in April 1947 and personally planting a tree, energetically inspired the entire people to afforestation. Thus in our country a tree-planting movement as part of remaking of Mother Nature was launched on an all-out mass basis and the mountains of the fatherland came to renew their faces day after day. In particular, an epochal turnaround came to happen in the development of the fruit industry with a more rational utilization of land through the struggle to carry through the guidelines set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song at the plenary meeting of the Party Central Committee in December 1959 for stepping up the creation of economic forests and his guidelines set forth at the Pukch'ong expanded meeting of the standing committee of the Party Central Committee in April 1961 for establishing orchards in the hills on an extensive scale.

It was an important part of the content of the nature remaking task to realize the introduction of irrigation to the rural economy, a pressing requirement for increasing agricultural production on a secure basis. In light of the situation of our country in which wet-field rice, representing an immense preponderance in our farming, used to suffer from droughts or floods almost every year, the only possible way to reap good harvests on a secure basis was realizing the introduction of irrigation to the rural economy.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, as early as immediately after liberation defining the introduction of irrigation as a nature remaking target into which priority efforts must be put for developing the rural economy, sagaciously organized and led the struggle to build a network of irrigation throughout the country.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"Our party put efforts into the introduction of irrigation from as early as immediately after liberation and in particular, as agricultural cooperativization was realized, energetically launched irrigation projects and flood control and water conservancy projects as an all-state, all-people movement." ("Kim Il-song Selected Works," Vol 4, 2d impression, p 45)

What had important significance in realizing the introduction of irrigation to the rural economy was the plenary meeting of the Party Central Committee in September 1958. At this plenary meeting the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song set forth the militant slogan "every effort toward expansion of the irrigated area by 1 million chongbo!" and launched large-scale irrigation projects at state expense on the one hand and energetically led localities and cooperative farms to positively launch medium and small irrigation projects on their own. Through the struggle to carry through the decision of the plenary meeting of the Party Central Committee in September 1958 a decisive turnaround was brought about in realizing the introduction of irrigation to the rural economy and a firm guarantee was provided for ceaselessly increasing agricultural production.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, with a view to consolidating the achievements scored in the introduction of irrigation to the rural economy and further strengthening the agricultural production foundations, laid down the 5-point nature remaking guidelines at the twelfth plenary meeting of the Fifth Party Central Committee and subsequently at the thirteenth plenary meeting of the Fifth Party Central Committee the guidelines for energetically launching the struggle to pump out underground water. As a result of an all-people movement launched under the sagacious leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song to carry through the 5-point nature remaking guidelines and the guidelines for an energetic struggle to pump out underground water, the irrigation system of our country's rural economy came to be further augmented and a firm guarantee provided for increasing agricultural production always on a secure basis, overcoming any unusual climatic phenomenon.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, who has always paid keen attention to nature remaking projects, was already planning during the formidable Fatherland Liberation War nature remaking projects for developing the inland heights in the north which had long been forsaken from the misty past and for reclaiming the large areas of tideland along the west coast into fertile paddy fields, and has positively pushed the projects.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song dispatched a survey team to the inland heights in 1952 when fierce battles were still going on, and led the way to establish Number 5 Farm with tens of thousands of chongbo under cultivation in the Kaema Heights and Paengmu Heights and a large number of state-operated ranches such as Changjin Ranch.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, who had early on enunciated the direction and way of extensively reclaiming tideland, personally inspected the tideland on a lonely island a score li off the west coast in the summer of 1958 and August 1966 and energetically led the way to commendably reclaim the tideland. It was because of the presence of the sagacious leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song that nature remaking projects could be initiated in our country to reclaim tideland, and today an energetic struggle is under way to attain the goal of reclaiming 300,000 chongbo of tideland in the near future.

Thus with the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song energetically leading the rewarding struggle to remake Mother Nature from immediately after liberation, our people have been able to successfully solve various complex questions arising in remaking and conquering nature.

Under the sagacious leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song our party and people have scored great achievements indeed in the nature remaking task.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"We have built many things up to now and made this land of our fatherland even more beautiful and fertile. This has all been achieved with the blood and sweat of our people and is a precious resource for their happy life." (Ibid., p 314)

One of the most important achievements scored through nature remaking projects is that the ugly scars left behind by the old exploiting society on our land have been completely removed and the face of the country has been basically renewed.

Before liberation our country's rivers and farmlands had not been properly taken care of and what little forests that had remained standing were so poor that all the mountains were practically bare. As a result of the feudal rule over a long period and the vicious Japanese imperialist policy of colonial plunder, our land had been laid waste and our people could not escape the threat of horrible natural disasters year after year.

But after liberation, with the struggle dynamically launched to remake and conquer nature under the sagacious leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the ugly scars left behind by the old exploiting society on our land have been removed in a clean sweep and the natural calamities that used to take away people's lives and properties have been eliminated for good. Today our people are fully enjoying a secure life in this beautiful land of our fatherland and have soundly created precious resources which make it possible to hand down even more fertile land to our future generations.

Another important achievement scored in nature remaking projects is that with the agricultural production foundations strengthened and land and resources rationally tapped, the nation's economy has come to develop rapidly.

Under the sagacious leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song sound foundations have been laid in our country which make it possible to reap good harvests on a secure basis under any condition with the introduction of irrigation to the rural economy brilliantly accomplished and with nature remaking projects such as the building of terraced fields and land readjustment and improvement positively pushed. In recent years many countries of the world have been experiencing extremely serious food shortages on account of the effect of the cold front but our people, because of the presence of powerful agricultural production foundations, are reaping bumper harvests of all crops year after year, satisfactorilly filling with our own production the daily growing grain demands. It is no accident that today our foreign friends, unable to hold back their admiration for the closely knit irrigation network of our country, call our country "a country of irrigation" and envy our country's powerful agricultural production foundations.

As a result of nature remaking projects energetically pushed, the mountains of our country representing almost 80 percent of our land, have been transformed into an El Dorado of orchards and rich treasures of other resources positively serving our national economic development, and the tideland on the west coast, which used to teem with reeds, now transformed into silken tracts of land, into fertile paddy fields, is proving its worth more and more with each passing day.

Indeed through the rewarding struggle to remake Mother Nature a watershed event has taken place in our country and an epochal advance has been registered in the attainment of the historice cause for liberation of the masses of working people from the constraints of nature.

We must go forward to step up the struggle to consolidate the victories and achievements scored in nature remaking projects under the sagacious leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and organize this beautiful land of our fatherland into an even more beautiful, fertile people's paradise.

All functionaries, party members, and working people, by more energetically launching the struggle to remake and conquer nature, shall more brilliantly ralize the far-sighted plan of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song who is intent on providing a more independent, creative life for our people.

THE U.S. IMPERIALIST POLICY OF COLONIAL MILITARY FASCISM WHICH IS BECOMING MORE BLATANT IN SOUTH KOREA

Pyongyang KULLOJA in Korean No 5, May 81 pp 54-58

[Article by Sok Yon-t'aek]

[Text] Today the U.S. imperialists are intensifying their venomous colonial military fascist rule in south Korea more than at any time.

On account of the vicious U.S. impeiralist colonial military fascist rule south Korea has been turned into a most miserable hell on earth in the last decades of the 20th century where mass terrorism and murder are openly perpetrated and the freedom and right of the people are mercilessly trampled, and a more grave obstacle is being created on the road ahead for fatherland reunification.

All the facts unfolding in south Korea clearly show that the U.S. imperialists are indeed the ringleaders of aggression and war, fascism and division, and our people's diabolical enemy.

Military fascist dictatorship is one of the basic forms of rule on which the imperialists rely in enforcing colonialist domination and enslavement in other countries.

The imperialists, when the people's struggle for anti-imperialist sovereignty heightens in their colonial countries and their rule faces a crisis, take to enforcing a blatant military fascist rule, discarding their disguise of "democratic parliamentary politics" which was nominal in the first place.

The military fascist rule of the imperialists is a product of the total crisis of imperialist colonial rule and the last means of political dictatorship of the scoundrels.

The military fascist dictatorship established by the U.S. impeiralists in south Korea is becoming a model of the vicious military fascist rule of the imperialists over their colonies.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"The United States, occupying south Korea for 35 long years, has enforced its harsh colonial rule and encouraged the south Korean dictators to mercilessly trample the democratic freedoms and rights of the people." (Booklet "Summing-Up Report on the Work of the Central Committee to the Sixth Congress of the Korean Workers Party," p 67)

The U.S. imperialists, who sneaked into south Korea, wearing the mask of "helper" and "protector" after 15 August [1945 liberation], have enforced their military occupation policy with a view to turning south Korea into their permanent colony, on the one hand, and gathering reactionary elements, have formed a puppet regime and continually replacing their lackeys, have maintained their colonial military fascist rule to the present.

In the 1940's and 1950's the U.S. imperialists fabricated the Syngman Rhee puppet regime as the enforcer of their colonial military fascist rule and harshly trampled and obliterated the democratic freedoms and rights of the south Korean people, and in the 1960's and 1970's, inciting traitor Pak Chong-hui, set up the most tyrannical military fascist dictatorship and transformed south Korea into the worst area of human rights violation.

In particular, as we are into the 1980's the U.S. imperialist policy of colonial military fascism enforced against south Korea is taking on an even more venomous and bestial character.

Today the viciousness of the colonial military fascist policy of the U.S. imperialists which is becoming more blatant day by day in south Korea, is being intensively manifested above in the military fascist "administration" the scoundrels have fabricated.

The U.S. imperialist colonial rule is enforced by their field puppet regime. Accordingly, the composition and functions of the puppet regime the U.S. imperialists fabricate graphically reflect the scoundrels' policy of aggression.

The U.S. imperialists, by stifling the unanimous demands of the south Korean people aiming for antifascist democratization after the death of traitor Pak Chong-hui and fabricating the Chon Tu-hwan military fascist "administration," have turned the whole of south Korea into a caldron of fascism.

To speak about traitor Chon Tu-hwan, he is a diabolical fascist fanatic long trained by the U.S. imperialists and a human butcher who has killed at random thousands, tens of thousands of south Korean youths and students and patriotic people who rose up in the anti-dictatorship democratization struggle.

The U.S. imperialists, activating their latent lackey, traitor Chon Tu-hwan, made him carry out the "12 December military coup d'etat" in 1979 and the 17 May riot in 1980, and then made him form "The Committee of Emergency Measures for National Defense," headquarters of the fascist dictatorship, and concentrate all powers in it.

The U.S.imperialists, sinister and cunning as they are, with a view to giving a cosmetic beauty treatment to the vicious Chon Tu-hwan gang's military fascist rule, espoused so-called "respective independence of the legislature, the executive, and the judicature" and defining south Korea's form of rule as "a president-centered system," put traitor Chon Tu-hwan in the seat of "President." Essentially, the so-called "president-centered system" fabricated by the U.S. imperialists in south Korea means one-man dictatorship, that is, fascistization of the ruling system.

In fact, the U.S. imperialists not only concentrated all the powers of south Korea's legislature, judicature and administration in the hands of traitor Chon Tu-hwan, a military ganster but organized the "central" and local administrative organs of the puppet government and all the organs of harsh oppression such as the police and intelligence with military gansters. Thus they have made the Chon Tu-hwan puppet gang wield at will despotic and tyrannical powers.

This shows that the U.S. impeiralists, by using traitor Chon Tu-hwan, the maniacal fascist murderer, to further intensify military fascist dictatorship against south Korea, are desperately trying to save their shaky colonial rule and realize their ambitions of aggression at all costs.

That the U.S. imperialist policy of colonial military fascism against south Korea is becoming more blatant is also manifested in the unprecedented strengthening of south Korea's fascist oppression system as a whole.

After handing over the puppet regime to traitor Chon Tu-hwan, the U.S. imperialists have made him further fascistize south Korea's "system of law" and increase by far the apparatuses of oppression and the personnel to suit the demands of their colonialist domination and of their policy of war.

Under the direct manipulation of the U.S. imperialists the Chon Tu-hwan military fascist evil gang in five months alone--from October last year to February this year--perpetrated the criminal act of writing anew or amending for the worse no less than 160 pieces of law which are no better than wartime laws. Heading the list is the puppet government's "Constitution" followed by "National Security Law," "Political Party Law," Special Law on the Renewal of Political Climate," and "Bill for Amendment of the Law on Assembly and Demonstration."

All the evil laws fabricated by traitor Chon Tu-hwan by order of his U.S. master surpass the evil laws of earlier dictators in their harshness and viciousness and these evil laws are being used as a tool for executing the U.S. imperialist policy of military fascism.

On the other hand, by means of strengthening the apparatuses and forces of harsh fascist oppression of the south Korean puppet gang, the U.S. imperialists are pursuing their own policy of colonial military fascism.

The U.S. imperialists, first of all detaching the puppet "Capital Garrison Command" and five "special brigades" from the "ROK-U.S. Joint Command" which exercises the prerogative of supreme command, and handing them over to the south Korean puppets, have made it possible for the Chon Tu-hwan military fascist evil gang to throw into action an enormous force of harsh oppression to suppress the people at any time. Moreover, expanding and strengthening by far the apparatus and power of "National Army Security Command," the U.S. imperialists have made it possible to extend the tentacles of harsh fascist oppression not only within the army but to the public at large as well.

The U.S. imperialists have directed the south Korean puppets to change the name of "Central Intelligence Agency" to "National Security Planning Agency" and revamp its internal apparatus and system to make it even more conveient to suppress the people.

With the whole area of south Korea covered with such diabolical fascist "system of law" and a network of the military, police, intelligence and special service, the south Korean people struggling for freedom and democracy, reunification of the country have come under the most brutal persecution and south Korea has been transformed into a land of darkness where military fascist terrorism without parallel in the world prevails.

The U.S. imperialist policy of colonial military fascism which is becoming more blatant today can be seen clearly in that they are driving the south Korean puppets even more ruthlessly into suppressing the people.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"Today south Korea has been transformed into a most grim living hell in the last days of the 20th century where the atrocity of mass murder is openly perpetrated and the freedom and right of the people are mercilessly trampled." (Ibid., p 66)

It is one of the important techniques of the U.S. imperialist neocolonialist policy to use fascist tyrants as field puppets and through them intensify suppresion against the people.

The unprecedented suppression machinations and bloody tragedies that have taken place in south Korea in recent years were all perpetrated under direct orders of the U.S. imperialists or by their backstage manipulation.

As following the "October incident" of 1979 the ardent desire of the south Korean people for democratization dramatically heightened, the U.S. imperialists while outwardly pretending to support them, actually manipulated behind the scenes military hooligans such as Chon Tu-hwan to perpetrate bloody suppression against the people.

When Kwangju citizens rebellion broke out in May last year, leading U.S. imperialists, holding an "emergency meeting" and deciding to put it down with "ironfisted suppression," drove the Chon Tu-hwan murder gang into committing the atrocity unpardonable for thousands of years of massacring 2,000 of Kwangju citizens and seriously injuring 10,000 in a mere few days.

By order of the U.S. imperialists the Chon Tu-hwan gang proclaimed "emergency martial law" throughout south Korea and suspending the "National Assembly," which was no more than a decorative ornament of democracy to being with, and ordering political parties and social organizations dissolved, banned all political activities and carried out a wholesale arrest, imprisonment, and massacre of patriotic youths, students, and democratic personalities.

In a period of three months alone from the 17 May fascist outrage last year to August the Chon Tu-hwan fascist evil gang threw out 10,000 public employees unpalable to them and put in their places their faithful henchmen with prior service in the puppet army. Again, under the pretext of "purification of the press," they purged some 3,600 journalists and shut down a large number of publications and publishing houses, and perpetrated the bandit-like atrocity of locking up in prisons and military stockades or banishing to lonely island 30,000 innocent inhabitants under the slogan of "purification of the society." The Chon Tu-hwan gang, imprisoning in a clean sweep all those considered intractable to the U.S. imperialist policy of aggression and war, whoever or whatever they may be, are torturing, executing, and massacring them.

The U.S. imperialists are indeed the ringleaders driving the Chon Tu-hwan military gang of hooligans into suppressing and massacring the south Korean people aiming for democracy and reunification, and backstage manipulators positively protecting all the criminal plots of the murderous military fascist "administration."

No sooner had Reagan, leader of the U.S. imperialists, taken the office of the president than he called traitor Chon Tu-hwan to the United States and rerversing the "U.S. troop withdrawal plan" to a clean slate, raved about giving even more murder weapons to the south Korean puppets and that in south Korea "security" must take "precedence over human rights." This graphically betrayed the sinister innermost intentions of U.S. imperialism to enforce an even harsher military fascist terrorist rule in south Korea and drive the puppets to the road of division and war.

The U.S. imperialists, bringing vast aggressive armed forces into south Korea and making a large-scale military exercise racket reeking of gunpowder such as "Team Spirit 81" and threatening with armed force the south Korean people aiming for antifascist democratization, are backing up the military fascist "administration."

Thus the U.S. imperialists are unprecedentedly intensifying their colonial military fascist policy against south Korea, and this is bringing untold misfortune and suffering to the south Korean people.

Today the U.S. imperialist policy of colonial military fascism which is becoming more blatant every day shows that not only has the aggressive nature of U.S. impeiralism not changed but the more the crisis deepens, the more viciously they are maneuvering to realize their heinous ambitions of aggression.

The U.S. imperialists above all through their policy of colonial military fascism against south Korea are trying to realize their heinous ambitiions of aggression, grasping south Korea as their permanent colony, as their military base for aggression and using it as their stronghold.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"The U.S. imperialists, with a view to enforcing their policy of colonialist domination and war against the south Korean people, are clinging to a blatant military fascist dictatorship." ("Kim Il-song Selected Works," Vol 4, 2d impression, pp 386-387)

The U.S. imperialists, who had long had a design on turning Korea into their stronghold for aggression against Asia, have been attaching great significance to the strategic position of Korea since the end of World War II.

The U.S. imperialists, opposing the independent peaceful reunification of Korea to the death from the first day of their occupation of south Korea, have been ceaelessly intensifying their machinations to permanently colonize south Korea and transform it into their military base for aggression.

The U.S. imperialist policy of war and their machinations of militarization which are intensifying daily in south Korea are bringing unbearable misfortune and suffering to the south Korean people by burdening the people with heavy military expenses, forcing extreme poverty and deprivation of rights on them, and aggravating societywide unease. This cannot but further aggravate the national and class conflicts of south Korean society and arouse even greater dissatisfaction and resistance of the people against the U.S. imperialists and their lackeys.

Under such condition, the U.S. imperialists, relying on an extremely vicious military fascist dictatorship, are attempting to suppress the growing resistance of the people, step up their preparations for a war of aggression, and more effectively utilize the south Korean military and economic potentialities in pursuing their policy of aggression.

That the U.S. imperialists are further intensifying their policy of colonial military fascism in south Korea also has to do with the fact that the crisis of the U.S. imperialist colonial rule is becoming more serious.

In recent years, by the steadfast struggle of the peoples of Asia, Africa, and Latin America who have risen up under the banner of anti-imperialist sovereignty the U.S. imperialists have lost their erstwhile colonies everywhere in the world and the U.S. imperialist system of colonial rule has come to uncontrollably disintegrate. In particular, the U.S. imperialists have suffered extreme blows in the region of Asia. The U.S. imperialists, channeling vast armed forces and enormous amounts of dollars into the region of Southeast Asia, had purused a policy of war and intervention but running into strong counterattacks of the peoples in the region, were thrown out of the region after suffering miserable military and political defeats. This shows that the U.S. imperialist strength has weakened and it has become difficult for them to enforce their colonialist domination.

But it is in the nature of law that the aggressive nature of imperialism never changes even if its strength has weakened.

The U.S. imperialists, instead drawing a lesson from their ignominious defeats and withdrawing from Asia, are still clinging to aggression and intervention, trying to continue to maintain their foothold in the region by whatever means.

Driven into predicament, the U.S. imperialists are clinging to such venomous colonial military fascist dictatorship in south Korea in an attempt to hold in their hands as their permanent colony south Korea, the only colony of theirs still remaining on the continent of Asia.

Therefore, their colonial military fascist rule which is becoming more blatant in south Korea does not mean that the position of the U.S. imperialists in this region has strengthened but on the contrary, it has weakened, and bespeaks that it is no more than the last-ditch desperation of the scoundrels.

Harsh oppression of Fascism is the last means of rule to which the imperialists on their way to downfall resort. Intensification of the harsh oppression of Fascism in itself is no less than a harbinger of the downfall of the imperialist colonial rule.

No military fascist dictatorships of the imperialists can become the means of saving their colonial rule. Rather, they will arouse an even greater resistance of the people and cause an explosion of their anger.

As the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught, it is in the nature of law that where there exist exploitation and oppression, there inevitably arises the revolutionary struggle of the people and the more intense the harsh oppression of the oppressors, the more resolute the struggle of the people.

It is in the scheme of things that the long accumulated grievances and indignation of the people against the barbaric colonial military fascist policy of the U.S. imperialists will in the end burst with the flames of resitance to strike and crush the scoundrels. When the people rise up, the imperialists will never be able to stand.

Graphic examples of this were seen in recent years in Iran and Nicaragua from which the U.S. imperialist lackeys were thrown out and their colonial fascist policies were frustrated.

The fate of the U.S. imperialist colonial military fascist policy being enforced in south Korea can never be any different.

Today the south Korean people are unable to hold back their soaring anger and indignation against the U.S. imperialists who have fabricated the diabolical Chon Tu-hwan military dictatorship "administration" and turned south Korea into a living hell, and the anti-U.S. ground well among the south Korean people is growing stronger and stronger. Shouting "Why is the United States helping Chon Tu-hwan kill and injure the innocent people?" and "We have found out clearly that the mastermind standing in the way of our democratization struggle is none other than the United States," the south Korean people are vigorously launching into the struggle against the U.S. imperialist colonial military fascist policy.

The south Korean people are also fighting reaffirming their firm determination to overthrow at all costs the Chon Tu-hwan military fascist "administration" which, getting a ride on the coattails of the U.S. imperialists, has perpetrated diabolical atrocities of murder and harsh oppression.

The Chon Tu-hwan military fascist "administration" which is a tool for the U.S. imperialist colonial rule can never last long.

The Chon Tu-hwan military fascist "administration" is utterly isolated from the southe Korean people; consequently, the base of the scoundrels is being shaken uncontrollably. Traitor Chon Tu-hwan is being isolated and repudiated even by the south Korean reactionary forces and elements of the puppet armed forces, not to mention the people.

Progressive peoples of the world and broad social circles are branding the Chon Tu-hwan military fascist "administration" as an out-and-out puppet regime and are raising their voice of exposing and condemning the criminal acts of the Chon Tu-hwan murder gang. This bespeaks that traitor Chon Tu-hwan is in the darkest situation at present.

The U.S. imperialists must give up their foolish machinations to sustain their colonial military fascist rule in south Korea, putting military hooligans such as Chon Tu-hwan up front, and must withdraw without delay taking with them all their aggressive armed forces.

The U.S. imperialists, by no methods, however vicious and tyrannical, could save their colonial military fascist rule in south Korea which is disintegrating uncontrollably.

The more the U.S. imperialists intensify their colonial military fascist rule in south Korea, the more the struggle of the people will intensify; and this will result in hastening the final collapse of the U.S. imperialist colonial rule in south Korea.

THE U.S. ECONOMY IN SERIOUS CRISIS

Pyongyang KULLOJA in Korean No 5, May 81 pp 59-64

[Article by Kim Hwa-ch'on]

[Text] In recent years in the international arena the anti-imperialist sovereignty revolutionary forces have extraordinarily strengthened while the impeiralist reactionary forces have extremely weakened.

The process of the decline and fall of imperialism is going on at a very fast clip in all areas. An important part of the content of this process is that the imperialist world is going through an unprecedentedly serious economic crisis and its effects are becoming more and more catastrophic.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"At present the imperialist countries are going through a serious economic crisis unprecedented in history. Fuel and raw materials crises are sweeping the capitalist world and the imperialist powers are floundering in utter disorder and chaos on account of stagnation and decline in production, inflation, and mounting unemployment." (Booklet "Summing-Up Report on the Work of the Central Committee to the Sixth Congress of the Korean Workers Party," p 87)

The catastrophic economic crisis of the imperialist world began in the United Sates, and the U.S. imperialist economic crisis constitutes the most intensive expression, a model of the imperialist economic crisis.

The serious economic crisis the U.S. imperialists are going through is being manifested above all in an acute fuel crisis, raw materials crisis.

Fuel and raw materials are the indispensable material elements of production. The process of production is a process of consumption of fuel and raw materials. All the machinery and equipment in the world cannot produce products without fuel and raw materials. Modern industries with vast production capacities and the rapid development of transportation, especially the development of the munitioons industry and the means of military mobility, require ever more fuel and raw materials. The consumption of fuel and raw materials has unprecedentedly grown and growing.

Since the end of World War II, in the imperialist countries, as a result of so-called "energy revolution," coal for fuel and motive power has been replaced for the most part with oil to the point that fuel and motive power have become synonymous with oil. Oil is being widely used as a basic source of fuel and motive power, needless to say, but also as an important raw material for the chemical industry as well as other industrial sectors.

The ratio of oil and natural gas in the U.S. economy in terms of motive power has reached 70-80 percent, and its oil consumption has grown almost twentyfold in the past 20 years. The industries are far from keeping up with the growing demands for fuels such as oil and raw materials, and their costs are continually rising. In one year alone, 1980, energy cost jumped 18.4 percent and among others, heating oil cost rose as much as 20.2 percent.

On account of the dramatic rise in the cost of fuels and raw materials and an extreme scarcity of fuels and raw materials, factories and power plants, the means of transportation and business establishments are unable to operate properly, and many institutions and households are in such a situation that they cannot have even the elementary lighting and heating.

The shortages of fuels and raw materials are affecting even the military requirements.

The U.S. imperialists, who long claimed to have known no shortages of fuels and raw materials, are now in predicament, a situation no different from a state of suffocation, unable to resolve things such as fuels and raw mterials vitally required in large quantities for operating the economy.

The serious economic crisis the U.S. imperialists are going through is also being manifested in such phenomena as production which is stagnant and declining, inflation, rising prices, mounting unemployment, and the worsening living conditions for the masses of working people.

In the major industries such as the automobile industry, steel industry, and construction industry, which are said to be the three pillars of the U.S. economy, and the machine building industry, chemical industry, large corporations are going bankrupt en masse and production is falling drastically.

As typical examples, in the automobile industry large corporations such as Chrysler and Ford are on the verge of bankruptcy and even the largest corportion, General Motors, has suffered the largest loss since 1921. Cutting back auto production in half, the industry let go a quarter of the employees. Along with the reduction in auto production, production continues to fall in the steel and other-related sectors.

The catastrophic state of the U.S. economy is more clearly seen in the runaway inflation and skyrocketing prices. In earlier periods of depression, usually the declining purchasing power and increasing inventories brought down the prices. But the situation has changed now.

Despite the backlog of "surplus" goods and stagnant production accompanying the serious economic crisis, prices are going through the roof and the supply of currency is increasing limitlessly. Thus vicious inflation known as "stagflation" is becoming a chronic disease.

The supply of currency more than doubled in 1979 compared with the early 1970's. 1979 and 1980 were a period in which the worst spiraling inflation last longest in the United States since World War I. In one year alone, 1979, the rate of inflation was 13.3 percent, and the annual rate of price increase jumped to 12.4 percent for 1980.

Interests on bank loans reached 21.5 percent at the end of 1980, the highest ever in history. This is four times as high as the rate prevailing during the depression in 1930.

The runaway inflation and rising prices and high interest rates are leading to a state of paralysis the operating apparatuses of the capitalist economy primarily based on money and credits.

The economic crisis is directly dealing grave blows to the living conditions of the working masses. All the catastrophic phenomena accompanying the serious economic cris are making job-finding, working conditions and material situations more difficult than at any time for wide-raning working people.

As a result of stagnant and declining production, the unemployed who are increasing in number are filling the streets to overflowing.

To quote conservatively released figures, the number of the unemployed in the United States was 3.6 million in 1968, which increased to 4.8 million in 1973, to 7.2 million in 1977. At present the number is reported to far exceed 8.2 million. By the end of 1981 the number is expected to break the 10 million barrier.

What attracts attention in the trend of the extensively increasing number of the unemployed is the jump in the number of the unemployed youth. Against 8 percent of the unemployed as a whole, the rate of the unemployed youth is 19 percent, or more than twofold. The younger generation is in the hopeless situation that they have never been able to find any job at all in the first place.

The living conditions are worsening for the working people as a whole as a large number of them lose their jobs, the sole source of their income, what with the increasing cost of living stemming from inflation and rising prices. The very survival of most of the working people is being threatened as they are unable to meet their minimum material and cultural needs.

The serious economic crisis the U.S. imperialists are going through is also fatally affecting their foreign economic relations beyond the national scale.

As their competitive edge in the international economy weakens, U.S. goods are losing markets everywhere while the monopolies of other countries such as Japan, making inroads on U.S. domestic markets, are expanding their sales. U.S. trade deficits and foreign debts are ceaselessly increasing.

Along with a decrease in gold holdings, suspension of conversion of the dollar to gold, and a drastic drop in dollar exchange value, the dominant position of the dollar has collapsed in the currency and financial transactions of the capitalist world. Thus the dollar has now lost to all intents and purposes its functions as the leading international currency.

How deep the serious economic crisis is can be seen also in the fact that even the reactionary ruling circles are confused, critical of their economic situation.

Warned a group of the House of Representatives in its report of assessment of the economy that unless emergency measures were taken immediately to treat the sick economy, it could go completely bankrupt within 24 months. And it went on to argue that in order to "solve" the urgent economic problems, it must be the first order of business of the Reagan Administration to proclaim a state of economic emergency nationwide. Meanwhile, the Reagan Administration, ranting about "economic reform" upon assuming office, is exerting itself to "insure the vitality of the economy."

The economic crisis the U.S. imperialists are going through is unprecedented in history in its seriousness. Capitalism has been going through cyclical economic depressions and crises. Among them was the 1929-1933 depression that swept the whole world. During that depression the U.S. imperialists had suffered the severest blows among all nations.

But the present economic crisis is becoming a catastrophe worst in terms of its breadth and seriousness unparalleled in capitalist depressions. Today's economic crisis is an extension of the continual economic crises from the end of World War II to the present and a more serious one at that. Its basic characteristics lie in that it is a full-scale crisis where the phenomenon of backlog of goods innate in cyclical depressions caused by surplus production and the phenomenon such as previously unseen fuel crisis and raw materials crisis are all at the same time compounded and entangled, that it is a chronic crisis where the state of economic stagnation ceaselessly deepens.

Catastrophic as the economic depressions and crises were in the past period, there has been no such crisis that, as at present, not only the industrial depression and the financial and monetary crises but also an extreme scarcity of fuels and raw materials were all at the same time compounded. And even when production drastically fell and the overall economic life came to a standstill on account of an economic depression or a catastrophic situation, things used to be "restored" gradually after a certain period and "increased vitality" and "boom" used to appear clearly. But now amid the depression caused by surplus production and at the same time with the phenomenon of an unprecedentedly acute crisis and the phenomenon of sacrcity entangled, the economy is going deeper into stagnation and depression continually without the benefit of "increased vitality" and "boom."

In a word, the economic stagnation and crisis have become comprehensive, not in some parts, and perpetual, not temporary.

Such facts mean that the imperialist economy is now losing the vitality that used to enable it to get back on its track, going through the sequence of cyclical booms.

The economic crisis the U.S. imperialists are going through, by affecting all the links of reproduction such as production, distribution, exchanges, and consumption and by frustrating their interlinkages, is throwing the economic life into an extreme disorder and chaos. Various kinds of national measures called "retrenchment policies," "subsidies for business," "restraining inflation," and "preventing unemployment" are not only failing to eliminate the economic confusion and conflict but are only bringing the result of aggravating them on the contrary.

The deepening economic crisis in the United States, shaking the whole fabric of social life from under, is exerting serious effects on it. The political crisis within the U.S. ruling circles is one of the graphic expressions of it. The economic problems are growing into actue political problems. Political confusion and government crisis are occurring frequently along with the economic crisis.

It is no accident then that the press is commenting that what had driven out scoundrel Carter, former president, from the White House had significantly to do with his failure to solve domestic problems such as the burning issue of inflation and energy.

The deterioration of their economic position as a result of the serious economic crisis is becoming an important factor making the position even more untenable for the U.S. imperialists who, as head of the capitalist world, used to indulge in arbitrariness in bygone days. The U.S. imperialists, dominating the capitalist world politically and militarily with their might of nuclear weapons and the dollar, have been behaving as its leader.

But they had lost their nuclear monopoly a long time ago and the repeated economic crises have weakened their economic strength severely. The U.S. imperialists no longer have the dominant power capable of tying up other countries economically.

The U.S. imperialist influence and prestige are declining day after day in the capitalist world, and neither their pressure nor their command works as before. At the same time, the imperialist alliance where the U.S. imperialists used to be the pillar, is being torn asunder.

The serious economic crisis the U.S. imperialists are going through today is above all an inevitable product of the imperialist economy whose anarchy has reached the apex under the domination of monopoly capital.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"It is one of the laws that economic depression and economic chaos arise in the capitalist society where production is conducted anarchically based on private ownership of the means of production." ("Answers to Questions Posed by Foreign Journalists," Vol 2, p 215)

Essentially, private, capitalistic ownership of the means of production, fragmenting ownership and economic management and operation into innumerable units, makes them move by the law of the jungle with a view to pursuing more profits. This makes the unified coordination and linkages of the economy impossible and inevitably puts societywide production in a state of anarchy. Thus in the capitalist society production rises as profits rise but when profits are smaller or the anarchic nature of production intensifies, the economy comes to fall into a state of standstill and go through economic chaos and crisis. Economic chaos and crisis are a phenomenon of the law whose source lies precisely in the capitalist economic system itself.

Since the end of World War II in the United States, under the positive protection of reactionary national apparatus the accumulation and concentration of production and capital have been expedited extraordinarily and ownership of the monopolies has expanded wildly in scope. At the same time, the avarice and arbitrariness of large monopolies pursuing maximum profits have intensified to an unheard-of degree and so has the competition among them.

The conflict between the social character of production and ownership in private, capitalistic form has reached the limits. The economy which has grown enormously in scope calls for it as an absolute demand to strengthen on a societywide scale the interdependence between branches and units, the links of reproduction and enterprises, and their unified coordination and linkages. The arbitrariness of large monopolies separate in ownership, separate in entities pursuing high profits makes the unified coordination and linkages of the economy as a whole impossible, and if anything, only encourages its blindness and autogenesis. Thus the economic chaos and crisis have come to take on a more destructive character and form which are intensifying even more.

The serious economic crisis the U.S. imperialists are going through also has to do significantly with the intensifying conflict of reproduction stemming from the frenzied armament race and militarization of the economy.

The U.S. imperialists, invariably pursuing their policy of aggression and war with their unswerving ambitions for world hegemony, have been clinging to extensive militarization of the economy. Thus escalating military expenditures, they have one-sidedly expanded munitions production at the sacrifice of civilian production and squandered enormous manpower and materials in pursuing military objectives.

Militarization of the economy, deforming the branch structures of the economy, is frustrating the normal linkages between economic branches. On the other hand, causing the intensification of plunder by taxes and reckless issuance of currency and national bonds, it is reducing the purchasing power of the broad working masses and aggravating chaos in economic operations.

In this way as militarization of the economy goes on on an ever larger scale, the conflict of reproduction gets aggravated further and the economy is caught up in the whirlpool of an uncontrollable crisis.

The direct cause of the economic crisis the U.S. imperialists are going through lies especially in that the colonialist exploitation and plunder system on which they have been relying, is being liquidated.

The imperialist economy, in terms of its structure and system, is an economy based on harsh exploitation and plunder against backward countries, colonially enslaved states. The imperialist monopolies have grown up and fattened themselves by the method of plundering overseas at nominal prices primary resources necessary for production such as fuel and raw materials and of investing capital in other countries and selling their products at high prices. The U.S. imperialists are the biggest and shameless international exploiters and plunderers.

But it is the intrinsic deficiency and weakness of the imperialist economy that it cannot sustain itself for a moment apart from its exploitation and plunder of colonially enslaved countries and its reliance on their resources. Under the new historic conditions that the masses of oppressed, mistreated colonial people are entering the state as the master in command of their destiny, such intrinsic deficiency and weakness are driving the imperialist economy into an inextricable crisis.

Amid the sweeping flames of the national liberation struggle the imperialist colonial system is being liquidated once and for all, and Third World countries, newly emerging countries, dynamically moving forward along the road of sovereignty, are dealing continuing blows to imperialism. Thus the exploitation and plunder system of the imperialists against colonially enslaved states and backward countries is collapsing thoroughly. Precisely this is becoming an important direct cause of the crisis of the imperialist economy where the fuel crisis and raw materials crisis are becoming more serious day after day.

As the realities show, the economies of the U.S. imperialists and other imperialist countries, as it became impossible for them to dominate and plunder at will as in the past the oil resources of the Middle East, have come to experience crises in raw materials, in fuel, in motive power, and with this as a catalyst, are being sucked into an ever more serious full-scale crisis.

It is their deserved sovereign rights that no one may violate that the colonially oppressed peoples break the imperialist chains and the peoples of newly emerging countries defend their economic interests. The imperialists have now come to choke on the very economic system and structure of brigandish exploitation and plunder they have themselves built in other countries.

The prospects of the U.S. imperialist economic crisis are bleak. The more the domination and arbitrariness of monopoly capital intensify, the more the anarchic character of reproduction will grow and the more the economic chaos and crisis will deepen.

As the ranks of the newly emerging countries grow and their struggle becomes stronger for their economic self-sufficiency and establishment of a new international economic order, the imperialists are thrown out of everywhere, losing their hereditary sources of raw materials, markets, and capital investment areas.

Consequently, there is no doubt that the economic crisis of the U.S. imperialists will become more serious with each passing day and the afetereffects more and more catastrophic.

As their economic crisis becomes more serious, bringing the day of reckoning nearer, the U.S. imperialists are desperately trying to the death to get out of it. As the economic crisis is unprecedentedly serious and hopeless, their desperate maneuverings too are taking on an unprecedentedly vicious character. All the apparatuses and policies of the imperialist state are serving the demands and interests of monopoly capital more thoroughly than at any time.

Monopoly capital, internally, is stepping up exploitation and plunder against working people, mobilizing all the methods in this endeavor. Continuing to raise the rate of exploitation against the working people and carry out mass dismisals under the pretext of "rationalization" and "readjustment" of enterprises, it is mercilessly forcing them to join the ranks of the unemployed. It is raising by far the prices of daily necessities, public utility rates, and the working people's tax burden.

The U.S. imperialists are intensifying their exploitation and plunder against the working people on the one hand and are going berserk in pursuing their policy of aggression and war.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught as follows:

"At present the U.S. imperialists are preparing for a world war as a matter of strategy. The U.S. imperialists are attempting by means of war to find their way out of the economic crisis." ("Kim Il-song Selected Works," Vol 7, p 296)

It is the physiology of imperialism, a stark fact history shows that every time an economic crisis gets catastrophic and social conflict becomes acute, externally they attempt to find their way out in a war of aggression while internally they step up their exploitation and oppression against their own people. The imperialists utilize aggression and war as effective means to take by force overseas markets and sphere of influence and "score a breakthrough" in economic crisis.

Today to the imperialists floundering in a hopeless economic crisis it has come to arise as a vital question to secure the major zones of resources and sphere of influence and key military areas. Precisely this being so, the imperialists such as the U.S. imperialists are ever more going berserk in pursuing their policy of aggression and war.

The U.S. imperialists, by taking diabolical direct actions for what they call "protection of vested interests" and "security," are continuing to increase their aggressive armed forces in the major zones of resources and key military areas and are making an extensive military exercise racket. At the same time, ludicrously increasing military expenditures they are spurring an aramement race and war preparations. For fiscal 1981 their military expenditures have increased to $170 billion or almost twice as much as for 1976 and for fiscal 1982, their military expenditures are projected to raach $200 billion.

Those currently in power headed by scoundrel Reagan, even discarding the sigboard of "peace" and further strengthening their "policy of strength," are recklessly making intemperate utterances reeking of gunpowder, turning the situation extremely tense.

On account of the reckless machinations of the U.S. imperialists the danger of another world war is growing daily. But the policy of aggression and war can never be a way out to save the scoundrels from their catastrophic economic crisis and their fate of downfall. Those who had provoked war had got annihilated in World War I as well as in World War II.

Today when the revolutionary forces of anti-imperialist sovereignty are growing and strengthening into an invincible force and all the progressive peoples are unanimously rising up against the imperialist policy of war, if the U.S. imperialists recklessly unleash another war, it will only be hastening their own destruction ultimately.

'NODONG SINMUN' HITS CHON'S REUNIFICATION PROPOSAL

SK141058 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1050 GMT 14 Aug 81

[Text] Pyongyang August 14 (KCNA)--NODONG SINMUN Friday comes out with a commentary hitting hard at the mishmash reeled off by traitor Chon Tu-hwan about his "proposal of mutual visits" and "peaceful unification" in an effort to create the impression that he is interested in the peaceful reunification of the country.

In the commentary captioned "Mutual Visits Rigmarole is Smokescreen for Concealing War Manoeuvres," the author says:

The drivel of traitor Chon Tu-hwan about "peaceful unification" is a ballad of war and division of reversed form.

By his dastardly acts to fasten the aggression forces of U.S. imperialism, the chieftain of aggression and war, to South Korea forever, traitor Chon Tu-hwan stands stark naked as a despicable tool of war for U.S. imperialism and the vicious harasser of peace.

His true colour as a harasser of peace and war-maniac is glaringly revealed by his never-ceasing treacherous crimes for bringing the situation of the country to the highest pitch of strain and plunging the fellow countrymen into a scourge of war under the pretext of "security" and "threat of southward invasion."

If he had the slightest intention to ease tension and reunify the country peacefully, he would not have committed the treacherous acts to keep the aggressors at any cost within the country, bringing in large quantities of modern weapons of destructions including nuclear arms and staging a massive test war against the northern half of the republic.

Who would believe that the war-maniac is interested in the peaceful reunification of the country, even if he cries for "peaceful unification" one hundred times, while increasing the danger of a fratricidal war in the country, siding with the aggressors?

Facts prove that traitor Chon Tu-hwan's twaddle about "mutual visits" and "peaceful unification" is nothing but a smokescreen for concealing the new war provocation manoeuvres he is hastening with the U.S. imperialists.

The nation will never pardon the truculent war-maniacs who are running about like a headless chicken to plunge the compatriots into a disaster by kindling the flame of another war.

If traitor Chon Tu-hwan continues his reckless rope-dancing with the backing of foreign forces, persistently turning a deaf ear to the demand of the times and people, he is sure to taste a bitter cup of doom.

'NODONG SINMUN' STRESSES NATIONAL REUNIFICATION

SK160210 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 1242 GMT 15 Aug 81

[NODONG SINMUN 15 August article: "No Force Can Block Our People's Just Cause For Reunification of the Fatherland"]

[Text] Thirty-six years have passed since our people were liberated from Japanese imperialist colonial rule thanks to the anti-Japanese armed struggle organized and led by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song.

After achieving the historic cause of the fatherland's liberation, our people created a new world on a land beset with poverty and backwardness by vigorously waging the struggle to build a new fatherland and new society under the wise leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song. Thus, we basically improved the situation of the nation and the people. However, the tragedy of the nation's split, which began with our people's joy over the 15 August liberation, still continues today after 36 years.

Because of the nation's division our people were unable to attain unified national development in economic, cultural and other sectors. Our people cannot even inquire about the health of friends and relatives due to a split between north and south denoted by a demarcation line. In particular, this split of Korea is bringing about untold misery and calamity to fellow countrymen in the south. The South Korean people are forced to endure a crueler and more miserable colonial slavery than during the period of the Japanese imperialist colonial rule. We cannot but be sorrowful when we reflect that the tragedy of the nation's split has persisted for 36 years after the dark, disgraceful Japanese imperialist colonial rule.

We cannot expect the prosperity of the entire nation and the South Korean people cannot escape colonial slavery unless we bring an end to the nation's split and achieve national reunification. National reunification is the supreme desire of the Korean people and is a most urgent national task which should not be delayed a moment longer.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught: Our party, based on the important mission assigned by the nation and the people and with the firm resolve to reunify the fatherland in our generation without fail, put forward a most correct policy and line for national reunification and actively struggled to achieve them during the period under review. It is a basic policy which our party and the government of the republic consistently maintained in their struggle for national reunification so as to achieve the nation's reunification by the Korean people themselves, independently and peacefully, based on democratic principles without outside interference.

In accord with the basic policy advanced by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, our party and the government of the republic set forth a most fair, just and reasonable proposal for reunification which can be accepted by anyone and correctly reflects the requirements of the changing situation as well as our people's will. They waged an energetic struggle to rejoin the severed blood ties of our people.

The door which had remained tightly closed between the north and south for a long time was opened at last and a north-south dialogue was held at the beginning of the 1970's. The north-south joint statement, whose basic message consists of the three principles of independence, peaceful reunification and great national unity, was published. This was the result of the wise leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song who advanced a line and policy for broad negotiations between north and south and worked hard for their implementation. This was a precious achievement of our people in their struggle for national reunification.

We continually made sincere efforts to accelerate the reunification cause even after the dialogue for implementation of the joint statement was severed due to the treacherous acts of the South Korean authorities.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, at a time when a grave situation was created in the nation due to splittist maneuvers by the South Korean authorities, put forward the renowned five-point policy for national reunification in order to overcome difficulties laid on the road to reunification and to accelerate national reunification. Thus, he again clearly showed the way for ensuring the peace of the nation and for accelerating the independent and peaceful reunification of the nation.

It is well known to the world that we repeatedly proposed holding a wide range of north-south negotiations to jointly seek solution of the nation's reunification question, such as the four-point national salvation proposal advanced by the joint meeting of political parties and public organizations in January 1977, the proposal for north-south negotiations made in January 1979 by the Central Committee of the democratic front for reunification of the fatherland and so forth. We actively struggled for their implementation.

Even when the Yusin dictator was removed in the autumn of 1979, and a complicated situation was created in South Korea, we called for joint efforts of the people to open a path to advance in unity and collaboration between north and south.

We sent letters to the representatives of political parties and public organizations and to responsible persons in authority in South Korea in January last year in order to hold a dialogue and exchange views on accelerating national reunification.

Thus, in the past we have put forward such just and reasonable proposals over 100 times out of sheer desire to end the nation's tragedy and reunify it and made every sincere effort to implement them.

Indeed, the 36 years which passed amid the pain of division has been a period of arduous and persistent struggle by our people to reunify the divided nation and achieve complete national independence. However, the cause of the nation's reunification, which all people ardently desire, has not been achieved. Only barriers of division are being built ever higher with each passing day.

Reunification has not been realized because the U.S. imperialists--the splittists and enemies of reunification--are scheming to perpetuate Korea's division by occupying South Korea under the insidious objective of aggression. It is also because the South Korean ruling clique is stubbornly opposed to reunification, while actively following the U.S. imperialists' policy of division.

Perpetuation of division and the two Koreas policy constitute the basis of all the treasonous schemes pursued by the South Korean puppet rulers generation after generation. Yielding to pressures at home and abroad, the South Korean puppet clique signed the 4 July north-south joint communique which was based on the three principles of national reunification and was once dragged to the north-south dialogue, but it committed every possible act of betrayal in an attempt to use the dialogue for its antinational splittist purpose.

Its dependence on external forces, fascist repression and war schemes, its Yusin game and announcement of the 23 June declaration were all aimed at instituting its scheme to fabricate two Koreas. Its proposal for entering the United Nations based on cross recognition or its proposal for a nonaggression treaty are all products of its two Koreas policy.

The South Korean puppet clique even committed a treasonous act of building a high steel-reinforced concrete wall of division along the military demarcation line in order to perpetuate the nation's division.

The South Korean puppets' treasonous act to perpetuate the nation's division is being culminated by the traitorous Chon Tu-hwan clique. The traitor Chon Tu-hwan, who has established a fascist military rule after usurping power with bayonets, is frantically pursuing fascism, division and war schemes. He is arresting, incarcerating and executing at random the patriotic people who demand social democratization and national reunification. In particular, the puppet clique unhesitatingly and wickedly massacred the people in Kwangju, who struggled demanding freedom and democracy, by mobilizing a vast number of heavily armed troops. Chaining all of South Korea with its fascist military torture machine, the Chon Tu-hwan ring has used unjust charges to suppress those people to whom we had sent letters proposing to meet for a dialogue on reunification.

The Chon Tu-hwan ring, while harshly suppressing the people who desire reunification, infuses them with distrust, urges confrontation among fellow countrymen and frantically and wickedly pursues the nation's division and anticommunism.

The Chon Tu-hwan clique, which ignores the nation's reunification and national dignity, still touts the proposal for simultaneous entry into the United Nations which the former dictator propounded to legalize two Koreas in the international community and is begging for support for it even overseas.

The Chon Tu-hwan clique, while clinging to the U.S. imperialist aggressors--the ringleaders responsible for our nation's split and the ones obstructing reunification--begs for permanent occupation of South Korea by U.S. troops. This is the dirtiest of all treasonous acts. It is therefore ridiculous that such a flagrant splittist, who stubbornly pursues confrontation through anticommunism and permanent division, should tout the so-called proposal for mutual visits, trying to make it look as if he were interested in the nation's reunification.

As we have made clear, the traitor Chon Tu-hwan--the flagrant murderer and splittist who trampled underfoot incipient democratization in South Korea and places more obstacles on the road to reunification--can never be a party to a dialogue on reunification.

To solve the question of reunification is to achieve complete national independence by putting an end to domination and interference by external forces and at the same time means achieving national unity after uprooting the distrust and confrontation between north and south. Therefore, our nation's reunification should be achieved independently and peacefully and on the basis of achieving great national unity of all Korean compatriots at home and abroad, transcending differences in ideology and systems.

At the historic sixth KWP Congress, the great leader of our party and people put forth a new proposal to achieve national reunification through establishment of the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo [DCRK]. The proposal to establish the DCRK put forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is the most reasonable and realistic program for national salvation which enables us to establish a unified, independent and wealthy state in our country which has suffered a tragic division for 36 years and enables the entire nation to live harmoniously in a unified fatherland.

Those who are genuinely concerned about the future and destiny of the nation and desire to live in a unified fatherland should join the nationwide struggle to implement the proposals for establishment of the DCRK by uniting strongly around the great national front for reunification under the lofty banner of the fatherland's reunification.

Recently, political parties and public organizations, including the KWP, proposed convening a congress to promote national reunification consisting of the representatives of pro-reunification political parties and public organizations in the north and south, and representatives of all overseas compatriots, to discuss and resolve general matters concerning national reunification. This is the most reasonable measure to surmount all the serious obstacles placed on the road leading to reunification and to advance the cause of the fatherland's reunification as a nationwide movement.

To achieve national reunification on the basis of independence, peaceful reunification and the great national unity, we should expel the U.S. imperialist aggressor troops from South Korea, put an end to the external forces' intervention and abolish the Chon Tu-hwan fascist military rule and achieve social democratization.

Without ending the U.S. imperialists' domination and forcible occupation of South Korea we cannot conceive of independent reunification of the nation. Moreover, without removing the fascist military Chon Tu-hwan clique, which sows seeds of discord among the people and infuses them with distrust and confrontation, we cannot achieve national reconciliation and unity or realize any affirmative proposals for the reunification of the fatherland.

Korea is a single state and the Korean people are also one. No force can stop the struggle for national salvation by our people who are on the move to crush the schemes of the splittists at home and abroad to fabricate two Koreas and to achieve the cause of reunification.

Our people, as in the past, will surely crush the obstructionist scheme of the splittists at home and abroad and achieve the historic cause of the nation's reunification--the nation's ardent desire--by vigorously continuing the struggle for a unified fatherland under the wise leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song.

'PEOPLE'S DAILY' HAILS DPRK JOINT STATEMENT OF 6 AUGUST

SK170428 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0357 GMT 17 Aug 81

[Text] Beijing August 16 (KCNA)--The August 16 issue of the Chinese "Peoples Daily" carried a short commentary titled "Realistic and Positive Proposal" in connection with the publication of a joint statement of the workers party of Korea and 22 other political parties and public organisations in Pyongyang on August 6.

The commentary said:

The joint statement strongly called upon the entire patriots of Korea to convene at an early date a conference for the promotion of national reunification to be participated in by representatives of political parties and organisations in the north and the south of Korea and overseas compatriots to discuss important questions related to the destiny of the nation including the question of the peaceful reunification of Korea and the question of north-south collaboration and interchange.

This is another great effort made by the north of Korea to put into effect the proposal for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo and the ten-point policy of the unified state, the commentary stressed.

After introducing the content of the joint statement, the commentary noted:

On the fourth day of the publication of the joint statement, the revolutionary party for reunification in Seoul was the first to warmly support the joint statement. It stated that it would send its representatives to the conference for the promotion of national reunification.

It is entirely due to the sabotages and splitting manoeuvres of the Chon Tu-hwan clique that the north-south dialogue has now been deadlocked in Korea.

The Chon Tu-hwan clique, while paying lip-service to "peaceful unification" and "hope for the resumption of the north-south dialogue," is deceiving and flouting the South Korean people desirous of reunification and persisting in the "two Koreas" plot and sticking to its wrong stand of "simultaneous entry of North and South Korea into the United Nations" and "separate entry" of South Korea into the "United Nations."

Throughout South Korea the Chon Tu-hwan clique keeps barbarously suppressing patriotic students.

Some time ago the South Korean "court" inflicted penalties on 12 workers of the Chonggye clothing factory on faked-up charges of "violating the law on assembly and demonstration" because they demanded the restoration of their trade union organisation.

Democratic figure Kim Tae-chung calling for the peaceful reunification of the country is still in prison.

The reactionary policies of the Chon Tu-hwan dictatorial military clique totally violate the principles of the joint statement issued by the north and the south of Korea on July 4, 1972, and act against the aspirations of the South Korean people for national rights and national reunification.

Divided Korea will ultimately achieve reunification.

The desire of the 50 million Korean people for national reunification is a historical deluge which no force on earth can withstand.

CHON TU-HWAN CALLED 'LACKEY' OF PAK CHONG-HUI

SK172246 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1523 GMT 17 Aug 81

[Text] Pyongyang August 17 (KCNA)--NODONG SINMUN on August 16 carried an article headlined "Devoted Lackey of Yusin Dictator."

The author of the article says:

Traitor Chon Tu-hwan is not only a hand-raised stooge of imperialism but a despicable devoted lackey of the defunct "Yusin" dictator, the arch traitor to the nation; he is a "Yusin"-type fascist hangman and truculent foe of the nation who has committed an endless string of treacheries against the country and the nation.

Traitor Chon Tu-hwan, the possessor of a wolfish face and beastly disposition, had faith in traitor Pak Chong-hui, the physically ferocious dictator.

Traitor Chon Tu-hwan who was assigned a "special duty" from his U.S. master regarded it as his "fidelity" to the master to back the defunct dictator who enjoyed trust of the United States.

When traitor Pak Chong-hui staged a military coup at the dictats of the United States, traitor Chon Tu-hwan was the first to join in it, wielding the tool of murder.

On May 16, the day when the coup troops occupied Seoul, the "military academy" was to stage a demonstration in support of the coup, according to the original plan, in order to draw all the puppet army units of South Korea into the force supporting it. But, the director of the "military academy" refused the demonstration and the greater part of the puppet army, including the field army, were skeptical of the coup.

At the moment, Chon Tu-hwan, getting nod of traitor Pak Chong-hui, ran to the "military academy" and arrested its director and forced the instructors to stage a "demonstration supporting the May 16 coup" up to the "central government building" from the east gate of Seoul.

Traitor Chon Tu-hwan, a close associate of the defunct dictator, has constantly resorted to fascist repression and murder of compatriots and treacheries, committing shocking crimes against the country and the nation.

When Pak Chong-hui started a wholesale arrest and murder campaign against the democratic forces shortly after the May 16 coup, traitor Chon Tu-hwan displayed without reserve his disposition as a devoted servant of fascism, performing "feats" in arresting, imprisoning and murdering more than 130,000 innocent people and patriots in a little more than one month.

Each time the dictator launched into a repressive campaign, proclaiming "garrison order," "state of emergency" and "emergency martial law," traitor Chon Tu-hwan committed bloody suppression and murder by commanding the paratroopers.

In 1978 when traitor Pak Chong-hui was driven to the wall by the furious struggle of the people against the "Yusin" fascist rule within, and found himself a target of public censure without, with the exposure of the truth of the "bribery operation" staged in the United States, traitor Chon Tu-hwan, then the commander of the first infantry division of the puppet army, faked up the "tunnelling incident" and widely spread the rumour of "threat of southward invasion" in an effort to mislead public opinion.

The true colour of traitor Chon Tu-hwan as a devoted lackey of the defunct dictator became clearer after he was put in the post of "ROK army security commander."

Vowing time and again to the dictator that he would "exterminate" the opponents to the "Yusin system," he ran about like a mad dog in man-hunting every day.

In October 1979, traitor Chon Tu-hwan requested Pak Chong-hui to assign him the task to put down the massive anti-"government" struggle of the Pusan people, crying: "We must have the will to destroy ten million people not to meet our own destruction."

The crimes committed by traitor Chon Tu-hwan together with the defunct fascist dictator, as the latters devoted lackey, just leave you agape with surprise.

For the skill he had displayed in treacheries as a faithful dog of U.S. imperialism and a devoted lackey of the fascist hangman, traitor Chon Tu-hwan could grab the puppet regime after the defunct dictator was shot dead by strangling democracy through the "army purge coup" and May 17 fascist action under the aegis of his patron.

'KCNA' REPLAYS 'XINHUA' REPORT ON RPR STATEMENT

SK180905 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0808 GMT 18 Aug 81

[Text] Beijing August 16 (KCNA)--The Chinese "Peoples Daily" on August 16 carried a report titled "Revolutionary Party for Reunification in South Korea Supports Convocation of Conference for the Promotion of National Reunification."

The paper says:

The Central Committee of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in South Korea on August 10 published a statement in Seoul, warmly hailing the proposal for convening the conference for the promotion of national reunification put forward by the workers party of Korea and 22 other political parties and public organisations in the northern half on August 6.

The statement declared the readiness of the party to send its delegate to the conference.

The Revolutionary Party for Reunification, the statement said, regards the August 6 proposal of the northern half very reasonable and active.

The statement stressed that the conference for the promotion of national reunification will bring about a turning point in the accomplishment of the cause of the country's independent and peaceful reunification through face-to-face talks and negotiations on a nation-wide scale.

The statement appealed to the personages of political parties and groupings and people of all strata of South Korea who desire reunification to smash the intrigues of the Chon Tu-hwan clique and respond to the proposal to convene the conference for the promotion of national reunification.

The central standing committee of the General Association of Korean Residents in Japan on August 8 published a statement in Tokyo, Japan, supporting the new proposal of the north and declaring that it would send its delegate to the conference.

OVERSEAS KOREAN PAPER URGES PROMOTING REUNIFICATION

SK181540 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1500 GMT 18 Aug 81

[Text] Pyongyang August 18 (KCNA)--The August 6 issue of "Sinhan Minbo," a newspaper of Koreans published in the United States, carried an editorial headlined "Caution Against Anti-Unification Speeches and Behaviors and Promotion of Unification."

Noting that a sharply increasing number of Korean personages overseas have visited the Democratic Peoples Republic of Korea entering this year, the editorial said that their visits "have a considerable influence on dispelling mistrust and misunderstanding" about the DPRK.

Overseas Korean personages tour of the DPRK, the editorial stressed, clearly shows that "common denominator can be found on one principle of national reunification and the principle of promoting reunification by the authorities of the north and the overseas compatriots."

Recalling that an agreement reached between the overseas Korean personages who visited the DPRK and the DPRK side on a series of problems such as opposition to the "two Koreas" plot, rejection of outside forces domination of and interference in Korea, democratization of the South Korean society, founding of a confederal state and great national unity of compatriots at home and abroad, the editorial said: These problems of principle are acceptable to the patriotic compatriots and democratic figures at home and abroad.

Their visits to the DPRK have paved the way for a multilateral dialogue between the compatriots at home and abroad for national reunification, the editorial said.

Noting that many countries and peoples of the world are actively supporting and encouraging the independent and peaceful reunification of Korea, the editorial went on:

The desire for the reunification of the north and the south is a boil among the compatriots at home and abroad and the world people fervently support the peaceful reunification.

This ardour will spread even to the United States before long.

Reunification is the ardent desire of the Korean nation.

Reunification is a flow of history.

Reunification is the will of history.

And reunification is the goal of the movement for democracy. Freedom and equality, the goal of the movement for democracy, cannot be achieved unless the domination by outside forces, the dictatorship supported by those forces and north-south division and confrontation which justify the presence of the outside forces and dictatorship are removed.

The editorial stressed:

It cannot be construed otherwise than anti-democratic, anti-reunification and anti-national acts to criticize the patriotic compatriots and democratic personages who visited the north to pave the way for national reunification and heap abuses on them by distorting and fabricating their speeches and behaviors.

To accelerate national reunification at a faster pace in keeping with their patriotic acts is a true road of the movement for democracy, the movement for national reunification.

'NODONG SINMUN' HAILS PROPOSAL FOR FOUNDING DCRK

SK181625 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1543 GMT 18 Aug 81

[Text] Pyongyang August 18 (KCNA)--NODONG SINMUN Monday carried an article titled "Momentous Way for Country's Reunification and Nation's Unified Development."

Noting that our people is facing an important task to accomplish the historical cause of national reunification at an early date, the author of the article says:

The way of confident and speedy accomplishment of the cause of national reunification lies in carrying into practice the new proposal for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo put forward by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song.

Because the proposal shows the most justifiable, reasonable and realistic way of national salvation for the country's reunification.

The new proposal for reunification not only thoroughly reflects the objective realities within and without our country but also carries fair contents acceptable both to the north and the south.

The proposal, first of all, formulates most fairly the form and structure of the confederal state.

The form of the confederal state newly formulated by the great leader is neither a confederation of different nations nor confederation of different states. The DCRK is a democratic republic of confederal style within temporarily divided one nation and between two regions.

Its structure is also a new one to be formed on the basis of recognizing the different two social systems. In other words, it would be one unified national state in which confederation is achieved, for the noble purpose of national reunification, not on the basis of the singleness of the system, but on the basis of the commonness of the nation, with the difference in the system preserved, as there actually exists such difference. The proposal to found the DCRK also correctly defines the relations between the unified government and the regional governments.

The great leader solved with his originality the problem of relations between the unified government and regional governments on an entirely new ground neither centralist nor decentralist, to suit the condition of forming a unified state, a confederal state, by bringing into one two regions where two different systems exist.

The proposal to found the DCRK opened a bright prospect for achieving national unity and realising national reunification by defining the most realistic and reasonable form and structure of the confederal state and relations between the unified government and regional governments, reflecting the objective reality of the country where exist differences in ideology and system.

The proposal also correctly defines the home and foreign policies to be pursued by the confederal government.

The independent stand of the unified state and the democratic and patriotic policies to be enforced by the confederal government are comprehensively expounded in the ten-point policy of the confederal state.

The ten-point policy is a firm guarantee for reducing the differences between the north and the south caused by the protracted division of the country and achieving a unified development of the country and the nation.

The proposal also reasonably names the unified state to suit the desire of the north and the south.

It stimulates the national pride and honour of our people to call the confederal state the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo after a unified state that once existed in our country and is well known to the world and by reflecting the common political aspirations of the north and south for democracy.

All the contents of the proposal to found the DCRK from the form and structure of the confederal state to the relations between the unified government and regional governments, the ten-point policy and the name of the confederal state are fairly defined and elaborated to be acceptable to anyone who is truly concerned for reunification.

This is why the proposal is enjoying undisputed support and welcome of the entire Korean people and world peace-loving people today.

Anyone who truly feels pain at the reality of division and is concerned for the future of the country and the nation, should turn out to the struggle for carrying into practice the proposal to found the confederal state, united closely on a great national united front under the banner of national reunification, whether he is in the north or in the south or abroad, whether he is a communist or a nationalist or a religionist.

DPRK PAPERS CONDEMN CHON'S LIBERATION DAY ADDRESS

SK191102 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1040 GMT 19 Aug 81

[Text] Pyongyang August 19 (KCNA)--MINJU CHOSON and PYONGYANG SINMUN today comment on an "address" made by the traitor Chon Tu-hwan at a "celebration of the liberation day" a few days ago.

The author of the MINJU CHOSON commentary says: The puppet traitors babbling that his assumption of office was helpful to making some progress in "consolidating national sovereignty" is a shameless one which can be made only by such a brazenfaced rascal as the traitor Chon Tu-hwan.

It goes on:

What he did after seating himself in "power" was turning the whole land of South Korea into a most horrible living hell of the late 20th century, frantically seeking fascism, split and war, while clinging to the coattails of the foreign forces and bartering away South Korea wholly to them.

No matter how many mouths he may have, the puppet traitor cannot prettify his robbery of "power" by a conspiratorial means and the treacherous acts he has committed against the nation under the backstage manipulation of U.S. imperialism.

The commentary lashes at the traitor Chon Tu-hwan for carping in his "address" on our sincere efforts for the reunification of the country and advertizing the "mutual visit proposal" as if it were a step for "unification," "nation" and "peace."

It continues:

The traitor Chon Tu-hwan who is trying to find a way out in the perpetuation of the division again came forward with the rejected proposal for "mutual visits," frightened at the great vitality of our new reunification proposal and proposal for national salvation.

The traitors "proposal" is a trick to put down the mounting desire of the South Korean people for reunification and mislead public opinion.

The traitor who stained his whole body with the blood of fellow countrymen, ruthlessly slaughtering South Korean people calling for democracy in society and national reunification, is not entitled at all to discuss the important matter of the nation and cannot be a party to a dialogue for reunification.

Noting that the traitor Chon Tu-hwan prattled in his "address" about "industrialisation," "democracy" and "peaceful change of power," the commentary says: All this is honeyed words.

It further says:

The so-called "industrialisation" is a variety of the slogan "modernisation" put up by his predecessor. "Democracy" and "peaceful change of power" are also a shopworn catchword used by the former dictator.

His talk about "democracy" and "peaceful change of power" is a foolish trick to benumb the fighting spirit of the people demanding the resignation of the traitor Chon Tu-hwan and the abolition of the military fascist "regime."

In a word, the utterances made by the traitor Chon Tu-hwan in his "address" seek the sinister aim to put down one struggle of the South Korean people against fascism and for democracy and national reunification, delude public opinion, persist in treachery, freeze the division of the country and stay on in power indefinitely.

The traitor Chon Tu-hwan must not resort to a cheap trick but step down from "power" as demanded by the people.

S. KOREA'S HANKUK YOUTH LEAGUE SCORED

SK191108 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1050 GMT 19 Aug 81

[Text] Pyongyang August 19 (KCNA)--The Korean Students Committee, in its statement made public on August 18 in connection with the scheme of the Chon Tu-hwan fascist clique to trump up the "Hankuk Youth and Childrens League," a new fascist organisation of youth and children, strongly demands the Chon Tu-hwan group to immediately give up the scheme.

The statement says:

The Chon Tu-hwan group tries to cook up a government-subsidized fascist organisation at schools of all levels, cadet schools, factories and enterprises of South Korea till 1986 starting from this year and forcibly embrace students, youth and children in it.

The trumping up of the "Hankuk Youth and Childrens League" which is vociferously advertised by the military fascist clique among the South Korean youth and students as if it would bring about a new change is a deliberate political plot to deprive the students, youth and children of freedom of study and right to it, further fascistise schools and train them as faithful servants of the military fascist dictatorship.

The statement goes on:

With a renewed determination, fighting spirit and courage the South Korean students, youth and children should valiantly rise and decidedly smash the scheme of the Chon Tu-hwan group to knock into shape the fascist "Hankuk Youth and Childrens League."

The struggle for checking and frustrating the scheme to trump up the "Hankuk Youth and Childrens League" is part of the sacred struggle for campus freedom and democracy in society and a righteous struggle related to the independent and peaceful reunification of the country.

The South Korean youth and students should furiously raise the flames of the struggle for smashing the scheme to fabricate the "Hankuk Youth and Childrens League" and develop it into a massive resistance against the Chon Tu-hwan group and for democracy.

The Chon Tu-hwan group must give up at once the criminal scheme to cook up the "Hankuk Youth and Childrens League." If it does not want to meet the same miserable and as its predecessors in the flames of the massive resistance of the indignant youth, students and people, it must step down from power without delay.

'NODONG SINMUN' CONDEMNS CHON AS YUSIN BOSS

SK191615 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1549 GMT 19 Aug 81

[Text] Pyongyang August 19 (KCNA)--NODONG SINMUN Tuesday carried a signed article headlined "Appearing on the Scene as Boss of Yusin Remnants."

At early dawn on December 12, 1979, tens of thousands of puppet army troops stormed into the Seoul streets led by tanks and armoured cars and skirmishes took place everywhere.

This surprise action of the puppet army was a coup of the "Yusin" remnants which is known as "December 12 army purge operation" staged by Chon Tu-hwan the military gangster.

For the coup that day, traitor Chon Tu-hwan secretly moved forces of the puppet security command and the 9th, 20th and 30th divisions of the puppet army 50,000 strong and more than 100 tanks near Seoul.

Chong Sung-hwa, the chief of staff of the puppet army and "martial law commander," and over 40 generals of the puppet army were arrested that morning and the power of the puppet army fell into the hand of traitor Chon Tu-hwan.

The December 12 army purge coup was the first step toward the seizure of power taken by traitor Chon Tu-hwan and other remnants of the force of defunct dictator to revive the "Yusin" fascist rule in South Korea; it was a wanton challenge to the people calling for democracy and reunification.

Here is a story of what happened at a "meeting of all commanders" of the puppet army which was held right after the assassination of traitor Pak Chong-hui, the defunct dictator.

There the majority of the brasshats of the puppet army shared the view that with the assassination of puppet Pak Chong-hui "the Yusin system could not but be dissolved."

This reflected the trend of the situation and proved how strong was the demand of the South Korean people for putting an end to the "Yusin" fascist rule and realizing the democratization of society.

But, traitor Chon Tu-hwan reportedly held at the "meeting" that the "Yusin system should be frozen for three months at least."

It was not without reason that traitor Chon Tu-hwan, who was a mere major general of the puppet army, openly came out against his seniors by calling for the maintenance of the "Yusin" system.

As already exposed, traitor Chon Tu-hwan was No. one lackey of dead Pak Chong-hui.

What is more important is the fact that the traitorous puppet, as a hidden stooge of U.S. imperialism, relied on the backing of the U.S. masters occupying South Korea.

According to reports, it was the way out found by the United States to revive the military fascist rule through traitor Chon Tu-hwan, the hand-raised spy and hidden stooge, and maintain the "Yusin" system without Pak Jung Hi.

Informed of the scheme of his American patrons, traitor Chon Tu-hwan, had run wild blinded with greed for power, and, no sooner had the defunct dictator been slain that he called on Wickham, "South Korea-U.S. combined forces commander," informed him of the move of the puppet military to recede from the "Yusin" system and framed with him a plot to grab "power."

This plot was soon carried into practice. With the guarantee of U.S. imperialism, traitorous puppet Chon Tu-hwan, in the capacity of the "security commander" of the puppet army, grabbed the post of the "chief of the joint investigation headquarters of the martial law command." Then he arrested Kim Chae-kyu who shot dead the former dictator and kicked up a fascist rowdism for removing the bosses of the puppet Central Intelligence Agency and large opposition force within the military, branding them as Kim Chae-kyu's supporters and sympathizers.

At last, he staged the December 12 army purge coup and completely seized the military power; under the pretext of promoting the "course of political development," he stepped up in full scale his manoeuvres to seize "power."

All the criminal acts committed by traitor Chon Tu-hwan against the people ardently hoping for democracy and reunification after grabbing power though intrigues as a watch dog of U.S. imperialism and boss of the "Yusin" remnants, will surely be counted at the judgement by history and people.

BRIEFS

SUPPORTERS' GROUP ACTIVATION--Seoul, 17 August (YONHAP)--Korea's ruling Democratic Justice Party is expected to activate its supporters group this week to obtain financial help from it. The party embarked on the formation of the supporters group beginning early this month and has since received applications for the membership of the group from some 500 private enterprises and businessmen. Reliable party sources said Monday that the group will be formed by 20 August after choosing a chairman and other staffs. By law, each political party can form a supporters group. The political fund to be raised by a supporters group should not exceed two billion won (2.93 million U.S. dollars) a year. Those who donated political funds will get tax deductions. KOREA TO JOIN INDONESIAN COAL DEPOSITS DEVELOPMENT

SK190603 Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 19 Aug 81 p 7

[Text] "Korea will participate actively in the development of coal deposits in Indonesia under a joint partnership with Indonesians.

"The two countries have also agreed to step up technical cooperation in the energy field." So said Vice Energy-Resources Minister Choe Tong-kyu [during] and interview yesterday after returning home Sunday from a three-day meeting in Jakarta of the Korea-Indonesia Joint Cooperation Committee on Resource Development.

Choe said, "Binational economic cooperation is on the upbeat, especially in the energy field, spurred by the summit meeting late last June between President Chon Tu-hwan and his Indonesian counterpart Suharto." The Jakarta meeting also tackled important issues including Korean imports of crude oil exploration in Indonesia, all agreed upon earlier.

Brought into the spotlight in the annual binational meeting were joint coal development and technical cooperation, Choe said.

Under the agreed minutes signed at the end of the three-day meeting, Choe said, Korea will join the exploration and exploitation of coal deposits in the resource-rich country.

In the planned joint coal exploration program, Choe said, Indonesia promised to provide contract terms "not disadvantageous to Korea" in comparison to the other foreign countries. The Indonesian side is required to show copies of the contracts signed between the Indonesian state coal corporation and foreign companies in order to keep the promise, Choe said.

Indonesia plans to produce 10 million tons of coal by 1980 to help meet demand for 15 million tons, according to Choe. The present coal output is 300,000 tons a year.

Under the plan, the Jakarta government is expected to step up coal production. According to available data, some 3.6 billion tons of coal are estimated to be buried underground.

To meet the ever-rising demand for coal, Choe explained, Indonesia welcomes foreigners' participation in the coal production program.

Touching on technical cooperation, Choe stressed the establishment of sister relations between energy research institutions in the two countries.

The sister relationship arrangement signed in the meeting involves the Korea Institute of Energy and Resources and the Korea Electric Co., from the Korean side; Directorate of Mineral Resources, Electricity Enterprise (PLN) and the Oil and Gas Technology Development Center (LEMIGAS) of Indonesia.

To invigorate bilateral efforts to step up technical cooperation, Choe said, 17 Indonesian trainees and researchers engaging in the energy area will be dispatched to Korea.

Six Korean experts on energy development and electricity will also be sent to Indonesia to help the Indonesians get technology, Choe said.

In a bid to cement close energy cooperation between the two countries, Choe said, the vice ministerial meeting of the resource committee was likely to be upgraded to a minister-level one from next year.

COUNTRY SEEKS TO BUILD OIL PROSPECTING SHIP

SK190143 Seoul YONHAP in English 0132 GMT 19 Aug 81

[Text] Seoul, 19 August (YONHAP)--Korea is pushing ahead with a plan to build its own oil rig to expedite the development of offshore seabed oil resources.

Energy-resources Ministry officials said Wednesday that construction of Korea's own oil prospecting ship is necessary to give a fundamental solution to the current difficulty in obtaining chartered foreign oil rigs.

Pressed hard by the necessity to tap possible oil reserves off its coast, Korea is carrying out a joint continental shelf development project with Japan in quest for seabed oil resources and plans to launch an independent oil development project in the fourth mining zone along the continental shelf stretching southeast of Cheju Island.

At present, charterage for a foreign oil rig reaches more than 40,000 U.S. dollars a day, and Korea had to defray over 10 million dollars last year in expenses for drilling by a foreign oil prospecting ship two shafts in the seventh subzone in the Korean-Japanese joint development area, and, in the case of seabed development, drilling one shaft will require some seven to eight million dollars, according to the officials.

Construction of Korea's own oil prospecting ships will reduce such expenses considerably, the officials added.

Construction of a 10,000-ton semi-submerge offshore oil prospecting ship will start next year at a total cost of eight million dollars, 30 percent of which will be met by domestic funds and the remaining 70 percent by foreign loans.

The government will put up 15 percent of the required domestic capital and a consortium of the country's major shipbuilders including Daewoo, Samsung and Hyundai will defray the remaining 15 percent, the officials said.

The Korea Petroleum Development Corp. will supervise the construction of Korea's first oil rig which is expected to be in use beginning in 1983.

BRIEFS

OIL EXPLORATION IN INDONESIA--Seoul, 17 August (YONHAP)--The Korea Development Co (KODECO) has decided to start an elaborate search on Indonesia's Madura oil field late this month, advancing its original schedule by some two months, Energy-Resources Ministry sources said Monday. KODECO will decide locations of drilling after examining the result of the survey and will begin drilling early next year, the sources said. The sources said KODECO decided to survey the oil field because an accurate computer reading system was developed recently. Earlier surveys by foreign companies said that the Madura oil field was estimated to possess 200 to 900 million barrels in oil deposit. KODECO officials said they recently rejected a proposal by a U.S. oil company to develop the area jointly. The officials said that the U.S. company estimated the oil deposits in the area at some 977 million barrels. [Text] [SK170125 Seoul YONHAP in English 0112 GMT 17 Aug 81]

DAILIES VIEW KOREA-JAPAN FOREIGN MINISTER TALKS

SK200257 Seoul YONHAP in English 0243 GMT 20 Aug 81

[Text] Seoul, 20 August (YONHAP)--Major Korean newspapers Thursday expressed a hope that the Korea-Japan foreign ministers meeting opening Thursday in Tokyo will provide a turning point to relations between the two neighboring nations.

The CHOSON ILBO, one of Seouls three morningers, attached a special significance to the bilateral conference in that it is the first government-level contact between the two neighbors since the birth of the fifth republic in Korea and the changes in the United States and Japanese administrations.

Hoping that the two-day meeting in Tokyo would bear as many tangible results as possible, the daily editorially called for a modification of the form of relations between Tokyo and Seoul.

The editorial said, relations between the two countries should be devoid of anything that is unfair. Any dirty behind-the-curtain deals or irregularities in economic exchanges between the two countries and the so-called Korean-Japanese adhesion should be eliminated thoroughly.

"Any prejudice, out of a sense of either superiority or inferiority, should be disposed of because it hampers the development of true friendship among nations. The commercial act of lending money should not be called economic aid as if it were based on a humanitarian point of view.

"In order to have relations between Tokyo and Seoul roll on the right track, the enormous trade imbalance now running in favor of Japan should be corrected. As long as such a trade imbalance remains uncorrected, the terms cooperation, interdependence and friendship are no more than diplomatic jargons.

Meanwhile, the Seoul SINMUN, emphasizing the necessity of reshaping relations between Seoul and Tokyo, called for the recovery of mutual confidence between the two countries.

Pointing out that Japan's diplomacy toward Korea is full of technical skills and lacks sincerity which has caused now and then the Korean people to feel a sense of betrayal, the state-run daily also editorially said, whether Korea can recover its confidence in Japan or not chiefly hinges on Japan's attitude at the foreign minister's meeting.

"Japan should have a right recognition of Korea's role in peace and stability in Northeast Asia. If Japan has such a recognition, it cannot be stingy with economic cooperation with Korea, the Seoul SINMUN said.

NORTH KOREAN TRADE POLICY AND SYSTEM ANALYZED

Seoul PUKHAN in Korean Jul 81 pp 74-90

[Article by Chon Ung-yol, Ph. D. in Economics, professor at Sungjon University]

[Text] In discussing the North Korean trade policy and trade system, I will survey their trade policy first, dividing it into the following areas: (one) the basis for their foreign trade policy; (two) foreign trade operating principles; and (three) foreign trade policy means.

Next I will survey their trade system, dividing it into the following areas: (one) trade and management organs; (two) tariff systems; and (three) their foreign exchange management system.

I will examine the basis for North Korea's foreign trade policy, dividing it into the following areas: (one) the principle of political and economic coincidence; (two) the line for the self-dependent economy; and (three) the principles of equality and mutual benefit.

We can cite the principle of political and economic coincidence first in the basis for North Korea's foreign policy. Until the 1960's, North Korea's foreign trade policy held the view that politics were primary[1] and upheld the principle of political and economic coincidence, but in the 1970's a tendency to attach importance to economic factors surfaced and in the 1980's a tendency to view economics as more important is growing stronger.

In the "Ten Great Political Programs" announced by Kim Il-song on the occasion of the establishment of the Fourth Cabinet on 16 December 1967, he confirmed that North Korea was using the so-called "principle of the inseparability of politics and economics" in foreign trade under the standards of the class principle and proletarian internationalism[2] by giving first consideration to political factors over economic factors and using foreign trade to further political goals.[3] Article 8 of the same political programs specifies that the principle of the inseparability of politics and economics as a basis of foreign trade is to be applied differently according to the state with which trade is done.[4] That is, the principle of political and economic coincidence is applied to socialist countries, the principle of political primacy to neutral non-aligned countries and the principle of political and economic separation to capitalist countries in accord with economic interests.

In developing its foreign trade, North Korea has given preference to the socialist market and has applied the principle of political and economic coincidence. North Korea's foreign trade policy has given first preference to the socialist market based on a firm class standpoint.

That is, the formation of a socialist market makes it possible to develop the national economy of each socialist state and contribute much to the enhancement of the people's livelihood by furthering economic and technical interchange between socialist states, to develop the national economies of the socialist countries and make trade profitable,[6] and to defend against the expansionist policy of capitalism[7] with the extension of the socialist market.

By applying the principle of political and economic coincidence and giving first preference to the socialist market, North Korea is evolving a foreign trade policy of escaping the yoke of imperialism and furthering the crisis of the capitalist economy at the same time that it seeks the economic development of the socialist states and the strengthening of the economic relations of the socialist camp.[8]

In developing its foreign trade, North Korea has given second preference to non-aligned neutral countries where it has developed trade based on the principle of equality and mutual benefit[9] and has sought to help newly independent countries establish political and economic independence by liberating them from the new imperialism of the capitalist states.[10]

North Korea uses a staged method of approach with the newly independent countries of the Third World, beginning with non-political trade relations and developing to political relations along a route of concluding a trade pact, establishing a trade delegation, raising it to consulate-general status, and establishing diplomatic relations; based on such a principle of political primacy, North Korea's policy gives heavy weight to the political element of striving to aid anti-imperialist struggles.[11]

In order to compete diplomatically with the R.O.K., in the 1960's North Korea began seeking diplomatic success by increasing trade with the non-aligned neutral countries of the Third World along with providing below cost economic and technical aid.

Based on economic interests which have the secondary intent of pursuing actual profit such as developing trade with capitalist countries that respect North Korea's independence and want to form economic ties with North Korea, the North Koreans began applying the principle of political and economic separation in the late 1960's to expand its trade and economic cooperation with advanced Western countries.[12]

The first state to which North Korea applied its principle of political and economic separation in foreign trade was Japan. Until the late 1960's North Korea insisted on the repeal of the R.O.K.--Japan Agreement as a precondition to economic exchange with Japan, but North Korea adopted the principle of political and economic separation when it stated at the October 1971 meeting between Kim Il-song and (Tokyo mayor) Minobe Ryokichi that "As long as the R.O.K.--Japan Agreement is not repealed, political intercourse will be difficult. We request active expansion of economic, cultural and personal intercourse."

North Korea's motives for adopting the principle of political and economic separation seen above include the political element of seeking to realize long term diplomatic relations as well as the economic element of pursuing real profit.

As a result of sharp cuts and suspensions in economic aid from the U.S.S.R., Communist China and Eastern European countries, by 1972 North Korea was forced to seek trade and economic cooperation with Western countries, especially Japan and other OECD countries, in order to obtain the capital, technology and foreign exchange needed for the conduct of the Six Year Economic Plan (1971-1976) and the second Seven Year Economic Plan (1977-1983).

Although North Korea has adopted the principle of political and economic separation in its trade with Western countries, it has adopted a selective principle of political and economic separation in that it has no trade with the U.S., Free China or Israel.

However, North Korea carries on trade with other capitalist countries so that although there is the element of pursuing real profit, we must not overlook the political element of striving to establish diplomatic relations through trade.

As seen above, the basis for North Korea's foreign trade policy from a viewpoint of the pursuit of real profit has moved from the principle of economic and political coincidence to the principle of economic and political separation and from political primacy to economic primacy as it has found itself forced to overcome its economic stagnation through trade based on international division of labor. That is, being totally unable to develop its people's economy by its autarkic method of economic growth oriented to the domestic market, North Korea was forced to choose an open method of economic growth oriented to the international market.

We can cite the self-dependent national economy line nest in the basis for North Korea's foreign trade policy. The self-dependent national economy line is a line striving to mobilize the country's own resources and capacity according to the principle of self-reliance in order to achieve self-sufficient economic autarky.

This self-dependent national economy line strives to build a comprehensive and self-dependent national economy capable of basically fulfilling with domestic production the increased demand resulting from economic construction, defense construction and improvements in the people's livelihood.

Thus North Korea meets basic demand materials and large quantity demand materials with domestic production, but it supplies special demand materials, materials in short supply and materials it cannot produce domestically such as machinery, plant capital, raw materials and technology through foreign trade. As a result, North Korea's foreign trade has developed as a means to contribute to the construction of the self-dependent national economy.[13]

That is, as a means which serves the construction of the self-dependent national economy comprised of a comprehensive organic development which primarily develops heavy industry while developing light industry and agriculture in tandem,[14] North Korea's foreign trade policy has a supportive, subsidiary character oriented toward the domestic economy whereby it imports the materials needed to carry out economic plans and exports in consideration of domestic demand and balance.

By importing aid from the West, including Japan and the OECD countries, including the machines, capital facilities such as plants, raw materials, and technology needed in construction for carrying out the Six Year Plan and the second Seven Year Plan, North Korea's foreign trade is expanding in the capitalist market more than in the socialist market.

As a result, North Korea's foreign trade has shifted from the Communist world to the free world so that the proportion of trade with the free world has increased more than that with the socialist market. The following are the factors in the increase of North Korea's trade with the free world.

First, with the sharp cuts in aid from China and the Soviet Union beginning in the latter 1960's, North Korea, in order to bring in the capital goods, facility capital and technology necessary for the conduct of the Six Year Plan and the second Seven Year Plan along with the foreign exchange needed to buy them, transformed its trade and economic cooperation with Western nations to loans and deferred payment exports to North Korea as part of their market expansion.

Second, in order to raise the people's standard of living in its Six Year Plan and second Seven Year Plan, North Korea brought in consumer industry sector factory equipment of a comparatively high technological level from Western countries.

Third, greatly stimulated by the R.O.K.'s high level of economic growth, North Korea increased its bringing in of the capital goods, equipment and technology, the borrowing and deferred payment imports needed for the Six Year Plan and the second Seven Year Plan.

As a result, through the 1970's and into the 1980's North Korea's foreign trade policy changed into the principle of political and economic separation while expanding its trade and economic cooperation with Western countries and beginning to revise somewhat is self-dependent economy line of autarkic policy based on the principle of self-reliance.

However, North Korea's autarkic policy of the self-dependent economy line will be difficult to achieve as long as the North Koreans do not first have a great revolution such as the economic revolution carried out in the Eastern European countries, do not second abandon the line of the primacy of politics and military affairs, and do not third change over to an open economy based on international division of labor.[15]

We can cite the principle of equality and mutual benefit in the basis of North Korea's trade policy. North Korea's trade policy basis relies on the principle of equality and mutual benefit based on barter trade between two countries. North Korea upholds the principle of equality and mutual benefit in order to prevent the colonial and foreign dependent nature of trade.[16]

North Korea has the prejudice of Lenin's view of trade as monopoly capitalism's international exploitation seeing capital cooperation as "a law of imperialism by which monopoly capitalism rules overseas markets" while at the same time viewing trade between capitalist countries as "looting done through the exchange of unequal values between advanced and backward countries."[17]

I will examine North Korea's foreign trade operating principles, dividing them into the following areas: (one) the doctrine of import primacy; (two) the doctrine of import/export balance; and (three) the doctrine of barter trade.

First among the operating principles of North Korea's foreign trade, we can cite the doctrine of import primacy. North Korea's foreign trade emphasizes importing according to a fixed import plan the materials needed for economic plans while export is carried out according to an export plan as a means to provide foreign exchange required to meet the import demand.

In North Korea's foreign trade, imports are first fixed according to the "principle of importing a fixed amount" and exports have the secondary character of being the means of providing the foreign exchange needed for imports. Thus, North Korea's foreign trade emphasizes importing the materials needed for the construction of the self-dependent national economy so that the items imported center around those types of machine equipment needed to promote self-dependent industrialization such as capital goods and equipment while the import of consumer materials is generally restricted.

As a result, in accordance with the policy of heavy industry primacy, North Korea's primary imports are heavy industry products while other products comprise the secondary imports.

North Korea's foreign trade upholds the doctrine of import/export balance by holding to the principle of the so-called "doctrine of bilateral equilibrium" of trade balances which argues that bilateral equilibrium is the first concern. Thus, in order to guarantee its balance with each country, North Korea normally concludes reciprocal trade agreements upon which it bases its trade activity; accordingly, North Korea frequently sets forth as a condition when it authorizes foreign trade exports equivalent to imports.

As a result, North Korea's foreign trade usually concludes a reciprocal agreement for each exchange and in principle during the period of the agreement conducts discussions with the other country regarding the content of transactions for the sake of the balance of imports and exports. By such discussions, in principle the bilateral trade balances ensure the balance for each country.

North Korea is maintaining its reciprocal trade doctrine based on the principle of bilateral import/export balance comparatively strictly for Western countries as well as the Communist world.

This principle is the basic factor in North Korea's non-expanding foreign trade.

The reasons why North Korea maintains the principle of bilateral import/export balance comparatively strictly are first to prevent economic domination and second because of a shortage of foreign exchange due to a chronic trade deficit.

North Korea maintains the principle of bilateral barter trade in its foreign trade. North Korea's trade with socialist countries is done through long term trade and payment pacts concluded between governments while its trade with Western countries is done through trade agreements and bank agreements concluded on a civilian base.

The reason North Korea upholds the doctrine of barter trade comparatively strictly is because of the shortage of foreign exchange resulting from its chronic trade deficit. That is, because of its shortage of foreign exchange, whenever North Korea concludes reciprocal trade and payment agreements and has bilateral trade it avoids settling accounts in exchangeable currency but rather strives to carry on foreign trade without using gold or foreign exchange as much as possible by using a fixed currency by which export and import amounts are determined by agreement and establishing a swing margin for each side and adopting a form of settlement by which the small variances are settled after a period of time.

With the recent increase in Western trade, North Korea's deficit in trade with the West has increased greatly; in order to resolve this, North Korea is, a part of its policy, strongly demanding of Western exporters that they import part or all of the export loan in North Korean products in so-called "counter trade which is one form of barter trade based on the principle of bilateral balance.

However, through the 1970's and into the 1980's North Korea has been somewhat moderating its generally conventional strict doctrine of barter trade to change from individual barter trade to comprehensive barter trade.

Recently North Korea further moderated this barter trade doctrine to apply it more elastically, depending on the country--a good example of this is trade with Japan.

With the increase of the importance of the import from Japan of the newest machinery and plant facilities through the 1970's and into the 1980's, North Korea's deficit in trade with Japan has grown greater.

I will examine North Korea's foreign trade policy means, dividing them into the following areas: (one) price policy; (two) excise and exchange policy; and (three) quantity limitation policy and other policy means such as foreign economic cooperation.

North Korea applies a law of value which determines value according to the cost of labor added to the product as its principle for determining trade prices. However, domestically North Korea has adopted a price policy which separates commodity price from product value according to the goals of its economic plan and is not applying its law of value.

Since the socialist market's international price reflects international value, North Korea bases its prices in trade with socialist states on the international market price which reflects international value.

Divided between trade with socialist states and trade with capitalist states, North Korea's trade price is as follows. The price of commodities in North Korea's trade with socialist countries is determined by negotiation and agreement between the countries involved based on international market prices. That is, the price of commodities in North Korea's foreign trade is determined based on the capitalist market price and the socialist market price.[19]

That is, the price of commodities in foreign trade is determined by the so-called bargaining price by which the price is determined by negotiations with the other country based on the international market price.[20] There is a strong possibility that non-economic factors based on political concerns may be operative in the determining of North Korea's foreign trade commodity prices.

Next, the import commodity price in North Korea's trade with capitalism is based on the capitalist market price[21] but in consideration of North Korea's economic situation is determined at a price lower than the international market price level. North Korea determines its import price at a level lower than that of the international market price through long term talks and the multiplication of the countries from which it imports.

Also, North Korea's export price in trade with capitalism is determined at a lower level than that of the international market price due to North Korea's need to acquire foreign exchange, its weakness in international competition such as poor quality products, and its market inactivity.

The price of North Korea's import and export commodities is divorced from the domestic commodity price. That is, in contrast to the setting by the state of an official price for the domestic purchase of export commodities and the domestic sale of import commodities, the external sale price of export commodities and the external purchase price of import commodities are determined by the international market price; therefore, as a result of import and export activity there is a difference between the domestic price of import and export commodities which is determined by the official price and the international price of import and export commodities which is determined by the international market price which the state either compensates or recovers as "trade variance funds."[22]

Variable costs such as freight, storage, insurance, customs and taxes, advertising, bank interest, natural losses, depreciation, inspections, middleman processing and management, and labor must be added to the price of import and export commodities.[23] Also, if one recognizes the profits of trading organs, then that profit must be included as well.[24]

North Korea can use trading prices as one tool of its foreign trade policy means. North Korea can reduce export commodity prices or even dump export commodities at prices lower than production costs for political purposes such as forming diplomatic relations or economic purposes such as eliminating international competition, capturing markets or acquiring foreign exchange.

As one tool of its foreign trade policy means, North Korea can use its customs policy and its foreign exchange policy.

First, looking at the customs policy, North Korea can levy high customs in order to foster domestic industry under its goal of protecting its self-dependent national economy.

North Korea uses its customs policy in trade with socialist countries as a means to meet customs reductions from the other party in trade negotiations and uses it as a means to gain most favored nation treatment in its trade negotiations with capitalist nations.

North Korea can use its customs policy not only for economic purposes such as as a means to protect domestic industry, a means to change the import/export structure, a means to bring in finances, or a means to negotiate with other countries, but also for political purposes.

The foreign exchange rate is the buying power of one's own currency for trade commodities in the relative price of each other country's currency. Not only does North Korea's exchange rate not reflect a balanced price identical to domestic supply and demand, but also domestic prices are determined by political motives; therefore, not only is the exchange rate divorced from the value, but also it is an official rate fixed by the government which does not reflect a balanced exchange rate determined by supply and demand.

Although North Korea's foreign exchange policy comparatively fairly reflects its currency's buying power in the socialist market so that there is little fluctuation in the exchange rates, in the capitalist market it does not reflect its buying power but rather it changed from time to time for economic or political purposes. North Korea uses its foreign exchange policy as a means of its foreign trade policy through manipulating exchange rates.

Other trade policy means include the quantity limitation policy and the foreign economic cooperation policy. North Korea's trade quantities are determined by its quantity limitation policy through pre-planning by the State Planning Committee and through the control and management of the Ministry of Trade. North Korea's trade fixes quotas for each commodity through negotiations with the other party. However, the commodity quotas use the quantity limitation policy more for capitalist countries than for socialist countries.

Until the 1960's North Korea was a recipient of aid, getting economic aid from such socialist countries as China, the Soviet Union and COMECON countries but beginning in the late 1960's it emerged as a donor of aid, giving economic help, no matter how small the scale, to the countries of the Third World so that through the 1970's and into the 1980's even though it is unable to retire its foreign debt, it is providing economic aid to non-aligned countries to achieve political and economic goals.

I will examine North Korea's trade and management organs on the state scale, dividing them into the following: (one) the Ministry of Trade, which is the body that has overall control of the composition of the various enterprises and their exchange of commodities; (two) the trade organs established overseas which carry on trade activities; (three) the Ministry of External Economic Affairs; (four) the Committee for the Promotion of Foreign Trade; (five) the Public Corporation for Trade which itself is an organized body for foreign trade[25]; and (six) foreign trade banks.

The characteristics of North Korea's trade and management organs include: (one) the unity of political and economic guidance; (two) the democratic centralization system; (three) the planned character of trade activity; (four) the sole responsibility system; and (five) the self-supporting accounting system.

The Ministry of Trade (Muyok-pu) is the old Ministry of Trade (Muyok-song) which was renamed in the 28 December 1972 revamping of administrative organs. The Ministry of Trade is a central cabinet level deliberation organ responsible for the planning, executing, managing and controlling of foreign trade. The organization of North Korea's Ministry of Trade is shown in the following table.

A = Bureau of Agreement Organization
B = Bureau of Economic Planning
C = First Bureau
D = Second Bureau
E = Third Bureau
F = Shipping Bureau
G = Export Bureau
H = Import Bureau
I = Finance and Foreign Exchange Bureau
J = Protocol Bureau
K = Customs Bureau
L = Various Trading Companies

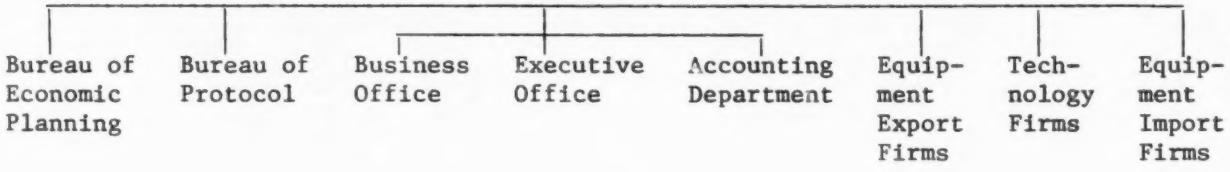
Also, the functions of the Ministry of Trade are as follows: (one) drafting and implementing trade policy and concluding pacts with foreign countries such as trade agreements and commercial treaties; (two) carrying out the investigation and research needed in establishing trade policy; (three) guiding and overseeing the trade work of its subordinate trade organs; (four) the authority to establish, combine, divide, and abolish enterprises related to trade; (five) drafting proposed laws relating to trade and promulgating regulations, orders, and training related to the carrying out of trade; (six) issuing import and export permits and controlling import/export commodities and currencies; (seven) inspecting the quality of exports; and (eight) guiding various projects relating to trade and carrying out duties relating to foreign economic cooperation.

The trade organs established overseas include the trade councilary departments established in the North Korean embassies and consulate-generals in countries with which North Korea has diplomatic relations, the trade delegations and information offices established in countries with which North Korea has no diplomatic relations; these are state organs for the management of foreign trade.

These organs (one) carry out the function of developing trade relations, (two) carry out the administrative function of controlling and adjusting trade activities according to law, (three) carry on various trade activities such as issuing permits for importing trade goods or issuing certificates of the place of origin of commodities, (four) can conclude and carry out trade contracts, and (five) carry out publicity activities related to trade.

The Ministry of External Economic Affairs is the old Foreign Economic Bureau which was renamed with the 1972 revamping of administrative organs. The functions of the Ministry of External Economic Affairs include the import and export of equipment, the opening of markets, the exchange of science and technology and work relating to loans and aid. The organization of the Ministry of External Economic Affairs is shown in the following table.

The Ministry of External Economic Affairs



The Committee for the Promotion of Foreign Trade has the duty of opening up and expanding trade with countries with which North Korea does not yet have diplomatic relations. The Committee for the Promotion of Foreign Trade is composed of the Plenary Session, the Standing Committee and the Trade Arbitration Committee. The Committee for the Promotion of Foreign Trade is in fact a governmental organ although it assumes the external appearance of a civilian society.

As part of the basis of North Korea's trade policy, the Committee for the Promotion of Foreign Trade studies the political and economic environment for foreign trade overseas and researches and establishes proposals to increase the number of countries with which North Korea has trade relations or to expand markets; based on this, it is responsible for furthering business-related contact between foreign trade organs or trading companies and North Korean trade organs or the Public Corporation for Trade and it concludes and carries out informal civil trade agreements and commercial treaties in order to carry out such preliminary steps as contacting personages in the industrial and social circles of the target country.

The Committee for the Promotion of International Trade facilitates the overseas dispatch of North Korean economic and trade delegations while at the same time inviting foreign economic and trade delegations. Also, the Committee participates in international trade representative negotiations and sponsors exhibits of North Korean products overseas and of international products in North Korea.

Also, the Committee's subsidiary Trade Arbitration Committee arbitrates disputes arising in trade.

The Committee for the Promotion of International Trade in North Korea's opening of trade relations with capitalist countries; in particular, it is common for various Western trading companies to go through the Committee to make contact with the special Public Corporation for Trade.

The public corporation for trade is a state-run economic organ with the status of a corporate body and an independent accounting system which is solely responsible for the import and export of specially designated commodities. The corporation is responsible for the import and export of specialized items classified according to type and nature of commodity; it also handles the whole process from talks through concluding the contract, carrying it out and liquidating accounts so that conflict between corporations is precluded.

The public corporation for trade has been granted by regulation the following legal status, scope of activity, functions and powers: (one) corporate body status; (two) import and export of special commodities; (three) rights; (four) property; (five) operations; (six) details of earnings and expenses and a percentage of profit; (seven) location; and (eight) steps to halt work.[26]

As a result, the corporation carries out the concluding of contracts with foreign trading companies, legal activities and financial responsibilities. Also, the corporation receives fixed assets and floating funds from the state to carry on its management activities according to the principle of the independent accounting system, ensuring profit by income and expenditure and giving part of that profit to the national treasury.

There are 22 corporations under the Ministry of Trade which handle special products and there are seven corporations under the Ministry of External Economic Affairs which handle various kinds of economic cooperation such as the import and export of plants and equipment and technical exchange.[27]

The public corporation for trade fulfills various functions including the following: (one) drafting import and export plan proposals; (two) concluding import and export contracts with foreign trading companies; (three) liquidating foreign exchange with foreign trading companies; (four) planning and implementing such cost saving measures as reducing currency costs and improving product quality; and (five) investigating the trends of foreign markets and the credit status of foreign trading companies.[28]

The functions of the public corporation for trade regarding the work of import and export include first concluding concrete trade contracts with foreign trading companies and establishing consignment contract relations between the producing enterprise and the public corporation for trade by forwarding orders for the export commodity in accordance with the contract with the trading company concretely specifying the conditions of acceptance and second, the corporation carries out broker work, delivering the export commodity through established customs procedures to the foreign trading company according to the conditions of the contract and accepts the bill of transfer.[29]

In the case of import trade, when the organ ordering the import commodity presents to the responsible public corporation for trade its order for the import commodity specifying the conditions of import and having attached an import authorization received from the Ministry of Trade according to the import allotment it has been given, the public corporation for trade establishes a consignment relationship with the ordering organ by accepting the order.

The import order has concretely specified delivery conditions; the public corporation accepts this, contacts the foreign trading company and concludes an import contract, accepts the import commodity in accordance with the conditions of that contract, and delivers the commodity to the ordering organ at an agreed upon site.

In the case of export, the public corporation for trade sells professionally in foreign markets the export commodity it has received from the organ supplying the export commodity; in the case of import, it purchases professionally the import commodity ordered by the ordering organ.

The economic relationships of the public corporation for trade are foreign economic relationships with foreign trading companies in the case of import, and domestic economic relationships with the producing enterprise in the case of export.

The former is based on the individual trade contracts which are concluded based on commercial treaties and trade pacts and protocols regarding the delivery of import commodities. And the latter is based on independent accounting contracts concluded according to commodity delivery plans regarding legal standards for delivering export commodities.[30] Also, the legal standard for the general rights and duties regarding the delivery of import commodities includes the government's import plan and related laws.

The trade bank was established independently of the Korean Central Bank in June 1959. The major functions of the trade bank include: (one) management of foreign exchange; (two) liquidating international accounts; (three) sending letters of credit and guaranteeing payment; (four) providing short term credit; (five) conducting the business of foreign currency transactions; and (six) forwarding money.

In order to carry out support work related to foreign trade, the Ministry of External Economic Affairs has under its aegis other trade-related organs, including the following: (one) the Korean Insurance Company, which handles work related to insuring maritime transport of commodities; (two) the Korean Commodities Inspection Bureau which handles work related to inspecting trade commodities; (three) the Korean Foreign Transport Company, which handles work acting as agent to reserve shipping and arrange management for trade commodities; and (four) the Korean Shipping Agency, which handles the work related to shipping agencies.

In addition, there are special organs for the effective conduct of trade business, including the Korean Foreign Scientific and Technological Exchange Association and the Korea-Poland Limited Maritime Company, a joint venture with a foreign country.

The purpose of North Korea's customs tariff is not to protect domestic industry but rather to maintain the state monopoly in trade. Of course, North Korea's customs tariff has other goals of increasing government income, lowering other countries' tariffs or strengthening the country's hand in negotiations for most favored nation treatment, but its main purpose is to prevent smuggling through import and export customs work and ensuring the maintenance of the state monopoly in trade.

North Korea's customs system not only manages the execution of laws related to the state monopoly of foreign trade and particularly manages the import commodities imported by the public corporations for trade, but also manages the execution of laws related to the foreign exchange monopoly and the transport handling monopoly as well as the laws related to people and commodities that cross the borders and manages the import and export statistics on commodities.

The feature of North Korea's customs system is its strict centralized style designed to ensure the maintenance of the state monopoly of foreign trade, which is exclusively attached to the Ministry of Trade through the central assembly for customs management. Due to the state monopoly of foreign trade, all customs tariffs are by principle collected by a centralized method through the various public corporations for trade under the superintendence of the Finance Ministry while due to the state monopoly of transport handling, each kind of freight and transport agency must receive authorization under the control of customs to cross the borders.

Also, North Korea's customs system depends on the transport organs to manage large warehouses and the unloading of import and export freight is closely ties to customs control.[31]

The General Customs Management Bureau of the Ministry of Trade directly controls the various customs organs. That is, the General Customs Management Bureau has the following functions: the organization and management of the various customs organs; participation in discussion for the establishment of all kinds of customs policies as well as for international treaties and agreements regarding customs standards; resolution of problems in applying tax rates and preparing tax drafts; and organizing customs statistics.

The regional customs office is under the guidance of the General Customs Management Office. As a state corporate body, the regional customs office not only examines the freight crossing the borders but also inspects all kinds of transport organs and examines small parcels and mail, and examines and levies tariffs on travellers and hand baggage while confiscating freight imported or exported in violation and levying and collecting fines for smuggling and customs law violations.[32]

Commodities are classified into 12 types in the North Korean import and export customs tariff rate table. On these commodities, North Korea distinguishes between import rates and export rates and applies multiple tax rates with maximums and minimums. The maximum tax rate is generally applied while the minimum tax rate, as an agreed upon rate, is applied to socialist countries or capitalist countries receiving most favored nation treatment which have concluded agreements regarding mutually advantageous trade but in particular, there is usually no customs tariff for socialist countries.

The maximum tax is usually two to four times the minimum tax while at times it goes as high as ten plus times the minimum. Looking at North Korea's customs tariff rates, the import rates for machinery and equipment is extremely low while the import rates for consumer goods is extremely high; this customs policy builds the socialist industrial base centered around heavy industry and defense industries.

North Korea levies very little or no tariff on socialist trade by mutual advantage agreements between governments but levies a comparatively high rate on capitalist trade, thus making capitalist trade disadvantageous. Also, the method of levying the tariff uses only ad valorem duty which calculates the tariff in terms of a percentage of the taxed commodity's value and the levy standard is based on CIF prices with calculation based on the commercial invoice.

Also, customs exemption is granted for certain products. According to the North Korean "Regulations for Import and Export Duties"[33], those exempt products include the following: (one) items for the official and private use of diplomatic missions and commercial representatives; (two) daily necessities of foreign travelers and items recognized by customs as things used for occupational purposes; (three) items recognized by customs as things used for food, fuel and other consumer purposes by foreign ships; and (four) items designated by the cabinet such as display items for trade fairs. Also, items forbidden for import or export include the following: (one) items giving injurious influence on Communist ideology; (two) items classified as state secrets; and (three) items whose import and export is forbidden by law.

North Korea has adopted a customs allocation system to apply such rates as the first rate and the second rate to items of weak competitiveness in the international market; the first rate is either very low or no tariff at all but the second rate is very high. The items to which North Korea applies the first rate includes such export goods as molybdenum ore, manganese ore, nickel ore, nickel/gold ore and silicon; North Korea strives to give special benefit to raw material importers.

North Korea has unified its foreign exchange management by state monopoly of foreign exchange. The state has monopoly management of foreign certificates of value such as the following: (one) foreign currency and foreign currency drafts and remittance exchange; (two) gold, silver, and other precious metals; and (three) stock and bonds. The goals of state monopoly of foreign exchange include the following: (one) planned manipulation of international currency and the international economy; (two) concentrate the management of foreign currency funds in the hands of the government and use them rationally in carrying out the plans of the people's economy; and (three) maintain the independence of the foreign exchange system.

Because the state has established a foreign plan to balance the supply and demand of foreign exchange, North Korea's foreign exchange control system has the following characteristics: (one) the concentration of foreign exchange at the Korean Central Bank or the Trade Bank; (two) execution of foreign exchange work according to the foreign exchange plan by the Korean Central Bank or the Trade Bank; (three) allocation of foreign exchange for payment overseas on a monthly or periodic basis according to the foreign exchange supply and demand plan through the Trade Bank; and (four) requirements that foreigners report the foreign exchange they are carrying when they enter the country.

Since the state has monopoly control of foreign exchange management by the foreign exchange supply and demand plan, the exchange rate rarely fluctuates. North Korea applies different rates to the communist world and the free world; the rates for the communist world do not change but by contrast the rates for the free world frequently change.

North Korea's exchange system for the communist world uses the Soviet Union's ruble as its key currency. In March 1950 the Soviet Union set the gold content of the ruble at .222168 per unit in choosing a gold linkage system. Thus the Eastern European countries also set gold content proportions for their currencies so that they adopted the ruble linkage system by the end of 1950; although we do not know when, there is no doubt that North Korea also adopted the ruble linkage system.

With the currency reform of January 1961, the Soviet Union increased the gold content of the ruble 4.4 times from the old 0.222168 to 0.987412 grams per unit, also changing the exchange rate from one dollar = four rubles to one dollar = 0.9 rubles, using the official exchange rate as the commercial exchange rate used in foreign trade while adding a fixed premium to the official rate for non-commercial exchange such as that used for transactions outside of foreign trade and for capital transactions.

The non-commercial transaction exchange of the socialist countries was, as decided by the 1963 Prague agreement, determined according to the purchasing power parity of each states financial service and is based on the retail price of some 70 designated products. Whenever this retail price base varies more than five percent up or down, the non-commercial exchange rate can be changed.[35]

North Korea applies its commercial exchange rate as its official exchange rate and uses its non-commercial exchange rate as the official rate with a fixed percentage premium added.

The intra-sphere exchange rate of the socialist countries, including North Korea, can be said to be determined by the gold content of each country's currency and its buying power in the socialist market as well as its exchange rate vis a vis the ruble; there is very little change in each country's exchange rate.

However, since the socialist countries including Korea determine their domestic prices according to an official price set artifically, value and price are divorced so that there is no organic tie between domestic price and international price; thus there is a fundamental limit on the real buying power of each country's currency in the intra-sphere exchange rate determined based on domestic prices.

North Korea has adopted a multiple exchange rate system of the commercial exchange rate (official exchange rate) and the non-commercial exchange rate (traveller's exchange rate) for the countries of the free world. The exchange rate of the North Korean won to Western currencies is based on the exchange rate of the ruble to the dollar in order to determine the value of the North Korean won.

However, North Korea's exchange rate for Western countries is, as a policy exchange rate determined one-sidedly according to policy needs[36], set very low in comparison to the actual buying power of the North Korean won. However, with the transformation of the Soviet Union's exchange policy for Western currencies from a fixed rate system to a floating rate system following the Smithsonian measure of December 1971, North Korea's exchange rate for Western countries now changes when the Soviet Union's National Central Bank announces its monthly changes.

According to the September 1978 announcement of the Soviet Union's National Central Bank, the ruble-North Korean won exchange rate was one ruble to 282.485 yen. Compared to this official exchange rate, as of 1978 North Korea's traveller's exchange rate was underpriced at one won to 126.86 yen. The reason is because North Korea is attempting below cost export in order to expand its Western market and acquire foreign exchange.

UNEVEN ECONOMIC RECOVERY REPORTED

Seoul TONGA ILBO in Korean 20 Aug 81 p 3, Seoul U.S. Embassy Translation

[Text] The nation's electronic, shipbuilding and chemical fiber industries have completely got out of business pinch during the latter half of last year and nearly cleared away their accumulated deficits. On the other hand, however, automobile, petro-chemical and cement, as well as machinery tool and fertilizer firms have yet to recover from a quagmire of business recession.

According to the Commerce and Industry Ministry 20 August, the nation's three electric home appliances makers wholly liquidated the deficits of W12,300 million which were incurred during the first half of last year and gained a net profit of W16,000 million during the first half of this year. The five chemical fiber companies saw a short-term net surplus of W6,000 million during the first six months of this year, thereby raising their profits as much as eight times as compared with the same period last year.

The Samsung Electronics Co. faced a deficit of W5,500 million last year but offset the figures in the red by gaining a surplus of W7,300 million during the January-June period of this year. The combined profit earned by the Hyundai Shipbuilding Co. and the Korea Shipbuilding & Engineering Corp. during the first half of this year amounted to W18,800 million.

However, in contrast, the nation's five automobile makers recorded a deficit of W26,400 million during the first six months of this year, in addition to the W80 million they incurred as the red figures last year. Six cement interests faced a deficit of W26,900 million during the first half of this year largely due to the prolonged sluggishness in the construction business. The nation's 27 petro-chemical industries had an aggregate deficit of W118,000 million last year. Such an unfavorable trend was largely attributable to the inflow of cheap chemical raw materials from foreign countries as well as a steady increase in the price of locally produced naphtha.

INVESTMENT TRENDS ANALYZED

Seoul TONGA ILBO in Korean 13 Aug 81 p 3, Seoul U.S. Embassy Translation

[Article by Reporter Ch'ee Hui-cho: "Facility Investment Is Still in Deep Sleep."]

[Summary] These days, many say that they cannot see how business is, indeed. There have been a series of announcements on signs of business recovery. Quite a few, however, say that realistically, they cannot yet be sure of such indications. Some predict that private investments in industrial facilities will continue to be inactive. The people wonder whether business is really picking up or a business recovery has been exaggerated too much.

There is no mistake that business is recovering from depression gradually. For the first time in 23 months, the business warning index rose 1 percentage point recently. Last year, GNP registered a minus growth rate for the first time in the history of this Republic. This year, however, it continued to mark a positive growth rate in the first two quarters.

In spite of this upturn, some predict that investments in business facilities, particularly in manufacturing, will decrease drastically. According to a report on "Trends of Investments in Major Industrial Facilities, and Tasks," published by the Korea Development Bank on the results of its survey on 1,300 private industries, their facility investments have decreased by 26.2 percent in 1980 from the preceding year, in terms of real value. This year, the investments are projected to increase slightly by 4 percent in terms of nominal value, but to decrease by 10.1 percent in terms of real value.

In the manufacturing industry sector, facility investments decreased by 43 percent last year; and this year, they are projected to decrease further by 31.5 percent. This means that the business warning index rose, while actual investments have dropped sharply. How can this be explained? The answer is simple. The warning index indicates only the current business trend, while the investment figures stand for the present business conditions.

Investments make stepping stones for economic growth. During the first quarter of this year, the fixed capital investment in Korea sharply decreased by 10.3 percent as compared with the same period of last year. Particularly in the building construction sector, it fell by a whopping margin of 40 percent. Still, it was possible for GNP to grow 1.2 percent, largely owing to an increase in agricultural and fisheries production. In addition, in the case of manufacturing industries, the operation of idle facilities has increased, even without new capital investments made.

According to the government plan, a growth of GNP this year is programmed at 6 to 7 percent. This growth rate also means that the government placed more expectations on a growth in the agricultural and fisheries sector than on that in manufacturing. If only the rice harvest reaches an average-year crop, it is possible to expect a GNP growth target of 4 to 5 percent. Accordingly, this year's GNP growth target can be achieved even without an appreciable growth in the manufacturing sector.

Investments in manufacturing industries, however, are a key to determining the future growth capability and the future business trend. In this respect, the KDB's survey result--showing the drastic decreases in investments during the past two years--is noteworthy.

The rapid economic growth in the 1970's was led chiefly by the expansion of manufacturing industries, thanks to the high rate of capital investment in the sector. During the 1975-79 period, capital investments in manufacturing industries have grown by an annual average of 26 percent. This has provided the basis for sustained economic growth. Accordingly, the continued drop of facility investments by 43 percent last year and again by 31 percent this year, means that growth potential in this sector has been reduced drastically.

The decrease in capital investments is also a "reaction" to the overheated investments done in the latter half of the 1970's. Capital investments rose sharply in an unprincipled, exploding way in the heavy and chemical industry field. With the arrival of business depression, the investments decreased rapidly.

Investments in this sector, which rose 36 percent on an annual average during the 1975-79 period, decreased by 37 percent last year and projected to fall by 36 percent this year. On the other hand, investments in the light industry sector, which decreased by a whopping margin of 61 percent last year, are projected to decrease only by 8 percent this year.

For reasons of a decrease in capital investments, businesses cite an inactive demand (43.7 percent), financial shortages (21.9 percent), and uncertain business outlook (13.9 percent). In 1979, the order of these responsible factors was in reverse; financial shortages (38.4 percent), slow demand (16.2 percent), and uncertain business prospect (5.1 percent).

Because of the poor rice crop last year, the rural purchasing power has decreased by W1,500 billion. Domestic demand has declined on the whole; the annual consumption, which kept rising 10 percent each year, declined by 1 percent last year.

It is more than natural that the slow demand was counted as the primary cause to a decrease in capital investments. This means that in the past, businessmen would try to make capital investments hurriedly only when their goods are sold fast, and that such a past investment practice still remains unchanged. No efforts seem to have been made to overcome business depression with capital investments for business rationalization, reducing cost, and creating new demand.

Capital investments for facility expansion, which accounted for 78 percent of the total investments last year, have decreased to 67 percent this year. The ratio of energy-saving and business rationalization investments is projected to increase from 13 percent to 19 percent this year.

Uncertain business prospect was counted as a major cause to slow investment activities. This reveals that businessmen's apprehension over their business future is deepening. It is noteworthy that a number of businessmen holding uncertain views on their future has increased from 1979. Some say that the political and social upheavals experienced during the past two years might psychologically add uncertainty to their future business prospect, not to mention the economic factors.

As long as there are idle facilities, it may be possible to achieve economic growth by elevating their operating rate, and to run the business anyhow. But business and the national economy alike must continue to develop permanently; and for this reason, we cannot be negligent of seeking some workable and far-reaching measures.

Korean businesses have, in fact, grown in an easy way by relying on the high inflationary rate, low interest rates, and real estate investments, rather than through technical innovation and cost reduction. This is well attested by their past investment pattern of hastily investing capital only when business prospers, while avoiding investments as far as possible in time of business depression.

But all those easy factors have gone. There will be no way to survive unless one has positively tackled the depression. From the national economic viewpoint, the continued decrease in facility investments during the past two years is expected to bring about short supply and greatly restrict economic growth and business rejuvenation in the future. To prevent that, it is urgently necessary to work out some government policies to give incentives to individual businesses for their investment activities and to create a favorable climate for capital investment.

'NODONG SINMUN': PREPARE YOUTH AS MILITANT RESERVES

SK191040 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1021 GMT 19 Aug 81

[Text] Pyongyang August 19 (KCNA)--NODONG SINMUN today carries an editorial headlined "Let Us Firmly Prepare All Youth and Children as Militant Reserves of the Party."

The editorial says:

Our party, on the basis of a scientific insight into the requirements of the developing reality and the actual conditions of the youth movement in our country, recently put forward the revolutionary policy of further strengthening the party leadership of the work with youth and children.

Contained in this policy of the party is a far-reaching intention of the party centre to consolidate and develop our organziation of the League of Socialist Working Youth into a militant organization, vivacious and virile as a youth organization under the guidance of the Great Worker's Party of Korea, and to make the youth and children carry the cause of chuche through to completion with a high degree of revolutionary spirit and passion as a new generation born in a country making revolution and in an era of struggle.

To further strengthen the leadership of the work with youth and children at present carries weighty significance in bringing the youth movement of our country to a higher stage and accomplishing the cause of modelling the whole society on the chuche idea in conformity with the demand of the developing reality.

It is one of the most important tasks facing the party of the working class to constantly improve and strengthen the work with youth and children in conformity with the revolution and construction developing in depth.

The party of the working class should firmly train youth and children to creditably accomplish the revolutionary cause and achieve the eternal prosperity and development of the nation.

The youth problem is successfully solved in our country under the wise guidance of the party and the leader.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has attached weighty importance to the work with youth, directing keen attention to it, ever since he embarked upon the road of revolution, and led the youth movement of our country along the road of victory. Particularly, an epochal change has been brought about in recent years in the work with youth and children under the correct policy and energetic guidance of the party centre. Today our youth movement is successfully discharging the duty it assumes before the era and history and the youth and children are highly demonstrating the honor of being reliable reserves of the party.

Now the ideology and mentality of our youth and children are very excellent. It is the noble trait of our youth and children today to trust and follow the party absolutely with a firm revolutionary faith, entrust their destiny wholly to the party and fight staunchly along the road of revolution. As there is a big army of youth and children who are boundlessly faithful to the cause of the party and rallied close around the party centre, the future of the Workers' Party of Korea is immensely bright and our revolution is advancing vigorously.

Noting that we should not rest on our laurels but deepen the work with youth and children, the editorial goes on:

Let us further strengthen the party's leadership of the work with youth and children and firmly prepare all the youth and children as reliable successors to the cause of chuche. This is an important task set forth by the party centre before our party organizations today.

Historic experience shows that unless the youth and children are educated and trained in a revolutionary way, their class consciousness and revolutionary spirit will be benumbed and, further, they may rest content with today's happiness and give up a revolutionary struggle. We should concentrate great efforts on the work of bringing up the younger generation to be staunch revolutionaries and socialist and communist builders who will succeed to the revolution and should constantly deepen the work as the revolution advances.

The Korean Communist Youth Movement is now in the most glorious and brilliant period under the guidance of our party centre who embraces the entire youth and children in the broad bosom of the revolution and leads them to the bright future of communism.

The editorial refers in detail to tasks for firmly preparing all the youth and children as militant reserves of the party.

The basic problem in strengthening the work with youth and children today is to bring them up firmly to be reliable successors to the cause of chuche who are boundlessly faithful to the party and the leader, stresses the editorial.

'NODONG SINMUN' ON BOND OF PARTY, MASSES

SK191544 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1511 GMT 19 Aug 81

[Text] Pyongyang August 19 (KCNA)--NODONG SINMUN August 17 came out with a full-page political essay headlined "Source of Strength."

Its authors, to begin with, declare that the source of the strength of the Workers Party of Korea lies in its blood ties with the masses. The unbreakable ties with the masses, they say, are the never-drying spring of the great might of a party and a party which is united with the masses in one body by these ties is invincible.

In its first part, the political essay says that a party must become one flesh with the masses, if it wants to become a mighty party possessed of invincible strength.

It says:

There are many political parties struggling in defence of the interests of the working class and working masses in the world.

Among them there are parties in power and not in power, young parties and parties of long history, but these are not denotations of their strength.

The soil in which a party is rooted is the popular masses. A party which is constantly suckled by this mother soil, having set its roots in it, is always mighty and invincible.

The bloody pages of the history of class wars till this day since the appearance of a working class party on the historical scene carry many lessons on the bonds between the party and the masses, the essay says. Touching upon the success scored by the Korean communists in the revolution and construction, including their achievements in the anti-Japanese armed struggle, it says:

The blood ties with the popular masses are the eternal life of the party, its inexhaustible wisdom and its bright future and the volcanic force spurting out of the crater.

In its constant blood ties with the masses of the people, the party grows, gains strength from the popular masses and obtains its high leading authority.

The party must not be separated from the masses for a moment.

A party separated from the masses is like a tree cut off from its root and a fish which left water.

Saying that even a moment's mistake is not allowed in the bonds between the party and the masses, the essay says: The existence of a party, its might and its victory are unthinkable apart from the struggle for smashing the machinations of the enemy and tightening bonds between the party and the masses.

In its second part, the political essay deals with the struggle of the party for tightening its bonds with the popular masses.

Our party's history began with a struggle for its blood ties with the masses and its whole history is run through with this struggle, declares the essay. It continues:

The revolutionary mass line which the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song shaped in the early period and our party has held aloft is the ever-victorious weapon of our party for constantly strengthening its bonds with the masses.

Our party's weapon for strengthening its blood ties with the masses--it is the spirit of service whereby our party always puts the interests of the people in the first place and solves all problems in conformity with the demand of the people, and is the principle of its activity basing its policy and line on the purpose and demand of the masses.

From its very inception, our party has never let go its hold of the revolutionary mass line but kept a tight hold on it, regarding it as what keeps it alive, the first principle of all its activities and the weapon for steadily strengthening its ties with the masses, declares the essay. It continues:

The brilliant tradition of the blood ties between the party and the masses established by the great leader by his tireless efforts is today resolutely upheld, deepened and developed by our glorious party centre.

The program of modelling the whole party on the chuche idea held aloft by our party --it is a great and lofty work for strengthening and developing our party into an eternal party of the great leader, the party of chuche, and making our party, both nominally and virtually, a party doing work with people, a party going among the masses and living among the people.

Let us thoroughly establish the work method of the leaders' style in the whole party; this is the decision and will of our party for further strengthening links with the masses today.

Stating that the struggle of our party for going among the masses and rallying them is waves rolling on the ocean without a moment's pause and the eternal onward movement of the party, the political essay says: On these waves our party is growing sturdily and our revolution is advancing with fortitude.

In the third part the political essay turns to the complete unity and cohesion achieved between our party and the popular masses.

Today, in our country, all the fields and all the fronts of politics, economy and culture move as one in accordance with one will and one purpose and the entire people from the functionaries of the centre to the lighthouse keepers of a solitary island breathe the same breath following the breath of the party and speak the same words following the voice of the party.

The strong and clear ties between our party and the people, which cannot be broken or be defiled are the source of the courage and perseverance with which the party and people, in one flesh, fearlessly break through difficulties and tests and the spring which gives birth to the strength of tremendous creation and changes.

This is the source of the might of the Workers Party of Korea full of life, strong and with a vast prospect, the party always advancing with the mettle of youth, not knowing decrepitude or stagnation.

The blood ties between the party and the popular masses--this great gain of our party turns into strength and resource, bringing one victory after another to our revolution, grandeur and prosperity to our country and opening a bright and grand prospect before us.

As long as there is this invincible might of the close unity of the great party and the great people by blood ties, our party will be resolutely defended, our people will advance and win forever and the revolutionary cause of chuche will be brilliantly succeeded and accomplished through generations in any storm and stress.

DPRK PEOPLE'S COMMITTEE RENAMES COUNTY, TOWN IN YANGGANG

SK181645 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1601 GMT 18 Aug 81

[Text] Pyongyang August 18 (KCNA)--The Central Peoples' Committee of the Democratic Peoples' Republic of Korea on August 17 issued a decree on renaming Sinpa County, Yanggang Province, "Kim Chong-suk County," which reads:

Sinpa County, Yanggang Province, is a historical land associated with the immortal revolutionary feats of Comrade Kim Chong-suk, an indomitable communist revolutionary fighter and anti-Japanese heroine.

Comrade Kim Chong-suk was a true communist revolutionary of chuche type who, born into a patriotic and revolutionary family, participated in the revolutionary struggle in her early years and fought with all devotion only for the freedom and happiness of the people on the road of rigorous and arduous revolution from the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle to the construction of a new fatherland after the liberation.

In the whole course of the anti-Japanese armed struggle, Comrade Kim Chong-suk, upholding the revolutionary ideas and chuche-oriented revolutionary line of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, resolutely defended and guarded him politically and ideologically, with her own life, in any adversity, and rendered immortal services and made a precious contribution to the historic cause of the liberation of the country by displaying unexampled courage and heroism.

Taking upon herself a difficult task of underground political work, Comrade Kim Chong-suk came out to the border area and, crossing and recrossing the Ammok-Kang River through the strict cordon of the Japanese imperialists, carried out bold and skillful underground political activity to implant the revolutionary ideas of the great leader among the people of Sinpa and other areas of the homeland and closely rally them in an underground revolutionary organisation, thus making a great contribution to rousing the home people in the anti-Japanese struggle.

Through her energetic reconnaissance activities in the Sinpa area, Comrade Kim Chong-suk also greatly contributed to guaranteeing the historic victory of the operation of advance into the homeland personally organised and commanded by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and successfully fulfilled her task to aid the Korean peoples revolutionary army by mobilizing the revolutionary organisation of the Sinpa area.

After the liberation of the country Comrade Kim Chong-suk devoted herself to the construction of a new fatherland and rendered immortal services in accomplishing the revolutionary cause of chuche, holding aloft the teachings of the great leader.

The noble revolutionary feats performed by Comrade Kim Chung-suk, a faithful revolutionary soldier of the great leader, in the flames of the righteous revolutionary struggle will remain recorded forever as an imperishable epic in the annals of our revolution.

To glorify forever the immortal revolutionary feats of Comrade Kim Chong-suk, an indomitable communist revolutionary fighter, is the unanimous will and desire of our people who are advancing vigorously for the victory of the cause of chuche, following the leadership of the party, holding the great leader in high esteem.

The Central Peoples' Committee of the Democratic Peoples' Republic of Korea decides as follows to convey down through generations the revolutionary feats of Comrade Kim Chong-suk, a communist revolutionary fighter and anti-Japanese heroine, who dedicated her all for the victory of the revolutionary cause of chuche started by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song:

1. Sinpa County, Yanggang Province, shall be renamed "Kim Chong-suk County."

2. Sinpa Up shall be renamed "Kim Chong-suk Up."

HIGH-SPEED MINE DEVELOPMENT MACHINE PLANT BUILT

Pyongyang NODONG SINMUN in Korean 20 Jun 81 p 3

[Article by special correspondent Yi Kyu-chong: "Revolutionary Spirit of Self-Reliance Achieves Proud Results: Construction Work of High-Speed Mine Development Machine Plant Completed; Partial Production Started at 9 August Plant"]

[Text] Holding high the militant task proposed by the great leader in his New Year's message this year and the on-the-spot guidance he gave to South P'yongan Province, construction workers and volunteers at the 9 August plant who rose to the task of first-stage expansion work strongly generated the fiery wind of blitzkrieg in the project. In the short period of a few weeks since then, and that under the unfavorable conditions of the winter season, they achieved the proud result of completing a large-scale construction project, including a high-speed mine development machine plant, a tool plant, and living quarters, covering as much as several thousand pyong in area.

At this plant they have almost completed the work of machine installation. In a certain part of the plant production has started.

The great leader, Comrade Kim Il-song, taught us as follows: "We must strengthen geological exploration in order to prepare a number of prospective excavation sites and create strong mine development machine production bases, and wage an aggressive struggle to develop new mines and coal mines."

It is one of the important tasks posed in the chucheization of the people's economy to give strong precedence to the extraction industry over the processing industry.

Construction workers and volunteers at this site who enthusiastically accepted the guidance of the great leader and the noble will of the party center have consolidated their burning resolution of loyalty to better create the extraction facilities production bases as soon as possible. They have waged a fierce assault beginning with the first battle of the new year.

Holding high the revolutionary spirit of self-reliance, construction workers and volunteers have constantly increased the speed of work by using their own ability to solve all difficulties and ordeals they have encountered.

"Ideology, technology, and culture--all in accordance with the demands of chuche!" Holding high this slogan of the party, construction workers and volunteers waged a tenacious struggle.

It happened one day in early January. An unexpected difficulty appeared blocking their path ahead.

Under the impact of the cold front the temperature suddenly dropped, and as a result large rivers were frozen, unusual for that time of year. To make matters worse, heavy snow made it impossible for aggregate stations to continue to receive sand and gravel.

At times like this construction workers at this place did not waver in the slightest. They resolved to break through the difficulties they encountered and tenaciously tackled them.

Company commander Comrade Yi Pyong-sok and platoon leader Comrade Kim Kwang-nam and members of the 4th Company shock brigade traced the flow of the river for scores of ri from the construction site. With the burning passion of loyalty to the leader in their hearts they swept aside the snow to check every patch of riverbed, and finally succeeded in their search for usable sources of sand and gravel.

However, there was not even a path opened over a distance of as long as 1,000 meters from the aggregate collection point to the highway. Nevertheless, they rose up as one, pushed aside the snow, filled the dips with gravel, and even opened up an automobile road during the same day before they turned back.

Not stopping merely with achieving a breakthrough, the shock brigade members carried out a new innovation in the transportation of aggregate by cooperating with a transportation company from the following day on, and vigorously sped forward.

The shock brigade members led by agitator Comrade Kim Yong-ae held a study and report meeting on the recollection of the anti-Japanese guerrilla fighters, "Orders Must Be Fully Carried Out to the End." They emulated the indomitable fighting spirit of the anti-Japanese guerrilla fighters who were endlessly loyal to the great leader in waging a tenacious struggle. Consequently, they superbly resolved the question of aggregate facing them, and made great contributions to immensely increasing the speed of construction.

The revolutionary spirit of self-reliance and arduous struggle swept through the construction site.

It happened at a time when they had to assemble a heavy roof panel more than 10 meters long and several tons in weight. They had two cranes at the construction site. But the arm of one of the cranes was too short to lift the heavy roof panel. Yet with only one of the cranes it was impossible for them to guarantee the target date for completing the assembly as they had resolved to do. Some people even proposed that they appeal to the superiors for the necessary crane.

However, members of the steeplejack work team at the 4th workshop under the 32d chemical plant construction office had a different idea.

(If we ask the superiors for help whenever we encounter difficulty, how can we call it the workstyle of revolutionary people? Also, even if the question of a crane should be resolved, it would take a certain length of time. How can we opt to do this when every moment is precious? We must somehow solve the problem by ourselves.)

With such an idea members of the steeplejack work team pooled their mutual collective wisdom and ability to study the problem. Finally, they hit upon the idea that if an auxiliary arm were attached, the problem would be solved. They finally built the necessary arm by themselves.

In this manner they tightly planned the work with two cranes and mutually accelerated the work. As a result, they completed in only 15 days the assembly work of the roof panel for the high-speed mine machinery workshop which would normally take a month. Utilizing this experience they established a new record in completing in only one week the work connected with the assembling of the roof panel for the tool workshop which was expected to require 15 days.

Furthermore, construction workers at this site built a new jig when U-shaped steel was needed in the manufacturing of roof panels. They made U-shaped steel from steel plates to guarantee the production of roof panels on a timely basis. They built their own equipment by themselves to manufacture even the thin panels needed for covering the roof. In this way they superbly removed blocks through their own ability, markedly increased the speed of construction, and vigorously sped forward.

Holding high the noble will of the great leader and the glorious party center, construction workers and volunteers at this site struggled with all their intelligence and spirit in order to guarantee the best quality as well as the speed of construction.

One day in the midst of assembling the roof panel, members of the steeplejack workshop at this site unwittingly assembled a roof panel on which the painting was not completed.

At that time members of the 2d Company shock brigade in charge of the painting work found the cause in their failure to give precedence to painting work on a timely basis, and held a serious discussion on how to solve it.

Members of the shock brigade at the site, who knew better than anyone else that unpainted prefabricated construction material has a shorter life than painted prefabricated construction material, decided that they could not use even a single sheet of unpainted prefabricated construction material in a permanent construction to be handed down to posterity. Even though no one directed them, during recess they voluntarily climbed ladders to the roof to display the master-like model of completely finishing the painting in spite of unfavorable working conditions.

Such master-like style and workstyle were visibly displayed not only among construction workers but also among volunteers.

Under the guidance of the party organization, laborers and technicians of the plants and enterprises in charge of the production of construction material produced, from the revolutionary master-like standpoint, high-quality material, even if it was only a piece of material.

Especially the working class at the Sinuiju spinning machine plant showed the model of guaranteeing high quality in the manufacture of iron gates by properly grinding square corners.

Holding high the party policy of giving strong precedence to the extraction industry over the processing industry, construction workers and volunteers at this site are continuously waging a vigorous struggle to create strong mine development machine bases.

DPRK TIDELAND CONSTRUCTION APPRAISED

SK171058 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1034 GMT 17 Aug 81

[Text] Pyongyang August 17 (KCNA)--An energetic work is afoot for the reclamation of 300,000 hectares of tideland along the west coast of the country from the estuary of the Amnok-Kang River to that of the Yesong River near the military demarcation line.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, in his report to the Sixth Congress of the Worker's Party of Korea, set the reclamation of 300,000 hectares of tideland as one of the ten long-range objectives of socialist economic construction for the 1980's.

This vast project covering the whole coast of North and South Pyongang and South Hwanghae Provinces, is a gigantic nature-remaking for obtaining an arable land nearly equal to a half of the nation's paddy area.

A leading official of the designing institute under the commission of agriculture in charge of the designing for tideland reclamation said that the Korean map will undergo a complete change on its west coast ten years hereafter.

Being a project for obtaining a larger arable land than that of a west coastal province, the reclamation of 300,000 hectares of tideland is a project unprecedented in the world history of tideland reclamation, he declared.

If an average of 7 tons of rice are harvested as now from each hectare of it, the rice output there will be more than the total grain output of the nothern half of the republic in 1946, the next year of liberation, he added.

This vast tideland reclamation is a most revolutionary policy for beating the 15 million ton target of grain production in the 1980's.

Recently again, the great leader acquainted himself time and again with the progress of the tideland reclamation and indicated its targets for different stages, the direction of the project and ways for the solution of the scientific and technical problems cropping up in it.

The glorious party centre solves all the problems arising in this vast nature-remaking project, giving a guidance to carry it out boldly in a revolutionary way.

The tideland constructors who have already upturned tens of thousands of hectares of tideland on the west coast into fertile soil are intensifying the speed campaign with the resolution to reclaim 100,000 hectares by 1984, the last year of the second seven-year plan, and complete the reclamation of the remaining 2,000,000 hectares ahead of schedule, true to the instructions of the respected and beloved leader.

Now, in North Pyongan Province, a project is under way for linking several islands from the estuary of the Amnok-Gang River to the sea off Chongju. The constructors of the tideland construction combine of the province are demolishing mountains and damming off the sea water, having set themselves the bold goal of completing by the end of next year the tideland construction involving close to 10,000 hectares, which would have taken several years in the past.

The tideland constructors of South Pyongan Province are in charge of a project to build a dyke in a beeline to the estuary of the Taedong-Kang River from the estuary of the Chongchon River more than 16 km off the land. Now they are pulling their full weight on damming off the sea at the estuary of the Taedong-Kang River, it will not be long before a new arable land extending thousands of hectares will take shape at the Onchon Tideland Construction site there.

The constructors in South Hwanghae Province are hastening their work to wind up in a short time the tideland construction in Yonbaek area which they have been carrying on for some time. On the other hand, they are preparing to dam up all the deep bays of the province with its heavily indented coastline.

Our country is possessed of a trustworthy scientific and technical force, a large contingent of experienced builders and a solid foundation of an independent national economy for carrying out this gigantic tideland construction, which will change the country's map in a brief period of ten years.

DPRK OVERFULFILLS FISH CATCH ASSIGNMENTS

SK190431 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0331 GMT 19 Aug 81

[Text] Pyongyang August 19 (KCNA)--The fishermen under the Pelagic Fishery Administration are making big hauls these days.

According to data available, they increased fish catch in June 1.4 times above the same month last year. In July, too, all the fishing boats in the deep seas overfulfilled their fish catch assignments.

A new high is being chalked up in August. These days the fishermen increased the number of netting 1.3 times as against the same period of last year and considerably boosted the fish catch per boat.

As a result, this year's fish catch till recently showed an increment of 17 percent above the corresponding period of last year.

Now powerful fishing fleets of different fishery stations consisting of over 10,000 ton processing mother boats, 5,000 ton refrigerator-transports, 3,750 ton stern trawlers, modernly-equipped detection boats, oceanographic observation boats and various other boats are all out in the deep seas.

Workers of the Pelagic Fishery Administration set up a fishing operation command in the deep sea fishing ground, flexibly commanding the operations of fishing fleets and boats.

Transport boats are returning to the fishing ports from the deep sea fishing ground one after another, flying a big haul flag.

DPRK PAPERS DENOUNCE U.S. PLAN ON NEUTRON BOMBS

SK181609 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1526 GMT 18 Aug 81

[Text] Pyongyang August 18 (KCNA)--MINJU CHOSON and PYONGYANG SINMUN today came out with signed commentaries in connection with the U.S. administration's adoption of a decision on producing neutron bombs.

The commentary of MINJU CHOSON headlined "Grave Act Increasing Danger of War" says:

The decision of the U.S. administration to produce neutron bombs is an extremely grave act further intensifying the arms race and increasing the danger of a nuclear war and poses a serious threat to world peace.

The commentary goes on:

By starting the production of neutron bombs, a high-efficient radiation weapon, the Reagan government once again showed its nature as a bellicose element and a nuclear warmaniac.

While developing various kinds of modern destructive weapons and preparing for the production of neutron bombs with a huge amount of military expenses, the U.S. imperialists advertise that this is an "internal affair" of the United States and that they have no idea of deploying nuclear weapons in other areas or other countries.

But, a few days ago U.S. Defense Secretary Weinberger announced that the United States started producing neutron bombs and, if ordered, would airlift them to Europe in a few hours. This discloses that the utterances of the U.S. imperialists were a mere lie to pull the wool over the eyes of the world people.

What we cannot overlook, in particular, is the fact that the U.S. imperialists, hastening preparations for the provocation of a new war in Korea, are scheming to deploy neutron bombs in South Korea. On August 11, a spokesman of the U.S. Defense Department openly raved at a press conference that there is the possibility of using neutron bombs not only in Europe but also in the Far East. It is clear to everyone that he had Korea in mind when he said the Far East.

Such act of the United States is a criminal one further heightening the tension in our country and gravely endangering peace in Korea and the world.

The commentary says:

If the U.S. imperialists continue producing neutron bombs, persisting in their nuclear war preparations, they will be more vehemently denounced and rejected by and isolated from the world people.

The United States must give up at once the reckless manoeuvres to continue the production of neutron bombs and start a nuclear war and withdraw its troops and all their destructive weapons including nuclear weapons from South Korea and other areas.

The PYONGYANG SINMUN commentary titled "Rash Act of Warmaniac" says that the decision of the United States to produce neutron bombs is a naked expression of its nuclear blackmail policy toward the world people and a rash act further intensifying the arms race and increasing the danger of a nuclear war.

The United States must stop at once the production of the bombs, it stresses.

DPRK DAILY RAPS RECENT S. KOREA-JAPAN CONTACTS

SK2(441 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0359 GMT 20 Aug 81

[Text] Pyongyang August 20 (KCNA)--NODONG SINMUN today prints a commentary titled Lmoves Which Merit Attention" in connection with the fact that relations between the South Korean military fascists and Japanese reactionaries are becoming unusually closer these days, boding ill.

According to the paper, the traitor Chon Tu-hwan and the pro-South Korean politicians of Japan are loudly clamouring that "South Korea and Japan share the same destiny" and are entering into "special relationship."

The bosses of the puppet clique had confabs with the Japanese parliamentary vice-ministers group and the delegation of the "Japan-South Korea Parliamentarian League" during their recent visit to South Korea on the matter of making their relations closer and begged for huge "economic aid" from the "security point of view."

The "South Korean-Japan Foreign Ministers Conference" will be held on August 20 and 21 and it will be followed by a meeting of the "South Korea-Japan Parliamentarian League" and a "regular ministerial conference" and then talks between the Japanese prime minister and the traitor Chon Tu-hwan towards the close of this year.

Noting that such ill-boding moves remind us of the situation at the time when the aggressive and treacherous "South Korea-Japan Treaty" was trumped up, the author of the commentary says:

In particular, the Chon Tu-hwan military fascists disclosed their dirty nature as traitors in all nakedness by working with particular eagerness to establish a dark fusion, new master-servant relations with the Japanese reactionaries.

How far the traitor Chon Tu-hwan has gone in his pro-Japanese treachery can be seen fully in the fact that he is holding a bargain of treachery with the Japanese reactionaries, hammering away at the poppycock that South Korea and Japan are "the same land."

The ever more unscrupulous pro-Japanese policy of the Chon Tu-hwan clique is a treacherous one to be cursed down through generations as a policy aimed at converting South Korea already under the colonial rule of U.S. imperialism into a colony of the Japanese reactionaries by deepening South Korea's subjugating relations with Japan.

Pointing to the fact that Chon Tu-hwan and his ilk openly raved that they need Japan's "aid" for a military showdown with the "north," the commentary says:

The puppets are committing a disgraceful treacherous act in strengthening their subjugating relations with the Japanese reactionary forces to prop up the foothold of their shaking military fascist rule, realize the wild ambition for long-term office and attack the fellow countrymen by force of arms with the backing of the foreign forces.

The commentary further says:

Now the Japanese ruling quarters try to intensify their infiltration into South Korea, availing themselves of the disgraceful posture of the Chon Tu-hwan clique kowtowing to them under the slogan of "Strengthening South Korea-Japan Friendship."

According to an announcement of the Japanese authorities, at the "Foreign Ministers' Conference" Japan would promise to give more "economic aid" to the puppets.

On the other hand, the Japanese reactionaries pretend to oppose connecting the "economic aid with security." This is a deceptive gesture to mislead public opinion.

With the new huge "aid" as a bait they try to tighten their domination over the South Korean puppets and use them as a military tool, a "breakwater against communism." The new tieup with the South Korean puppets will be a dangerous occasion in the militarisation scheme of the Japanese reactionaries.

The ever-intensified compact between the South Korean puppets and the Japanese reactionaries is precisely an offspring of the U.S. imperialists Korean and Asian strategy, the commentary notes, and continues:

The U.S. imperialists try to bring the puppet clique and the Japanese reactionaries closer politically, economically and militarily and hasten on its basis the formation of the "triangular military alliance system" and perfect the U.S. military alliance system of aggression in the Far East and use it as a lever of "strength" in realizing their ambition for Asian domination.

The Korean people will not overlook or tolerate the manoeuvres of the South Korean puppets and the Japanese reactionaries colluding with each other against us at the instigation of the U.S. imperialists.

The Chon Tu-hwan clique must give up the treacherous attempt to oppose the fellow countrymen with the backing of the foreign forces and step down from "power" at once, as demanded by the South Korean people.

The moves of the Japanese reactionaries to realise their reinvasion by backing the Chon Tu-hwan clique forsaken by the South Korean people will bring nothing good to them. They must be mindful that the line of militarisation and overseas expansion brought only a defeat to Japan in the Second World War, stop encouraging the South Korean puppets to split and war and refrain from acts detrimental to the peaceful reunification of Korea.

The U.S. imperialists must discard the foolish attempt to step up their policy of Korean aggression by bringing together the South Korean puppets and the Japanese reactionaries, withdraw from South Korea at once, taking along their troops and nuclear and all other destructive weapons.

REUNIFICATION OFFICIAL LAUDS KIM CHONG-IL

SK191020 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1007 GMT 19 Aug 81

[Text] Pyongyang August 19 (KCNA)--Guy Dupre, secretary general of the International Liaison Committee for the Independent and Peaceful Reunification of Korea, who arrived in our country on August 10 visited historic Mangyongdae and toured various places.

At Mangyongdae the secretary general said that each time he visited there he studied more deeply the revolutionary history of respected President Kim Il-song. The president organized and led to victory the revolutionary struggle against imperialism to achieve the independence of the country and has built Korea into an independent and prospering country as it is today, he noted.

Revolutionary people of the world, he said, visit Mangyongdae, the cradleland of revolution, and assiduously study the revolutionary history of President Kim Il-song and the chuche idea founded by him.

After inspecting the Korean Revolution Museum, he wrote in the visitors' book:

This museum is a fine place for giving revolutionary education to the Korean people and a school indicating the road of struggle ahead of the world revolutionaries.

I extend heartfelt thanks to the great leader President Kim Il-song and the dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il for giving me an opportunity to acquaint myself better with the revolutionary history of Korea and her reality.

At the Pyongyang Maternity Hospital, the guest said:

Children of your country born in this maternity hospital thanks to the solicitude of the great President Kim Il-song and the dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il are growing up happily.

I wish you greater victory in your work for embodying the chuche idea better in public health under their leadership.

JSP ORGAN URGES SETTLEMENT OF KIM TAE-CHUNG CASE

SK141556 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1514 GMT 14 Aug 81

[Text] Pyongyang August 14 (KCNA)--A recent issue of "Shakai Shimpo," the organ of the Japan Socialist Party, published an editorial titled "Kim Tae-chung Case Has Not Been Brought to End," according to a report.

The editorial says:

At a military court last year Kim Tae-chung was sentenced to death on groundless charges and then the sentence was commuted to life imprisonment, but he is now suffering from diseases, totally deprived of freedom in prison.

It was made clear from the beginning that the Kim Tae-chung case was a case of infringement upon the sovereignty of Japan by the South Korean "Central Intelligence Ageny."

But the Japanese Government, persistently claiming that it was "resolved" through two "political settlements," refuses to restore Kim Tae-chung to his original status and completely settle the case and to make a fundamental reexamination of the Japan-South Korea relations. This has brought about today's situation.

In particular, even the "political settlement" of the Kim Tae-chung case was ignored at the military trial of Kim Tae-chung. But the Japanese government neglected the reexamination of the "political settlement," thus virtually partaking in destroying the political and physical life of Kim Tae-chung.

Furthermore, no sooner had the military trial of Kim Tae-chung finished than the government started increasing aid to the Chon Tu-hwan "regime."

Today eight years after the Kim Tae-chung case we cannot but direct particular attention to the fact that support to the Chon Tu-hwan "regime" scheming to destroy the political and physical life of Kim Tae-chung and stamping out the demand of the South Korean people for democracy is being strengthened with the Japan-South Korea military compact as an axis.

The completion of the long-denounced Japan-U.S.-South Korea military integration can be regarded as such moves.

Needless to say, Japan's "economic aid" is a powerful backing to the Chon Tu-hwan fascist system.

Accordingly, the expansion of economic "aid" to South Korea planned by the government will have a grave bearing in the future on the situation in Japan, the Korean Peninsula and Asia.

Upon the lapse of eight years since the Kim Tae-chung case, we urge the government to reexamine the "political settlement" of the Kim Tae-chung case and work for its complete settlement.

At the same time, we, considering the expansion of aid to South Korea to be a big obstacle to peace in Asia and the independent and peaceful reunification of Korea, demand its immediate end.

KIM IL-SONG GREETS PRESIDENT OF CONGO

SK141617 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1534 GMT 14 Aug 81

[Text] Pyongyang August 14 (KCNA)--The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, general secretary of the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea and president of the Democratic Peoples Republic of Korea, sent a message of greetings on August 13 to Denis Sassou-Nguesso, chairman of the Central Committee of the Congolese Workers Party, president, head of state and chairman of the council of ministers of the Peoples Republic the Congolese people.

The message reads:

On the occasion of the 18th anniversary of the victory of the August revolution, the national holiday of the Congolese people, I, on behalf of the Workers Party of Korea, the government of the Democratic Peoples Republic of Korea and the Korean people and on my own, extend warm felicitations to you and to the Congolese Workers Party and government and the Congolese people.

Since the victory of the revolution the Congolese people have made a big advance in the struggle for the consolidation of the national independence and for the building of a new society.

The Korean people believe that the relations of friendship and cooperation forged between our two countries in the common struggle against imperialism and for independence will further expand in the future.

I take this opportunity to sincerely wish the Congolese people greater success in the work for building a new prospering Congo along the road of socialism under the leadership of the Congolese Workers Party headed by you.

[Text] Pyongyang August 20 (KCNA)--An international agricultural and commercial exhibition was held from July 31 to August 4 in Zambia, according to a report.

The exhibition was participated in by a DPRK exhibition delegation and exhibition delegations from many other countries.

Set up in the DPRK exhibition hall was a picture of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song shaking hands with President Kenneth David Kaunda.

On July 31 Zambian President Kenneth David Kaunda inspected the DPRK exhibition hall in company with the Minister of Agriculture, the Minister of Commerce and Industry, the Minister of Finance and other leading personnel of the party and government.

The president was met at the entrance to the exhibition hall by the head and members of the DPRK exhibition delegation and the ambassador and officials of the DPRK Embassy in Lusaka.

After seeing the exhibits with deep interest, the president highly appraised the successes made by the Korean people in the revolution and construction.

I extend my warm greetings to the respected and beloved leader President Kim Il-song, he said.

'NODONG SINMUN' HITS CHON'S MUTUAL VISITS

SK201529 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1504 GMT 20 Aug 81

[Text] Pyongyang, 20 Aug (KCNA)--NODONG SINMUN on August 19 carried an article headlined "Splittist Colour Cannot Be Concealed With Unification Veil."

Noting that traitor Chon Tu-hwan is harping on "peaceful unification" and "mutual visits", in a fit of passion to make it appear that he is concerned for the solution of the reunification question, the author of the article says:

Since the very day of its brigandish usurpation of power, the Chon Tu-hwan clique has sought in every way the permanent division of the nation, not reunification.

After the May 17 fascist action, it staged a massacre operation in Kwangju, brutally murdering the uprisers crying for democracy and reunification.

The fascist maniac is still today arresting, imprisoning, penalizing and murdering in groups patriotic students and people of all walks of life calling for democracy and reunification.
